Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Especially for This Newspaper by Pictorial Review

Attractive in Taffeta or Gingham.

Particularly girlish is this frock with its flounced skirt and simple waist. To emphasize its note of simplicity the decorations are confined to buttons and hemstitching.

It makes little difference what the material, so long as this design is followed, for it is one of the most attractive of the new frocks for mid-summer wear. Taffeta or gingham may be used with equal success. The skirt is made with two flounces and the back of the waist extends over the shoulders on the front, forming a yoke effect. The front of the waist and the front collar section are cut in one. In medium size the dress requires 5½ yards 36-inch material.

Some home dressmakers prefer to begin the construction of the design with the waist on the principle that it is best to get the most difficult work out of the way first. To begin, gather shoulder edge of front and neck edge of back between double "TT" perforations. Under-face upper front edge of front, to 1 inch inside of small "o" perforations. Line collar section and sew to upper edge of front section as notched. Sew shoulder and neck edges of back to front and to collar as notched center-backs even. Close under-arm seam as notched. Turn under extension at front edge of front on large "O" perforations. Gather lower edge of front and back between double "T" perforations and 2 inches above. Stitch a straight strip of material (2¾ inches wide) underneath left front of waist for a lap from upper edge of extension to the lower edge of waist, bringing the front edges of waist together; finish the right front edges of waist and lap for a closing. Adjust stay under gathers, center-backs even, small "o" perforations at under-arm seam and bring front edge to center front.

Close sleeve seam as notched; gather lower edge between double "TT" perforations. Close cuff seam as notched, sew to sleeve as notched bringing the seam of cuff to single large "O" perforation in sleeve, and the small "o" perforation in cuff to seam of sleeve. Sew sleeve in armhole, notches and small "o" perforations even easing in any fulness.

Now, the skirt may be taken up. Join gores as notched. Close back seam from large "O" perforation to lower edge and finish edges above for placket. Close back seam of flounces, leaving seam of upper flounce free above large "O" perforation for a placket. Gather upper edges between double "TT" perforations. Adjust lower flounce on foundation, center-fronts and center-backs, even; stitch upper edge along crossline of small "o" perforations; small "o" perforation in flounce at side seam.

Join yoke and upper flounce, notches, small "o" perforations, center-fronts, and back edges even. Adjust on foundation; stitch upper edge of yoke to upper edge of foundation, center-fronts and back edges even, small "o" perforation in yoke at side seam. Adjust skirt, stitching upper edge over upper row of gathers in waist, center-fronts and center-backs even.

Trim the vest and cuffs with buttons, arranged in single rows or groups of three or four each.

Stiff Neck Quickly Cured.

A stiff neck is usually caused by rheumatism in the muscles of the neck. It comes on suddenly and is often mistaken for a sprain. It is quickly cured by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. Mrs. Conrad Oliver, of Little Falls, N. Y., writes: "About three years ago my husband sprained his neck. We had a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment in the house and applied it. It afforded quick relief, and after using it a few times all of the lameness and stiffness in his neck and shoulders had entirely disappeared."

CAR OWNERS KNOW TOO LITTLE ABOUT CARS

The average car owner of to-day has so little trouble with his motor that many drivers never even investigate that part of the mechanism which lies under the hood.

"I'll wager," said R. L. McCully, local Overland dealer while discussing the subject several days ago, "that the majority of people who own and drive cars cannot give a clear explanation of the meaning of transmission, differential or any one of the fifty other semi-technical terms I might mention connected with the mechanical construction of an automobile.

"While this is true in the majority of cases it does not follow that car owners are unappreciative of the many improvements that have been made.

"In the early days of the industry a man had to be an expert mechanic before he would venture far in his car. To-day not only the head of the family, but his wife and children are as much at home at the wheel of a motor car as in a Pullman.

"The first things which attract a prospective car buyer are price and general appearance. These being satisfactory he asks for a demonstration to find out if it is smooth running and comfortable to ride in. Then he takes the wheel and is surprised to learn how simple and easy it is to drive. Soon he has complete confidence in himself and becomes a confirmed motorist."—Adv.

WILSON TALKS ON PLATFORMPLANKS

President and Cabinet Discuss National Politics.

DEMOCRATIC TARIFF UPHELD.

The Democratic Party Will be Pledged to Such Tariff Legislation as Will Be Essential to Protect American Industries From Disaster Through the Dumping of Foreign Products.

Washington, June 7.—President Wilson and his cabinet discussed national politics for more than an hour, the St. Louis platform and portending signs of another Republican split were the chief subjects considered.

The president prepared several planks of the platform himself, and the cabinet gave them its approval. These planks refer to party legislation and its effect upon the economic and political welfare of the country.

Slogan "Peace and Prosperity."

The final draft of a few planks dealing with the great issues upon which the campaign will be fought will be postponed until after the Republicans have adopted their platform. The Republican challenge, whatever it may be, will be accepted. President Wilson will write these planks also and it was said they will be terse, aggressive and incisive. The Democratic campaign slogan will be "peace and prosperity."

The Democratic tariff will be upheld as a great model of economic legislation that has not yet been tried out and properly tested because of disturbed European conditions and the proposed tariff commission will be pointed to as a scientific method of solving the commercial problems that will arise with the coming of peace.

The Democratic party will be pledged to such further tariff legislation as will be essential to protect American industrial from disaster through the dumping of foreign products on the domestic market and the proposed increase of duties to enable the manufacture in this country of dyes for the future will be used as proving that the policy of the administration is broad gauged.

The ability of the administration to keep the country out of war will be extailed as an evidence of its strength and preparations legislation thus far enacted, and still promised, will be cited as its active response to the demands of public opinion.

It will be claimed that impetus to business was afforded by the federal reserve act and it will be cited as an illustration of constructive legislation.

Speaker Clark was quoted as saying if he were called upon to write a platform for the St. Louis convention he would make it very short and clear cut.

Stone to Present Platform.

Chairman Stone of the senate foreign relations committee will be entrusted with the responsibility for the platform after President Wilson finally completes it. He will carry it to St. Louis for submission to the convention with instructions to have it adopted as written.

Daily political conferences are being held at the White House. Most conspicuous of the conferences are Senators Ollie James of Kentucky and William Hughes of New Jersey. These two men are taking the most active part in preparing the plans of the convention with the president's secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty.

President Wilson has not yet designated his choice for national chairman. The most likely man now is believed to be John W. Davis, solicitor general of the department of justice.

Attempts Escape in Coffin.

Moundsville, W. Va., June 5.—A convict in the State penitentiary made an attempt to escape in a wooden coffin. When the prisoner was missed a search was instituted, and four hours later he was found secreted in one of the rough prison coffins in which convicts are buried when relatives do not claim their remains. The lid was on top of the coffin, and the prisoner had a supply of food and water to keep him alive for several days. It is believed he intended to remain there until a search for him was abandoned and then to scale the walls under the cover of night.

DEALERS TO BE HELPED BY LAW

New York state's liquor dealers are going to be "assisted" in living up to the excise law, whether they want that "assistance" or not. The help is coming from the excise department who seeks to protect them from those who bring reproach on the traffic by violating the statute.

This is the substance of a statement made to the trade and to the public by Commissioner George E. Green, who has moved to make it by anonymous complaints, against some of his deputies who have been aiding those desirous of keeping the liquor business on a law abiding basis.

The statement is made that although the liquor tax law has with few changes been in existence for a score of years "various communities and their law enforcement officers are obviously unacquainted with any of its provisions." Mr. Green says "carelessly unconsciously or otherwise, many provisions of the law have been observed in the breach rather than by obediance until an attitude of mind on the part of some certificate holders and their employes has apparently been reached almost in utter disregard of some very excellent and most essential features of the law, especially as it relates to Sunday observance, prohibited hours, exposure of bars, etc."

He adds because of lax or non-enforcement the liquor tax law is wrongfully blamed while communities arise in [illegible]nation to crush a law which if [illegible]ed and enforced as it should be would preclude the immoral practices and disorders complained of to prevent which new laws are demanded."

It is the belief of the commissioner that Sunday sales can be stopped by local authorities themselves if they will earnestly work with the department to enforce the law. But he "does not believe that the department can enforce strict compliance until the local authorities are in hearty accord with enforcing faithful and complete observance."

Holders of liquor tax certificates are reminded also that it is their duty and that their best interests demand that they should see to it that strict observance is enforced. "Anything short of this," says the commissioner, "will stimulate sentiment against allowing the liquor traffic to continue." In this connection he adds the warning "every violation of the liquor tax law is a liability of the liquor business and if offenses continue the business will go into legal bankruptcy."

Attention is also called to the fact that a recent court decision authorizes the excise department in regarding as strictly confidential all information as to the violations of the liquor tax law and makes it unnecessary to divulge the name of the complainant. The department, however, will not consider anonymous complaints "or brook anything that looks like persecution."

Law abiding holders of liquor tax certificates are assurred by the commissioners "that they are entitled to the same courteous consideration and lawful protection as is accorded to all other legitimate business without undue espionage or the slightesst tribute giving for political purposes or otherwise or of the slightest persecution of any sort, by any one, with the knowledge of the department."

In conclusion Mr. Green says that if the law as it stands is wrong he will assist every honest attempt to perfect it and he intimates that he will have suggestions to make about this himself, which he will be glad to have the views of citizens on at all times.

Tough for the Tailors.

London, June 7.—"Don't be ashomed to wear old clothes in war time," the exhortation placarded all over London, has not fallen on deaf ears. Few new spring suits are seen, even on sunny days. ANOTHER RAID ON BORDER RUMORED.

Bandits Are Reported Marching Toward Rio Grande City.

San Antonio, Tex., June 6.—General Funston announced today that he had what appeared to be positive information that Luis de la Rosa was marching from a point south of Laredo in the direction of the border with the evident intention of raiding the country somewhere west of Rio Grande city.

There are not now in that district enough American troops to prevent de la Rosa and his men from crossing the border.

Marathon, Tex., June 7—Captain Andrews, commanding the forces of the Sixth cavalry at Boquillas, has sent a detachment to Glenn Springs to investigate the rumor of another raid by Mexican bandits in that district. No evidence to support the rumor has been received here.

MOOSE TO NAME T. R.

Chicago, Ill., June 7.—Whether or not there is to be a third ticket in the field and a repetition of the political history of 1912 now depends entirely upon Colonel Roosevelt.

The leaders of the Progressive party have worked hard to stem the Roosevelt tide that has been rising within their own ranks and to bring about a delay in the Bull Moose nomination until the Republicans have acted. Mr. Roosevelt's lieutenants have failed in their efforts and last night they practically threw up the sponge.

They have agreed to proceed to the nomination of Roosevelt in the ordinary course of convention business, which means that the former president will be named by the Bull Moosers probably on Friday of this week and not later than Saturday.

As there is little likelihood of the Republican convention nominating before Saturday, Mr. Roosevelt probably will have been named by the Progressives before the Republican nominee has been determined.

"FLUNKING" A DISEASE

Princeton Editors Decide That It Is a "Suublime Indifference for Future."

Princeton, N. J., June 7.—A "sublime indifference for the future" is the name of a disease which afflicts most students who "flunk out" of Princeton University, according to a statement by the board of student editors.

To instil into the adolescent mind a proper regard for the future it is proposed to weed out the "incurables" by frequent examinations and to limit the course to be taken by those students who are afflicted by the disease, as it is called, but who are able to just squeeze through the "exams."

HUGHES BOOM TAKES BIG SLUMP TODAY

French Still Hold Trenches at Vaux

Paris—The War Office in a statement issued at noon admits the occupation of Fort Vaux on the east bank of the Meuse by the Germans. The statement said:

"After seven days of fierce fighting the garrison at Bordeaux was about exhausted and could not prevent occupation of the ruined fort by the Germans. The French hold the position of the outward fort and trenches on the swells to the right and left. All German attacks against these positions have been repulsed."

Fort Vaux is on a hill 300 feet high, gradual in slope. For several weeks it has been the scene of the fiercest fighting of the war, being alternately ripped up by the heaviest artillery bombardments and then charged by infantry.

General Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, to-day, received at army headquarters Mr. Frederick H. Allen, of New York, who has been identified with relief work, and, after expressing his high appreciation of American sympathy and the aid extended to the French wounded, talked in an interesting manner on the general phases of the war. He compared the present French position to that in the United States after the battle of Gettysburg.

"The generosity of Americans," said General Joffre, "has established such institutions as the American Hospital, with its ambulances at the front and manned by men from your universities; an American relief clearing house, which is the centre of a widespread system of relief, and also an American flying corps. These show the strong sentiment of your countrymen in behalf of the Allies' cause, which is the cause of right and justice.

"The individuals who have established hospitals or are giving their time and money have touched our hearts, and we feel that the ancient friendship, dating from the days of Washington, Lafayette and Rochambeau in your revolution, has become stronger in our time of trial."

AUSTRO-HUNS RETREAT BEFORE CZAR'S TROOPS

(By United Press.)

London—Confirmation of Russian successes in the Czar's gigantic offensive on the Austrian front is contained in the report of the Austria-Hungarian headquarters, which admits a retreat of five kilometers near Okna, northeast of Bukowinax, the artillery attack of the Russians being described as tremendous.

The attack going on all along the line from the Pripet Marsh and extending to the southern end of the line, with the greatest concentration on the section between Brodwy and the Pruth. The Russians, says the Austrian report, are using shells in unbelievably large numbers.

GERMANS ACKNOWLEDGE KITCHENER HONORABLE

Berlin—The newspapers devote much space to Lord Kitchener, whom they generally acknowledge to have been an organizer of the greatest ability. But there seems to be no disposition to exaggerate the importance of his death or to base particular hopes thereon.

The Lokalanzeiger, commenting rather bitterly, declares that Lord Kitchener's wars were mainly won against spearmen and half naked wild peoples and that the Boer war was really won by interning women and children and permitting thousands to die.

Count von Reventlow, in the Tages Zeitung, also indulges in personalities. The other newspapers, however, for the most part refrain from attacking Germany's dead opponent.

The Taglische Rundschau openly confesses to dislike, but also admiration, for Lord Kitchener, saying:

"He was an honorable enemy. He never visited Germany to admire our philosophy and manoeuvres. He never dripped with honeyed phrases about a rapprochment and never pretended to love us. We thank him in death for that. He was a brutal man, but he was a man."

How Conventions Vote

In the Republican convention, precedent has established that a majority vote is sufficient to nominate. Division of state votes is also permitted by custom.

The Democratic convention is governed by the "two-thirds" vote and that "unit system"—that is, two-thirds is necessary to vote, and the votes of individual state delegations must be cast en bloc. This practice dates back to the 1832 convention, when Jackson invented it to force Van Buren's nomination as vice-president on the ticket with him.

* * *

Political conventions originated in 1796, when "caucuses" were held in various states to select officials and candidates. The first state nominating convention of regular form was called in New York in 1824.

The first real national political convention was held in Philadelphia in 1830 by the Anti-Masonic party. Exactly a year later, to the day, September 29, the "National Republicans" party met in convention at Baltimore and nominated Henry Clay.

Chicago Is Not on the Colonel's List

(By United Press)

Oyster Bay, N. Y.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt left his $10,000 telephone line this morning long enough to assure a delegation of newspaper men that he had no intention at the present time of going to the Chicago Convention. After the receipt of a report that the Colonel's presence had been advised by some of his lieutenants, the newspaper men interviewed the Colonel and asked him point blank, "Are you going to Chicago?"

"I have no present intention" was the Colonel's reply.

Experienced Nurse for Baby Welfare

The Baby Welfare branch of the Women's Civic League organized for the 1916 season at a meeting held early in the week. Mrs. Mary Suydam was elected president of the branch, Mrs. Irving Galusha, secretary, and Mrs. Charles Sage, treasurer.

Miss Dorothy Peglow, graduate nurse, will have charge of the welfare headquarters which will be located at City Hall. The branch has all the necessary paraphernalia, and the tidy sum of $90 in the treasury, with which to begin the season's work. A committee is now negotiating with Manager Daniel Darleigh, of the Quirk Theatre, with a view to holding a benefit performance in the near future. Other members of the association will solicit private subscriptions for the work.

Miss Peglow, who has had experience in a similar line of work in Watertown Hospital, will establish regular office hours at the City Hall Welfare station, where all sick infants will be treated, and mothers advised in the care of their children. Last year no welfare station was in operation, principally because of lack of funds.

NEW CATHOLIC BISHOP INSTALLED

Cardinal Farley and Mgr. Nelson H. Baker, administrator of the diocese, formally welcomed the Bishop, and after the singing of Pontifical high mass by Bishop Prendergast, of Philadelphia, Cardinal Farley escorted the Bishop to the throne on the gospel side of the altar.

"Old Guard" Afraid to Take Chances

Chicago Coliseum—The Republican Convention went into session again today at 11:22 o'clock, and at 11:27, Temporary Chairman Harding called for the report of the Committee on Credentials. Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, read the report, which was adopted by the convention vote.

The report of the Committee on Organization was next read, and in this report a recommendation was made that Mr. Harding be made permanent chairman of the convention. This report was adopted with prolonged applause and cheers for Harding.

The Committee of Rules and Order of Business asked for more time in making their report.

On the surface, all indications still point to the selection of Hughes as the Republican nominee, but a perceptible slump in the Hughes boom was evident to-day. The "favorite son" delegations are advancing more support to their respective candidates than has been accorded them hitherto, and this fact is taken to signify a break in the solid Hughes ranks.

The "Old Guard" leaders feel that they cannot afford to nominate Hughes and then have him turn down the nomination, particularly if Roosevelt accepts the Progressive nomination.

Hughes has absolutely refused to make any statement and all attempts to have him declare himself have failed thus far.

One of the principal features of the platform is the criticism of the present Administration in the handling of the Mexican situation. The platform characterizes President Wilson's Mexican policy as weak and wabbling and declares for a policy that will protect American lives and property at all times. The plank does not indicate in anyway, however, just what the Republican party aims for in Mexico.

The Foreign Relations plank embodies a desire for peace with the foreign nations, and a belief in a strict and honorable neutrality between this country and the nations at war. It declares that the Republican party will insist on all our rights as neutrals without fear or favor.

The Wilson foreign policy is described as a "phrase-making performance in language," changeable and vacillating, with the result that our influence abroad has been destroyed and we have been humbled in our own eyes.

Germans Admit Loss of Battle Cruiser

(By United Press)

London—A German official statement received in Amsterdam at noon to-day admits the sinking of the battle cruiser Lutzow and the small cruiser Rostock in the Skagerak naval engagement, according to dispatches received at noon today.

Sir Arthur J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, speaking before the Imperial Council of Commerce to-day, said the Admiralty had no later authentic news of the naval battle off Skagerak a week ago to-day, as Admiral Jellicoe's dispatch covering details of the engagement had not yet arrived.

"German news of the British losses," he said, "is tainted. However, it is futile at this time to discuss details. The British have announced their loses in full."

A dispatch from Copenhagen says the Swedish steamer Vanda passed on Saturday the wreck of a gigantic warship, the nationality of which it was unable to ascertain.

Hundreds of bodies were floating around the wreck, and for three hours the Vanda steamed among dead sailors. Near the spot where the derelict was encountered the wreck of a big sailing vessel, apparently an innocent victim of the Jutland battle, was sighted.

A dispatch from Amsterdam says a German destroyer struck a mine and went down off Zeebrugge on May 31.

New York Evening Post:

"The most surprising development of the primary campaign is the almost universal belief that, if the election were held today, President Wilson, would be triumphantly returned."

This utterance is not that of a Democratic flatterer. It is taken from the Philadelphia North American, a Bull Moose newspaper, at present urging the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt by the Republicans. The North American has on many occasions bitterly attacked Wilson. It has echoed the colonel's charge against the administration— that it has been timid vacillating, un-American. Yet it will not stupidly shut its eyes to the facts. It detects a rapid "reversal of opinion" in favor of Wilson, and goes on soberly to array the evidences of his political strength. There are, first, the primary elections and the various "straw" votes. These show "remarkable Wilson gains." A "striking change of sentiment concerning Mr. Wilson was reported months ago" by commercial travelers. It is admitted that the administration has an unusual record to appeal to. The currency legislation has "popular approval." Chief of all is the fact that the country is highly prosperous. It ought not to be, of course, under a Democratic tariff; and the Republicans will assert that it is the European war that saved us; but the actual state of industry, with the high wages paid, and work found for all, will, the North American confesses, deprive the tariff issue of its "customary deadly effect." All told, it concludes that those practiced observers of political affairs are not far wrong who agree that President Wilson "has imposing chances of re-election."

Alongside this testimony, notable for its source, may be placed the letter in this week's Outlook on Political Thinking in the Middle West, by ex-Senator Davenport. As a former Progressive and a Roosevelt follower to-day, he finds much to discourage him in the region which he has been visiting. The people there are not in heroic mood. "There is a lethargy of the democratic spirit." The voters have not been "roused to positive convictions." And note this depressing conclusion:

One thing is clear to me from the investigation of this centre of old-time American democracy. The movement toward discipline and preparation, which is every day becoming more certain as the chief presidential issue, is not this time coming up from the grass roots. Even the western farmers seem back temporarily into the Old Glory Republican and the fried-meat Democrat class. Opposed to change! And as for the laboring class in the Middle West, it never received such high wages, and was never so prosperous. It is reflecting, not so much upon the country as upon creature comfort.

More to the present point is what Mr. Davenport writes of the sentiment about Wilson. "Whoever thinks that President Wilson has not a great following in the Middle West has other guesses coming." It would be easy to "uncover a volume of testimony favorable to the Wilson point of views of keeping away from war, if possible, on the ground that war is the greatest calamity which can befall a nation." That must be gall and wormwood to a true Rooseveltian. And then think of having to take such a dose as this: "There is a strong feeling among the Democrats of the Middle West that Wilson in history is to stand for the patience and persistence of Lincoln!"

It would be a very different story if a political inquiry had been made in and about New York City. Here, no doubt Wilson stock went far lower than in other parts of the country, and has not as yet recovered so much of the loss. A probe can be thrust in almost anywhere and discover sentiment against Wilson which is strong, bitter, and even contemptuous. It is hereabouts that the sharpest attacks have been made upon him; here that his weakness, his "cowardice," his pusillanimous conduct have been most harped upon.

The result has been to set up a sort of artificial Wilson in the public mind, a figure so craven and feeble that to imagine that he could be elected president again was ridiculous. So that to New Yorkers the accumulating proof that Wilson is really strong with the country as a whole must come as a great surprise. The clubs and the exchanges knew nothing of it, and will undoubtedly, at first, be inclined to take a low view of the intelligence and patriotism of the rest of the country. But facts are facts, and it does no good to blink them. No one who seeks to keep his eyes open to them will deny that President Wilson has been rapidly recovering popularity during the past few months. This may not last. Accident or mistake may weaken him. On the other hand, good fortune or skill may greatly add to his present strength. In any case, the Republicans at Chicago will be foolish to act upon any other supposition than that they will have to face a formidable Democratic candidate.

New York American:

The startling news of Lord Kitchener's death gives birth to one thought, which we do most earnestly hope is not a thought fathered only by a devout wish.

That thought is that the death of England's chief captain may be the forerunner of better feeling and of final peace between those two great peoples who inhabit England and Germany.

Let us explain what might at first blush seem an idle and even indecorous forecast.

It is our hope, as it is also our belief, that the German press and the German people will pay full tribute to the dead commander of their foemen's mighty armies.

The English and the German people have a common racial origin and have many characteristics in common. Among these are as minor matters—a lack of the tact and politeness inherent in the Latin peoples, and—as major matters—a stubborn resolution and a manly courage and a love of country which highly become them.

In their heart of hearts the braver and better sort of Englishmen and Germans respect and admire each other's courage and fortitude and stamina. They are, in brief, foemen worthy of each other's steel.

Now, we can easily conceive that a noble tribute of respect and admiration paid by warriors of the German type to the dead man, who was a noble exemplar of all that is greatest and finest in warriors of the English type, might well move the heart of England to kindlier feeling toward Germany and the heart of Germany to kindlier feeling toward England. And so, these two foemen, like knights who have met full knightly in the clash of arms, may full as knightly clasp hands above the warrior dead.

If this prove but a fancy, we shall not be ashamed to have had the fancy and to have put it in words. For the dear God knows that our heart is sick of all this misery and woe and waste of life.

We can think just now of nothing finer than the soldierly act of that German airman who dropped from the heights of the air his tribute of flowers on the funeral of the French aviator he had slain in battle, with the simple farewell message, "To brave Pegoud."

There spoke the heart of a gallant gentleman to the soul of a gallant foeman, and we doubt not that many another French heart answered back gratefully and courageously.

The brave are always generous. It is only the mean of spirit that stoop to epithet and abuse and hateful words.

We expect that tried and approved warriors like these German soldiers will have nothing but respect and noble words to utter above England's dear commander.

And we expect that tried and approved warriors like these English soldiers will welcome their foemen's tribute to the great dead.

And so, please God, we may yet see Kitchener conquering in death the foe he so wisely and valiantly strove to conquer in life.

For the dead commander himself we feel that respect which his great deeds and his undoubted valor and patriotism demand of all rightminded men.

He was one of the four great military commanders whom England has produced, and if he does not rank with those geniuses of war, Cromwell and Marlborough, he at least stands on the level of Wellington, and so history will finally place him, we believe.

He was a soldier, approved by victory. He was an administrator and an organizer, and to that our own eyes are witness. And he was a gallant gentleman and a most loyal servant of his country and his King.

We could wish that it had been granted him to die, as he doubtless would have wished to die, on some hard-fought field of battle, amid the tumult and the shouting and the thunder of the guns. But we can at least be sure that he went down to his death in the choking grip of the sea bravely and soldierly, as became his fame, his lineage and that race of sailors and warriors from which he sprang and among whose great deeds his own will surely not be the least renowned.

United States Should Build a Navy Strong Enough to Fight Any Nation

By WILLIAM J. STONE, Senator From Missouri

I THINK we could safely rely on a regular army of between one hundred thousand and one hundred and fifty thousand men, supplemented by the National guard and by our millions of patriotic people in civil life.

To my thinking there is not one chance in thousands that we will ever be called upon to defend ourselves against an invading army of any magnitude or to send an army of invasion of great size into any foreign land. I cannot believe that any benefit would come to this country FROM A GREAT STANDING ARMY THAT WOULD COMPENSATE FOR THE BURDEN OF ITS MAINTENANCE.

My belief is that if ever we are attacked by a foreign power strong enough to make the onslaught perilous it will come from the sea, not from the land; hence I am an ardent advocate, always have been, of the most complete and thorough system of coast defenses. Everything that military and naval science can devise to make our coasts impregnable I am for. Likewise and along the same line of thought I have always been and still am not only an advocate of, but, in fact, an agitator for a great navy.

I WOULD CREATE A NAVY STRONG ENOUGH NOT ONLY TO RESIST ASSAULT, BUT STRONG ENOUGH, IF NEED SHOULD ARISE FOR IT, TO TAKE THE OFFENSIVE; STRONG ENOUGH TO PROTECT AMERICAN HONOR AND AMERICAN INTERESTS ANYWHERE IN THE WORLD.

Common Insects the Most Destructive Enemies of the Human Race

By DR. WOODS HUTCHINSON, Writer on Medical Subjects

FROM a health point of view we are about coming to the conclusion that the proper study of mankind is insects. Up to a decade or so ago we regarded them merely as trivial annoyances, "trifles light as air" to vex us, very exasperating and trying at times, but to be regarded chiefly as a means of grace for the development of patience and other Christian virtues and unworthy of more than a passing moment's thought or attention by serious minded persons.

W. HUTCHINSON.

NOW WE HAVE DISCOVERED THAT THEY MUST BE COUNTED AMONG THE DEADLIEST AND MOST DESTRUCTIVE ENEMIES OF THE HUMAN SPECIES AND DEALT WITH ACCORDINGLY.

No other single group of agencies, outside of our own species, mow through our ranks such a fearful swath of death and destruction of working power, of suffering and sickness and financial loss as the mosquito, the fly and the flea.

Mother's Milk the Most Healthful Food For Nursing Babies

By Dr. ABRAHAM JACOBI, Noted Physician, New York

NOW, as a doctor who for sixty years has had to do with babies, I tell you that the baby who lives through the first week generally gets along all right, and that brings me to the lesson I want to teach.

It is generally supposed that a baby should lose weight in the first few days—until its mother is ready to nurse it. That is wrong. A baby should gain from the start. Until its mother has food ready it should be fed and not starved. IT SHOULD BE FED WATER WITH A LITTLE SALT AND A LITTLE SUGAR, PERHAPS WITH A LITTLE BARLEY OR OATMEAL WATER.

We are advised by the German doctors to feed babies tea with saccharine in it, but I tell you that that is poison.

You ask me what is the best food for babies. I say milk. Whose milk? Mother's milk.

THIRTEEN OUT OF EVERY TWENTY BABIES THAT DIE IN NEW YORK CITY LESS THAN A YEAR OLD DIE BECAUSE THEIR MOTHERS DIDN'T NURSE THEM.

Weak Nations Cannot Lead In World's Council For Peace

By JOSEPHUS DANIELS, Secretary of the Navy

WHEN all the world about us is on fire the only safety for our republic is in adequate preparedness. When this war in Europe is over or nearing its end and the nations which have seen and realized its horrors and know how abhorrent to their peoples is the notion of their repetition there will be a great council of the nations to provide against a repetition, A COUNCIL TO MAKE WAR AS NEARLY IMPOSSIBLE HEREAFTER AS HUMAN THOUGHT AND WILL CAN MAKE IT.

The nation which is not strong cannot take a lead in that council for peace. That is a significant aspect not only affecting us now for our own safeguarding, but in the future, that we may take a place among the leaders for peace.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE HATE WAR ABOVE EVERYTHING EXCEPT ONE, AND THAT IS SLACKNESS IN DEFENDING AMERICAN HONOR AND THE UNITED STATES.

Graveyard Marriages.

A strange custom prevails among a certain tribe in the Caucasus. When a single young man dies some one calls upon a bereaved parent who has carried to the grave a marriageable daughter in the course of a year and says: "Your son is sure to want a wife. I'll give you my daughter, and you shall deliver to me the marriage portion in return." A friendly offer of this description is never rejected, and the two parties soon come to terms as to the amount of the dowry, which varies according to the advantages possessed by the girl in her lifetime. Cases have been known where the young man's father has given as many as thirty cows to secure a dead wife for his dead son.

Not Right Kind of Notes.

When Mr. Newedde went home the other evening he guessed something had occurred to displease the light of his life. She looked gloomy. After dinner it all came out.

"George," she said coldly, "banks are all frauds. Didn't you tell me that they lent money on notes?"

"Yes, dear," replied George, repressing a grin, "but"—

"Well, they don't," she went on conclusively. "I took all those lovely letters you wrote to me while we were engaged down to the bank, and the cashier read them. Then he laughed and said they were very nice, but he wouldn't lend me even a penny on them!"—Pittsburgh Press.

PEMBERTON-BILLING SAYS WE WILL HAVE TO WATCH THE JAPANESE

London, May 25 (By Mail)—Pemberton-Billing, who is trying to awaken England in the matter of the mastery of the air and who made the charge in the British parliament to which he has been recently elected that British airmen were being murdered wore a purple dressing gown and called me "old sport" as he sat at his breakfast table being interviewed.

Once or twice he called to his secretary, standing nearby. "Where in the world is my breakfast? Why doesn't someone bring me my breakfast?"

"Have you ever been in the United States?"

"Yes."

"Do you suppose the United States could be awakened up in the matter of air service?"

Pemberton-Billing has raised such a tumult conversationally, in England about the air service that his ideas of how great and extensive the air service should be made are of interest.

His idea is to have the air service the greatest arm of the British forces. He believes that it can be made more powerful than any navy.

"I contemplate a force of 100,000 aeroplanes soon, and a force of 250,000 within the next ten years. In general there ought to be five different kinds of aeroplanes. First there will be a scout, small, and very fast. Another will be a heavier machine, armored, for bomb dropping.

"The third sort will be a cheap and large machine made in vast quantities, for ordinary battle purposes.

"A transport aeroplane will rank next in importance. It will be capable of carrying from 15 to 25 men from one part of a battle line to another and also of moving guns, ammunition and other supplies; it will probably have five or six decks." Such a machine would rank as the army motorbus.

"There are going to be huge battleplanes in the future that will carry batteries of perhaps four five inch guns or three six inch guns with fire control like battleships and with a captain and crew."

"Get your army and your navy, too, into the sky. Make your enemy come into the sky to fight. Move your troops in the sky; feed them in the sky; let them live in the sky. Just as Napoleon used to force his opponents to give battle on fields which he himself had selected, so let the generals of th war-to-be force their enemies to come up into the sky to meet them."

He has a very definite idea of the plan that would be made for the use of the ordinary "infantrymen" of the sky, the machine that would make up the bulk of the sky flotilla.

"We would stamp the wings out of metal, by the thousands. The parts would be standardized. The frames would be of steel tubing and the things could be put together quickly, strongly and scientifically, like you in America put together your small, popular automobiles that you make by the thousands. The pre-war cost of such aeroplanes would have been about a thousand dollars apiece."

"But could you develop pilots to man so many air machines?"

"I can guarantee to develop 5,000 pilots in England within the next six months. I would use a cycle track, an automobile speedway and a riding track for horses.

"First, I would put my pupils on the cycle track and have them learn the sense of balance. Then I would put them in automobiles to have them gain a sense of speed. The cycle track and the automobile track would give them headtraining. Then, by controlling horses, their hands would be trained and they would be ready to take up flying very shortly."

From details, the new member of parliament passed again to generalities. He put forth the old argument that the more terrible war becomes, owing to improvements in the methods of killing, the less likely the world would be to see war.

"War can be wiped out absolutely," he declared energetically, "by the developmnt of air service. Two nations with a hundred thousand aeroplanes each wouldn't dare to fight each other. One could wipe out the other over night, and, facing such terrible chances, no nation would wish to begin a war. I prophesy that, within the next ten years it will be possible for nations to use at least 100,000 aeroplanes in warfare. War is developing in that direction."

"Have you an idea as to the possibility of awakening the United States to the importance of air preparedness?"

"I think you're like the English, old sport. You know what the Irishman said about us? He said you speak to an Englishman once and the English won't answer. You speak to him a second time and he doesn't answer. Then you hit him on the side of the head with a brick and he looks around and says, 'I beg your pardon. You spoke to me, didn't you?'"

It was at this point that Pemberton-Billing said that, sooner or later, the United States would have to lookout for Japan.

"They're able people," he said.

TIMBER CUTTING TAKES BIG JUMPS IN NORTH

The Adirondack Enterprise has a story concerning the extension of timber cutting in the Adirondack section which will be of interest. The paper says that the increase in the price of lumber is the chief reason for extensive timber cutting and it has the following to say on the subject:

"The advance in the price of lumber, which is 25 per cent. or more, has given impetus to timber cutting operations in the Adirondack forest and more attention will be devoted to cutting dimension timber in the next few months than for several years. For several years wood pulp has been in the greatest demand and the cutting has been largely for pulp mill and paper mill consumption, but in the last few weeks the effect of the general business conditions and building operations of the country has come to be recognized by Adirondack lumber companies.

"Hundreds of additional men are now being called for in the woods. There will be as much wood cut for pulp as usual, but in addition there will be large cuttings of trees for lumber. Many lumber companies are building new camps on the sides of the mountains, to reach which it has not been considered profitable heretofore. Special machinery will be used to bring the logs down from the heights and they will be placed on skids for next season's drive.

"It is estimated that in all about 30,000 cords of wood will be cut, all of which will be delivered to the Raquette River Paper Company at its Unionville and Hewittsville mills."

ORPHANS' AUTO OUTING HELD IN NEW YORK TODAY

(By United Press)

New York—As in former years, five thousand orphan children of New York were given their annual automobile outing today by the Orphans' Automobile Day Outing Association, at Donnelly's Grove, College Point, L. I.

Horace de Lisser, who last year provided the food for some 5,000 children, is President of the association.

Society folk who donated the use of their cars last year will again loan the machines, both commercial and touring types, for this worthy charity. The inmates of various children's orphanages look forward to this outing with eager joy, and the fulfilment of their wishes depends entirely on the number of cars and money given for this purpose.

SPECIAL TAXES EXPIRE JUNE 30

The collector of internal revenue, with offices in Syracuse, has issued an informal statement, directing attention to the fact that all special tax stamps commonly known as government licenses, expire on June 30th. Those taxpayers, who desire to continue in business after that day must procure and conspicuously post their special tax stamps, commonly called licenses, on or before July 1st next. Those who continue in business after June 30th, without having obtained and posted this special tax stamp, will be reported to the United States district attorney for criminal prosecution.

A large number of taxpayers defer the payment of their taxes until the last week or two in June. This results in a crowded condition, with long lines of standing people awaiting their turn to be served. In order to avoid this inconvenience, it is respectfully suggested to taxpayers that they pay their taxes early in June.

Taxes, other than income and under the Harrison Anti-Narcotic (so-called), may be paid at the offices at Buffalo, Rochester or Elmira. Income taxes and those under the Harrison law are payable at the Buffalo office only. Taxes may be paid in currency, post office order or certified check. Department regulations prohibit the acceptance of uncertified checks. Uncertified checks will be returned to the taxpayer tendering the same. The delay incident to the return of an uncertified check may result in the taxpayer being penalized. This applies to income taxpayers, as well as others.

Retail liquor dealers (saloonkeepers), $25.

Retail dealers in uncolored oleomargarine, $6.

Wholesale dealers in uncolored oleomargarine, $200.

Wholesale dealers in colored oleomargarine, $480.

Dealers in tobacco whose annual receipts exceed $200, $2.50.

Pawnbrokers, $25.

Commercial brokers and commission merchants, $10.

Customs brokers, $5.

Proprietors of theatres, museums and concert halls of a seating capacity not exceeding 250, $12.50; of a seating capacity not exceeding 500, $25; of a seating capacity not exceeding 800, $37.50; of a seating capacity more than 800, $50.

Proprietors of circuses, $50.

Proprietors of other public exhibitions, $5.

Proprietors of bowling alley or billiard room, for each alley or table, $2.50.

Other taxable occupations inclade dealers in leaf tobacco; manufacturers of tobacco, cigars or cigarettes; brewers, rectifiers, wholesale liquor dealers, wholesale and retail malt liquor dealers, manufacturers of oleomargarine or adulterated butter or process or renovated butter and dealers in same; manufacturers of and dealers in filled cheese; manufacturers and packers of mixed flour and manufacturers of stills and worms.

FIELD DAYS AT PATHFINDER

They Begin Tomorrow at the Pretty Popular Island --Weekly Events During the Summer.

The Pathfinder Boat Club announced to-day the opening of the club house for the summer season to-morrow, with the first of a series of Field Days an institution which proved very popular last year.

The Island Committee, G. C. Webb, M. M. Conley and R. A. Rogers have completed all arrangements for the opening during the past two weeks. Mrs. Elias Van Shoick, a very capable house keeper, has been engaged to manage the club this year, and to take charge of the kitchen. A special dinner, at the usual rate, will be served from 6 until 8 o'clock to-morrow night, and the committee requests that all members make reservations not later than three o'clock to-morrow afternoon for themselves and party.

A new piano, which will replace the rather antiquated instrument now in use, has been secured by the committee, and an excellent orchestra will play for dancing during dinner.

Two teams of club members will play a game of baseball during the afternoon, and the tennis and quoit courts will be open to members.

The committee plans to inaugurate a bus-service this year which will continue throughout the season. For a round trip fare of thirty cents, a bus will carry passengers to the Island tomorrow, leaving the Van Wagenen Garage at half hour intervals from three until six o'clock. Returning, the bus will leave the Island from seven until ten o'clock, and those who care to remain later than ten o'clock can make further arrangements with the operators of the line.

VICTOR FOSTER IN NEW PLAY

Many friends of Victor Foster, formerly of this city, including a delegation from the Fulton Lodge of Elks, will go to Eyracuse Saturday night to see the performance at the Temple Theatre, where Mr. Foster, assisted by Doris Mann & Company, heads the bill with the sketch, "By the Swanee River" a romance of the Southland.

The former Fulton boy has made rapid strides in his chosen profession since he first started his career ten years ago. After appearing for some time in an original sketch, entitled "Youth and Old Age," Mr. Foster played leading roles in several Broadway productions. Within the past few years, he has played leads with Alice Loyd, in "Little Miss Fixit," and as leading man with the road company of "Some Baby," a big Broadway success.

For the coming season he has allied himself with Miss Mann and her English company, and the act is considered one of the most novel and artistically staged in vaudeville. Mr. Foster is the nephew of Stephen C. Foster, the composer of "Suwanee River" and in his present vehicle he sings one of the unpublished songs written by the famous composer, entitled, "My Southland Cabin Home."

ABOUT THE TOWN

All Fulton citizens who intend to operate amusement concessions in the city during Old Home Week are advised to make application at once to the Chamber of Commerce for the recommendation which City Clerk Allen will require before issuing licenses. Several young men are considering the operation of refreshment concessions, and one venturesome individual has gone so far as to wire a New York carousel company for rental terms on a large carousel. It is quite probable that several local talent sideshows will be operated, and one minstrel company is already being formed.

* * *

The plot of state land on East First street, now under culivation as a city park, looks good to many of the prospective concessionaires. The city park commission has control of this ground, but the legal rights of the commission are vague. This piece of ground, moreover, is the only centrally located site available.

* * *

Under the charter, no provision is made for the licensing of carnivals, or side-shows, except on a daily fee basis. The present minimum license fee for one day is $10 and the maximum $20. On a day rate, for six days, therefore, a sideshow of any kind would be compelled to pay anywhere from $60 to $120 for the week in licenses alone. On this scale it isn't very likely that many will battle for the privilege of runnings shows.

* * *

Fulton citizens will be given the preference in the letting of concessions, as it is the desire of the Chamber of Commerce to keep the money spent in the city.

* * *

By the way, what happened to Good Roads Day? The commendable plan to improve some of the city streets seems to have been lost in the shuffle.

* * *

The lawyers of this county will hold a picnic at Mexico Point some time this month. Whether or not a Prohibition photographer will be present has not yet been announced.

* * *

The Barnum and Bailey circus has cancelled dates in Oswego and Watertown, where the big show was to appear the latter part of this month. Inasmuch as hundreds of Oswegoians saw the show in Syracuse, and the conditions in Oswego are poor at the best, it is not likely that the Oswego date would have proved a profitable one for the company. The circus is now touring New England and will show at Bridgeport to-morrow.

* * *

* * *

The committees collecting funds for Old Home Week report unexpected liberality on the part of the business men in the city. In view of business conditions here for the past year, the collectors anticipated some difficulty in securing funds, but the donations have been very liberal thus far.

* * *

James R. Somers, Commissioner of Charities, in a speach before the Common Council Tuesday night, scathingly denounced the spirit displayed by some of the men of wealth in this city, who were ready enough to spend and donate money to individuals and organizations already well supplied with funds, but completely ignored the deplorable condition of the poor of their own town.

Hearken to my mournful wail;
  I'm the map;
I am weary, sick and tired
  Of the scrap.

I am in an awful state
  I declare;
Boundary lines and firing lines
  Everywhere.

But I have a lot of streams
  Tucked away,
And the wood is luring me
  Every day.

So I'd like the world to know
  What I wish;
For the only line I want
  Is to fish.

SALOON MAN CHARGED WITH LAW VIOLATION

Timothy Keeliher, owner and operator of a saloon at No. 20 South First street, was arrested this morning charged with violation of Section 30 of the Liquor Tax Law, in allowing a woman, other than a member of the family to serve drinks in his saloon. A Miss Gray, the police state, was seen serving drinks to patrons of Keeliher's place, in connection with her other duties.

Keefiher's saloon adjoins the alley south of the Waldhorn block, and is situated directly over a restaurant formerly known as the "O. K." Eating Place.

Keeliher will be given a hearing this afternoon before Judge Wilson in City Court, and as his offense is a serious one, he will probably be held under bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Frank Morrison, also charged with a violation of the Liquor Tax law, was arraigned in City Court yesterday afternoon. Morrison, who is a bar tender for John F. Collins, who operates a cafe on East Second street, was charged with selling a drink to one Gene Wares, whose name is on the city black-list.

Morrison was held in bail of $1,000 to await the action of the Grand Jury. Bail was furnished by his employer.

WOMAN HEADS B. G. BIBLE CLASS

Mrs. Nellie Foster was elected president of the Business Girls' Bible class at a meeting held last night in the Library. The meeting was attended by about forty business girls and plans for regular sessions of study and instruction were discussed. Steps will be taken at once to engage a teacher for the class, and Mrs. Foster hopes to be able to announce the first meeting for early next week.

The club received its first impetus during the Peacock revival, when noon meetings for the business girls of the city were held in the various church parlors, and lunches were served. Several of the members expressed a desire to continue the meetings and the organization of the club resulted.

All of the members of the club are girls employed in the business houses and industries of the city. Mrs. Foster, the president, is in charge of the cloak and suit department in the O'Brien store.

UNITED CIGAR CO. PLANS EXPANSION

New York—The Board of Directors of the United Cigar Stores Company at a meeting yesterday decided to establish 900 additional sales agencies throughout the country. About a year ago the company experimented in a new field by giving to certain kinds of shop keepers in towns where a company owned cigar store would not be profitable the agency for selling brands exclusively controlled by it.

It was announced yesterday that the 100 agencies thus established had proved to be so successful that 900 others would be established, making 1,000 agencies in all. These do not include the 100 stores which the company authorised to be established recently.

M. A. Bouvier, assistant vice president of the company, will have charge of the new agency end of the business. Most of the new agencies will be established in the East and the South.

John Atwater's Little Sister

How She Entertained His Guest During His Absence.

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Miss Susan Atwater kept house for a brother much older than herself. John Atwater was thirty-eight years old; Susan was nineteen. John was a lawyer who dabbled in politics—not for office, but because the game interested him.

While John and his sister were quite chummy, he never talked to her about his professional work or his interest in this or that political deal.

One day John Atwater told his sister that he must go to attend court in another city and would be gone probably several days. She was to open his letters while he was gone, attend to anything needing attention so far as she was able and communicate any matter of which he should be advised. This was asking a good deal, considering that he kept his affairs so rigidly to himself. He had not been long away before a letter came for him bearing the official mark of the governor of the state. Susan opened it and read:

Dear John—I'm going to run down to see you tomorrow. My purpose is to get away from under the harrow for a brief season. I shall eschew all affairs of state except the canal matter, on which I wish to confer with you; but, that off my mind, I propose to take a rest. Yours,

JAMES R. MARTINDALE.

P. S.—Something of importance may come up to keep me here, but I hope not.

Miss Atwater was quite upset by this letter. The governor of the state was altogether too big a man for her to entertain during her father's absence. What should she do? Telegraph, of course, that her brother would be out of town. Why not telephone? The state capital was not far distant, and the expense would be about the same. It was 11 o'clock in the morning, and the governor would doubtless be in his office. Going to the telephone booth, she consulted the subscribers' names and, finding the governor's number, took down the receiver and called for him. He was sitting at his desk at the time and answered the call at once.

"Yes, I'm Martindale."

"I am John Atwater's sister. My brother is away and before leaving asked me to open any letters that might come for him. One came from you stating that you were coming to see him. I thought it advisable to telephone you that he is absent."

"Thank you very much. When do you expect your brother home?"

"He said that he would probably be away several days."

"U'm!" The governor seemed to be considering.

"You are Miss Susan Atwater, are you not?"

"I am."

"I've heard your brother speak of you."

Susie wondered what John could have had to say to the governor of the state about her. Surely she could have nothing to do with the momentous political questions that were discussed between them.

"Well," continued the governor, after a brief silence, "I presume I'll have to defer my visit. I'm sorry. Very much obliged to you for your information. Goodby."

Of all the months in the year the month of June is the most delicious, and the morning after Susie Atwater had headed off the governor was one of the brightest mornings of that bright month. Susie Atwater, having finished her morning duties, was sitting on the porch with some embroidery work when she saw a man approaching, dressed in a white flannel suit and a straw hat. He looked to be about thirty-five years old, and there was something altogether very attractive in his appearance. He stopped at the foot of the steps and asked:

"Does John Atwater live here?"

"He does."

"Is he at home?"

"No, he went away yesterday, to be gone several days."

"That's too bad," said the stranger in a disappointed tone.

"Won't you come up on to the porch?"

The stranger availed himself of the invitation and seated himself in a wicker chair. Everything about him was very lovely. A climbing rose vine was in bloom. A field opposite was full of daisies; a pretty girl was beside him.

"Are you related to John?" he asked of Susie.

"I'm his sister."

"John and I were classmates in college. John entered at twenty, I at sixteen, but that didn't prevent our being chums. Having some time on my hands, I thought I would run down to see him. It's a long while since we met."

"I dare say he will be greatly disappointed to miss your visit."

"Not more than I."

"There's no train back till 3 o'clock," he said.

"I shall be happy to do what I can to relieve the tedium of your stay till then and can give you a bite of luncheon."

"Thank you very much."

An hour was spent very pleasantly, then Susie went inside to give some orders about the luncheon. When she returned the two spend another hour, during which the stranger made himself so entertaining that Susie began to lay plans for keeping him till her brother returned. There was an apology for a chaperon in an invalid aunt, very old, in the house, whose presence would render his stay proper. After luncheon Susie said to her brother's friend:

"If you choose to wait John's coming you can be accommodated."

"I've been thinking that I might wait a day or two, but I would not think of intruding upon you. I'm stopping at the inn, and I can as well keep my room there. By the bye, where has John gone? I have a mind to communicate with him and learn when he'll be back."

"He's at Waterford at the Somers House."

"Where is your phone? I'll see if I can get him."

Being shown to the booth, the gentleman called up John Atwater and caught him at his hotel at the noon meal. After a brief conversation the guest told Susie that her brother wished to speak a few words with her, and on taking the receiver she was instructed to send to the inn for the gentleman's baggage and if possible keep him till he (John) returned.

"Who is he?" asked Susie.

"A college classmate of mine."

With this there was a click, and Susie was shut off from any further information. Without a word to the visitor she sent for his baggage, and it arrived in time for him to dress for dinner. Notwithstanding he had reached middle age he seemed very boyish. He talked a great deal about the escapades he and John were concerned in while in college, though he said that John was rather old for that sort of thing. Susie wondered how John's friend could have had time for escapades, for a Phi Beta Kappa key hung to his fob, and Susie knew that that meant a high stand in his class. However, he gave her the impression of being very bright, and it might be that he had been one of those students who can maintain a good standing with no great amount of study.

Susie Atwater was desirous of obtaining the guest's name, but hesitated to ask him point blank. Finally she mustered up courage to do so.

"I have a proposition to make," he replied. "When your brother returns he and I will be John and Bob to each other. You and he will be John and Sue. That leaves you and me out in the cold for Miss and Mister. What do you say to our being Bob and Susie till John comes home?"

There was something forceful about the man that prevented her insisting on a more satisfactory reply to her question. She assented to his proposition, though whenever it came to addressing him as Bob she evaded doing so by not calling him by any name at all. She was passing a very delightful season and began to wish her brother would not hurry back, because when he came he would doubtless appropriate much of the visitor's company, to her loss.

When John went away the "several days" she was to spend without him seemed long. His stay really seemed very short. He returned one morning to find his sister and the visitor sitting in the drawing room on the same sofa. With presence of mind, the latter jumped up and advanced to meet him.

"Hello, John!"

"Hello, Bob!"

"Your sister has been good enough to keep me over."

"So I see."

John grasped his friend's hand; then, turning to his sister, he said:

"Sue, this is my college friend, Bob Martindale, better known to the public today as James Robert Martindale, governor of this state. I'm glad you succeeded in keeping him until my return."

This introduction struck Miss Atwater dumb. She did not try to speak, for she was too much astonished to utter a sound. A dozen considerations rushed upon her in a heap. This young man, full of college pranks, a governor! And he had come knowing her brother was away and after leading her to suppose he would defer his visit.

"Miss Atwater," said the governor, "having heard no end of chatter from John about his interesting little sister, I long desired to see her. When you telephoned me of John's absence it occurred to me to make your acquaintance incog. You have given me the change and rest much better than he could have done it. Thanks, awfully. My brief recess is ended. I must go back to work this afternoon."

But Governor Martindale, having broken the ice by this first visit to his friend John Atwater, made many others. Whenever the cares of state became too much for him or when he wished to consult his friend about some important political move he would stop away from the capital for the purpose. But when he arrived he seemed more inclined to dawdle with Miss Atwater than to talk politics with her brother.

Then his visits began to be preceded by a gift of flowers, and every one knows what that means when a man becomes attentive to one of the opposite sex.

When Sue Atwater received a proposal of marriage from the governor of the state she could not realize that a girl scarcely out of her teens had received such an honor. She did not toy with it, but accepted it at once.

NOTABLES IN THE LIMELIGHT

Colonel Frederick W. Sibley, United States Army.

Colonel Frederick W. Sibley of the Fourteenth cavalry, who was sent in pursuit of the Mexican bandits who recently raided the little settlement of Glen Springs, Tex., has for some time been in command of Fort Clark, Tex. With him on his expedition Colonel Sibley took two squadrons of the Fourteenth and a machine gun troop.

A native of Texas, Colonel Sibley was graduated from the West Point Military academy in 1874 and was appointed a second lieutenant in the Second cavalry, since which time he has had a varied experience in the service of Uncle Sam. For ten years he fought against the Indians in the Rocky mountains and on the plains, participating in nearly all of General Crook's engagements with the Sioux and Cheyennes. For gallantry in action on the Little Big Horn in July, 1876, he was brevetted, and later "for distinguished gallantry in action against Crazy Horse's camp" on Powder river, Mont., March 17, 1876, was recommended for a medal of honor.

During the war with Spain Colonel Sibley commanded the headquarters guard of the Fourth army corps under Major General John Coppinger. In 1903 he was adjutant general of the department of Luzon, Philippines, and in 1905 was in command of the troops that suppressed the ladrones of Cavite and Batangas provinces, returning invalided to the United States. He was selected for detail to the general staff in 1908, but declined. From 1909 to 1911 he was commandant of cadets at West Point.

To Nominate President Wilson.

When the Democratic national convention meets in St. Louis next June the honor of nominating President Woodrow Wilson as the standard bearer of his party will probably fall on Governor James F. Fielder of New Jersey.

JAMES F. FIELDER.

Attorney General J. W. Wescott of New Jersey nominated the president for his first term and is said to be Mr. Wilson's choice for the honor again.

When President Wilson was elected in 1912 he resigned as chief executive of the state, and Governor Fielder, who was then president of the senate, by virtue of his office became acting governor. Under the laws of New Jersey the president of the senate automatically becomes governor of the state either upon the resignation or the disability of the elected governor.

Governor Fielder is a native of New Jersey, forty-nine years old, a lawyer by profession and for the last twelve years has been active in state politics. He was educated in the public schools and was admitted to the bar in 1888 and four years later was made counselor. He went to the state assembly in 1903 and in 1907 was elected to the senate. There he remained until he succeeded President Wilson as acting governor. He was later elected governor.

Asks $1 on Ring, Offered $200.

Kansas City.—A ring which she had found and with which her children had played occasionally for two or three years was taken to the municipal loan office by a poor woman, who thought she might borrow a dollar on it. "Yes, we'll let you have a dollar or more," the manager said. "I'll let you have $200 on it, if you wish." The diamond in the ring was said to be worth $300. The woman said she supposed the diamond was an imitation.

YOUNG FOLKS' CORNER

A Soap Bubble Party.

You can amuse any number of your child friends with soap bubbles, indoors or out, if mother will allow you to use an old blanket spread over a table to make a soft pad. Around this table invite your guests to sit. Each child should have a little bowl of Dutch ware and design and each also should have a penny clay pipe.

If you want to be very grand you can tie the bowls and wind the stems of the pipes with baby ribbon.

The bowls should be filled with a mixture made from boiling shaved castile soap in water. To every pint of this a tablespoonful of glycerin should be added. The pipes should have a rim of soap around the inside of the bowls, this making the bubbles grow to an enormous size.

You may offer little prizes for the bubble lasting longest, that which is most full of color and for the largest one blown.

Grown people have often enjoyed bubble parties, and there is no reason why you youngsters shouldn't make such an affair a great success.

Names of Animals.

The porcupine gets his name from two Latin words—porcus, from which we get the word pork, and spine, a thorn, so his name really means a pig with thorns.

The word lion is Latin also, from the word leo, and leopard is from the same word and from pardus, spotted, so that a leopard really means a spotted lion.

The word hippopotamus means river horse, and rhinoceros comes from two words meaning nose and horn.

The badger's Latin name is bladarina, from the word blada, corn (he was so called because he used to steal the corn from the fields).

The words elephant, camel and giraffe are from eastern languages, giraffe coming from two words meaning long and neck. It is easy to see how he got that name.

Most of the names of one syllable are all from Anglo-Saxon. Mouse comes from mys, so that is why we have mice in the Anglo-Saxon.

Pebble Chase.

In this more modern amusement of the Greek children the leader stands among the players, holding a pebble between the palms of his hands. Each player extends his hands, palm to palm, and the leader puts his hands between the palms of each player, ostensibly to drop in the pebble he is holding. The player who receives the pebble is chased by the others and may be saved only by returning to the leader and giving the pebble to him. The chase may begin as soon as the players suspect who has the pebble, so each player should carefully watch the hands and faces of the others to see who gets it and, as soon as he suspects one, start to chase him. Leaders and players must exercise ingenuity to keep the secret of the whereabouts of the pebble, but not after the last pair of hands has been passed.

"Kick the Marbles."

Two boys and two marbles are required. The first boy says to the second, "Kick this marble north, south, east or west," pointing to one of the marbles. Only one kick is allowed. If he succeeds he wins; if he fails the other wins. If he puts it north, as ordered, he may kick again to hit the other marble, in which case he wins again. If he hits the marble and goes north, as ordered, at one kick he wins double. Each boy tries to leave the marbles in as difficult a position as possible for his successor, and here comes in a peculiarity which makes this game unique among all games. If the position in which the marbles are left is too difficult for the other boy to play he may refuse to kick and the first boy is obliged to play his own difficult game.

An Egg Trick.

Hold a raw egg on end and spin it on a plate or other smooth surface. Quickly place the hand upon it for an instant, stopping the motion momentarily. When the hand is removed the egg will resume its spinning. This is because the liquid contents in the shell continued to whirl rapidly when your hand stopped the shell, and if it is quickly released the whirling contents will again set the shell to spinning.—The American Boy.

Riddles.

What two animals follow you everywhere? Your calves.

What always weighs the same, whether larger or smaller? A hole.

Why is the letter B like fire? Because it makes oil boil.

Which member of congress wears the largest hat? The one who has the largest head.

What relation is that child to its own father who is not its own father's own son? His daughter.

If We Forget.

Suppose the flowers all were black—
How sad the butterflies would be!
Suppose the south wind ceased to blow,
Who'd wake the pussy willow buds?
Suppose the raindrops wouldn't fall,
What would the thirsty flowers do?
Suppose the sun forgot to rise,
Who'd wake the sleepy little birds?
And just suppose a tiny boy
Should not remember to be good,
How very drear the world would be!
How sad the ones who love him so!
Each one must do the very best
To make things cheerful, bright and gay.
Upon each flower, bird and child
The world depends for love and joy.
Upon the wind, the sun, the rain
The flowers look for strength to live,
And dreams of wondrous things to be
Are wakened by the butterfly.

ARTHUR'S WOOING

By ETHEL HOLMES

Jeannette Wild was an incorrigible flirt. Perhaps it was not her fault; perhaps it was. There was something about her that attracted men, whether it was intentional or not. A pleasant smile hovered about her lips; there was a sparkle in her eye. When she said anything droll she had a way of cocking her head on one side, like a bird, that was very attractive. Jeannette was an innocent girl in every respect, and no word of scandal was ever spoken against her.

But her flirtations were very annoying to her mother. In the first place, her daughter was too young to make an intelligent choice of a husband; in the second, she had not finished her education. When she was nineteen years old, having become entangled with three suitors, her mother resolved upon drastic measures. The spring was coming on, and the good lady, dreading the advantages that summer possessed for love affairs, resolved to take her daughter where a man could not get near enough to fall in love with her.

Mrs. Wild had no confidence in any place of abode that was not isolated. A land fortress would need a moat, which was impracticable. No place would do unless surrounded by water. So an island it must be.

In Casco bay, on the Maine coast, are a number of islands. In the center of one of these islands is a cottage. Mrs. Wild rented this cottage with a view to removing her family and servants there. But, alas, it is difficult for women to get on without men. Mrs. Wild dared not live on the island without one. Besides, she needed one to run her motorboat. There was another reason for a man's presence. Mrs. Wild desired to prevent any of her daughter's suitors from landing on her retreat, and she needed some one strong enough to keep them off.

Mrs. Wild advertised for a person to fill this requirement. Several young men answered her advertisement, but the lady did not engage any of them. She waited till an elderly one applied for the job and engaged him.

John Doolan had white hair and a white beard. But he seemed to be quite strong and said that he was perfectly able to hold the dock against all comers. He went to the island a couple of days before the family to make preparations. When they arrived all was in order for their reception.

As Mrs. Wild had anticipated, they had not been at their summer home long before one of Jeannette's suitors appeared at the dock. He was refused a landing by John Doolan. He sailed around to another part of the island, but John was there with a gun to receive him. Mrs. Wild was so pleased with this action of John's that she gave him a five dollar gold piece. Soon after this another boat appeared, and a handsome young fellow in yachting costume was about to step out on to the landing when John ordered him off. He poked a card at his opposer, but John said that if he were the president himself he could not come ashore. Argument having failed, the visitor tried bribery. John proved incorruptible. There was nothing for the yachtsman to do but sail away.

Mrs. Wild, to whom John reported all these noble acts of defense, was delighted. On several occasions he brought the cards that were given him to his mistress. Some of the men who had left them she knew, and some were strangers to her. It made no difference who they were. She had determined to keep men away from her daughter for that summer, and, having secured the services of a man who was capable and trustworthy, she gave herself no concern. She declared that it was the first summer she had felt easy about Jeannette since she was fourteen years old.

But one day a thunderbolt came out of a clear sky. The fond mother while taking a stroll over her island, walking through a thick wood heard voices near her. She listened and recognized Jeannette's voice. Then came a man's deeper tones. The latter sounded much like John Doolan.

Could it be that the flirt, deprived of association with men, had cast her toils about the old servitor? The suspicion brought a shock to the doting mother.

Advancing toward the sounds, she peeped through a break in the leaves, and there, sitting on a log with their backs to her, were John and Jeannette, John's arm around Jeannette's waist.

Mrs. Wild tore through the underbrush like a fury. Hearing the noise of breaking brush behind them, the culprits jumped to their feet, turned and confronted the angry mother.

While she was delivering a tirade of reproaches John pulled off his white beard and stood revealed as the most persistent of Jeannette's suitors.

"Woe is me, Mrs. Wild," he said with head bent low. "I confess myself a great sinner. Jeannette wrote me that you were to remove her here, and I, seeing your advertisement for a defender, applied for the place in the uniform of a veteran. I have performed my duties to the best of my ability."

"It's all right, mamma," pleaded Jeannette. "Your bringing me here has brought me to a decision. I love Arthur and will marry no one else. His wooing has charmed me."

Since Arthur was an eligible young man with a fortune Mrs. Wild made a virtue of necessity, forgave them and consented to an early marriage.

with folds over the shoulders, the inner one being net over white georgette crape. The pendant is a jeweled Russian cross.

THE JEWELRY CRAZE.

Dirty Ornaments Not Attractive, So Polish Up Your Treasures.

All jewelry that is constantly worn should be washed every month or six weeks. It is not a difficult matter either. All you have to do is to make a soapy lather and add a few drops of ammonia. Take an old toothbrush and brush all the dirt out of the crevices. When quite clean take the jewelry out of the water and rub perfectly dry with a chamois leather or ordinary tissue paper.

When cleaning an article that is set with stones, such as a ring, be more gentle with the toothbrush, for if you brush too vigorously you may easily loosen a stone. A pendant set with emeralds, rubies or diamonds is better immersed in a little eau de cologne than water.

If you happen to be the lucky possessor of any pearls remember they must never be put in soapy water, though sea water is good for them. Pearls that are shut away and seldom worn lose their beautiful sheen, so if you have such a necklace wear it regularly, even if under your waist. The contact with the skin will keep pearls a good color.

Turquoise are best washed with warm water and a little ammonia, but no soap. Soap is apt to turn their pretty blue into a green. When you are cleaning opals be careful not to drop them, for they are brittle and chip with alarming ease. In fact, they have earned a name for being unlucky simply because they are so fragile.

When you are not wearing jewelry do not leave it lying about or in a drawer knocking against other ornaments. Keep it either in a piece of leather or in cotton wool. Steel ornaments should always be wrapped up carefully in tissue paper, for the air will quickly spoil their beauty.

For Convalescents.

Orange Omelet.—One yolk of egg, a teaspoonful powdered sugar, a tablespoonful orange juice, the white of an egg. Beat the yolk and add the sugar and the orange juice, fold in the stiffly beaten white and cook as directed for omeletes, fold, turn on a warm dish and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Serve immediately.

French Chops.—Trim off the fat and skin from a rib chop and scrape the bone clean, leaving only the lean meat at one end. Prepare and broil over a medium flame.

Chicken Custard.—Half cup of chicken broth, one-half cup cream, an egg yolk, salt to taste. Heat the broth to boiling point, add the cream to beaten yolk, add the broth and cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Strain and serve cold.

Edging on Handkerchiefs.

To crochet a narrow edging on a handkerchief or small doily the work will be made easier if the article is stitched on the machine without having any thread in the needle. Small holes are thus made close to the edge into which the crochet hook can be put, and the holes will serve as a guide to keep the stitches an even distance apart.

Orange Fruit Cup.

Three large navel oranges, two bananas (not too ripe), one-half can pineapple or whole of a ten cent can, cup of the juice, juice of a lemon, three-quarters cupful of sugar. Cut oranges in small bits, cut pineapple about the same, put juice of lemon over it. Add sugar. Just before serving slice in the banana. This is a "feast for the gods."

WORRY A POISON.

Emotions Powerfully Affect the Body, So Curb Them.

Worry, like all other depressing emotions, is a poison. It is a short circuit that burns out the mental batteries and destroys the power for useful activity.

It is not merely a habit—it is a real disease. It is not merely the surrender of the will to morbid fancies or imaginary causes of anxiety—it is an actual disease, a real physical state, as real as is indigestion, rheumatism or any other bodily disease.

Within the last few years the emotions and their influence upon the body have been made the subject of laboratory study, and numerous highly interesting, important and practical facts have been developed. It is true that the question, "What is emotion?" still remains unsolved, as does the greater and noble question, "What is the mind?" But the influence of the various emotions upon the body is now fairly well understood and can be described in definite physiological terms and thus made the subject of rational consideration.

The emotions are perhaps among the most powerful of all the influences which affect the body, and their specific effects present as definite, as clearly defined characteristics as do the effects produced by heat, cold, electricity and other physical agents or such bodily states as hunger, thirst and fatigue.—Good Health.

Technical Objection.

The chess player's wife when in the country drew her husband's attention to a debate which was advertised to take place one evening between a colored minister and a white divine and requested him to attend the debate. "No, my dear. I shall do nothing of the kind. With bishops of opposite colors on the board the game is sure to end in a draw."

In the Garden.

Give the petunia a good soil, let it get a good start at the beginning of the season, and by the last of June it will begin to bloom, and from that time on to frost it will make the garden gay with its crimson and purple and white blossoms. If there should be a little falling off in the quantity and quality of its flowers in September cut away nearly all the old branches and allow the plant to renew itself.

After cutting back it will soon throw up new shoots and on these will be borne flowers quite as large and fine as those which characterized the production of the earlier part of the season, and there will be plenty of them until the coming of cold weather.

Broiled Swordfish With Horseradish.

Wash and wipe dry and season with salt and pepper slices of swordfish or halibut. Broil ten or twelve minutes over a charcoal fire if possible. Serve with a horseradish sauce. Cream one-third cupful of butter, add two rounding tablespoonfuls grated horseradish, one teaspoonful made mustard, one saltspoonful of salt and two tablespoonfuls of hot vinegar.

Rhubarb Conserve.

Three pounds of sugar, three and half pounds of rhubarb cut in small pieces, juice of three lemons and grated rind. Boil this thirty minutes; then add a cupful of chopped blanched almonds. Chop about the size of a bean. Boil from twenty to thirty minutes longer. Put in jelly glasses. This is very fine.

NEW LINGERIE.

Suggestions For Women Who Make Their Own Underwear.

Women who do no other sewing sometimes make their own lingerie, at least part of it. Although the modern lingerie is so dainty, so elaborate, it is quite possible to make it if one follows the new patterns carefully, for they are, of course, designed by the best designers that money can hire, and they are, withal, practical.

To begin with, there are the usual patterns in the new silhouette. All underwear has taken on flaring lines. So there are patterns with a flare for all the lingerie one might desire.

There is the new petticoat that measures from three and a half to four yards around the bottom, a petticoat every one will need to wear with the summer's full skirted frocks. Such a petticoat can be finished in scallops or deep points at the bottom, or a straight flounce trimmed with lace or ruchings can be used. And it can be made with or without an extension under the flounce and with or without a dust ruffle.

There is a most attractive pattern for a nightgown with revers, back and front. There is a V shaped opening back and front, and little revers turn back from this opening. The gown is belted in at the empire waist line or left hanging, but the belted form seems prettier.

There is, too, the sleeveless nightgown, with points of the front and back meeting on the shoulders. This, too, is left flowing or else belted in, as one prefers.

There is a simply made princess slip with the required width at the bottom. It is in two pieces, shaped in at the waist and fitted by means of ribbons run through beading at the belt. It is made with ribbon or lace straps over the shoulder or with a shaped neck.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

VARIOUS FROSTINGS.

THE CAKE.—Sift twice a cup and a half of flour, sifted once before measuring; three level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of salt and a cupful of sugar. Break two eggs in a cup and fill the cup full of milk. Add this to the dry ingredients. Beat smooth with an egg beater and then add five level tablespoonfuls of butter melted enough to be soft, but not liquid. Beat this in and bake the cake in two large layers or three very small layers and fill with any desired filling.

Marshmallow.—For marshmallow filling and frosting boil a cupful of sugar and a third of a cupful of boiling water without stirring until it spins a thread from the end of the spoon. Have ready five marshmallows cut into small pieces and pour over the white of an egg beaten until stiff, but not dry. Beat constantly until thick enough to spread. Flavor with vanilla.

Cocoa Frosting.—For cocoa frosting rub to a cream three tablespoonfuls of cream, a cupful of confectioner's sugar and a tablespoonful of cocoa. Flavor with vanilla.

Orange.—Mix together half a cupful of powdered sugar, a beaten egg, a big tablespoonful of flour, half a tablespoonful of butter, the juice and grated rind of an orange and a teaspoonful of lemon extract. Cook for ten minutes in a double boiler. Cool and spread between the layers, with very thin slices of a peeled orange. Use without the orange slices on the top of the cake.

Chocolate Filling.—Melt two squares of chocolate over hot water and add three-quarters of a cupful of powdered sugar and three tablespoonfuls of milk or cream. Cook in a double boiler until smooth and then add the beaten yolk of an egg. Cook one minute more and cool slightly before spreading between and on top of the layers.

Uncooked Icing.—It is always possible to make a quick icing of beaten egg white and confectioner's sugar. This can be used with chopped nut meats between the layers and with whole nut meats as a garnish on top, or shredded cocoanut can be added to it for the filling with candied cherries atop.

In the Gun Turret.

Manipulating a big gun in the turret of a battleship is just about as impersonal a form of fighting as exists. In trench warfare you can hear the shell coming in time to step out of its path (if you are lucky), but in turret fighting you are shut up tightly in a steel compartment, with no chance of escape. If any enemy projectile strikes the turret you are killed. If the ship sinks your steel trap drowns you. And if you finally defeat the enemy by working a brass lever back and forward for five hours you wonder how many of your shots were hits and how many were mere waterspouts.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Hot Water and a Glass.

Why does a glass break when hot water is put into it and does not break when it is put into hot water? The hot water inside the glass makes the layers on the inside tend to expand. But they cannot expand, being held fast by the colder outer layers, so they buckle on themselves and the glass breaks.

When, however, we dip the glass into boiling water it is the outer layers that tend to expand. They have room to do it, not being compressed by the inner layers, and they gradually drag these inner layers with them as the heat spreads to the latter. So there is nothing to make the glass break.

He Thought It Dear.

"Mercy!" ejaculated young Mrs. Kidder in the midst of her reading. "Here is an account of a woman who sold her baby for 50 cents!"

"Oh, well," returned her bachelor brother, who had at sundry times cared for the children while his sister went shopping, "all kinds of swindles are being worked nowadays."—Kansas City Star.

Beauty's Enemies.

Beauty is the one supreme gift for which every woman should strive. Not mere physical beauty (that is secondary), but a combination of the external and spiritual beauty combined.

No woman can be beautiful, in the finer sense of the word, unless she is the possessor of a pure mind and a noble character. Her features may be perfectly molded, but without these qualities there will be something which will bar her from being a real beauty. On the other hand, a woman with irregular features who does possess these qualities may impress the world as a real beauty.

Vanity, ill temper, selfishness, pettiness, hateful thoughts, an impure mind, are beauty's bitterest enemies. Nature may have been most generous in the chiseling of the features and in the molding of the body. But if finely chiseled features and a well molded body are ruled by such unattractive characteristics beauty flies away.

A Cooking Hint.

In cooking one will find quite a saving in gas by the use of a tin bread or cracker box with a tight fitting cover. Stove lids heated in the furnace or oven are then placed at sides and bottom of the box. Bring food to boiling point, cover closely and set in the box. In one to one and one-half hours you will find pudding, spaghetti or the like done quickly.

Four Children In a Year.

Bristol, Tenn.—Mrs. Rufus Jones of Dante, a coal mining town in Russell county, has the distinction of having become the mother of four children within twelve months. In March, 1915, twins were born to her, and on Feb. 29, this leap year, twins were again born to her.

NEW WEST SIDE HOTEL MODERN IN EVERY WAY

The new Hotel Royal, erected on the site of the old hostelry which was destroyed by fire on December 14, last, is now rapidly nearing completion, and the grill room and bar were opened for business yesterday. J. J. McGinnis, the owner, expects to have the entire establishment ready for the public before Old Home Week.

The new building is a great improvement over the old frame structure, which was destroyed with $10,000 loss last winter. The new hotel covers not only the site of the old building but also the land formerly occupied by a garage in the rear of the old site. The new building is 92 feet long and averages about 40 feet in width, large grill room, two dining rooms, one large enough for small banuets, and the hotel office in addition to the large kitchen on the main floor.

Cole Sewall, a well-known hotel man, will manage the house, and particular attention will be given to automobile trade, in the form of a special chicken dinner which will be served every afternoon and being flat-iron shape, and faces the junction of West First and Hannibal streets. There are 15 guest rooms on the upper floors, and a evening.

The grill-room, when completed will be the equal of any grill in this section, and some sort of musical entertainment will probably be provided for the patrons.

The hotel will be operated on the American plan, and the management expects to mark the opening with a large volume of business during Old Home Week, when it is fairly certain that the capacity of all the city hotels will be taxed.

The total cost of the building approximates $25,000, and it is of fire-proof construction, being built of reinforced concrete and brick.

At 11:30 o'clock dinner will be erved in the dining room at headquarters. The afternoon session is scheduled for 1 o'clock. A memorial service will be held to commemorate the memory of three comrades, who have answered the last roll since the reunion of 1915—Louis M. Brown, Charles N. Nyers and Ralph Sherman—all of whom were residents of Pulaski. The musical program will be in charge of Jesse D. Burdick, chairman of the music committee.

RAILROADS LAY CARDS ON TABLE BEFORE UNIONS

New York—The railroad managers "laid their cards on the table" at yesterday's session of the national conference, and it had not been determined at the hour of adjourment whether or not the union representatives would "call."

During the last week the managers have been endeavoring by scores of questions to learn what would be the cost to them on various classes of labor of the application of the new proposal put in by the unions. Elisha Lee, chairman of the Managers' Committee, on Saturday introduced what was understood to be the railroads' counter proposition but which he yesterday declared not to be such. Toward the close of the session he remarked that he had finished with his questions and announced that he wished the union men to know something about the side of the roads.

PUFFING UP THE OYSTER.

Showing How Easily Four Quarts May Be Swelled Into Five.

Adulteration of oysters on the half shell, freshly opened, might be thought as difficult as adulteration of unpeeled fruit. But the purists to whom all things are impure have discovered that oysters are "adulterated" by soaking them in fresh water. It is not suggested that the water is unwholesome, either for the oysters or those who eat them. But that is not to the point. These things are all arranged for us at Washington, and the department of agriculture, which is particularly devoted to oyster culture, has issued a formal statement to all and sundry regarding the heinous practice of making oysters look plump and white by soaking them in water. It is official information that if four quarts of oysters and a quart of fresh water are placed in a five quart container and the mixture allowed to stand for several hours there will be a marked change in the appearance of the contents of the container. To the naked eye there will appear to be five quarts of dry oysters, for the container will be full and there will be little or no water in sight, it being on the inside of the plump, succulent looking oysters. The average purchaser has no means of detecting the addition of water.

That relates only to "shucked" oysters. Half shell oysters "drink" water, and thus undersized oysters may be converted into "select," beyond the detection of any but a chemist. The purpose of publishing these facts is to make it known to all lawbreakers and oyster caterers that all such oysters are "adulterated under section 7 of the food and drugs act," which provides that food is adulterated "if a substance has been substituted in whole or in part for the article."

SOME SPICY SPORT CHATS

Washington Appears Strongest Team In American League.

HAS GREAT PITCHING STAFF

Fielder Jones Has His Hands Full With St. Louis Browns—Whitted Knows Good Ball Playing Material When He Sees It—Other Notes.

It is not going to be a difficult matter to win the American league pennant this year. There are a lot of overrated teams in the race which will be unable to stand up and hold their own against a team like the Nationals, for instance.

The picking has been easy to date. Most of the clubs are so weak that there is not any comparison with the strong clubs, and this will be proved before the season is much older.

If Washington can keep up its present pace, and there is no reason why it should not, it ought to be out in front by a comfortable margin in a few weeks, and once there it should be able to stay at the top until the end of the season.

There are no clubs which have anything on the Griffmen. The Senators are playing a high grade of ball, and if the breaks come their way there is nothing to stop them from leading the procession in October. Boston, New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Detroit are virtually eliminated from the race by reason of their inability to get good pitching. This leaves the race between Washington and Cleveland, and there is no comparison in the pitching strength of these two teams. This means that in due time there must be a change in the situation, which for several weeks apparently has been in the hands of the Indians.

Veterans of baseball give the American league credit for having done more for the game than any other organization identified with the sport. It was the American league which made the world series, the baseball classic, possible, and it was this same league which forced those investing in the game to build accommodations of the finest for their patrons.

Palatial ball parks now are the thing throughout the country, while in the days of the one big league wooden stands and poor accommodations were provided for the public. Things have changed a great deal since the advent of the Johnson circuit, and it is no wonder that the man who really was responsible will be retained for the remainder of his life at the head of the organization.

Fielder Jones says he is not worrying, but that does not go. The poor showing of the St. Louis Browns is not making Jones hum lullabies, by any means. To be away down in the race is not pleasant, especially for a manager who has given assurances that he would be in the thickest of the pennant fight and most probably win it in a common canter.

Jones must surely have had an awakening. His belief that the Federal league was the strongest body in the major circuits surely has been dissipated. It should not have taken many days to convince Jones that he was in error, for before the season opened the Cardinals gave the Browns a good beating, and ever since then the Browns have been a sort of doormat for the other teams in the American league.

It develops that it was George Whitted, the Phillies' outfielder, who discovered Henry Lee Meadows. Whitted met Scout Bob Connery at St. Augustine, Fla., last spring, and he remarked that there was a little fellow who wore glasses and lived at his home at Durham, N. C., who would surely make a pitcher. Connery went down, looked him over and signed him for the Cardinals, and he is now one of the best pitchers in the National league.

Whitted evidently has good judgment in picking up players, and when his playing days are over he ought to be given a chance to become a scout.

It is very doubtful if the Gotch-Stecher wrestling bout will ever take place. Gotch, the present title holder, is not in the best of health, it is reported, and there is little or no chance of his ever recovering sufficiently to enable him to stand the strain of a long session of training, which would be necessary to get him in good enough fettle to be able to have a look in with Stecher.

Stecher is but a mere boy, but his prowess now is perhaps as great as that of any man who ever has been matched with Gotch. He is said to have a leg pressure of 2,500 pounds.

Danny Murphy, like all the greater batters who established reputations years ago, still is a very apt person with the bat. Danny is managing the New Haven club and has abandoned the outfield for second base, where he is playing splendid ball. He is hitting the pill as he used to when with the Mackmen, and he is pretty sure to win the pennant by reason of his individual ability, regardless of the fact that Murphy is no longer a spring chicken.

VETERAN BOXMEN STARTED POORLY

But Few Old Time Pitchers Going Well This Spring.

YOUNG PITCHERS SHINING.

Markle and Mogridge of New York Yanks Making Names For Themselves—Myers of Philadelphia, Harper of Washington and Others.

The first month of the 1916 championship race in the American league has been notable particularly for the success of young pitchers and the failure of veterans who had been counted upon to do most of the winning for their respective clubs. Boxmen who ranked as stars in the campaign of a year ago are finding it a most difficult task to score victories this season, while youngsters who got little consideration from the dopesters in the winter and spring are flashing to the front with imposing performances.

In a few instances the veterans are holding their own, but the number of failures among the star boxmen exceeds the number of successes. Walter Johnson, of course, is out in front, but it was always a bit unfair to other pitchers to bring them into comparison with the Washington speed marvel.

The Cleveland and New York clubs, two of the three leaders for the Johnson pennant, have been held up this spring by young pitchers. Guy Morton of course must not be overlooked, as he is more than performing up to the expectations of the fans and dopesters, but he has received no help from any of the pitchers whom Lee Fohl can call veterans. Willie Mitchell, rated as next to Morton in the early dope, has worked poorly, while Coumbe, who got little attention in the early dope, has done well, as has Stanley Coveleski. Jim Bagby, another of the new crowd, has shown up well too. Meantime Rip Hagerman has done almost nothing.

For the Yankees the early season dope had Ray Caldwell in front, Ray Fisher next in line and Ray Keating showing every promise of sticking with the other Rays. Yet none of the three has done anything wonderful.

Cliff Markle was rated as "only a minor leaguer" in the early dope, just as many another boxman coming from the minor leagues was figured. Yet Markle has made a name for himself. Nick Cullop has done fairly well, while George Mogridge, another pitcher from the minors, has flashed about the best pitching shown in the American league this season.

Another young pitcher who has flashed to the front in the American league is Meyers, who was not rated highly when the season opened. He has already won a number of games for Connie. Joe Bush of the Athletics is one pitcher who may be called a veteran who is pitching fine ball.

The St. Louis Browns furnish other instance of the big guns failing, but unfortunately Fielder Jones has no young pitchers carrying his team along. Wellman was rated as the best pitcher inherited by Jones when he took over the Browns, and Dave Davenport was the best of Jones' Federal leaguers. None of them has shown anything worth while.

The White Sox furnish two instances of the veteran pitcher failing to do the expected. Joe Benz and Jim Scott have shown up poorly. Faber and Cicotte have done most of the work for the Sox.

Cunningham of the Tigers was not rated highly before the campaign got under way, but he has turned in as many victories for his team. Harry Coveleskie and George Dauss are not performing as well as they did last year. Dubuc has been a disappointment.

The World Series Hero.

Another pitcher from whom much was expected and little has arrived is George Foster of the Red Sox. Foster was the most talked of pitcher in the country last fall after his great work in the world series, but his work has been poor so far this season. Leonard has been one of the exceptions to the rule of veterans going poorly. He and Ruth have done most of the winning pitching for the world's champions this spring. Shore, Gregg and Pennock have been disappointing.

Harper of Washington is another of the new pitchers who have flashed considerable skill. He is not strictly a newcomer, as he had been tried out before, but he is new as a regular. Boehling has done better than was expected. As for Johnson no comment is necessary. Griffith has neither a big surprise nor a big disappointment on his staff. Every other manager has one of either class; some have both.

FORMER STARS LEAD MINORS.

New Pennsylvania League to Have Great Has Beens at Helms.

The recently formed Pennsylvania State Baseball league will have several former stars in major league society as managers.

There will be eight cities in the circuit—Reading, York, Allentown, Harrisburg, Lancaster, Altoona, Lebanon and Johnstown. The former topnotchers who will manage teams in the league are Willie Keeler, Mike Donlin, Art Devlin, Bill Dahlen, Harry Lumley and Jimmy Sheckard.

LULL IN CONGRESS

Harding and Borah Off to Chicago; Democrats Leaving.

Washington, June 6.—Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio, who will deliver the keynote address of the Republican convention, and Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, who probably will have a hand in drafting the platform, headed the last contingent of Republicans who left the capital yesterday for Chicago. Senator Lodge also has left.

Few Republicans remain on watch in the senate to object to the consideration of bills against which there is opposition. Even many of the Democrats, taking advantage of the lull in congress, have left for their homes before going on to St. Louis.

Legislation will practically remain at a standstill until the conventions have adjourned. Democratic members of the ways and means committee of the house will devote some time to shaping the revenue bill, but in both bodies little work of any kind is being done.

San Francisco Has $750,000 Fire.

San Francisco, June 5.—A new concrete pier and 5,000 tons of freight, which had been unloaded from the Shinyo No. 2, a Japanese liner, recently arrived from Oriental ports, were destroyed in a spectacular waterfront blaze of unknown origin here. The Shinyo and the Governor Forbes, a freighter, which were tied to the burning pier, were slightly damaged before they got out of the fire's reach. No lives were lost. The loss is estimated at $750,000.

GENERAL TIGHTENING

Various Organizations Are Preparing for Tests of Strength.

The most that can be said about developments of the day is that there has been a general tightening in the various organizations in preparation for test of strength now so near. The supporters of Hughes have been counting noses. Speaking for them, Frank H. Hitchcock estimated that the justice would receive about 300 votes on the first ballot. He said reports had been most encouraging and predicted that the Hughes vote would grow rapidly after the preliminary ballot.

Florida decided during the day to cast her solid vote for Hughes and to stay with him to the end. A poll of Kansas, is reported to give more votes for Hughes. From New Jersey Hughes managers expect to get at least seventeen votes, the Rhode Island delegation of ten is reported solid for Hughes, and substantial gains are claimed in Connecticut and other states.

VOTE ESTIMATE

Consensus of Opinion Shows That Hughes Is In the Lead.

If the ballot should be taken now, the consensus of the several political managers indicated that it would be about as follows:

Hughes, 261; Weeks, 160; Roosevelt, 98; Fairbanks, 80; Burton, 76; Sherman, 58; Knox, 51; Root, 42; La Follette, 28; scattering, 54—total 983. This excludes two delegates from the District of Columbia who were unseated by the national committee, but will take their case before the credential committee.

The allies generally concede that Mr. Hughes was in the lead, but the fact that he occupied this advantageous position was not allowed to stand in the way of their efforts to hold their forces in hand. Their plan is to prevent an early stampede to the Hughes column in the hope that delay may bring into the situation some new element which would weaken him and promote the prospects of some one of the other candidates.

LAW OF MOTION.

Why a Ball Follows You if Thrown In the Air While You Walk.

When you throw a ball into the air while moving your body forward or backward, either slowly or fast, the ball partakes of two motions—the upward and the forward or backward motion of your body. The ball possessed the motion of your body before it left your hand to go up into the air because your body was moving before you threw it up, and the ball was a part of you at the time.

If you are moving forward up to the time you throw the ball into the air and stop as soon as you let go of the ball, it will fall at some distance from you. Also if you throw the ball up from a standing position and move forward as soon as the ball leaves your hand the ball will fall behind you, provided you actually threw it straight up.

Of course you know that the earth is moving many miles per hour on its axis and that when you throw a ball

How Gold Plate is Made.

There is practically no solid gold plate. The so called gold plate services are silver gilt, and only a few pieces of pure gold are owned by the English crown or any other crown. It may interest our readers to learn how this fire, mercurial or water gilding—for it is known by all of these three names—is done. Pure gold and mercury are mixed into a paste. The silver article to be gilded has been chemically cleaned, is rubbed all over with this paste, which has been placed in a silk bag, just as the blue used in washing is put in a bag. When the piece of plate has been rubbed over it is perfectly white. It is then put into an oven, and gradually the mercury goes off in fumes, leaving on the article a deposit of pure gold, which has practically become one with the piece of silver and will last for centuries.—New York Post.

He Got Valuable Information.

The story is told of the times of Aretas Blood and the old Manchester locomotive works that a student came to Mr. Blood once and wanted to study the business of locomotive building in his vacation days. The student came well recommended, and Mr. Blood, who never had much use for these "tech" people, sent him down to the boiler shop and placed him in charge of the old foreman. The old man took the "tech" man around, and in the course of the inspection of the shop they came across one boiler on the inside of which was a man at work.

"Oh," said the venerable pilot, "he doesn't get out. We always count upon losing at least one man in building a boiler."—Manchester Guardian.

Governor Whitman Names Justice Hughes, Who Refuses to Talk Until Convention's Work is Finished

4:30 P. M. EDITION

Up until 3:30 this afternoon no balloting had begun at the Republican Convention.

The candidates had been placed in nomination, Burton, of Ohio, by Governor Willis, of that state.

Dupont was nominated by Delegate Miller, of Delaware.

Root was nominated by Nicholas Murray Butler, of New York.

Sherman was nominated by J. C. Calhoun, of Illinois.

Senator Weeks was named by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts.

Hughes Maintains Strict Silence

(By United Press.)

Washington—Justice Hughes refused to see anyone or authorize any kind of a statement to his secretary, Lawrence Green this afternoon. The Judge was informed by telephone that his name had been placed in nomination by Governor Whitman of New York. When the secretary was called by the newspaper men he said: "The Judge has nothing to say, and will have nothing to say unless the convention nominates him."

The situation remains much as it was last night. It is, however, more acute. The Hughes men are still confident of victory. They are pitted against the old time sagacity, adroitness and resourcefulness of the "Old Guard" and they don't underestimate their adversary. From all that can be learned their move is still away ahead of any other. The other candidates have fallen by the wayside, with the exception of Elihu Root. As was first told the "Old Guard" is still bringing to play all its vigor to sweep the pro-Hughes element from its path. It is still working with shrewd diligence to consolidate all the opposition in the Convention to Justice Hughes in the interest of Mr. Root.

STANWIX CO. WILL OPEN SEASON NEXT THURSDAY

C. A. Burkhardt, who recently assumed the position of Superintendent of the Fort Stanwix Canning factory on the west side, announces that work on the canning of strawberries will begin about June 15th. If the berry-growers show a good crop, from 75 to 100 women will be given employment at the factory. The local branch of the Fort Stanwix company has canned no strawberries since 1912.

Advices received from the growers of other crops seem to indicate that the peas have suffered greatly from the unusually heavy rains during the past month, and the corn crop has also been slightly damaged. Mr. Burkhardt is of the opinion that the strawberries will suffer if the recent rains continue, particularly those on low ground.

A good crop of berries will afford three weeks of work for the canners, and by that time the first shipments of peas will be coming in. Red raspberries and cherries will follow.

While no new machinery has been installed at the factory this year, the old machines have been carefully overhauled, and many improvements along the line of increased efficiency have been made.

Certain sections of Phillips street, much travelled by farmers carting in produce, have been improved, and in this work the company has co-operated with the city Board of Public Works. Further street improvements are planned before the rush of the season begins.

Fears of Unfairness Ungrounded, is Claim of Mayor V. C. Lewis

A rumor that the Hodgson Construction Co., which was awarded the contract for the paving of South First street between Rochester street and Broadway last year, would be given the work this year by the State Department of Highways without the usual formality of receiving bids was denied this morning by Mayor Victor C. Lewis, who said he had no knowledge of any such plan on the part of the Highway officials.

One of the First street residents told the Mayor to-day he had heard that work was being held up on the street in order that the Hodgson company might be "handed" the contract, without any bidding, through some clever engineering on the part of local politicians, and informed the Mayor if any such scheme was put over the city would never collect the assessments they have levied on the property owners along the street. While he had no objection to the Hodgson company, this man said, he would insist that the work be advertised and bid for, in regular manner.

Mayor Lewis said he had heard nothing of any such plan, and assured the property-owner that no such scheme would be perpetrated with his knowledge. The Mayor has not yet received any further advices from the Highways department regarding the advertising of the work, since the receipt of a letter from Commissioner Duffy two weeks ago, which stated that the work would probably be advertised before the first of June.

NORTON REDUCED IN RANK AS MEANS TO ECONOMY

By action of the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners at their last regular meeting, Lafayette Norton, night captain of police, has been demoted and will resume the work of a regular patrolman as soon as a new schedule of duty can be arranged for the department. Mr. Norton was appointed captain about a year ago, and received an increase in salary from $72 to $80 a month in connection with his promotion. By the new order of the Commissioners, he will drop his title of night captain and will be paid the same salary he received before his promotion.

This action by the Board is purely for economical reasons, it is announced, and no dissatisfaction with the work of Mr. Norton has occasioned it. The Board was confronted with a situation that demanded the appointment of another patrolman during the summer months, and rather than engage another man, the Commissioners decided to appoint the night captain to regular duty. For the past year, Mr. Norton has remained in charge of headquarters during the night.

A new schedule of duty for night patrolmen will be arranged at once, by which each man will be on duty at headquarters for a stated period during the night, while the others patrol their beats. This system was in operation before Mr. Norton was appointed to the captaincy.

Although this action was taken by the Board almost a week ago, no public announcement of the change was made and few of the city officials cared to make any statements on the subject this morning. Lynn Richardson, chairman of the Fire and Police Board is out of the city at present, and further details are not available.

AGRICULTURAL EXPORTS SHOW BIG DECREASE

New York—Exports of agricultural products from the United States in April amounted to $112,439,947, a decrease of about 20 per cent from the total reported the same month a year ago. Breadstuffs decreased 41 per cent. from last year, and cotton increased 4 per cent. in value.

JOINT CONFERENCE A REAL LOVE FEAST

(By United Press)

Chicago Coliseum—At 9:30 this morning Frank Hitchcock announced his conviction that Justice Hughes will be nominated on the third ballot. On the first roll call, he said, the delegates would require that the "favorite son" would receive many complimentary votes, but from then on there would be a big deflection to the Hughes banner. With each call of the states the Progressive peace committee made the following report:

"The conference was most friendly upon assembling. Your committee (Progressive) propose as the joint nominee of both conventions the name of Theodore Roosevelt. The committee representing the Republican National convention did not present the name of any candidate nor did it attempt to refuse our arguments relating to the unique availability of Theodore Roosevelt as a candidate to unite both parties, or to serve our country at this crucial period in the history of the world. After several hours of further discussion, during which no concrete proposition was advanced by the Republican conferees, except that a further conference might be desirable this afternoon or evening, the joint committee adjourned.

Signed: "By the Committee."

Hughes and Root Named by Whitman and Murray

Chicago Coliseum—At 11:45 Governor Whitman of New York recommended the nomination of Justice Hughes and a minute later the jurist's name was place in nomination amidst the greatest demonstration in the history of conventions.

Delegates from Oregon paraded around the convention hall, and Vermont followed, as did Mississippi and lots of others. The demonstration ended at 12:31.

HUGHES AND FAIRBANKS LED IN POPULARITY

(By United Press)

Chicago Coliseum—Bishop William McDowell opened the convention by offering prayer at 11:13 this morning, after which the conference committee approved and read the report. The convention then proceeded to nominate candidates for the Presidency of the United States. Alabama and Alaska delegates passed; Arizona yielded to the Empire State, and the intensest enthusiasm reigned throughout the great hall. From the start of the proceedings sentiment was entirely for Hughes, the names of Wood and Goethals never being mentioned by any of the delegates. It was Hughes and Fairbanks from start to finish. All through the big auditorium it was the sentiment of the Republicans that Roosevelt could not win an election in the event of his nomination.

SYRACUSE TO ENTERTAIN THE STATE'S BUTCHERS

Syracuse—Plans for the entertainment of 150 delegates to the twenty-third annual convention of the Master Butchers Association of New York State which will open at the Onondaga Monday morning, were completed at a meeting of the Convention Committee last night.

The committee also planned entertainments for the wives and families of the delegates who will come from all parts of the state.

The delegates are expected to arrive Sunday afternoon and evening, and although an informal reception may be held no special plans have been made for the day.

Monday morning the first business session will open in the Hiawatha room of the Onondaga. While the afternoon session is in progress Monday the women will be given an automobile ride through the city parks.

Tuesday morning will be devoted to a business session and in the afternoon the delegates will make a motor trip about the city, while the women will be entertained at the theatres.

The final session will be Wednesday morning, and most of the delegates probably will leave during that day.

The Woman's Journal:

Will some of the European monarchies become republics after the war? All good Americans would be glad to see that happen. Curiously enough, one of the objections urged against it is the alleged failure of democratic institutions in the United States.

In almost every European country, before the war broke out, an agitation was going on for a broader and more democratic suffrage for men; and everywhere the opponents of manhood suffrage argued along exactly the same lines that the opponents of woman suffrage do in America. Only, instead of pointing to labor troubles in Colorado and social vice in San Francisco as a proof that woman suffrage is a failure, they have pointed to the many flagrant evils in the United States as proof that republican institutions are a failure. They point to misgovernment and graft in American cities, to lynchings and lawlessness, to the domination of business by the great trusts which screw up prices and plunder the people, to the corrupting of Legislatures and the stealing of franchises by public service corporations, to the failure of many men to vote and the fact that many others vote the wrong way. These things, they say, prove that the general run of mankind are not fit for self-government, that there is nothing to be gained by exchanging a monarchy for a republic. In America, we cannot deny that these evils exist, but we emphatically deny that they exist because we lack a Kaiser or a Czar to rule over us. Just so the people in the enfranchised States emphatically deny that any of their shortcomings are the result of equal suffrage.

Opponents of Christianity, too, follow the same line of argument as the antis. Missionaries in heathen lands say that the European war has made it harder for them to make converts; the natives ask how they can believe any religion to be a good one when its followers are drenching the world with blood. Even before the outbreak of the war this style of argument was in use. Julia Ward Howe wrote in The Outlook of April 3, 1909:

"It is related that the Japanese government many years ago sent a commission to the United States to study the practical working of Christianity, with a view to introducing it into Japan as the State religion if the report of the commission proved favorable. The commission saw many evils rampant in America, and went home reporting that Christianity was a failure. The opponents of woman suffrage argue in the same way. They find evils in the enfranchised States, and straightway draw the conclusion that woman suffrage is a failure. But it may be said with truth of woman suffrage, as of Christianity, that these evils exist not because of it, but in spite of it; and that it has already effected a number of improvements, and is on the way to effect yet more."

Since exactly the same kind of reasoning is used by the enemies of republican government, by the enemies of Christianity and by the enemies of equal suffrage, we may fairly assume that it is neither very strong nor very sound.

The Country Gentleman:

A wealthy manufacturer told the National Association of Manufacturers that he had proved to his own satisfaction that five dollars a week was plenty for one person to live on. Two dollars a week was a generous allowance for clothing and room rent and three dollars bought an abundant seven-day supply of food and incidentals. The gentleman who made this interesting test is seventy-five years old. He found a baked apple and a cereal enough breakfast for any able-bodied man.

This simple statement of "practical economy" was offered as an argument against proposed minimum-wage legislation. But what does this sort of argument prove? Less than nothing. When John D. Rockefeller was on a cheese diet he could probably have beaten this minimum-stint record to a frazzle. And just consider the experience of the Boston eccentric who went down into the Maine woods and lived as a wild man on nothing a week.

Overseas today millions of families are finding it possible to support existence on a bare fraction of five dollars a week. But that is no argument in favor of the minimum stint. Rather it is pathetic proof of their misery and of the real frightfulness of war.

According to some students of agricultural economies tens of thousands of farm families subsist upon less than five dollars a week. But these families vary in size and kind as the weeds of the field. Some are thrifty and purposeful, making a virtue of their economies. Some are thriftless and aimless, ever groaning under the burden of unsatisfied wants.

For a rich man to prove that it is possible to support existence on five dollars a week is simply to project a theory of his own liking, and to support it upon a wobbly inconclusive premise. It is the sort of theory that embitters and provokes discontent.

The great economic problem today is not how much we may reduce the cost of living for the individual, nor how great a virtue we may make of thrift and self-denial, but how high we may raise the individual's efficiency by maintaining his health of body and mind and by offering him hope of future comforts based upon increased efficiency. The employer should provide for this end first and then leave it to the individual to work out his own minimum stint in thrift and progress.

Utica Press:

The Shield waterpower bill, if it becomes a law, will throw open to development a large amount of water power. Its sponsor declared that the amount that would be developed is upwards of 15,000,000 horsepower, or the equal of 100,000,000 tons of coal consumption per year.

The bill places a large responsibility in the hands of the Secretary of War. He is authorized to grant permits for dams and power plants where he believes that such dams will improve the navigability of streams. It is manifest that in this clause there is a large restriction, for there are many power-producing streams which are not navigable, and the dams would make them so only for row boats. It is not clear why mountainous streams were not included in the bill.

The dams are to be constructed by private capital, which shall provide locks, gates, etc. Business within the State shall be regulated by the State and Interstate business by the Interstate Commerce Commission. It appears that through this provision any corporation is under close control as to its prices. The plans for the dams, moreover, must be approved by the War Department, in order that the best improvement of navigation and the fullest development of waterpower may be obtained.

The corporation must pay a rental for public lands, and a charge for the rights and privileges in the use of water. These rentals and charges are to be fixed by the Secretary of War. The money thus received is to be placed into a special fund for use in further improvement of waterways.

A corporation is prevented from delaying in its work by a provision which requires that it shall begin work within two years after the granting of the permit. The Secretary shall prescribe that the work shall be completed within a reasonable time, fixed by him. If the works are not completed as directed, or if the provisions are violated, the corporation is subject to penalties, or revocation of the grant.

At the end of the 50-year period, for which the permits are granted, the government may extend the lease, make a new grant, or upon one year's notice take over the property upon payment of its value. This value shall be determined by agreement, or by the Federal courts. No rights granted by the government shall be allowed in arriving at this value and such rights shall not be included in fixing the rates to consumers.

Municipally owned dams and power plants for irrigation, or for supplying power for municipal purposes, are given preferences for surplus water. The bill does not apply to small streams.

The measure contains an anti-monopoly clause providing that no dams shall be controlled by any unlawful monoply, or shall form any unlawful constraint to limit the output of electrical energy, or in restraint of trade. This seems to be a superfluous provision, for existing laws should take care of that.

The Senate talked about this bill for weeks, and passed it by a good majority, which indicates that the Senate is fairly well satisfied with it. It is a measure which gives private enterprise much inducement to develop various water powers, and at the same time it does not give these valuable rights away, as public property has been given away heretofore. It is to be noted, however, that at the end of the 50-year lease, the Government shall pay the value of the plant. The Government could do the same with the railroads. On the other hand 50 years hence they may fix values differently, so that the unearned increment piled up by the public will not be included in the price.

SESSION LASTS ONLY TWO HOURS

No Enthusiasm Shown by G. O. P. Delegates.

STARTED 25 MINUTES LATE.

The Convention Was 25 Minutes Late When Chairman Hilles Brought Down His Gavel, Then Moved With Precision for Two Hours and Then Adjourned.

Chicago, June 8.—The Republican national convention assembled in the big Coliseum, heard a keynote speech by Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio, perfected an organization and adjourned.

It all took just two hours, and in its lack of demonstration or outburst of any kind and its strict attention to the business in hand was reminiscent of the Philadelphia convention of 100 that nominated McKinley and Roosevelt.

For one hour and 20 minutes Senator Harding, the temporary chairman, delivered a carefully prepared speech, punctuated in the telling points with brief periods of handclapping and applause, but at no time did a demonstration occur more than half a minute by the watch.

The convention was twenty-five minutes behind the hour arranged for its asembly, but when Chairman Hilles of the Republican national committee brought down his gavel at 11:25 o'clock it moved quietly and with precision until adjournment at 1:25 o'clock.

Those of the old-time leaders present, who used to march down the aisles to their seats to the tune of an uproar, walked in almost unrecognized. W. Murray Crane, Senator Lodge, Reed, Smoot and a lot of the others came in practically unnoticed, probably because a majority of the delegates did not even known them by sight.

Chauncey M. Depew was surrounded by a small admiring group, Senator Penrose got a reception from his own delegation. Governor Whitman was recognized by some, but on the whole the convention was more interested in wondering what was going on in the Auditorium than it was in the arrival of the men who hitherto have decided what the convention should do with itself.

SANG "AMERICA"

Led by Male Quartette the Audience Join In as a Mighty Chorus.

The hour for essembling was set for 11 o'clock, but there was no semblance of order at that time and no one made any pretense of obtaining it. The delegates stood about the floor and talked.

The spectators overflowed into the spaces reserved for the delegates, and hundreds of seats on the floor and in the galleries were empty.

Finally Chairman Hills gave signs of calling the convention to order and the uniformed police began moving about urging the delegates into their places.

Finally at 11:28 o'clock Chairman Hilles brought down the gavel with three resounding whacks and quiet settled down over the big hall.

"The hour of 11 o'clock having arrived and a quorum being present," he said, "the convention will be in order. Paraphrasing a remark made by the late President McKinley, this is a year—whatever may have been true of past years—when politics is patriotism and patriotism is politics. Therefore the audience will please rise and sing two verses of 'America.'"

The band launched into the air and, led by a male quartette, the floor and galleries joined in a mighty chorus that swept through the big Coliseum. There was a moment of confusion at the end of the singing as the delegates found their seats again and then the Rev. John Timothy Stone of Chicago gave a prayer.

HARDING AS CHAIRMAN

Senator Spoke for our Honor and was Frequently Interrupted by Applause.

Secretary Reynolds then read the call for the convention which was published last December. It was only a formality. None of the delegates wanted to hear it so they talked and moved about while Mr. Reynolds kept on.

That over, Chairman Hilles presented Senator Harding of Ohio as temporary chairman and put the question. A rolling chorus of "ayes" swept the hall and former Senator Crane, Senator Borah of Idaho and former Representative W. B. McKinley were appointed a committee to escort Mr. Harding to the platform. The Idaho delegation announced that Senator Borah was unavoidably absent, so Mr. Crane and Mr. McKinley marched up with Mr. Harding.

His appointment was the signal for the first genuine outburst of applause but it was brief, and he plunged into his prepared speech, appealing for harmony, counselling the delegates that it was not a time for "recrimination but a day of reconsecration."

Talked More Than an Hour.

He spoke more than an hour, referring seldom to his manuscript and interrupted frequently by applause and cheers as he criticised the Democratic administration for inefficiency, incapacity and extravagance, and declared the Republican party's allegiance to a protective tariff and national defense.

He closed with a peroration on Americanism and Republicanism, which was marked with applause lasting less than a minute. The delegates rose to their feet, some cheered, some hats were thrown in the air and there was some waving of handkerchiefs, but they settled down quickly and the temporary chairman recognized in rapid succession speakers from the floor who offered the customary resolutions for perfecting the temporary organization.

Convention Adjourns.

That was quickly over with, the meeting placed of the committees were announced, and at 1:25 o'clock the convention was declared adjourned until 11 o'clock this morning. The delegates piled out into the driving rain, where they found 1,000 automobiles provided by Mayor Thompson's reception committee waiting for them.

The committeemen assembled in hotels and the resolution committee returned later to the Coliseum to give a public hearing to any one who wished to suggest planks in the platform. The first day's work was over quickly, with everyone talking about the placid, matter of fact way things had started off.

All the temporary officers will become permanent officers when the convention assembles today. That makes Senator Harding of Ohio permanent chairman. The motion to make all the temporary officers permanent was carried without a dissenting vote in the committee on permanent organization.

CARD INDEX WHACKS HUGHES

"Man's Whiskers Are His Own Fault," Is on Epigram.

Chicago, June 8.—The lobbies of the Michigan avenue hotels were strewn with discarded samples of the Rooseveltian campaign against the nomination of Hughes. Thousands of tiny cards, smaller than ordinary visiting cards, have been distributed among visitors and delegates.

One set read: "Do you want another Brandeis on the Supreme bench."

Another batch, alluding to the notion that Justice Hughes is lacking in enthusiasm rousing qualities, bears the legend: "Put on your overcoat and hustle for Hughes."

A third has this inscription: "Do not buy a bell until you hear it ring."

And a forth is: "A man's whiskers are his own fault."

Hughes Refuses to Talk.

Washington, June 8—As the Republicans and the Progressive national conventions actually got down to business preliminary to naming a candidate for the presidency, Justice Charles E. Hughes apparently took the attitude that the Republicans could nominate him or not just as they pleased. He would not even refuse to comment on political matters.

To Try Night Courts.

New York, June 8.—A night court for the trial of civil suits involving sums of less than $50 will be conducted here as an experiment, to ascertain whether it is desired by wage earners who cannot spare time to attend court during the day. Four sessions will be held each week.

Counterfeit Dallas $10 Note.

Washington, June 8.—The secret service announced the appearance of a new $10 counterfeit note. It is an easily detected imitation of the $10 note issued by the federal reserve bank of Dallas.

TIPS FOR THAT DIP

By Margaret Mason
(Written for the United Press)

If when you don your bathing suit,
You've chosen it with care,
As on the beach to bathe you are en route,
You'll find you have a following
Replet with son and heir;
It follows every man will follow suit.

New York—If you want to take a dip then you'd better take a tip and select a suit impervious to water, for they're making more and more suits for bathing on the shore and to wear them in the wet you hadn't oughter.

In fact most everyone is for bathing in the sun and if you have desire for surf and brine, a one piece suit is best; it will stand the aqua test and it fits a perfect figure simply fine. But if you think it fun just to linger near the sun—and of course a moneyed son you much prefer, there are ruffled suits galore that the brightest sons are for. They excite to envy human maids or men. Of taffeta they're made, in all or any shade but there's one of green that simply is divine. The skirt is ruffles four and there simply can't be more, because above the knees it draws the line. The neck is rather low with a ruffle round it so and the sleeves of course are nothing much to mention. It's cap is ruffled too, with its knickers out of view and to make appearance they have no intention.

Another suit of blue flaunts something very new; around the hips believe me 'tis a hoop. There are scollops by and fore down the front and then some round the skirt, but it's the hoop that is the coup. And so if you are brave in the trough of ocean wave you can go and roll your hoop with perfect ease. So hoop-a-la my dear hoops at first you may think queer, but for bathings suits they're chic soon each agrees.

With sandals on her feet, clasping close her ankle neat, here's a maiden looks just like the Russian ballet, for her bathing suit bizarre has indeed a rainbow air as some ribbons blue, pink, purple 'round it rally. There is yellow ribbon too and the suit is green in hue and its two tiered skirt hangs down in jagged points that the divers ribbons edge and the knickers closely hedge her shapely nether limbs below the knee joints.

Near the hips are ribbons placed that half gather in her waist, but the ribbons don't extend across the front. From square neck it falls quite plain and thus length of line doth gain and it makes it a good model for a runt. The sleeves are pointed tabs with more bright ribbon dabs. Oh this bathing suit sure keeps the ribbons busy, for they also trim the neck and the helmet cap, by hack, and the whole things sure to make the fishes dizzy.

There are bathing mantles too that have stripes of hectic hue that bisect their ample folds of Tussore silk and I think you will agree if rare sights you wish to see at the sea shore we will so more of this ilk.

Opinions

In its issue of June 2, the American Hebrew and Jewish Messenger editorially says:

"The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church recently adopted a resolution at its convention in Atlantic City, petitioning President Wilson to have the Federal Government participate in an international convention devoted to the purpose of alleviating the condition of the Jews in Europe. It is most gratifying to find that even the great Christian organizations are beginning to realize that the Jewish sufferings abroad have reached a stage that must arouse the sympathy of the world, and that those who are striving to serve the interests of humanity should exert themselves to aid in securing equality and justice for the Jews wherever equality and justice are denied them."

We are sure that no American worthy to bear that name fails to sympathize with the unhappy creatures upon whom the Russian autocracy and the barbarous Russian soldier have inflicted cruelties and savageries that would put an Apache Indian to shame.

The human sympathy of true Americans is not bounded by geographical or theological limits. It feels as keenly the sufferings of Polish Jews as of Belgian Catholics. It resents oppression and murder whether practised in Poland or in Ireland.

We think that the platforms adopted both at Chicago and at St. Louis should distinctly express the abhorrence of the whole American people for the wrongs and cruelties inflicted upon the helpless Jewish people by the very same wicked Government for whose cause hundrds of thousands of the sons of Israel have died in battle.

The least that both of the great parties can do is to emphasize this abhorrence in their national conventions.—N. Y. American.

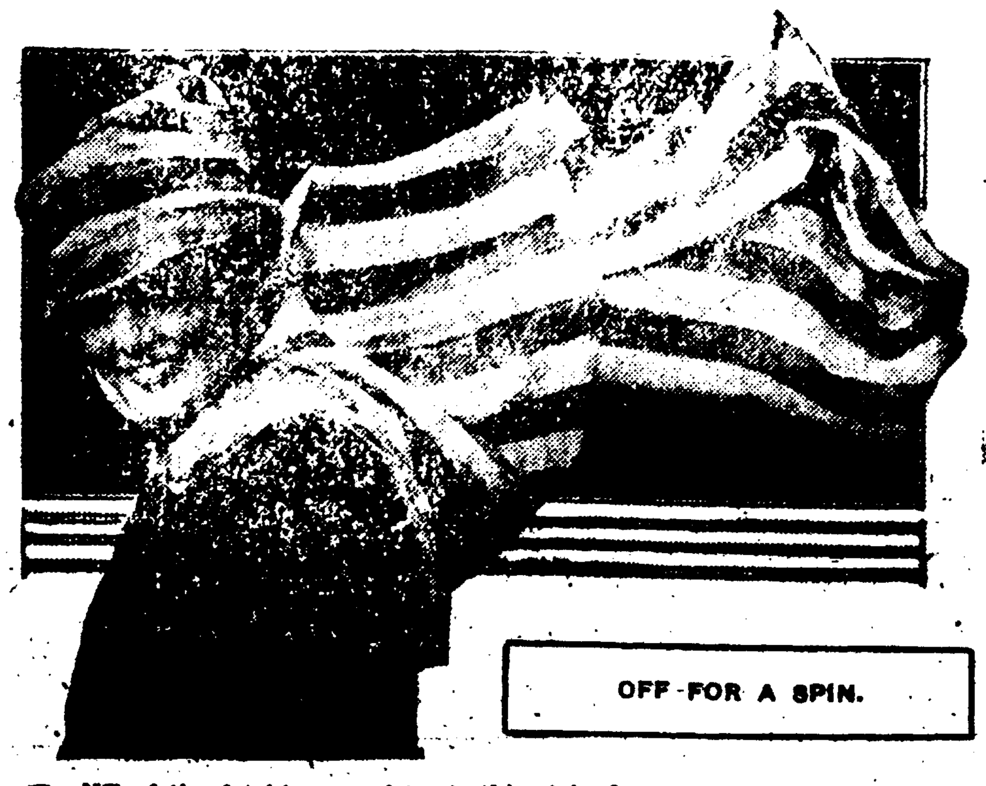
A Flyaway Veil For Spring's Motor Girl



OFF FOR A SPIN.

ONE of the fetching novelties is this striped veiling, which, like so many fascinating ruches, tulles and trimmings this season, comes "by the yard." When draped horizontally over your turban or face the effect is very piquant. These veilings come in all the gay, glad spring tones.

CABBAGES THE FARE OF GENERALS.

The generals of the European war who have the holdfast qualities are all plain livers. "Plain and plenty" is the way General Joffre orders his dinner, and it is said that he "thrives on beef, cabbage and hard-boiled eggs."

Von Hindenburg is likewise a plain liver, who believes in plenty, without fancy trimmings. These men, it is said, are "the despair of the culinary artists"—especially Joffre, who is too easy to please.

In the matter of years they may be considered in the "old men class," but they are sturdiest of all the fighters.

Except on occasions of entertainment, they do not dally over dinner, and the food that makes for strength wins out with them every time.—Atlanta Constitution.

GOOD BASEBALL GAMES FOR DEM. DELEGATES

(By United Press)

St. Louis—Automobile rides around St. Louis, a steam boat excursion on the Mississippi, and rides through Forest Park, the largest natural park in the United States except Yellowstone, is part of the entertainment prepared for delegates and visitors to the Democratic National convention in St. Louis, June 14.

Shaw's Garden will be another point of interest. The reception committees will include it on the sightseeing tours.

Clark Griffith's Washington Senators will be here during the convention days for a series with Jones' Fed Brown aggregation, and special arrangements have been made to have large delegations visit Sportsman's Park to see them battle.

Visiting newspapermen and the National committee will be entertained at a dinner Monday, June 12 at Sunset Inn a beautiful lodge in St. Louis County. A special cabaret program is being arranged.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Especially for This Newspaper by Pictorial Review

Coat for Afternoon or Evening.

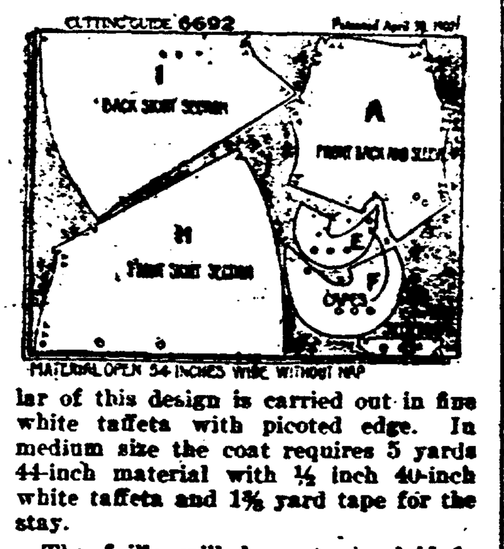
With its enormously full skirt and short waist, this coat of blue faille strikes the latest note for afternoon and evening wear.

Very odd is this coat of blue faille with long, full sleeves and waist shirred in high effect. Other attractive features are the revers, flare collar and circular capes. The sleeves are gathered to a band at the wrist and finished with a straight gathered ruffle. The skirt is a four-piece affair so designed that its length can be regulated to suit the individual preference. So many of the newest coats show white collars that the upper cape collar of this design is carried out in fine white taffeta with picoted edge. In medium size the coat requires 5 yards 44-inch material with ½ inch 40-inch white taffeta and 1⅝ yard tape for the stay.



The faille will have to be laid in open width on the cutting table, though two widths may be with right or reverse sides facing. Along the upper row the back skirt section and the front back and sleeve are placed. On the lower row are laid the front skirt section, the capes and the sleeve band. Of course, if white taffeta is used for the smaller cape, it is arranged on the silk just as shown in the cutting guide. Unless this is done the cape will not have good lines nor will it fall gracefully about the neck.

If the high collar is used, it should be laid on a lengthwise fold of silk, while the strap and stay with edge having one "T" perforation is placed on a lengthwise or crosswise fold.

Lace of all kinds is profusely used on afternoon and evening coats, but the heavier laces are given the preference. Taffeta is employed for the development of several good-looking loose coats especially designed to wear over fragile gowns and, also silk dresses with tight fitting bodices giving a slender effect. Full short skirts and extremely short waists predominate in dressy coats. All models, however, are created with the idea of conserving youthful lines.

Pictorial Review Coat No. 6692. Sizes, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Kitchen Apron That Fastens Without Strings.

An apron without strings has recently made its appearance, designed not for the use of the mistress of the 4 o'clock teapot, but for hard and severe use in the kitchen by the housewife or for doctors and nurses who may be called upon to do work which would call for some such protection as is afforded by a large, heavy apron.

This apron is entirely stringless, but the place of strings is taken by springs, two of which are imbedded in the fabric of the apron at the waist and neck, and for this reason they may be instantly adjusted or removed.

Strawberry Charlotte.

Make a boiled custard with a quart of milk, yolks of six eggs and three-quarters of a cupful of sugar. Flavor to taste. Line a glass dish with slices of sponge cake dipped in sweet cream. Lay on them ripe strawberries sweetened to taste, then a layer of cake and strawberries as before. When the custard is cold pour over the whole. Then beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, add a little sugar and put over the top. Decorate with ripe strawberries.

The Sewing Machine Belt.

Instead of stopping your work when the sewing machine belt gets loose and taking time then to cut it off and fasten it simply slip a few large rubber bands over the small wheel. They will hold the belt firmly until time for permanent repairs can be taken. Do not cut your sewing machine belt when it gets loose. Instead put a few drops of castor oil on the band, run the machine a few minutes, and it will be tightened.

Horseradish Sauce For Beef.

A tablespoonful of butter, a level tablespoonful of browned flour, a quarter level teaspoonful of salt, a cupful of meat stock, half a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, two tablespoonfuls of horseradish. Melt the butter, add the flour and mix thoroughly. Add the salt and the meat stock. Boil three minutes. Add the parsley and horseradish. Pour the sauce around the meat.

Fried Green Tomatoes.

Select tomatoes that show no signs of turning even yellow, for during the turning process there is a disagreeable acid flavor; cut them in two, pour boiling water over them and set on the stove where they will keep warm but not cook for about fifteen minutes. Then drain and dry with a cloth, dip in egg, then cornmeal, and fry in boiling fat.—Country Gentleman.

Veal Croquettes.

Grind two cupfuls of cooked veal, add salt, pepper, celery salt, one teaspoonful of onion juice. Make a cream sauce of one and one-half cupfuls of milk, four tablespoonfuls of butter, six tablespoonfuls of flour. Add sauce to seasoned veal. Cool, shape into pyramids, dip in crumbs. Fry in deep fat.

Suet Pudding.

One cupful of suet after it is chopped fine, one cupful of molasses, one cupful of sweet milk, one egg, two cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of soda, one cupful of raisins. Steam two hours. Serve with lemon sauce.

Chocolate Stains.

To remove chocolate stains from white dresses or table linen sprinkle the stain thickly with borax, place a saucer beneath it and pour on just enough water to moisten. Leave for several hours and then wash.

To Clean Muslin.

To clean fine muslin blouses, table centers, etc., dissolve a tablespoonful of borax in a gallon of water. Put the muslins into this and let them remain for half an hour; then gently rub them out in fine white suds.

Dry Curtains on Poles.

When laundering curtains of fish net or other heavy lace try hanging them up on the rods at the window while wet. They will be found to dry evenly and keep their shape better than if ironed.

Baking a Custard.

Do not have too hot an oven when baking custard or the custard will become watery. Set the custard in a pan of hot water and be sure the water does not boil during the cooking.

GERMAN FLEET IS SAFE FOR AWHILE.

Last of Sea Movements for Some Time Says Balfour.

London, June 8.—One result of the North sea battle of last week is that for many months it will be impossible for the Germans to attempt naval movements which they might have undertaken before the battle was fought, said A. J. Balfour, first lord of the admiralty, in an address before the British imperial council of commerce.

British losses had been stated accurately, while no value could be placed on the German reports, which were tainted from the first, Mr. Balfour declared.

Mr. Balfour said the German losses were greater than the British and asked why, if the Germans had defeated the British, they had not pressed their advantage.

As a result of the battle, Mr. Balfour declared, the German dream of an invasion of England had been dissipated, and as regarded the blockade and control of the seas the position of the Germans was worse.

GOES TO WAR TO WIN BRIDE

Father of the Girl Promises a Dowry of $50,000.

Vancouver, B. C., June 8.—George Winterbotham, who has just joined the American legion here, was a successful cigar salesman. Now he is a private in the 211th battalion, American legion, with an ordeal ahead of him such as St. George never dreamed of and few young men have had to face to win the hand of the girl they loved.

He has to go through the war to prove his merit. It is not the hard heart of the young lady that is responsible for the conditions, for she is quite willing to accept him as he is, without any military record. It is the prosepective father-in-law who demanded that George do some fighting before he secured the prize. In addition to the hand of the young lady, her father has also promised to endow thet young couple with the modest sum of $56,000 when that day arrives.

RAPPINGS IN MINE TOMB

Three Men, Buried Alive, Likely to be Rescued by Dawn.

Shenandoah, Pa., June 8.—Frank and Harry Glowssen and Edward Wand, of Ashland, and Samuel Socker, of Mahanoy Plane, were closed in behind a heavy fall of coal and rock in the Lawrence colliery of the Madeira Hill Coal company, at Mahanoy Plane.

Brave bands of rescuerers set to work immediately, but at great risk, owing to continuous falls of rock and coal.

Last night the rescuers had made such progress that rappings could be heard from the entombed men, showing that some of them, if not all, are still alive. Prominent officials are on the scene, directing the work of rescue, with the hope of getting all the men out alive before morning.

WHITMAN'S AIDE SHOCKED

His Military Uniform Is Taken for a Taxi Driver's.

Chicago, June 8.—There were many who supposed that the reason Capt. Lorillard Spencer, military aide to Governor Charles S. Whitman, came forth today rigged out in prosaic civilian scenery was that the captain feared the rain would tarnish some of the gold, silver and platinum settings to the precious stones on his working clothes.

But that was not the reason he went back to citizen's clothes. Last night Capt. Spencer was about to walk from the door of the Blackstone to the curb when a woman in evening get-up tapped him on the arm.

"Call me a taxi my good man," she said.

Orphet Trial Jury Complete.

Waukegan, June 8.—The jury that will try Will Orpet for the murder of Marion Lambert has been completed. The last panel of four was accepted and sworn. They are David Carlson, W. J. McNawley, E. R. Walsh and Edward Fabey.

Age of the Harp.

The harp, which was suggested by the lute, is ascribed to Jubal, 3875 B. C., and was King David's favorite instrument. The harp was used by the Welsh and Saxons and also by the ancient peoples of Ireland. One of the oldest harps in existence is in the Dublin college museum and originally belonged to Brian Boroihme, king of Ireland.

CLEVELAND, O., POLICE SEEK FOR RELATIVES OF DEAD MAN HERE

Chief of Police Edward Dyer received a communication from the Chief of Police W. S. Rowe, of Cleveland, O., this morning in which the Cleveland official stated that one Herbert Wright had been found dead in that city on June 6, and asked the Fulton official to locate a brother of the dead man who was said to be living in this city.

Herbert Wright, according to the Cleveland letter, was found dead in a wagon early on the morning of June 6, at 1375 East 38th street, Cleveland. He was employed at the United Brass Company that city, where he had given his age as 51 years. From information gathered by the Cleveland officers, a brother, William Wright conducts a knitting mill in this city.

No William Wright is in the knitting business here, and Chief Dyer wired the Cleveland department this morning that no man of that name was a resident of this city.

NO NEUTRALITY IN THIS CASE

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Bogiz are Polish people, and they conduct a small store on West 3rd street. Their next door neighbors are Mr. and Mrs. Augustine Viscome, who first saw the light of day in sunny Italy. Mr. Viscome has two stalwart brothers who make their home with him.

In spite of the fact that occasional war arguments marred the serene existence of the Bogiz and Viscome families, everything was fairly tranquil until last Tuesday afternoon, when one of the Viscome children made a raid on the Bogix premises and encountered firm resistance in the person of Mrs. Bogiz, who soundly cuffed the lad and sent him home.

While Mrs. Bogiz was counting the day's receipts in the evening, however, young Viscome returned with reinforcements. Included in the miniature army were his father, his two uncles, his mother, sister and some four or five others, according to Mrs. Bogiz. She claims that two men and three women of the party set upon her and beat her. Her husband was also accorded rough treatment when he attempted to go to her rescue.

As soon as the Italian forces withdrew, Mrs. Bogiz called the police, and two wagons were necessary to transfer the Viscomes to jail. When they filed into the court room this morning they occupied most of the seats in the place.

Fred G. Spencer appeared in behalf of Mrs. Bogiz, and Floyd Spangle will defend the five Viscomes. The trial was adjourned until next Wednesday.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS' CLUB ENTERAINMENT

Miss Louise VanScoy, of West First street, entertained the Depter Club at her home last evening on the occasion of the first anniversary of the organization. Eighteen members of the club were present, and all wore the club insignia for the occasion.

The club was founded by three young ladies just a year ago, and has grown from seven to eighteen members in a very short time. Most of the members are students at Fulton High School.

Miss Edith Brown was elected president of the club for the coming year at last night's meeting, and other officers elected were Miss Ariel Palmer, vice president; Miss Louise VanScoy, secretary and treasurer, and Miss Almeta Boyd, banner bearer.

After the business session a social evening was enjoyed with dancing, musical selections and games. The club will hold its next meeting in two weeks.

PATHFINDER CLUB HOLDS DINNER DANCE

Up to three o'clock this afternoon, forty members of the Pathfinder Club had made reservations for the dinner-dance which will mark the opening of the club-house to-night. Several private dinner parties have been planned, and many members will entertain guests from other cities.

In spite of the threatening weather, plans for a baseball game between members of the club were going ahead this morning, and it is quite likely that only a heavy downpour will put a quietus on the contest.

AERO PASSED OVER THE CITY

Identified as Bleriot Type, Used by Canadian Aviators In War Practice Work.

Two automobiles containing eight Fultonians returning from a trip to Oswego early this morning, had just passed Pathfinder Island when trouble with the headlights of the leading car necessitated a stop. As both machines stood in the road near the Tannery creek the loud purr of another powerful motor was heard, seemingly from the direction of Fulton, and one man had just suggested that both cars pull out of the road a little to let the "speed fiend" pass, when one of the party, glancing upward, cried out, "Why, it's an aeroplane!"

It was an aeroplane, one of the Bleriot type, according to a member of the party slightly familiar with aeroplane construction, and when first seen it was flying over the city in the vicinity of the Foster Knife works. The wind bore the noise of the motor well down the river for a few minutes and then all trace of the machine was lost. In a short time, however, it became visible again directly overhead and as the crowd looked at it a sudden ray from a powerful searchlight swept the ground, revealing the presence of the automobiles and men to the aviators. With concerted yell, the tourists hailed the big flyer, and once again the searchlight flashed. The machine was then approximately 300 feet up and its estimated speed was 70 miles per hour.

After describing an arc over the river, the machine headed downstream toward Oswego, and was soon lost to view.

Beyond the fact that the machine was a monoplane, of the Bleriot type, no other identifying feature could be distinguished. Some of the members of the party are of the opinion that the machine started from a Canadian point, and had continued on to this city after passing over Oswego. From this city to the nearest Canadian aeroplane station is something over 60 miles, and in these days a trip of 150 miles or more without a stop is considered nothing unusual for an experienced aviator.

YONKERS AND ROCHESTER VISTORS ENTERTAINED

Miss Mary Blanchard, of Yonkers, N. Y., and Miss Evelyn Mead, of Rochester, are spending the weekend as guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. Milton Allen, Jr., of South Third street. Both Miss Blanchard and Miss Mead, who are former school-mates of Mrs. Allen, are now seniors at Syracuse University and will graduate from the College of Fine Arts next week.

Miss Blanchard and Miss Mead were guests of honor at a dinner party given by Mrs. Allen last evening, to which a few intimate friends were invited; and they will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Allen at the Pathfinder dinner dance to-night.

KNIGHTS END STATE SESSIONS

Buffalo Convention Goes on Record Favoring Big National and State Issues.

Buffalo—At the final session of the Knights of Columbus yesterday afternoon, James E. Finegan of Brooklyn was elected State deputy of the Empire State Council. He received 186 votes, while J. David Enright of Syracuse received 130. From the opening of the convention on Tuesday each candidate had been lining up delegates, and the general opinion had been that Mr. Enright would be the choice. He took his defeat graciously, and was one of the first to shake Mr. Finegan's hand in congratulation.

New State Deputy.

The new State deputy has been a member of the Knights of Columbus for 19 years, and is affiliated with Washington Council, No. 132, of Brooklyn, in which he has served two terms as Grand Knight. He won national fame at Columbia University, where he played on a famous football team in 1904 and rowed on a victorious crew. Previous to that time he won renown in Union College athletics. He attained his law degrees at Columbia in 1905, and a year later was admitted to the bar.

Mr. Finegan was given a reception at the Statler last night, just before leaving for Brooklyn. He received congratulations from many of the men who had voted for his opponent, which caused him to express gratification that his election apparently had wrought no dissension among council delegates.

Before leaving Buffalo Mr. Finegan announced that he will name his choices for district deputyships within the next two months. There are 48 deputies to be appointed.

Other officers chosen yesterday were:

James H. Shields, Auburn, State treasurer.

Arthur J. W. Hilley, New York city, State advocate.

Philip Hanes, Utica, State warden.

These delegates to the national convention, to be held the firsts week in August, were selected by unanimous vote of the delegates: Orson E. Yaege, Buffalo; John T. Kelly, Brooklyn; T. F. Cullinan, Middletown; William T. Hooley, New York City; James J. Scanlon, Norwich; James Mahony, Long Island; Edward M. Coyle, Lockport, and Harry LeBois, New York City, will comprise the State council's representation in Davenport at the national convention.

The committee on resolutions yesterday morning reported on several important matters. One was a resolution to put the State council on record as being in favor of national preparedness, and to urge the creation of an army sufficient to repel an invasion and a navy that can cope with any first class power. Another resolution recommended the appointment of a committee to carry on organized social welfare work throughout the State.

LOCAL KNIGHTS RETURN HOME

Maurice M. Conley, J. W. Branche and Laurence Ranger, delegates from St. Joseph's Council, Fulton, to the state convention of Knights of Columbus at Buffalo, returned to this city late last night. The Fulton delegation was unanimous in praise of the treatment and hospitality accorded them by the Buffalo Knights during the convention session.

The installation of the new bishop of Buffalo, Dennis J. Dougherty, recently of the diocese of Jaro, in the Philippines, took place during the convention, and most of the visiting Knights of Columbus, including the Fulton delegation, witnessed the solemn ceremonies which were held at the new Catholic Cathedral on Delaware avenue.

Mr. Conley this morning said the ceremonies were the most beautiful he had ever witnessed. A procession of Catholics of the city, including 96 bands and 40 drum corps, which required almost three hours to pass a given point, preceded the installation ceremonies. Practically every Catholic dignitary of prominence, including John Cardinal Farley, of New York, was present at the Cathedral ceremonies.

Regarding the convention, Mr. Conley stated that the Oswego and Fulton delegations supported J. David Enright, of Syracuse, for State Deputy, who was defeated by James E. Finegan, of Brooklyn.

Mr. Finegan has not yet announced his new appointments for the district deputyships, but it is understood that a prominent local Knight is being considered as deputy for this district, which includes Oswego, Syracuse, Cortland and Fulton.

CITY ATTORNEY RETURNS FROM A CONFERENCE

W. S. Hillick, city attorney, returned yesterday from New York city, where he conferred with officials of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company and the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, relative to the refunding of the block of sewer bonds which will fall due August 1st, of this year.

The United State Mortgage and Trust Company now holds about $30,000 worth of the sewer bonds, and the remainder, which were formerly held by the Mercantile Trust Company, a defunct institution, are in other hands.

DIRTY HEATER PIPE CAUSED SLIGHT FIRE

A still alarm at nine o'clock this morning called the Fire Department to the home of Daniel Pringle, of 606 Highland street. The family started a wood fire in the furnace early this morning, and the flames from the burning wood swept up one of the heating pipes and ignited some soot and dirt. The blaze had been extinguished before the firemen arrived, and no damage was done.

ROWANS COME HERE SUNDAY

The Rowan Stars of Oswego will be the guests of the Red Men of this city at the Fair Grounds next Sunday afternoon, and one of the best games of the season is in store for the local fans. The manager of the Rowans has signed Mike Gustino, former Delaware State League hurler. Fred Feeley, the regular Rowan pitcher, and Gustino will probably divide the pitching burden for the visitors. Painter or Milnes will pitch for Fulton. Milnes has done little box-work for several years, but he is rapidly rounding into form and is now ready to go into the game.

The complete batting order of both teams is as follows:

NEW HIGH LEVEL IN STEEL PRODUCTION

New York—A new high level in steel production was reached in May, according to the Iron Age, which, taking pig iron as the measure, figures that the total production for the month was $351,073 tons, or 108,099 tons per day. The previous high rate was in March, when the production was 107,667 tons per day.

"With 321 furnaces in blast June 1 the capacity active was 108,386 tons a day, against 108,072 tons a day for 322 furnaces at the beginning of May," says this authority. "Three furnaces have blown in since this month opened, so that production is now at the yearly rate of about 40,300,000 tons. But furnaces keep going out for repairs, and on its present base the industry strains hard for any output above the 40,000,000 ton mark.

"The fer manganese and spiegeleisen output last month was the country's largest—35,844 tons. For 1915 the monthly average was but 19,570 tons. The manganese situation, from the standpoint of both home production and imports, is working easier."

LETTER BOXES IN NEW STYLE

Art Takes Form in Designs to be Installed All Over the Country.

(By United Press)

Washington—About the last of this month Uncle Sam will begin putting up the first of several hundred thousand new design letter boxes all over the country.

The new box design is the joint product of the Post Office Department in Washington and the Art Commission of New York. While the design for the front was accepted by the Post Office Department, the design for the ends is still subject to some modification, the design as a whole being termed somewhat conventional by Post Office officials.

It was at first proposed to mount these boxes on pedestals, but this was disapproved by the Commission and the conclusion was reached to affix them to electric light poles.

The Edison Company of New York offered a design, but it was so ornate that the Post Office Department declined, on economical grounds, to consider it.

The Art Commission then asked that Post Office Department appoint a committee to confer with the commission regarding a design for the box, and this was done.

There were frequent conferences, with the result that Charles Kech, a sculptor, was commissioned to make a design.

Upon suggestions made by J. A. Edgerton, purchasing agent for the Post Office Department, Mr. Kech made a model of the proposed letter box and it was the subject of several prolonged conferences.

Mr. Kech's design provides for a box of regulation size and shape. The front bears on the upper curve the word "Letters" and at the bottom "U. S. Mail." The handlebar and letters slide are similar to those on the boxes now in use, but care was taken to provide more affective action.

The design for the sides was an American eagle with wide spreading wings but without the feathers, this being practically impossible in pressed steel, of which the boxes are to be constructed.

The design for the front of the boxes proved acceptable, but the eagle was deemed rather conventional, despite the contention of the Art Commissioners, among whom were Mayor Mitchel, Robert W. deForest, president of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and John Quincy Adams, assistant secretary, that the design was highly artistic and should be adopted.

The Post Office Department subsequently prepared a substitute design for the ends showing a shield with the letters "U. S." and a wing above it.

The Art Commissioners disapproved of the substitute design, and Mr. Kech went to Washington and urged the acceptance of the eagle design. The new boxes, of which several hundred thousand are to be placed in all the cities of the country, will cost approximately $6 each.

WILLYS BECOMES A BISON BUSINESS MAN

ABOUT THE TOWN

The Fulton police yesterday morning arrested a man suspected to be Ralph Taylor who escaped from the guard-house at Fort Ontario Wednesday morning. Provost-Sergeant Thompson from the Fort motored to this city yesterday to identify the prisoner, but declared that the Fulton suspect was not the man wanted. The man was released.

Dr. Emin Defends Turks Against Armenian Charges

By Dr. Ahmed Emin, Editor, Constantinople "Tanin"
Graduate of Columbia University, New York.

(Written for the United Press)

Constantinople, May 9, (By Mail)—The American people have given their verdict in the Armenian question without hearing the Turkish side.

Consequently, there are in the American press and public opinion ideas totally unjust to the Turks.

In order to understand the situation rightly, one has to know, first of all, that historically the Turks were the most humane conquering race imaginable.

At a time when they had every opportunity of assimilating the conquered races by force, they gave them freedom of religion, language, and free community organization.

Had the Turks behaved as the Spaniards have against dissenters in religion or race, there would be no Armenians and no Armenian question to-day.

After the Young-Turkish revolution in 1908, the Christians acquired absolute equality with the Turks.

Their revolutionary activity under the reign of the former Sultan was ascribed to their desire for equal rights of citizenship. It soon became clear that they thought of equal rights only as a means to the end of a national independent existence.

Instead of taking advantage of the new opportunity they had to become lawful Ottoman citizens, they established secret societies, made a large revolutionary organization in the country and distributed arms and bombs among their members.

The first duty of every state is to insure its independence. Therefore, Turkey had to resort to all the necessary measures for this important end.

Among the non-Turkish races the Armenians were the nearest to the Turks in regard to their spoken language and social habits.

Several decades ago, when they had not yet begun their revolutionary activity, they enjoyed the full confidence of the Turks, and they were always called by the Turkish press "our faithful fellow-citizens the Armenians."

In abusing the confidence of the Turks, the Armenians went further than the other Christian races.

Especially, during the present war, they did not shrink from open treason, and tried to endanger from within the existence of their country, which was engaged in a fight for life or death at four different fronts, with powerful enemies, and caused the new Armenian troubles.

Best School of All.

It cannot be but the author of the Greatest Show on Earth was right. The world likes to be humbugged, else why all this elaboration of educational systems and theories, educational forms and creeds, this multiplication of modern methods and didactic material? These are, indeed, but things that change and fluctuate and already are on the way to being superseded. Meanwhile the older and larger schoolroom of life never closes its doors, makes no bid for patronage, retains its old teachers, changes its methods not at all and continues to turn out the best pupils.—Laura Spencer Portor in Atlantic.

The Romans as Fighters.

The Roman became the greatest soldier in the world simply because he made soldiering his one supreme aim and business. The Romans studied war just as the Greeks studied art, the men of the middle ages theology, the Egyptians the art of agriculture. They despised literature, art, philosophy, commerce and even luxury and set their whole heart on becoming fighters and conquerors. In that way they developed very naturally the genius and means for successful warfare which made them the masters of the world.

There was nothing miraculous in the prowess of the legions. It was the natural result of their undivided effort, protracted through generations.

THE ELSIE BAKER COMPANY.

THE third day of Chautauqua will bring with it this attractive ensemble of three great soloists. Heading the company is Miss Elsie Baker, whose voice is known and loved in countless homes through her Victor Records. William Durieux, cellist, and Frank Hauser, pianist, who appear with Miss Baker, are two artists of splendid reputation, either of whom is capable of giving a most satisfying program alone. This combination will prove a rare treat to all Chautauqua music lovers.

SCIENCE—INDUSTRY.

Graphite a Wartime Necessity.

Because of its use in the manufacture of crucibles for melting metals and for foundry facings graphite is a mineral resource of vital importance and in great demand in time of war. The extraordinary activity both in this country and abroad in the manufacture of munitions has greatly stimulated the graphite industry. Most of the established graphite mines in the eastern states notably increased their output in 1915, and in the Ashland district, Alabama, a number of new mines have recently been opened, most of which have not yet reached the producing stage. Early in 1916 active development work was also begun on a graphite deposit of much promise in the Llano region, in Texas.

The full effect of the increased demands will not be shown until these new concerns begin to market their product, but even in 1915 the output of natural crystalline graphite showed an increase of about 1,850,000 pounds over that for 1914.—United States Geological Survey.

Great Petroleum Field.

Natural gas has been known near Shreveport, La., for more than twenty-five years, but oil was discovered here early in 1904, when the first successful well was drilled in what is now known as the Caddo oil and gas field, says the United States geological survey. This field is chiefly in Caddo parish, in the northwest corner of Louisiana, but extends westward a short distance into Marion and Harrison counties, Tex. In 1906 the production of the field was only 3,358 barrels, which is less than the reported initial daily production of some of the more recent wells. From this time the output increased until 1913, when the maximum yearly production of 9,628,177 barrels was made. Including the production of 1914 the Caddo field has yielded over 38,000,000 barrels of oil and a large but unknown amount of gas. Although this field may have reached its maximum production, it will not be exhausted for many years.

times inconvenient, as they are apt to drop out of reach or to the floor if working on a high place. To make my pliers so that I would have both tools in one an awl was formed on the end of one of its handles, as shown in the illustration.

Potash In Utah.

Potash in large proportions is present in the brines and muds of the Salduro marsh, a sink in the Salt Lake desert, about sixty miles west of the southwest edge of Great Salt lake. From the clays underlying the salt body which covers the marsh the United States geological survey collected samples at depths of eight to twelve feet, in which the dissolved salts were found to contain from 2 to about 3½ per cent of potash, and 2¼ per cent was found in the soluble salts at a depth of about four feet. According to analyses made by the survey, the brines and muds from the Salduro marsh contain considerable magnesium chloride as well as chlorides of potassium and sodium, and so are somewhat similar in composition to the deposits from which potash is manufactured in Germany.

Alaska's Mineral Production.

The value of the mineral production of Alaska in 1915 amounted to $32,854,229—$13,788,563 more than the value in 1914 and far more than that of any previous annual output during the thirty-six years that mining has been carried on in the territory. The collection of mineral statistics of Alaska for 1915, just completed by the United States geological survey, shows that the value of the gold produced during the year amounted to $16,702,144, copper $15,139,129 and silver $543,393. Tin, lead, antimony, marble, gypsum and a small amount of petroleum and coal bring the total value of Alaska's mineral products to $32,854,229.

Uses of Hair Sealskins.

The skin of the young north Atlantic hair seal is extensively used in Newfoundland for the production of a most excellent boot for sealers, fishermen, lumbermen and sportsmen. The boots, which come to within an inch or two of the knee, are very durable and at the same time are both light in weight and waterproof. Sometimes the hair is left on and turned inside for warmth. Moccasins, gloves, mittens, tobacco pouches, purses, bags and similar articles are also made locally, and large quantities of the skins are exported to the United States, Canada, England and other countries.—Commerce Reports.

MAN'S REAL WORTH.

A man should always be judged by his real worth. The prevailing fault of our time is the estimating of manhood by the accidents of life rather than by its essentials. Not what a man has or what happens to him; not wealth, nor noble blood, nor crowns, nor titles, but the things that are in him and shining through him; his thoughts, motives, springs of action—these constitute the man.—D. J. Burrell.

WASHINGTON ANXIOUS

Yuan's Death Expected to Unsettle Conditions in China.

Washington, June 8.—Confirmation of the death of Yuan Shih-Kai has been received at the state department and at the Chinese legation here.

The state department is deeply concerned over the effect which the death of this foremost Chinese statesman will have on conditions in China. It is recognized that Yuan Shah-kai, as the "strong man" of China, has been able to maintain order and stability where others failed, and foreign interests generally have counted on Yuan Shih-kai as an insurance against instability. Probably no other statesman of any country has in recent years enjoyed the power which Yuan Shih-hai enjoyed.

Vice President Li Yuan-Hung will formally asume the duties of president at 10 o'clock this morning.

Crowd Goes Wild When Colonel's Name Is Mentioned.

CRIES OF "WE WANT TEDDY."

"The Foremost Citizen of the World," Was the Characterization Robins Used in connection with his Mention of the Colonel's Name—The Response Was Instantaneous.

For one hour and thirty-three minutes the delegates and spectators roared, shouted, cheered and applauded. They sang the Progressive battle hymns, paraded the aisles and over the stage and howled down all attempts to check them.

Big Demonstration.

The demonstration exceeded the previous record for such affairs of one hour and twenty-nine minutes established in the Democratic convention in Denver in 1908 in behalf of William Jennings Bryan, which had exceeded by four minutes the record made that same year in the Republican convention in Chicago when Col. Roosevelt's supporters sought his nomination over William Howard Taft.

Raymond Robins, temporary chairman of the convention, had spoken just three sentences of his keynote speech when he mentioned Col. Roosevelt's name. A wave of enthusiasm that mounted to nothing less than a proxysm resulted.

"The foremost citizen of the world" was the characterization Robins used in connection with his mention of the colonel's name. The response was instantaneous. "We want Teddy," roared the delegates, and the demonstration was on. With umbrellas raised they began marching about the hall.

Chairman Robins made several attempts to quell the demonstration, but after a few raps of the gavel gave it up. The band chimed in with the Progressive battle hymns and soon the surging crowd was tramping the aisles to the strains of "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Marchers In Jam.

Then the band switched to "Marching Through eGorgia" and a medley of popular airs and the aisles became so blocked that no one moved for several minutes. While the marchers stood still in the jam they kept up the din, and after it had been going on one hour George W. Perkins left the stage and decided to go to his hotel and wait for it to subside.

Out in the Rain.

The Michigan delegation tramped in from the rain outside and their leaders demanded an outdoor demonstration.

"Teddy is not afraid of the rain," they shouted, "get out and march."

And in a body they filed from the hall into the deluge outside, chanting, "Teddy, You're a Bear."

While the delegates were filing in, the band played a medley, including the Progressive birth song, "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Governor Johnson of California, Progressive candidate for vice president in 1912, slipped quietly into a seat in the Californa delegaton. Among Progressve notables on the stage were James R. Garfield, William Flinn and Oscar S. Strauss. Mr. Straus was cheered when recognized. George W. Perkins was given an ovation when he came upon the stage shortly after noon.

Following the arrival of leaders the band played The Star Spangled Banner. At 12:27 o'clock the convention was called to order by Victor Murdock, chairman of the national committee.

Bishop William Fraser McDowell of Chicago offered the invocation. Following the prayer America was sung, and flashing photographs were taken.

Temporary Officers Announced.

Secretary O. K. Davis read the convention call of the national committee and the temporary officers were announced. Then Chairman Murdock preseted Raymond Robins of Chicago as temporary chairman of the convention.

Mr. Robins was escorted to the platform by Governor Johnson; Oscar S. Straus, John M. Parker of Louisiana and C. W. Halbert of Minnesota.

In beginning his introduction of Chairman Robins, Mr. Murdock referred to the delegates as Christian soldiers and the convention sang "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Mr. Robins was cheered as he took charge of the convention, beginning his address.

Mr. Robins concluded his address at 3:55 o'clock and the convention adjourned.

Bandits Hold Up Club Gamblers.

Cleveland, June 8.—Three armed bandits broke up a gambling game at the Prospect Social club, in the downtown section of the city, early this morning, held up and robbed 40 visitors, relieving them of money variously estimated at from $1,000 to $5,000, and made their escape.

GERMANS TAKE FORT VAUX.

Teutons Report Capture of Guns and Mine Throwers.

RUSSIANS TELL OF GAINS.

In the Fighting That is in Progress on the Roumanian Frontier the Russians Report the Capture of 41,000 Prisoners, Including 900 Officers.

Fort Vaux lying some five miles northeast of Verdun which for weeks past the French had been stubbornly defending against terrific onsloughts by the Germans, has at last fallen into the hands of the Teutons, according to Berlin. The men who defended the fortress to the last surrendered to the Germans, who also reported a large number of guns, machine guns and mine-throwers.

Paris, however, says the fort was still in French hands early Wednesday morning, but that since then it had been impossible to communicate with the fort owing to the violence of the bombardment.

Gains of considerable proportions by the Russians over the Teutonic allies, by the Turks over the Russians and by the Germans over the English are recorded in the latest official communications from Petrograd, Constantinople and London. In the region of Verdun violent artillery combats are in progress, while on the Austro-Italian line the Italians continue to hold the Austrians from further advances.

In the fighting that is going on from the Pripet marshes to the Rumanian frontier the Russians in their big offensive movement have dislodged the Teutonic allies from fortified positions and brought their aggregate of men captured up to about 41,000. They have also taken seventy-seven guns, 134 machine guns and forty-nine bomb-throwers. Among the men made prisoners are 900 officers.

As an offset to the Rusian gains over the Teutonic allies, however, Constantinople asserts that in Asia Minor, in the Kope mountain district, the Russians have been driven eight kilometers eastward from positions extending fourteen kilometers, suffering losses of more than a thousand men killed or wounded. The fighting in this immediate vicinity covers a front of over thirty-one miles, with the Turks the aggressors and with the situation favorable to them, according to Constantinople.

83 TRY FOR WEST POINT

Examination for Entrance Is Held at Fort Slocum.

New Rochelle, June 8.—Eighty-three men from all walks of life took an examination for entrance to West Point Military academy at Fort Slocum, on David's Island.

The examinations started in the morning and will be continued daily until Friday, when the papers will be sent to West Point for marking, after which the names of those who passed the examination will be announced.

Under the new law the governor will have the power to appoint three national guardsmen who pass the examination to West Point.

J. J. HILL LEFT $10,000,000

Widow and Eight Children Move to Make Son Administrator.

St. Paul, June 8.—James J. Hill left no will and his son, Louis W. Hill, will be appointed administrator, and will have charge of the vast Hill interests. This became known when a petition was filed in the probate court of Ramsey county by Mrs. James J. Hill and the eight children asking that L. W. Hill be appointed.

The value of the estate is placed at $10,000,000. Mr. Hill held comparatively little real estate. The petition gives the real property a $350,000 valuation; the farm at North Oaks is placed at $100,0400 and there is the home on Summit avenue.

Hungry Strikers Are Fed.

Atlantic City, June 8.—A lunch counter from which free meals are dispensed to the 500 chair pushers on strike was established at Ocean avenue and the Boardwalk. More than 250 of the "human moters," reduced to penury since they quit work last week, availed themselves of the opportunity, and were the object of much curious attention among visitors passing afoot and in roller-chairs operated by pushers who have refused to join the strikers' ranks.

Washington, June 8.—An executive order was signed by President Wilson, closing all government departments in Washington on June 14, to enable employees to participate in the preparedness parade which is to be held.

AUNT TILDA

She Dips Into Theology

"HUH!" exclaimed Aunt Tilda, as she stood the broom in the corner after sweeping the floor of her cabin and sat down for a rest. "I declar' to gracious if dar hain't jest as much work aroun' dis here house as if dey was a fam'ly of three or fo'.

"Huh! Old Mammy Johnson dropped in yisterday to ax me if my pickled peaches was all gone. I tole her dat dey was. A good sheer of dem had gone down her own froat. She sat for awhile, and we talked about our church and what was gwine to become of it if things keep on dis way.

"Huh! I don't spect no church was eber run dis way befo', and it's a wonder dat it hasn't failed and bin auctioned off like old Baker's grocery.

"Huh! It started out wid thirty men and seben women. It was understood dat de elders and deacons shouldn't pay any pew rent nor put anything in the contribushun box. Dar was a big scramble to be an elder or a deacon. Of de thirty men, nineteen got to be elders and eleven got to be deacons, and that left us seben women to pay all de money expenses.

Such Big Feet.

"Huh! Our first preacher was Parson Blake. He was no regular parson, but he said he would hold and do de best he could. In his first sermon he struck that Bible wid his fist 250 times, kase I counted 'em. In his second sermon he didn't strike so many times, but he made up for it by tellin' us dat de Lawd helped those who helped ourselves. Dat night he decided to help hisself. Next day when de constable followed de parson's tracks home from Kurnel Lamont's smokehouse he found six smoked hams in de parson's woodshed.

"Huh! Whar de parson made his mistake was in havin' such big feet and leavin' so many tracks aroun'. Dey said it was jest as easy to follow him as it was to track an elephant. When he got dem into cou't he said he was doin' only what de Lawd intended him to do, but de jedge sent him to jail to think de matter ober.

"Huh! We hab had lots ob rows since den, and de last one was when Deacon Carter got up to gib us a sermon. He said we might as well break up de church as not, for no cull'd pusson had eber gone to heben or eber would. He defied us to find a pictur' in any book showin' a cull'd angel. Dey was all white angels. He had been a prayin' man fur thirty y'ars, but he was gwine to gib it up an' save his voice to shout at his ole mewl.

"Huh! Dat made us all mad, an' we went fur him. I was de fust one to git my fingers into his wool. If de deacon eber goes to heben, in spite of what he said, de angels will find de scars upon him left by dat row. He got away from us arter awhile, but he had to leave town and stay away fur six months, but he may have been right, arter all. I has bin lookin' frew ebery book I could git hold of an' I certainly can't find no pictur' of a cull'd angel. If dar am any sich up dar behind de gates of gold, why don't dey shove 'em to de front once in awhile?

"Huh! Answer me dat if you kin! M. QUAD.

When Vice Admiral Henry T. Mayo was appointed to succeed Admiral Frank F. Fletcher as commander of the Atlantic fleet he was advanced to the rank of admiral. Admiral Fletcher had served longer than fleet commanders usually serve.

Admiral Mayo made an excellent record while commandant of the Mare Island navy yard. When Secretary Daniels was looking for an aid for personnel Admiral Mayo, then a captain, was at Mare Island, and the secretary was advised to choose him.

Admiral Mayo is the officer who precipitated the ruction with the late Victoriano Huerta, one time president of Mexico, demanding that the Mexican garrison at Tampico salute the American flag following the arrest of sailors and marines who had gone ashore on a legitimate errand from the United States fleet. The occupation of Vera Cruz and the banishment of Huerta resulted.

A native of Vermont, Admiral Mayo was born in 1856 and was appointed to the Naval academy in 1872. He had active service during the Spanish war on the Bennington and later on the Independence. He reached the grade of captain in 1908, served at the naval war college at Newport in 1913 and took command of the First division of the Atlantic fleet in December of that year.

New Head of West Point.

Colonel John Biddle, who has just been appointed superintendent of the Military academy at West Point, is considered one of the ablest officers of the engineer corps. He will succeed Colonel C. P. Townsley on July 1.

At the time of his appointment Colonel Biddle was stationed at Baltimore, where he was in charge of river and harbor improvements for the Maryland district. He recently completed survey and plans for the improvement of the channel approaches to Baltimore harbor.

In Washington military and civic circles Colonel Biddle is widely known, as he served as engineer-commissioner in charge of the public works of the national capital from 1901 to 1907. He was largely instrumental in bringing about the elimination of grade crossings in the District of Columbia, a project that resulted in the erection of the new Union station. In other ways he helped in the development of the capital. He also had charge of the river and harbor work at San Francisco, where he was occupied for several years.

A native of Detroit, Colonel Biddle was born in February, 1859. He was graduated from West Point in 1881 and commissioned in the engineer corps. He reached the grade of captain in 1892 and became a colonel in 1911. During the Spanish war he was chief engineer of United States volunteers. He has served in the Philippines, Porto Rico and Cuba and has an enviable record in the war department for engineering feats during the campaigns on those islands.

A Son of the Regiment

He Was Adopted From the Battlefield.

By F. A. MITCHEL

In the summer of 1870 a lady was sitting on the piazza of a chateau on the eastern border of France, half reclining in an easy chair, her feet on a luxurious rug. A nurse was trundling a baby on the lawn, where the lady could keep her child under her eye.

Suddenly a distant boom broke in upon her peaceful surroundings. In the country at that time in France one did not get news very promptly, but from the capital had come disquieting rumors. This first low growl from the dogs of war spoke volumes. Mme. Cherbolez paled. In a twinkling it was revealed to her that at any moment she might be in the midst of tramping men, or, worse, on a battlefield.

A gardener who was trimming some plants, hearing the sound, stopped and listened.

"What do you think it is, Pierre?" called madame, knowing only too well without asking.

"I think it is the Prussians, madame. Last evening I heard at the store that they were advancing—a great army."

"We must prepare to move. Call all the servants, that we may begin packing such articles as we may take away."

The packing commenced, but was never finished. Not an hour had elapsed when two armies began to fire shot and shell at each other, the Cherbolez chateau being midway between them. When the firing began madame was in the chateau superintending the packing, the nurse was still trundling the baby. Madame never left her home alive, and as for the others, they were shot down or borne down by tramping men.

When the Prussians, after capturing the French capital, marched back to Germany a distant relative of Mme. Cherbolez, or, rather, of her husband, who was killed in the war, Gustav Cherbolez, claimed the estate. It was known that Mme. Cherbolez was dead. Her body had been found in the ruined old chateau. What had become of the body of her only child no one knew. Caught between two opposing armies, there was no expectation that it had survived. Bodies of dead Frenchmen and Germans had been thrown into trenches dug on the Cherbolez grounds. Quite likely the body of little Armand Cherbolez, who had been heir prospective to the property, had been treated like other mangled remains.

Gustav Cherbolez was granted possession of the property by the courts. He repaired the chateau and went there to live. He was a good manager, and in the course of ten or fifteen years had largely increased the value of his estate. When his daughter Fanchette was ready to be introduced to the world as a young lady her parents gave a fete champetre on the grounds of the chateau. On the very spot where little Armand had been trundled, on that summer day when the French and Germans fought, there Mlle. Fanchette danced.

Then came the matter of providing the heiress—for she was an only child and would inherit a fine estate—with a husband. Like all men who have accumulated property by careful management, M. Cherbolez was bent on adding to it by every possible means. Neighbors of his, the De la Tours, possessed wealth, and their only son, Jules, would inherit it. M. Cherbolez visited M. de la Tour and proposed a marriage between their children.

An arrangement was made by which Jules and Fanchette were betrothed.

The Cherbolez estate was on the frontier, and French troops were stationed in the neighborhood. Among them was a young lieutenant named Victor Martin. He and Fanchette met at a ball given by the officers of his regiment, and he was afterward invited to the chateau. It was soon after Fanchette's betrothal to young De la Tour that these meetings occurred and resulted in an attachment between her and Victor Martin.

Had it not been for this meeting with the young soldier Fanchette might have married De la Tour without any qualms. But now all was changed. She and he had been brought together at their betrothal, and she had found him much improved. But he was not Victor Martin. Unfortunately for the lovers, Victor had neither family nor fortune. He was a fine fellow and, notwithstanding that in his childhood he had not associated with persons of birth, seemed to be to the manner born. He stood high with his companions in arms, and a bright future was before him. It was understood that he had a claim of some sort on the government, but of this he never spoke, being, it was supposed, sensitive about it. It was known, however, that he received his appointment to the military school at St. Cyr as a recognition of some service or incident.

Fanchette kept the attachment between her and Victor Martin from her parents for awhile because it would avail nothing to reveal it. It gradually became known, but so long as it did not interfere with the marriage that had been arranged for her it was not considered of great importance. Women in France were not expected to get through their girlhood without being heart touched, and after marriage they might indulge in sentiment so long as it was only sentiment. De la Tour came to know that he had a rival, but it did not trouble him, for he had given his fiancee several rivals already.

When it came to a settlement of the date of the wedding between De la Tour and Fanchette the young man's father called upon his notary to look into the title to the landed property of M. Cherbolez, which consisted almost entirely of a tract of land on which the chateau stood. De la Tour did not care to marry his son to a girl who was heir prospective to this property unless her father's title to it was clear. The notary reported that he had traced the title back for 200 years, and the birth and death of every successive owner had been properly attested except the death of Armand Cherbolez, who had perished on the battlefield at the opening of the Franco-Prussian war. But his client need give himself no concern on this account, for it was impossible that a baby could have survived such an experience. Besides, if the child were alive he would doubtless have been heard from.

De la Tour was not satisfied. While he had no doubt his solicitor was right and while he permitted the wedding preparations to proceed, he found it impossible to divest himself of a fear that at some future time a claimant to the estate would come forward. Of course he would have to establish his claim, but De la Tour did not relish giving his daughter in exchange for a lawsuit. This fear, having got into his head, was keeping him awake nights. He determined to make an effort to discover if Armand Cherbolez was alive. He was aware that by making the matter public he might raise up a fraudulent claimant. Therefore he went to work secretly. He employed a detective agency to investigate the case for him.

At a council held by several detectives it was concluded that if the baby had been taken from the battlefield it had been done either by some one attached to the chateau or by a soldier, French or German. Three detectives were therefore put on the work, one to search among citizens, another to investigate the French army and a third to deal with German military records.

The person detailed to examine into the French army soon reported that the One Hundred and Seventy-fourth regiment of the line had adopted a child during the Franco-Prussian war. That child had remained with the regiment, had enlisted in the drum corps and had remained with his foster fathers until he was sixteen years old. Here the records ceased. The corps had so changed that the "son of the regiment" was remembered by none of its present members.

The searcher sought for some of the discharged members of the One Hundred and Seventy-fourth and found in the Hotel des Invalides an old man who said that he was present when, after the battle of Gravelotte, a soldier brought into the regimental lines a baby that had been found lying on its face on the grass at the root of a tree. Blood was flowing from a wound on its cheek, which appeared to have been caused by a bayonet thrust. It was quite a deep wound, and at the time the soldier left the regiment, which was when the boy was ten years old, its scar remained.

All this was reported to M. De la Tour, and when he had received it he at once made an excuse to put off the wedding. For this he had several reasons. First and foremost, the battle of Gravelotte was fought partly on the Cherbolez estate; second, De la Tour had noticed on Lieutenant Martin's cheek a scar. Third, De la Tour had learned from the young officer himself that he was a foundling, and his name of Martin was not his real name. His real name was not known to him.

One day Fanchette was notified by her father that the match between her and young De la Tour had been broken off. Much surprised, and at the same time delighted, she asked the cause. For reply, her father told her that he desired that she should marry Lieutenant Martin. She flung herself into her father's arms and hugged him.

When Martin came again Fanchette told him that a proposal for her hand would not be unacceptable to her father. Astonished, the young man went at once to M. Cherbolez. As soon as his formal proposal was accepted, he asked:

"Why, monsieur, do you give your daughter to one who has no fortune? Indeed, who does not know his parentage. And now that you know this I am prepared to hear you recall your gift."

"You were found as a baby on the battlefield of Gravelotte, were you not?"

"I was."

"The extreme left wing of the French line at that battle was on these premises."

"That I did not know."

"You were adopted by the One Hundred and Seventy-fourth regiment of the line and received your appointment to the military school of St. Cyr at the united request of the officers of that regiment."

"In this you are correct."

"That scar on your cheek came from a wound that was received shortly before you were picked up on the battlefield."

"So I was told."

"When the battle opened you were being trundled on that lawn out there. Your mother was killed, probably by a shell or cannon ball, in this house. Your name is Armand Cherbolez, and you are the rightful heir to this estate. By consenting to your marriage with Fanchette I am enabled to keep this property for her. You are not indebted to me, but to M. de la Tour, who hunted up your record."

Where the Mississippi Runs West.

One of the most recent additions to the great topographic atlas of the United States which the United States geological survey is constructing is the map of the area known as the Edington quadrangle, lying west of Rock Island, in Iowa and Illinois. This area, which covers about 230 square miles, is nearly bisected by the Mississippi river and taken by itself presents the Father of Waters in a somewhat strange position, for the river flows almost due west across the area. The map shows Iowa on the north side of the river and Illinois on the south. Immediately west of this area, near Muscatine, the stream resumes its southward flow.

British Blockade of Greek Harbors Begins in Earnest

London—The Allies are determined to end the anomalous situation in Greece by which while professing a benevolent neutrality she is secretly aiding the Teuton-Bulgar-Turk combination to harass the Franco-British lines.

Greek forts have been surrendered to Germans and Bulgars without resistance and Greek islands have been used as bases for supplying Austrian and German submarines with fuel, enabling them to attack merchant vessels in the Mediterranean.

Strong measures have been begun to stop these practices. All exports of coal from Great Britain to Greece have been prohibited and other precautionary measures affecting Greek shipping are contemplated to prevent supplies from reaching the enemies of the Allies through Greek territory.

Press despatches from Cardiff say that port officers in Wales have been instructed to refuse clearance to Greek vessels.

Persistent rumors were in circulation in London all day that the Allies were about to take strong measures against Greece.

Editorials in the London morning newspapers are largely taken up by the situation in Greece. The leaders unanimously express relief that the Entente at last has decided to take strong measures to end the anomalous situation and the belief is general that Greece will be compelled to capitulate in a short time.

Although it is not known what demands have been made upon Greece, the Daily Telegraph and other morning newspapers express the hope that it is nothing short of the demobilization of the Greek army.

The Morning Post says:

"Greece is confronted with a serious emergency. It is in the power of the Allies to close the sea against her, and her many rich island possessions may become endangered."

The Daily Graphic says:—"If lesser measures are insufficient to prevent Greece from aiding the enemy we shall doubtless proceed to a full blockade of Greek ports. Bulgarian troops certainly would not be allowed to occupy Greek forts unless the Greek government had virtually decided to throw in its lot with the Central Powers."

Modern Persian Is Simple.

Modern Persian shares with English the reputation of being a singularly easy language to learn, the chief trouble being that it is written in the Arabic character. It had, however, at one time three numbers and eight cases, and the Avesta, the chief book of the Zoroastrians, is only to be understood by the ripe scholar. But modern Persian has no cases, no declensions and no genders and may therefore be mastered without tears and without the application of wet towels to the head.—London Chronicle.

ILLUMINATION OF NIAGARA FALLS

Rays of Light Will Be Shot Across the Gorge and Upon the Water.

Niagara Falls—The permanent illumination of Niagara Falls is practically assured. This was made clear at a meeting of the State Reservation Commission yesterday, following a demonstration made the previous night by a Chicago decorative illumination company. This temporary illumination was placed in position as an experiment, for the members of the commission wished to view it before passing upon the project of permitting the installation of the apparatus upon State property.

Unlike other schemes of illumination, this one contemplates the placing of all the apparatus on the American side of the border. Other projects have provided for the installation of the scintillaters upon the Canadian side, from which points the rays would be shot across the gorge and upon the great sheets of water tumbling over the crest to the rampart of rocks below.

The scheme provides for the installation of between 200 and 300 lights, burning 200,000 or 300,000 watts in all, some 750 or more horsepower, using alternating current. Heretofore direct current has been advocated and this means the installation of transformers and other costly machinery. It is estimated that the entire installation together with cost of maintenance will not be more than $40,000 the first year, while the up-keep after that will not be heavy. The city of Niagara Falls has already appropriated $25,000 for the project, and it is believed that the remainder with enough additional funds to provide for the up-keep will be raised from private sources. Park Commissioner Paul A. Schoellkopf is chairman of the lighting committee named in this city, who has been working on the project for some time. Associated with him from the Canadian side are A. Munro Grier, who witnessed the demonstration which was made with 30 lights; W. H. Brouse, one of the chief stockholders in the Clifton Hotel Company, and a number of other citizens of both sides of the river, all pronounced the illumination as wonderful. In fact, one of the commissioners christened the Falls "The Bride of the Night."

PAID FOR 7,500 MASSES IN ADVANCE AT $1 EACH

Jersey City—William J. Kelley, who was clerk of the Second District Criminal Court, Jersey City, until he died, on May 18, provided in his will that the first money to be paid out of his estate of more than $60,000 be $7,500 for masses to be said in twenty-five Catholic churches in Jersey City, Hoboken and Newark. Mr. Kelley directed that 6,500 of these masses at $1 each be said for his own soul. The 1,000 other masses, also at $1 each, are to be said for the souls of relatives.

AUSTRIANS ARE PUSHED BACK TO STRYPA RIVER

London—The great Russian advance which began last Saturday under the direction of General Brusiloff has passed through the fortress town of Lusk, which was recaptured on Wednesday, has cleared the territory in front of Tarnopol up to the Strypa River and has resulted in the taking of more than 50,000 Austrian prisoners. The recapture of Lusk, which thus changes hands for the fourth time since last September, and the movement up to the Strypa were announced officially in Petrograd yesterday.

The secrecy with which General Brusiloff has conducted his offensive has led to all sorts of conjectures here, and there has been some criticism of the Petrograd War Office for its failure to indicate just where its blow was being struck and where the immense numbers of prisoners made by the army were taken. It was generally understood the Styr and Strypa regions were closely involved in the offensive, since they were regarded as the logical points of attack in any general campaign against the Austrians. Yesterday's communique, however, was the first confirmation of this opinion.

It is regarded as probable that the fortress of Rovno, the only one of the Volbynian fortress triangle comprising Lusk, Rovno and Dubno which has remained in Russian hands, was used as a base by General Brusiloff for his advance against Lusk. The Rovno-Brest-Litovsk Railway cut the battle line just north of Lusk, with a branch down to that town. Along this he could move his troops and artillery right to his front, and reports from Petrograd show that the attacks are being made in great strength of both men and guns.

Lusk was occupied by the Austrians near the end of the Austro-German offensive last summer and Dubno fell into their hands a few days later. When the Teutonic drive was stopped and the Russians on the southern end of the line undertook a counter offensive, they eased the pressure against them in Galicia and captured Lusk. They held it less than a fortnight and lost it again to the Austrians. In their brief offensive along the Styr in January and February last the Russians, gained some ground north of Lusk, but failed to shake the Austrian hold on the town.

BRITISH PEOPLE ARE HONESTLY ECONOMIZING

(By United Press)

London, May 25, (By Mail)—The war stricken people of England really are economizing. Here's proof.

A duchess has given up 3 cars, closed town house, and keeps only one servant.

A marchioness has quit giving dinner parties and travels third-class on the railway.

A viscountess has not bought a new evening dress this year. Eats cold luncheons.

A baron—I am now smoking two-penny cigars.

A member of parliament—I have quit spending my salary.

A barber—I walk to work instead of going by tram.

A stenographer—I go to one less movie a week.

9 lawyer's clerk has quit losing 2 shillings a week playing dominoes.

A Gaiety girl refused an invitation to dinner because the man who asked her couldn't afford it.

A policeman has given up a weekly paper that used to make him laugh.

Took It Literally.

Just outside Stockport, on the Great Central railway, is a station named Hyde.

The other day a farm laborer was somewhat startled on arriving at the station by hearing the guard shout "Hyde!" The station master, in a sonorous voice, also shouted "Hyde!" and several porters took up the refrain, "Hyde! Hyde!"

Wondering what could be the matter, but thinking discretion the better part of valor, the man immediately got under the seat, and it was there the ticket collector found him when the train reached Stockport.—London Tit-Bits.

Flower Scents.

True flower scents are obtained in three ways—first, by spreading fresh blossoms upon glass thickly smeared with pure grease, letting them stand in the sun, and as they wilt replacing them until the grease is as fragrant as the flowers; second, by repeatedly infusing fresh petals in oil, and, third, by infusing them in ether, which is then distilled to a dry solid.

BRAZIL MAY TAX INCOMES

Republic's Executive Urges More Revenue in Annual Message.

Rio Janeiro, June 8.—The imposition of new taxes and increases in many of the existing levies are recommended in the annual message of President Wenceslau Braz to the chamber of deputies outlining the budget for 1917.

The president recommends an increase in the tariff charges of the government-owned railroads and steamships and in the taxes on tobacco, alcohol, kerosene and gasolene, coffee and butter and crude metal.

An income tax is one of the new measures proposed to meet the growing deficit in national expenses.

C. E. HUGHES NOMINATED ON THIRD BALLOT

Hughes Led Vote Which Was 949 1-2

(By United Press)

Chicago, 2 p. m.—Justice Hughes was nominated on the third ballot, the vote being decided at one o'clock. The official figures give Hughes, 949 1-2; Roosevelt, 18 1-2; Weeks, 4; Lodge, 5; DuPont, 5; LaFollette, 3. One delegate absent.

Washington, 2 p. m.—Justice Hughes said when informed of his nomination that he would reply at once and would make public his statement.

Sherman Delegates Switched to Hughes

(By United Press)

Chicago Coliseum, Noon—The nomination of Charles E. Hughes on probably one or two ballots is conceded by the allies before the G. O. P. reassembles today for the closing session of the convention. A campaign manager for one of the leading ally contestants says Sherman released his Illinois delegation as soon as they switched to Hughes. Burton delegates from Ohio will probably follow suit and likewise delegations pledged to Cummins, except possibly those from his home state. It is fairly safe to assume that shadowing votes from various sources will show defections from the Fairbanks, Knox, Roosevelt, Root and Weeks delegates that will jump his total well above 494 votes necessary to nominate.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR

Hughes is the man who introduced the whisker into present day politics.

Plenty of foliage on any sort of a face indicates Hughes in cartoons.

Hughes is also famous for his silence.

When the former governor was elevated to the Supreme Bench New York lost one of its best political fighters in Republican ranks since the days of Roscoe Conklin. He came by his aggressive ability naturally, being of Welsh descent. New York knew him as a man who would just as soon scrap as sing, and he used to do a good deal of the latter.

Born in Glenn Falls, New York, on April 11, 1862, his father was Rev. David Charles Hughes, direct descendant of a noted Welsh family, while his mother, before her marriage was Miss Catherine Connelly. The future justice studied at the public school in Oswego while his father was preach there and later in Newark, N. J., and in New York city, where he was a pupil in "Old 35," one of the Metropolis' noted grammar schools. His liking for oratory was demonstrated early.

When only thirteen he delivered the salutatory address for his class on graduation. His education was completed at Madison, now Colgate, University, and at Brown University, at both of which institutions he was popular with fellow students, even though he was very much of a student.

After graduation Hughes essayed school-mastering, teaching Greek and Mathematics in Delaware Academy, Delhi, N. Y. He also studied law at odd moments in the office of Judge Gleason.

In 1882 he entered Columbia Law School, New York, and further studied Blackstone in the office of General Stewart L. Woodford, then U. S. District Attorney. He was admitted to the bar in 1884 and was just ordinarily successful until 1891, when, his health threatened by overwork, he became professor of law at Cornell.

In 1893 he went back to practicing and soon became one of the universally recognized authorities here on corporation law. His first public service work was in 1905 as special counsel for for the Legislative Commission investigating New York city's gas and electric companies.

Hughes' work in this investigation was of so brilliant a character that when there was a general demand that same year for a legislative investigation of the Equitable Insurance scandal, State Senator W. W. Armstrong, appointed head of such a probing body, called on Hughes, then on a vacation in Switzerland, to return and act as special counsel.

The disclosures of that investigation are historic. They were responsible in the main for Hughes later being elected twice as governor of New York. In the middle of the investigation he flatly refused a mayoralty nomination.

From the outset of his career as governor, Hughes was in trouble with Republican party leaders. He developed an aloofness from them, and complete independence of thought and action that finally culminated in an open break between him and William Barnes, Jr.

New Yorkers still remember a speech by Hughes before the Albany newspaper correspondents as one of the most artistic, vitriolic "dressing downs" that was ever spoken. It simply took the hide off Barnes. The upstate "boss" responded by denouncing Hughes as a party ingrate and traitor to the state convention. Nevertheless Hughes was renominated and reelected.

The Hughes fight against the race track interests was probably the most spectacular of all his moves as Governor. Behind it lay a sentimental interest. While practicing law Hughes was thrown in contact with a stenographer whose father had been imprisoned for embezzlement of money

* * *

Chicago, 1:15 p. m.—The Progressive convention opened at 11:50 and it was moved to suspend the rules and proceed with nominating.

British and German Guns Engaged on Entire Ypres Front

London—The following British communication was issued early this morning:

"Last night (Thursday) a party belonging to the Gloucester regiment entered the enemy trenches south of Neuve Chapelle, and after successfully attacking the garrison captured a machine gun. Otherwise there were no infantry actions.

"Yesterday (Thursday) afternoon our heavy artillery destroyed the railway station of Salome, east of La Bassee, setting a train afire and damaging the track. Good results also were obtained against strong points behind the enemy's lines north of Hulluch. To-day (Friday) there was much artillery fighting east of Ypres, our guns engaging various enemy positions successfully, while the enemy carried out short bombardments at numerous points behind our front line between the Ypres-Comine Canal and the Ypres-Roulers road. South of Armentieres we effectively bombarded the enemy's trenches east of Laventie. South of La Bassee Canal there was little activity. Near Souchez we destroyed an enemy trench mortar which was bombarding our lines.

"Mine warfare continues in the areas of the Hohenzollern redoubt, near Hulluch, south of Neuville-St. Vaast and northeast of Albert. In the last twenty-four hours we have exploded successfully six mines. The enemy sprung a mine without damage or casualties to us, and a small defensive mine with trifling damage.

"There was aerial activity yesterday (Thursday), but no combats, our machines doing successful work without interference."

D. & L. TRAIN SERVICE NEED NOT BE RESUMED

(Special to Evening Times)

Utica—Judge Ray handed down an opinion to-day in the Federal Court declaring that the D., L. & W. Railroad need not run the two trains which it discontinued in the summer of 1913. The trains removed ran between Syracuse and Oswego, and when the company caused them to be withdrawn the Public Service Commission, Second District, ordered them reinstated. At that time a howl of protest went up from citizens and commercial organizations in the communities most affected and victory for the people resulted—but only temporarily, it seems, for now the Court holds that the Public Service Commission order is "unreasonable and confiscatory."

Hughes Resigns As Chief Justice

(By United Press)

Washington—In a brief letter to President Wilson, Charles Evans Hughes, Republican nominee for President, resigned as Justice of the Supreme Court this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Justice Hughes wrote Mr. Wilson as follows:

"I hereby resign the office of associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

I am, sir, Respectfully yours,
Charles Evans Hughes."

* * *

Washington—At 3:30 o'clock this afternoon Justice Hughes issued the following letter which has been sent to Chairman Harding of the Republican National Convention.

"Mr. Chairman and Delegates:

"I have not desired the nomination. I had wished to remain on the bench, but in this critical period of our country's history I realize that it is your right to summon, and that it is my paramount duty to obey.

"You speak at a time of national exigency, transcending merely partisan considerations, and you voice a demand for a dominant, thorough-going Americanism, with firm protective and upbuilding policies essential to your peace and security, and to that call in this crisis, I cannot fail to respond with a pledge of all that is in me to the service of our country.

"Therefore, I accept the nomination.

"Charles Evans Hughes."

Chicago—The Progressive Convention had named no vice-president up to 3:00 o'clock to-day.

Chicago—Senator Fairbanks was nominated for vice-president of the United States by the Republican Convention shortly before 2 o'clock.

The convention adjourned at 202 o'clock.

New York American:

This vessel is the first of a line of submarines which the Germans propose to operate as merchant vessels only. They can carry, of course, only small and necessarily valuable cargoes; but it is easy to see how useful they would be, at that, to the Germans.

If this submarine experiment succeeds, a nice question of marine law at once arises, for the German Government will at once claim that submarine vessels must be halted and their character ascertained before they can be destroyed—exactly as we have insisted upon the Germans halting and establishing the character of other vessels before destroying them.

There would be nothing left for us to do but to recognize this contention of Germany, since it is our own original contention, insisted upon even to the menace of force.

It is not likely that England would look upon this American contention in favor of German submarine vessels with the same approval that she gave to the American contention adverse to German submarine vessels—and we might be in for a serious dispute.

The submarine has raised some novel questions of international law, and the settlement of them will be one of the hard nuts which the general conference of nations after the war must crack.

Witchita (Kans.) Beacon:

What President Cyrus McCormick of the world's largest agricultural implement corporation said to The Beacon a few days ago about thousands of commercial, financial and industrial leaders in Chicago and other large American cities having a heart craving for a more intimate personal relationship with the average citizen was full of meat and deserves much more than passing attention. He was absolutely sincere in his statement and every friend he has knows it.

Not only in this country but in every country there is one common and very generous fault among the general run of men. It is this, that they persuade themselves with little argument and almost always without reason that men of wealth, high station in life, or great personal success, not only in business but in all other activities, including politics and statesmanship, are, by the processes of fortune, divested of their natural interest in their fellow beings. Nothing is more untrue and those who allow themselves to fall under such a delusion are doing harm to themselves and an injustice to others.

Doubtless there are some men in big business, as there are in small business, who are charmed by the thought that because they are successful they must find themselves a place high above the common run of humanity, but in nearly every case of that sort success is possibly more a result of accident than of merit.

The permanently successful man is usually a good man and few, if any, good men will lose their interest in the humanities of the world.

When Henry Rogers, the great right hand of Rockefeller, went back to the village of his humble origin, after a long absence, and while at the very summit of his great business success, he was given a reception of extraordinary dignity and formality. The small big men of the town put on their frock coats, stiff collars and plug hats and met him at the depot like a superserious delegation of country lodge men at the reception of the corpse of a deceased brother. Poor Rogers was about frozen, when a big small man—the ne'er-do-well of the village—broke through the line of living icicles, reached out a hairy hand and shouted—

"Welcome home, 'Hen' old friend."

He was the boy pal—the swimming hole chum—of the great oil magnate and to the end of his life Henry Rogers cherished the recollection that one man in the village of his birth had remembered his 'kid' name and was big enough of heart and soul to use it. His greeting had the human touch and that was what Mr. Rogers wanted to get upon his return to the old birth-place. He did not go there to be glorified because of his tremendous success in New York. While he scored great achievements he never failed to be human. It was because he was human that he returned to the old home intending to be a boy again for a few days.

The barrier so frequently set up between the average man and the very successful man, is, in nine cases out of ten, more the work of the former than of the latter and it is good to hear such a man as Cyrus McCormick demanding that it be kicked down and thrown aside, in America at least.

Memphis Commercial Appeal:

A man can have a drink in Georgia. If he is very prudent he can have one drink a day and live within the law. Of course, these drinks will not be large ones, and will simply have a tendency to tantalize the sons of the burning thirst. The new law went into effect on May 1. It has not thus far had a satisfactory test, but the law is sufficiently drastic to encourage the belief that some of the old Georgia sots will resort to boot-legging.

Under the laws of Tennessee no man can buy a drink in his own state, and yet there has been discovered no perceptible decrease in drunkenness. There are nightly stews to be found on the streets of every city of consequence in the state and the docket at the central station shows the drunk charge to still be a popular one.

Under the Georgia statute no individual within the state may be in possession of more than two quarts of any distilled liquor within any calendar month or 48 pints of beer or male, or a gallon of wine. German bread and meat cards issued to enforce the economies necessitated by war are not more rigidly employed than will be the drink rations of Georgia, according to the promise of the cold-water folk.

They point out that the sale of liquor has not been prohibited, but shake their heads with the wisdom of Minerva and say woe to the man who dares have more than two quarts in his possession in a single month.

One of the well known dispensers in discussing the situation declared that there were 60 average size drinks in every gallon of whisky. Accepting this as authority, and it should be, for the dispenser of liquids knows the business thoroughly, there is about 15 good drinks in every quart, and since the drink allowance is two quarts a month, then the man of thirst in Georgia will have 30 drinks a month, or one a day in all months having 30 days, but where the month has 31 days he will have to lay off some Sunday in order that his allowance may fill out the month. Just why a man should be thus tempted is not quite clear. It would have been far more merciful on the part of the Georgia Legislature to cut out drinking altogether, to make it a statewide prohibition state and not place temptation under the nose of the weak brother.

Of course, he can cultivate a fair-sized jag on two quarts of liquor if consumed in a single day or night, but to dole out the precious liquid at the rate of a drink a day is the scheme of cruelty.

Melancholia Is Invariably Associated With Intestinal Disease

By EDWIN HARTLEY PRATT, M. D., Professor of Surgery in Chicago Homeopathic Medical College

MELANCHOLY in any degree, from a mild attack of the blues to the desperation that ends in suicide, is always associated with some form of disease, functional or organic, of the large intestine. IT INVARIABLY DISAPPEARS WITH THE CORRECTION OF THE TROUBLE.

These statements are neither careless nor exaggerated. They are simply important clinical facts gleaned from a ripe experience and careful observation. Inasmuch as those who suffer from moods of depression are found upon examination to sustain at the same time—although unconsciously—some form of colonic derangement, and as these moods of depression disappear as soon as the trouble is corrected the natural inference is that the intestinal derangements and moods of depression are related to each other and that the relationship is that of cause and effect, the colonic disturbances being causative.

To students of the waste and repair of the sympathetic nerve it is now well known that a disordered condition of the colon is due always to an inadequate supply of sympathetic nerve force.

THEY ALSO KNOW THAT SOME FORM OF COLONIC TROUBLE IS ALWAYS TO BE FOUND IN ALL KINDS OF MELANCHOLICS.

LABOR LEADERS WANT HELP FOR HATTERS

Washington—Because only $132,138.55 of the needed $250,00 was subscribed by American laboring men to pay the judgment against the homes of the aged Danbury hatters in the famous Danbury Boycott case, the American Federation has named June 15th as the day upon which labor should contribute the needed $117,000 additional.

The federation's request says that "all workers who did not contribute on January 27th are earnestly requested to contribute the wages of an hour's labor Thursday June 15th."

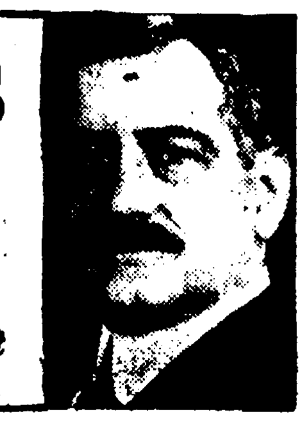
LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT



By S. W. STRAUS

President American Society for Thrift

Thrift, was the keynote of success in the life of the late James J. Hill. He was one of the country's most consistent exponents of thrift, one of the greatest exemplars of what this virtue combined with energy and high purpose can do. He preached always that the man who cannot save money will be a failure; that though he may have education, talent and ability, without thrift habits he cannot succeed.

The great railroad builder began to save even before he had visions of the wonderful agricultural and industrial empire he was to create.

From the day he arrived in St. Paul from Canada, after working his way there, and received for his first day's pay $1.25, he began to save. After a meal uptown he went to the docks and got work on a steamship running to New Orleans. He was frugal and studious and from that time he planned his life work in the transportation business.

James J. Hill preached thrift through all the sixty years of his successful business life. He taught by example that you can increase your earning power by increasing your saving power. He taught that the dollar that is worth more than any other dollar in the world to you is the first dollar you save and that the earlier that start is made the sooner you will be able to meet the great opportunity that comes at some time to every man.

In building his great northwestern empire James J. Hill devoted time, energy and money in educating the settlers to become more thrifty of their resources, to plant two crops where only one was raised before and to stock the waste lands. He opened up markets for the sale of their wheat and stock with the result that six wealthy states and 400,000 farms and as a mighty tribute to the value of thrift.

One of Mr. Hill's axioms was that prosperity not based on economy and thrift is transient, because one cannot be extravagant today, and expect to become a safe conservator of energy and wealth tomorrow.

He let it be known that he did not place a high value on the man who could not save, for he believed that to save means ability to deny and control one's self; when you are master of yourself, you will be able to master others, and with money thus at hand, you will be able to seize opportunity when it comes along. One of his favorite sayings was: "Opportunity comes sometimes disguised and surrounded by hard work and adverse circumstances."

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS.

Congress has authorized the printing of a hundred thousand copies of the report of the Commission on Industrial Relations. This is cheerful news for the suffragists as the report advises the immediate enfranchisement of women as one cure for social and industrial unrest.

* * *

In Paris, according to the Independent, a newspaper asked the women of France whether or no they wanted to vote. In order to make the questionaire a success the paper hoped to receive 200,000 answers. To its amazement it received a million replies in the affirmative.

* * *

It must have been something of a shock to certain distinguished delegates to the Republican convention, who have taken a firm stand against opening the political portals to women, to find that the chief of police of Chicago had assigned six women police to the duty of maintaining law and order and comfort at the convention.

* * *

In West Virginia where the question of woman suffrage is to be decided by the voters next November the list of presesnt voters contains, according to a press report, the names of many men who are dead, of many men who have never lived, as well as many names of voters who are not men at all, but are dogs and mules. The Supreme Court of the State has ordered the registration roll to be purged of its mongrel collection of illegal voters.

* * *

In Congress the Congressmen from equal suffrage states have appeared in protest before the Judiciary Committee. They declared that in their contest for re-election next November they would be seriously embarrassed if the House Judiciary Committee persisted in blocking the Susan B. Anthony woman suffrage amendment.

The protesting delegation numbered twentyeight Representatives from districts where, so they said, the impression must be removed that the Democratic party was blocking the Federal Suffrage Amendment, and they appealed for an immediate and favorable vote.

"The one slogan of the Women's City Club of Chicago," said its delegate, Dr. Rachelle Yarros, of Hull House, in her report at the recent Biennial in New York city, "is non-partisan politics." Dr. Yarros added that when the thousands of club women in her city found themselves possessed with the vote, they appealed to the City Club which forthwith became a training school in neutral politics.

It is interesting to note that Senator Helen Ring Robinson of Colorado brought the same message to the East in reference to Colorado women voters; that their greatest service to their state had been the increase of the independent vote.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken youn breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast, act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

Charles Pathe, chevalier of the Legion of Honor, head of the great motion picture house bearing his name and one of the largest manufacturers in France, was the pioneer in the film business. He was the first man to stage a play before the camera, the first to mechanically color films and the first to transfer news events to the screen. The motion picture industry owes him a debt which cannot be overestimated.

WHEN IS A "PROP" NOT A "PROP?"

Answer by Anna Nilsson—"When It's Edible."

While directing a scene in the Pathe series "Who's Guilty?" Howell Hansel of the Arrow forces, in the interest of realism, provided real tea and real cakes for the centre table of his set. It happened that Anna Nilsson had worked in the picture for nearly five hours on a stretch without a stop for a bite of lunch. Mr. Hansel turned his back to give some directions to his cameraman. When he looked at his leading woman again it was to find her eating the last piece of cake. Tom Moore had taken the pot of tea for his share and could be discerned behind a piece of scenery emptying the pot for a fourth and last cup of the beverage that cheers but does not intoxicate. Mr. Hansel's "realism" had vanished. He says it's the first time he ever saw a star eat or drink a "prop."

PEARL WHITE, FRENCH IDOL.

Two million fighting Frenchmen reading of her exploits in the great Paris newspaper, "Le Matin," became eager to see her on the screen and while on their six days' furlough from the front thronged the Parisian theatres where "The Exploits of Elaine" was showing under the title of "Les Mysteres de New York." Unfortunately they were able in their six days to see but a few episodes. In due time the house of Pathe in Paris was requested by the War Office to make arrangements to show the entire serial each week for the benefit of the soldier fans on furlough. Accordingly a circuit has been arranged and Pearl White now plays to vast audiences of men fresh from the front.

J. A. BERST GETS LOUIS TRACY

Famous Novelist Signed for Pathe Serial.

Noted picture maker met noted author the other day when J. A. Berst, Vice-President and General Manager of Pathe, entertained in his office Louis Tracy, the English novelist, and persuaded him to lend his talents to screen work. Mr. Berst was one of the pioneers in believing that if a manufacturer was to spend fifteen or twenty thousand dollars in producing a picture the services of trained minds were necessary in writing of the scripts. Several years ago when fifty dollars was considered a high price for a scenario, Mr. Berst purchased the work of men and women of trained literary ability, and paid sums running to the hundreds. The wisdom of his policy is proven by the fact that today every large producing company is doing it, and large sums are paid for the motion picture rights to well-known novels and plays. The list of Pathe Gold Rooster Plays bears ample witness to this tendency of the day.

As a result of the meeting of Messrs. Berst and Tracy, the author is to write "The Grip of Evil" for Pathe, a serial story which will be picturized and released probably during the early summer.

Mr. Tracy's works are tremendously popular, and he may be said to be a man with a million readers. Among his books are "The Wings of the Morning," "The Pillar of Light," "The Silent Barrier," "Karl Grier," "A Son of the Immortals," and "The Great Mogul." A man of strong personality he is of an extreme reserve. Born in Liverpool and educated in France he ran away from home to join the British Navy only to find that it was not his vocation. So he drifted into journalism and later through his novels became an international celebrity.

Pathe

Anna Nilsson's Magnificent Wardrobe.

Even those who have acquired "war brides" and raised "war babies" that return all sorts of munificent dividends seldom have the chance to see $50,000 worth of women's clothes hanging on comparatively few hooks in a casual sort of way. In some of the modish Fifth Avenue shops in New York one can, of course, see a half million dollars' worth of clothes waiting for wearers. But not often does $50,000 worth get itself into one room for the use of just one woman.

Yet in the dressing room of Miss Anna Nilsson, one of the stars of "Who's Guilty?", the new Pathe series, there are gowns whose cost rivals the salary of the President of the United States. All of these gowns were designed exclusively for Miss Nilsson's use in the "Who's Guilty?" series by Hickson, modiste of New York's Four Hundred. They range from the flimsiest silver-trimmed chiffons to fur-topped silks. To a mere man their cost seems to run in inverse ratio to their weight—the less there is of them the more they cost.

But Miss Nilsson is thoroughly at home in all this luxury. A deft little maid—as blonde and nearly as pretty as Miss Nilsson herself—does nothing but take care of them before Miss Nilsson wears them, and after she returns them at night. There they hang under a cheap muslin cloth, the sharpest contrast in the world; a king's ransom protected by a few yards of shoddy.

In the adjoining room to this wardrobe is Miss Nilsson's real dressing-room. It is anything but what one would expect of an actress—unless one knows that actresses are not all they're painted. A neater, simpler, "homier," and more comfortable room could not be imagined. Everything has its place—and is in its place. Even the chairs take on the primness with which the whole room seems endowed. And on the walls are no smoke-stained portraits of prize-ring heroes or scented reminders of the dance.

Seeming out of place in such delicate surroundings, on another wall, hangs a huge, two-handed sword such as the Crusaders carried almost a thousand years ago. And, sure enough, this is a family heirloom of Miss Nilsson, on her mother's side, whose hard-fighting English ancestors went forth against the Saracens in the days when war meant individual combat.

And right here enters Miss Nilsson's one superstition: She will not permit her dressing-room at the Arrow studios to be photographed. Every effort—and every trick known to the persuasive camera man—has been used to get her permission for a series of pictures of her in this charming work-room. So far Miss Nilsson has defied every attempt. Some day—well, some day she may change her very charming feminine mind.

J. A. BERST TALKS OF PROPOSED AUTHOR'S UNION

The latest attempt to pilfer from the motion picture industry a portion of some of the vast profits which it is popularly supposed to be getting was indicated in the New York papers of recent date. According to the story the "Author's League of America," of which Winston Churchill is the president, and Theodore Roosevelt the vice-president, is considering the advisability of joining the American Federation of Labor with the express purpose of "bringing the moving picture men to time" by holding them up for ten per cent. of the profits of a picture, this ten per cent. to be paid the author of the story, idea or scenario from which the picture is made. Thompson Buchanan, secretary of the Executive Committee, is reported to have said that any picture which nets the producer or distributor $35,000, should pay the author at least $3,500. One of the arguments advanced is that "an author gets from $500 to $1,500 for an idea or scenario which costs the producer not more than $15,000 to prepare for use and from which he reaps not less than $35,000."

As a lever for their arguments the disgruntled scribes plan to make use of the cameramen and mechanicians who are now affiliating with the American Federation of Labor. Thus if the picture manufacturer does not accede to their terms they expect to call out their fellow union men—the camera men et al and tie up the plant as tight as a drum.

Mr. J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, when the above statements were called to his attention, refused to be alarmed.

"In the first place," he said, "the author's argument rests upon a false premise. They take no account of the picture which does not pay its way and which represents a loss and not a profit. We would be only too glad to buy at a high price any and every idea for a picture to cost not more than $15,000 that would positively give to us net profits of $35,000, but it can't be done. The value of a story for picture purposes is a gamble, and the picture itself is a gamble. Who takes the risk, the author or the producer? The author spends the time of one man, himself, for a week or so. The producer spends six or seven weeks or more upon a feature picture, with high priced players and with extras, cameramen, property men, all drawing salaries and fattening the overhead upon that picture. It costs about thirty per cent. to market a feature in addition to the producing cost which is never as low as $15,000, for a good production with first class players. In view of this cost the author receiving ten per cent. of the profits would earn less money than he does on the basis of the present plan, and as many features actually lose money, on such pictures he would get nothing for his work. It strikes me that $3,500 is an excessive price for the idea for one feature picture. We have frequently paid high prices for the picture rights to some well-known book or play, but in those instances we were also buying the publicity which naturally is a part of such a work through its popularity with many persons.

"It is stated that the Author's League now numbers 1200 members, and that it is expected by the end of the year there will be 3,000, which number is supposed to include practically all the scenario writers. The motion picture business has reared up its own school of dramatists, and I fail to see where the business would have to be dependent upon any author's association. There neither is nor can be any monopoly of writing talent—that is a field of human endeavor that is open to any one. The famous writer frequently falls down when he writes for the screen, for the requirements of the art differ from those of the stage, the short story or the novel.

"Finally, let me reassure the Author's League as to the fabulous profits in the motion picture business. They don't exist, press reports to the contrary."

STEVENSON MAY BE HONORED

According to advices received from Peekskill, the New York state convention of Elks, at the close of the convention, endorsed the candidacy of John W. Stevenson of this city, for grand exalted ruler of the order. It now seems likely that Mr. Stevenson will be in the running for the honor at the National Convention which will be held in Baltimore in August.

The endorsement of the New York State convention carries with it the solid support of the Empire State Elks, and as the convention will be held in the East this year, the support of this state will be of great assistance to any candidate. Hr. Stevenson is very popular and well-known in Baltimore, and at the National Convention in Los Angeles last year, he presented the Baltimore lodge with the "Big Elk" which was puschased by the Elks of this city during the Elks' Carnival two years ago.

Mr. Stevenson has been very prominent at the Peekskill convention and it was due in a large measure to his efforts that the state convention will be held in this citynextyear.

ELKS MAY SPEND $20,000 ON IMPROVEMENTS

The Oswego Times carried a report last night to the effect that plans had been drawn for an addition 40x90 feet, to the Fulton home of the Elks. According to the Times, the addition when completed will be used as a lodge room and the estimated cost of the improvement is $20,000.

John W. Stevenson, exalted ruler of the Fulton lodge, could not be located to-day to make any statement regarding the report, but another prominent member of the Fulton Lodge classed the rumor as "plain bunk."

BEAUTY ISLAND OPENS FOR 1916

Dampened Grounds Had Little Effect Upon Athletic Members—New Tennis Court is Good.

Threatening weather and showers early in the day did not dampen the enthusiasm of the members of the Pathfinder Boat club yesterday, and fifty journeyed to the beautiful little island north of the city for the opening Field Day of the summer season. While most of the members motored down, a regular half hourly bus service from City Hall was also extensively patronized.

The morning rains made miniature lakes on the baseball diamond, but the male members of the club decided to hold a ball game in spite of weather conditions. Accordingly, a game of "one-old cat" was started, and a large gallery of the ladies watched the proceedings from the club verandas. Dr. S. D. Kellar and Harold M. Hunter were the individual stars, both connecting with the slippery pellet for home runs.

During the game, Dr. H. W. Schlappi attempted to pull a "Ty Cobb" steal of home, and as the ball met the catcher's hands, the popular medico skidded into the rubber. When he arose, he complained of a badly wrenched ankle, but continued the game. Later in the evening, the ankle gave him considerable pain, and an examination by brother physicians disclosed a bad sprain.

The tennis court, which has been greatly improved by a new top-surface and careful grading, was the scene of many hotly contested matches during the afternoon, and a large gallery witnessed a spirited mixed doubles which resulted in a tie, because of darkness.

H. C. Webb broke the club quoit record, with a mark of four ringers in one game. As it was not an official match, however, the mark will not stand.

Several comfortable swings have been installed in shady nooks about the club grounds, and everything on the Island has received a good coat of paint. The club house has been renovated and improved, and a new piano was installed yesterday.

Under the direction of Mrs. Louise Van Schoick, an old fashioned English roast beef dinner was served about six o'clock. After the meal, most of the men went back to the baseball diamond to continue their unfinished game, which continued until daylight failed.

Dancing was enjoyed from 7 until nearly 10 o'clock. The Adkin's Imperial Trio furnished the music.

Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. S. D. Kellar, Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Schlappi, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. McCully, Mayor and Mrs. Victor C. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Forsythe, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Diles, Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Bennett, Miss Mary Webb, Miss Ethel Washburn, Miss Mary Blanchard, Miss Evelyn Mead, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. C. TWILIGHT SLEEP PICTURES COMING

The "Twilight Sleep" moving pictures, whose exhibition in other cities of the state have caused a sensation, are billed for the Happy Hour theatre June 13. According to announcements made in the advertising matter published by the film company, women only will be admitted to the pictures.

Exhibitors of these films have met with some opposition in different parts of this state, and in some instances theatre managers have been compelled to show the pictures to a board of city censors before the public was allowed to view them. In Watertown police interference was suggested by several local people who were opposed to the public display of the films, but the pictures were not censored.

The pictures were taken in the great hospital at Freiburg, Germany, and describe in detail the "Twilight Sleep" system, which is now in vogue in some of the larger hospitals of this country. A lecturer explains the "Twilight Sleep" plan to the audience during the exhibition.

SEAMAN'S LAW GETS PRAISE

LaFollette's Bill Proves Benefit to Ship Owners and Men, Says Official.

(By United Press)

Washington—Uncle Sam, employment agent, is putting into real effect, to the benefit of employers and seamen alike, the new federal seamen's law, Scretary of Commerce Redfield declared today.

Under the law, ships cannot put to sea from an American port without the requisite number of registered seamen. Objections were made to the law because it was claimed it would work a hardship on trading vesssels operators in that they could not readily secure registered seamen in some ports, this difficulty tending to hold up their shipping.

"Here is a good illustration of how the seamen's law is operating," Secretary Redfield said. "We received a few days ago a telegram from the captain of a schooner at Boothbay, Maine, saying that he could not find the required number of registered seamen at the port, and asking for permission to clear with what help he could employ.

"The port officials had refused him clearance because he did not have the required quota of registered seamn.

"The Department immediately notified the port officials to make an investigation, asked the Department of Labor to notify through its representatives at Bath and other nearby ports any registered seamen there and send them to Boothbay, and gave assurance to the captain that the government was looking out for him.

"Within a remarkable short time a sufficient number of able seamen to man his vessel arrived at Boothbay, idle men were given employment, and he was able to sail with a competent crew."

A similar case was cited at Jacksonville, Fla. A steamboat captain appealed to the department for permission to sail with unregistered seamen. Within a short time the Department of Labor agents, by co-operation with the Department of Commerce, placed at the disposal of the captain a sufficient crew of able seamen.

Frequently the department has found captains of vessels lacking in diligence in their efforts to live up to the requirements of the law, and such captains are under the supicious eyes of watchful agents of the department, the secretary said.

In one instance at Jacksonville, Fla., where a ship captain telegraphed the Department that he was unable to find registered seamen, it was shown that there were a number of such seamn available. The captain escaped with a "calling" and a warning against repetitionof the ffense.

"The lw is working out to good advantage of both employers and seamen," the secretary said. "Co-operation with the Department of Labor and Customs Officials enables the Commerce Department to deal with any situation quickly to the benefit of the seamen, vessel owner, and shippers."

That's nothing, Roosevelt has been speakng for years.

A straw vote taken at the Lewis cigar store yesterday afternoon on the Republcan nomination resulted as follows: Hughes 5, Burton 2, Weeks 3, Roosevelt 3, Myron Stranahan 7. A second ballot will be taken this afternoon.

One of our local young men decided recently that the Fulton stores did not carry a very good assortment of clothing, so he sent to a large Chicago house for what was described as a "natty, up-to-the-minute suit, only $10.95." When he got the suit, he found in the pocket of the coat a note, which read, "Should this note fall into the hands of a good-looking young man who is desirous of corresponding with a young lady of sweet disposition, kindly address, etc. will he please write to Miss Blank," and the address of the fair one followed.

The young man wrote, and a few days later received the following note:

Dear Sir: "My wife has received a letter which you addressed her in her maiden name. Twenty years ago, when she worked in that clothing factory, she may have written that note. She is now the mother of eleven children, and if you write to her again, I'll make a trip to your town and mold your face into the shape of a hamburger steak."

The moral of this tale is obvious.

Aided by an avalanche of errors on the part of the Fultonians, the Phoenix All-Stars won a travesty on the national pastime at the Fair grounds field yesterday, the final sad news reading 13—6. The Phoenicians were far from being ball-players but the Fulton team couldn't have won the decision in a game of croquet yesterday. Marty Ward was attacked with writer's cramp, while keeping score, and as Marty has his own patented system of score keeping, legible to no one else in all the Americas, nothing resembling a detailed account of the game is available for publication. Two scribes have manufactured box scores, but life is too short.

Several Fultonians who intended to operate concessions during Old Home Week have applied at the Chamber of Commerce headquarters within the past few days for the recommendation necessary before a license can be obtained from the city clerk. Secretary D. S. Hollenga of the Chamber is out of the city, however, and during the past week has addresssed the Albany and Norwich Chambers of Commerce. He will return to-day.

If fair weather prevails a large crowd will be on hand at the Fair grounds tomorrow afternoon when the Red Men of this city meet their ancient rivals, the Rowan Stars of Oswego. About 500 people attended last Sunday's game. Yes, it is very evident that there is a crying need for another revival here.

DARIO RESTA DERBY FAVORITE

(By United Press)

Speedway, Maywood, Ill.—Twenty-seven of the world's fastest auto drivers are ready here today for the start in the western automobile classic, the second annual Chicago Derby.

The distance is 300 miles and the prizes amount to $30,000 cash. It was estimated that 30,000 auto fans were crowded in the grandstand along the speedway course shortly before Starter Fred Wagner sent the speed demons on their way.

Half of the crowd were visitors to the Republican, Progressive and Woman's Party conventions. The Republicans adjourned at noon to let the delegates get to the race.

Dario Resta, who won the Derby last year in a Peugot, establishing a record of 97:58 miles an hour; also the winner of the 300 mile run at Indianapolis May 30th, was back on the job again, a strong favorite. The diminutive Italian couldn't see anyone but himself as the winner.

"It's my race," he said. "Those fellows can't beat me. They'll have to smash world records to do it, and I expect to smash a few myself."

Ralph de Palma, who probably has more bad luck than any auto driver in the game, will drive a Mercedes. De Palma has missed winning several big races short distances from the finish because of car trouble.

"Nothing like that this time," he said' "I'm taking no chances."

Other entrants are Barney Oldfield, driving a Delage; Tom Alley, Ogresl Christiaens, Sunbeam; Eddie O'Donnell, Dusenberg; Billy Chandler, Crawford; and George Adams, Adams Special.

The winner of the Derby will get $12,000; second, $6,000; third, $3,000; fourth, $1,500; fifth, $1,300; sixth, $1,200; seventh, $1,100; eighth, $900; tenth, $700.

A cash bonus of $500 will be presented to the driver leading at the end of 100 miles; $500 more to the driver leading at the end of 200 miles; and $500 more for the leader at the end of 250 miles.

SEATTLEITES MARCH FOR PREPAREDNESS

(By United Press)

Seattle, Wash — Seattle today marched for preparedness. A three-hour procession of 25,000 civilians tramped down Pike street in military formation.

The parade was conducted along the same lines as that in New York, May 13.

There were no gay banners, floats, gaudy decorations or uniforms. Every marcher carried a flag. There were men from every walk of life, and several columns of women and children. Members of the G. A. R. and the Ladies of the G. A. R. rode in automobiles.

The Man Who Worried

And In One Case There Was Something to Worry About.

By JOHN T. LARNED

I began my business career at seventeen as office boy with an importing house. My father, who was a friend of the proprietor, Mr. John Edsall, secured me the position, and I was on social terms with the Edsall family. I was interested in my work, whatever it was, and that is an important element of success. I was connected with different departments at different times, and in this way I gained a general knowledge of the business.

Mr. Edsall's only child was a daughter, who when I came of age was fifteen years old. Some girls of fifteen are like a six-weeks-old colt, all limbs and very awkward. Lucia Edsall was the reverse of this. She was very pretty and graceful as a fawn. I fancied her from the first moment I saw her and had evidence that she fancied me. But a girl of that age will usually cling to any young fellow with whom she associates.

Nevertheless, after she had been at boarding school for a year, on her return, although she was more careful in showing her feelings for me, I had reason to believe that they had not changed. I was not in receipt of an income to marry my wealthy employer's daughter. Nevertheless there was sparring between Lucia and me that was dangerously near to love making.

Another year's separation occurred—a trip abroad Lucia made with her mother—and on her return, while I saw no change in my sweetheart, I had become impressed with the risk to me in appearing as a suitor for the hand of my employer's daughter. Should he have other plans for her he might assume that I had clandestinely won her and be proportionately indignant. I was in high favor with him in a business way, and my prospects were very bright. It would be a terrible misfortune to me if such an accusation were brought against me. I would lose not only the girl I loved, but my position, and would have to begin again at the foot of the ladder.

Being a year older on Lucia's return than I was when she went abroad, this view of the case seemed of greater importance to me. There is no one more prone to worry, to take a pessimistic view of his affairs than a lover. I dreaded to have Lucia show a partiality for me, and when she did I repressed its expression. This naturally caused her to treat me coolly, and I was more miserable than before.

I had been spending months in this condition of uncertainty, making myself and Lucia miserable, when Mr. Edsall was taken ill. He sent for me to come to his house and told me that he wished me to run the business, reporting to him every day until he had recovered. I was astonished at this, because there were men much older than I who had been in his employ for many years. Of course I was much flattered. I was also rejoiced because it indicated that some day I might be promoted to a position next to the proprietor of the business.

But the higher I was lifted in a business way the more anxious I became lest something should bring about a more open love affair between Lucia and me, and my prospects would be brought to a sudden collapse. I had not definitely made love to her. The matter was drifting. If I told her that I loved her I should be in a position to offer myself to her. That would necessitate my going to her father, and I had not the faintest knowledge what ground he would take. But I feared the worst.

When he recovered and resumed his place as manager of his business he made me his financial man, placing me in charge of not only the moneys he used in the business, but his securities. This showed great confidence in my integrity, but I was all the more panic stricken at the prospect of his coming to a knowledge of what was going on between me and his daughter.

I worried, too, about the affairs of my department. The cashier, Samuel Gregory, was under my orders, and the only person besides myself and Mr. Edsall who had the key of the safe. Gregory had been with the concern twice as long as I had, but I worried lest he would involve me in some misfortune. He was not as careful with his personal expenditures as I thought a man entrusted with funds should be, but that was not sufficient cause for my pessimism.

One afternoon after bank hours a customer from another city came into the office and insisted on paying his account, a very large amount, in bank bills. I was obliged to receive it, and it was placed in the safe. That night I lay awake, not only thinking of the equivocal position I occupied with respect to having a love affair with the daughter of a man who trusted me implicitly, but who could wreck my prospects if he considered that I had been treating him dishonorably. Worry is a habit, and if a man permits himself to worry about one thing he will worry about everything.

What made me worry about the money in the safe was that when I had reported the fact of the payment to Mr. Edsall he said that I should have declined to receive so large an amount in currency after banking hours.

Not being able to sleep in a comfortable bed away from the funds in question, I got up and dressed myself, intending to go to the office and sleep on a lounge there was in Mr. Edsall's private room, where I would be near the safe. On reaching my destination I unlocked the door to the main office and went in with no light except what came from the street. I feared that if I switched on the electrics some policeman would come to investigate what was going on. I did not care to make an explanation, and would not have it known by any one connected with the office that I had been there.

Feeling my way to the lounge, I lay down. I was some time getting to sleep, for I had a new source of worry in the fact that if I were found in the office my motive for being there might be misinterpreted. However, I finally dropped into a light and troubled slumber.

I was awakened by a sound in the next room. I did not stir, but listened. I faintly heard something drop in the safe lock. Had my hearing not been very acute I should not have detected it. After hearing several such drops which I recognized from having opened the safe so many times, I heard the heavy door swing open. For a moment it seemed that I was still asleep and dreaming a dream that had been excited by my imagination. Then I sprang up and, without thinking that I was liable to be shot down, switched on an electric light.

There stood Gregory facing me, white as a sheet, in his hand a package of currency. We looked at each other for a moment, then Gregory, realizing his position, broke down and began to beg piteously that I would not expose him.

I told him to replace the package of bills he had taken and close the safe. Then he confessed that he had been speculating and had got caught. He was intending to take a few thousand dollars to tide him over for a few days, trusting to the fact that he alone looked after the cash on hand to replace it before the deficiency should be discovered.

I asked him how much money would tide him over, and he told me that $2,500 would do it. I had saved several times that amount and told him that I would let him have the money in the morning, but he must leave it to me to act toward him in other respects as my conscience dictated. He declared that this was the first time in his life that he had appropriated money that did not belong to him and assured me that what I had offered to loan him would put him beyond further need. If it were not so he would not have acted as he had. This did not influence me. I told him that I would tell him what I would do as to making known my having surprised him, and, leaving the building, we parted on the sidewalk.

It was long past midnight when I got back into my own bed. I lay awake wondering if my having gone to the office at the same time Gregory had gone there to make a loan of the firm's funds was a coincidence or whether a subconsciousness that he was intending to do so had led me there. It is said that no one can think of two things at the same time, but these thoughts did not interfere with a dread that, no matter what course I should pursue with Gregory, it would result unfortunately for me.

The next morning he did not show up. I waited till noon, and since he did not appear I laid the matter before Mr. Edsall. An examination was made, but no deficiency was found. But it came out that Gregory was heavily in debt and he had decamped to parts unknown.

I did not tell Mr. Edsall that I had offered to help Gregory, but I told Lucia, and she told her father. The morning after she did so he announced that he had decided to incorporate his business and I would be vice president and general manager. What else Lucia said to him, whether she hinted at the conditions between her and me, I don't know, but from that time he treated me more like a son than an employee.

And from that time forward I could not possibly find anything to worry about, except that I realized "there is many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip" and felt an uncertainty as to my possessing the girl I loved. However, she did what she could to assure me that all would be well and to relieve my misgivings. But she had a hard time convincing me that I would be acceptable to her father as a suitor for her.

One day I told him that I loved his daughter; that I had never spoken to her of my feelings for her and had endeavored to treat her as a friend. But a time had come when I considered it both unjust to her and to myself that the matter should remain as it was between us, and I asked him if he would consent to my proposing to her for her hand. When I had finished I waited with a throbbing pulse for his reply. It was not long delayed.

"Young man," he said, "you have acted honorably in everything ever since I have known you. If Lucia is willing I am."

That's the end of the story. My father-in-law now relies upon me as manager of his business. He says that the only thing against me as a good business man is that I take things too seriously. In other words, I am inclined to worry, and that wears on my physical capabilities. However, since I got out of the false position induced by my love affair I have done much better than formerly.

I had become president of the company when Gregory returned. He had managed to get a clearance from his debts and begged me to give him a chance to make a living. I gave him a position, and he has been a faithful servant ever since.

BALK AT MARRIAGE

English Nobility Reluctant to Talk Matrimony With Servian Prince

London.—Alexander, crown prince and regent of Servia, has been in England hunting a wife, it is rumored, as well as seeking political and financial assistance in recovering his country. He made a great impression and created a warm sentimeent for himself and his people. But fathers with marriageable daughters, from King George downward, did not appear anxious to meet any matrimonial advances from the prince. He went to Buckingham palace and was entertained by the king and queen. Prince Albert was delegated to meet him at the station and to see him off when he departed. But Princess Mary did not come in contact with him.

The hesitation manifested by English fathers and mothers of high degree to an alliance with Prince Alexander is largely caused by the uncertainty of his ever sitting upon the throne of his father and the certainty of his living in constant danger of his life if he ever is able to return to Belgrade. It has taken some time for England to overcome its feeling of repugnance to the prince and his father, King Peter having always been held responsible for the murder of King Alexander and Queen Draga, whose deaths removed the obstacles in the way of his own accession, while Prince Alexander was blamed primarily for the assassination of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg. The prince's gallant conduct in the war and the general feeling in England that the British government was responsible for unwisely advising the Servian army to resist the invaders and hold out until the allies sent re-enforcements have created a reversion of feeling in his favor.

CROWN PRINCE ALEXANDER.

The government took pains not to involve England in any way with the affairs of Servia except as relating to this war. The prince was the guest of Lord Kitchener, and at York House Prince Alexander met Sir Edward Grey, the secretary of foreign affairs, in a party which included the Earl of Derby and Walter Long, both members of the government. Sir Edward Grey was likewise present at the dinner given in honor of the prince by Lewis Harcourt on behalf of the government. The Marquis of Crewe, leader of the government in the house of lords, presided at this dinner. The Russian ambassador, the Japanese ambassador, the Belgian minister, the Portuguese minister, the Marquis of Lansdowne, Lord Kitchener, Arthur Balfour, Walter Runciman, Lord Robert Cecil, General Sir William Robertson and the lord chancellor were present.

Sir Edward Grey was also upon the platform at Victoria station when Prince Alexander, accompanied by Prince Albert and Lord Kitchener, arrived to take the train for the coast and embark for the continent. The foreign secretary of the British government did not entertain the prince regent of Servia at any official hospitality. And, although the prince regent was accompanied by his prime minister, M. Pashitch, they were not received or entertained by the British prime minister, Mr. Asquith.

Seldom has any visiting royalty ever received in England such a deputation of distinguished men in different walks of life as waited upon Prince Alexander at his hotel.

"ALWAYS ON THE JUMP"

SPECIAL EXTRA U. S. A. SUNRISE EDITION

MADE A MISTAKE.

A STRANGER entered the postoffice the other day and began shooting at the public clock hanging up in full view.

He explained later on that he thought he was shooting at a target at Coney Island, but he did not make explanation until a bullet had lodged in his shoulder and a second one in his leg.

He won't make the same mistake again.

FORESIGHT.

We bought another mountain last week, making seventeen in all we now personally own.

Some of them are small mountains, not more than 1,500 feet high, but there are a few old ones that run up into the sky a thousand feet more.

We have bought these mountains that we might get a few breaths of fresh air when the hot weather comes.

LACK OF CARE.

Mr. W. H. Black, our enterprising and progressive hardware man, shot his left thumb off the other day while shooting at a rat in his store.

He has the full sympathy of this community; but, at the same time, he has the advice of all our citizens to hunt his rats in future with a club or tie his thumb behind him before he starts out to use a gun.

NOTHING DOING.

WE are in receipt every day of a bushel or more of letters asking why we don't praise or pitch into the president, congress, the army or the navy or this or that thing.

We are a pitching sort of cuss, but there are times when we take a rest, and we are resting just now.

All things will get what is coming to them in due time.

RANK MARKSMANSHIP.

A mad coyote ran through Givadam Gulch the other day, snapping right and left.

Over fifty men fired at him as he ran, but only a bit of his ear was shot off.

And yet we call ourselves a progressive community!

LAMPS ARE ALL RIGHT.

There is some talk that Chicago capitalists will organize a gas company here and provide the Gulch with illumination, but it may not amount to much for the first year or two.

If we had a gas supply nine-tenths of the people would be for putting old hats or wet towels over the jets instead of turning them off, and we should probably lose half a thousand lives.

The old kerosene lamp is safe and not up to tricks unless some idiot turns loose with the gun. M. QUAD.

Something Every Woman Wants

A nightgown in kimono style with Empire waistline. The sleeves may be omitted, or what suggestion there is of them gains further attraction by the air of perky satin bows.

A pretty night gown is always an attraction to the woman who likes dainty things. The shoulder line of this design is dropped slightly, and there are two perky little bows which pretend to be sleeves, while they only hold together the hemstitched armholes and neck of the batiste nightie. In addition to the bows there are motifs of embroidery worked in solid satin stitch and eyelet to make the design attractive. The V-shaped neck is finished with a two-inch hem that may be put in with featherboning or hemstitching. Pink ribbon, laced through buttonholed incisions makes the Empire waistline of the gown. In medium size the model requires 4¼ yards 36-inch material.

It is needless to say that the most inexperienced dressmaker can cut the gown after looking at the cutting guide. Note the simple arrangement of the front and back sections along the lengthwise fold of the batiste. Then note, also how the piecing for both the sections is cut from the selvage edge opposite the underarm seam. Mistakes will be impossible if the pattern is laid on the material as illustrated in the guide.

The construction of the nightgown is quite as simple. Close the under-arm sleeve and shoulder seams as notched. Turn hem at lower edge of nightgown on small "o" perforations. The front of the design is indicated by large "O" perforation near the center-front. If desired, slash front and back ⅜ inch above and below small "o" perforations at Empire waistline, insert ribbon and draw to the required size. The gown is just as attractive, though, if allowed to fall in straight lines.

Many gowns are being fashioned from crepe materials this season. In such instances the embroidery is done in very bold design with heavy threads, but it is original and always effective. The woman who has no maid and has to struggle with the problem of the weekly laundry, finds the crepe gown a real blessing because they require only to be washed and dried, when they are ready for use.

ENJOYMENT.

Why not enjoy the beauties of nature while you may? You were made for enjoyment, and the world was filled with things which you will enjoy unless you are too proud to be pleased by them or too grasping to care for what you cannot turn to other account than mere delight.—Ruskin.

A Run on Asparagus.

ASPARAGUS SOUFFLE.—A quart of cooked asparagus (chopped), a cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, yolks of three eggs, a scant tablespoonful of salt, a dust of pepper, whites of four eggs.

Chop the asparagus into lengths of about one-half inch, cook the milk, butter and cornstarch until the mixture is smooth and thick; then add the yolks of eggs, one at a time, beating well between each addition. Stir in the asparagus and seasoning. Beat the whites of egg until stiff, but not dry; fold lightly into the mixture, turn gently into a well buttered baking dish and cook in a quick oven until a light brown.

Asparagus Fritters.—Two bunches of cooked asparagus, an egg, a cupful flour, a pinch of salt, one-half cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of melted butter, a teaspoonful baking powder.

Cut the asparagus into half inch pieces, beat the egg until light, sift in the flour and salt, add the milk and the tablespoonful of melted butter. Beat thoroughly until smooth and leave standing for at least an hour. Then add the baking powder and asparagus. Drop the batter into smoking fat by the spoonful and when cooked a light brown take up, drain and serve hot.

Asparagus Ragout.—Three dozen stalks of cooked asparagus, a head of lettuce, a head of endive, two ounces butter, a bunch herbs, two finely chopped eschalots, two ounces cornstarch, one-half pint tomato sauce.

Put the lettuce and endive in cold water until quite crisp, wash and dry by shaking in a clean cloth, put in a stewpan together with the butter, herbs, eschalots, pepper and the asparagus. Cover the saucepan and let these ingredients draw over the stove for about fifteen minutes. Then add the cornstarch and tomato sauce and cook for twenty-five minutes, stirring from time to time. Rub through a fine sieve, reheat and serve up with poached eggs.

Asparagus and Tomato Salad.—Use crisp lettuce leaves as a foundation. Put four slices of tomato on each plate of lettuce. Over this put five or six asparagus tips. When ready to serve top with mayonnaise dressing.

blouse, which is corded twice around the bottom and has sash ends in the back. Collar and tie repeat the skirt material.

BEAUTY IN THE BOUDOIR.

In the direction of the boudoir gown the feeling for rainbow radiancy is specially marked, and, as there are no hard and fast rules as to styles to be observed, it follows that no limit is placed on the creative genius of the clever costumiere, whose fancy in the matter of cut and color is given free rein. The little shoulder capes, the wide turnover collars, the short, straight coats, now in vogue and the varied forms of stole and pelerine provided for wear over the transparent corsage, which is the corsage of the moment, are excellently adapted for diversity in the matter of color treatment.

Gossamer chiffon and stiff brocade of an oriental gorgeousness of hue are alike employed. Taffeta, faille, satin, lace—none of these materials comes amiss to the dressmaker with ideas. The gorgeous costumes of the princes of India have inspired some of the boudoir coats, which are not only eastern in the splendor of their coloring, but in actual shape resemble more than a little the long coat which so often forms part of an oriental's dress. Large paste or enamel buttons, such as the native loves, lend an added touch of realism, and the slightly decollete neck is often bordered by a band of fur. La Mode never does things by halves, and when it comes to the point of paying compliments she can hold her own with the most accomplished flatterer. In the winter it was the bersaglieri hat; just now it is the Queen of the Adriatic to whom grateful homage is paid.

HUGE FLOWERS BLOOM.

On the New Hats Blossoms Not Yet Classified In Botanies.

After several seasons of small flowers fashion has suddenly swerved to the other extreme and is now advocating the use of immense flowers for both hat and dress decoration.

An instance of this is found in a Paris hat of red straw, whose high crown and very broad brim are connected by a narrow ribbon of the same hue tied in a bit of a bow at the back. Posed directly in front is an immense rose of silk and velvet, also of the red color.

Poppies of tremendous size are being employed for dress hats. They are reproduced in natural colors, with emphasis on the red and pink nuances. Frequently the poppies are pulled apart and the petals in some fantastic and overlapping manner are arranged about the base of the crown. The effect is very striking when the hat is of azure blue crin straw and the poppies in flame color.

Another novel bloom is found in flowers of mica—translucent and having the appearance of a grayish alabaster. Such blossoms are sometimes placed on the top of the crown of a hat of black milan straw, the additional altitude serving to balance the extreme width of the brim. Besides the flowers, sometimes a glazed band of ivory ribbon is employed.

A Useful Bag of Strings.

A bag of pretty, sturdy cretonne divided inside into four generous sized pockets. Four balls of different kinds of string, commencing with the thin but strong and growing heavier and stronger ball by ball until the fourth is a near cable. Four eyelets in the bottom of the bag—one from each pocket and each eyelet duly buttonholed—to let the strings pull through more easily. And a blunt pair of strong scissors fastened on "for keeps" to the side of the bag.

Almond Rusks.

A cupful melted butter, a cupful milk, one and one-half cupfuls sugar, three eggs, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, a teaspoonful almond extract. Cream butter, add sugar, eggs well beaten, baking powder with flour and milk alternately. Roll like loaves of bread in shape and bake in hot oven. When done and cool cut up in slices and halves (about one and one-half inch slices) and put back in moderate oven until golden brown; then keep in oven with door open about one hour.

FIVE EMINENT ARTISTS.

SELDOM are the people of any community given so exceptional an opportunity of hearing five artists of such great distinction as are assembled in this remarkable company. Yet this will be the offering here the last day of Chautauqua—one of the greatest ever placed on any Chautauqua program. This is the personnel: Reed Miller, tenor; Marie Stoddart, soprano; Nevada Van Der Veer, contralto; Frederick Wheeler, baritone; Blanche Barbot, pianist.

MILLINERY NOTES.

There is a rather pronounced tendency toward moderately low crowns and broader, flattish brims in soft felt hats for the coming summer season. It is the opinion of some prominent hat men that in the more popular proportions, because of the fashion among young men of wearing their hats well down on the back of their heads, very few hats with crowns lower than five and one-quarter inches will be sold. Women are following the masculine lead in hats now.

Outside of a very slight inclination in certain parts of the west toward greens and a little disposition in the east to favor browns, no "leading color" has developed in the advance summer business. A few manufacturers are forecasting light colors, but such forecasts at the present time probably are born of hopes rather than facts, for, as one manufacturer expressed it, "light colors can be stained into hats, but dark colors have to be dyed in," and never before have dyes cost so much as they do now.

Also in straw hats will these moderately low crown, broad brim styles be most popular. While the regular sailor shapes will be, of course, most generally worn, there will be some very smart shapes made of leghorn and panama straws, and in the soft straw hat we shall see the panama with large or wide brims and slightly conical crowns. The leghorns in these same shapes may be in black or dark brown. The former is a very smart hat with dinner clothes. Then there will be the soft straw with a creased top, as in the Homburg shape, and perhaps many others. Some of the boat shapes will be made of panama or leghorn straw, but, as heretofore, the most popular straw hats of the season will be the boat shapes and split braid straws.

Best School of All.

It cannot be but the author of the Greatest Show on Earth was right. The world likes to be humbugged, else why all this elaboration of educational systems and theories, educational forms and creeds, this multiplication of modern methods and didactic material? These are, indeed, but things that change and fluctuate and already are on the way to being superseded. Meanwhile the older and larger schoolroom of life never closes its doors, makes no bid for patronage, retains its old teachers, changes its methods not at all and continues to turn out the best pupils.—Laura Spencer Portor in Atlantic.

LACE BLOUSES.

What Is Fashionable In the Realm of Dainty Waists.

Lace blouses with the bib collar of crape are comparatively new. Then there are the cape blouses which give a pretty finish across the shoulders, but are so contrived that they do not add any suggestion of breadth across the chest. Some of these capes are bound with satin or moire ribbon while others have a quilling of net or chiffon.

Striped messaline has been chosen for the development of a semi-tailored blouse, which later may be worn with the outing skirt. In fact, the outing season has been very well considered in the planning of the blouse models. This is evidenced in the smock blouses, which are really a sort of coat and which are either quiet or very gay.

In some instances the smock blouses are trimmed with the stenciled designs in high colors; other ideas are expressed in applique motifs of cretonne. It is not uncommon to have the smock trimming to match that of the sport hat.

Pongee has come into its own once more. One of the most recent models is a coat blouse of pongee made in Norfolk style with large pockets and big collar. Some of the models are laced in color on the hips and part way down the front.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Days may be warm and weather fair, but there come cool afternoons and evenings when a topcoat is necessary. This model answers every demand of style and comfort, being developed in heavy faille. Dark blue, black or tan, trimmed with an inlaid datin collar an deep cuffs, would be stunning. In medium size the coat requires 5 yards 40-inch material.

ONLY THREE MEN HURT IN JELLICOE'S FLEET

London—Lord Selborne, president of the Board of Agriculture, speaking in London last night on the recent battle in the North Sea between the British and Germans, said:

"How precipitate was the flight of the German fleet is shown by the fact that only three men were wounded in the whole of Admiral Jellicoe's fleet. Not one of his ships was able to get in the gunfire more than six minutes. The only one of his ships to suffer was the battle ship Marlborough, which was torpedoed by a submarine, but reached harbor safely.

"No sensible man ever expected anything from the Germans but great efficiency. In the first two phases of the action the German sailors fought well, and their strategy was right in retiring at the beginning of the third phase of the battle when Admiral Jellicoe's fleet arrived, for if they wanted to preserve their fleet it was necessary to avoid deliberately challenging for the mastery of the sea at this time. But after that to proclaim a great victory and a school holiday and to publish a speech like that of the Kaiser's was making the German navy ridiculous."

One of the ships engaged in the North Sea battle was the old Cunard line vessel, the Campania, which acted as a seaplane ship. When the cruiser Warrior was hard pressed by the German ships and unable to move the Campania pushed herself between the German ships to the aid of the Warrior. She threw a hawser aboard and towed the Warrior for ten hours, when the cruiser sank. The Campania was thus the means of saving the crew of the Warrior.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR

with which he "played the races."

When Hughes became governor his first message suggested repeal of the law legalizing betting at race tracks. A committee friendly to the race interests laughed and tabled the bill. But Hughes "got his dander up" He stumped the state for his plan. Killed at a regular session of the legislature, it was later revived at a special session and finally forced through by the vote of a sick senator who was carried into the chamber on a stretcher.

Hughes was first mentioned for the presidency eight years ago. He steadfastly refused to be even a receptive candidate. Four years ago he likewise declined to take any interest in politics. Two years ago his name first began to be mentioned as a Republican nominee against Wilson.

For more than a year Republican leaders have tried to make him "come out in the open" on whether he would accept the Republican nomination. They didn't succeed.

Hughes retired behind his fast-graying and always famous whiskers. Hughes has been consistent in his reforms. He startled New York with the thoroughness with which he probed the life insurance scandals and, when governor, made bitter enemies of the "regular" crowd by doing just as he pleased on appointments; by instituting direct primaries; insurance reform and anti-race track legislation.

Because of his reform record and his progressivism of thought, Hughes has been mentioned as an "amalgamation" candidate, who would unite both the Republicans and Progressives. He isn't popular with the "old guard" because of his habits of almost "insolent independence" as one leader has expressed it, but all Republicans admit his strength with the voters.

ATTORNEY CALLS WIFE UNFAITHFUL

New York—Edward E. Hoenig, attorney, was named in a counter-claim which Alfred Olenick, an insurance broker, filed to Mrs. Beatrice Olenick's separation action. Yesterday at the trial, held before Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum, Mrs. Sarah Hoenig, who is separated from her lawyer-husband was called as the first witness.

As soon as Mrs. Hoenig had told her story Hoenig jumped up to cross examine her. The witness became irritated.

"Your Honor," she said, turning to Justice Greenbaum, "can't my husband's lawyer ask me the questions?" Hoenig insisted upon his right and was allowed to interrogate his wife and Mrs. Bessie Stiller, the next witness.

Olenick charges that his pretty wife received too many visits from Hoenig, who was at one time a friend of the family. She asserts her husband was unduly jealous and brought the divorce charges only after she had sued him for separation. The court recently gave her the custody of their two children, Sylvia and Andrey.

Nolan wandered about the city since last Friday with his mind almost a blank. Hard work and the preparations for the wedding are believed to have affected his memory.

MORGAN'S KIN MARRIED TODAY

(By United Press)

Sterlington, N. Y.—Society was taken completely by surprise by the news that Miss Helen Morgan Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pierson Hamilton, granddaughter of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, great-great granddaughter of Alexander Hamilton, is to become the bride of Police Commissioner Arthur Woods. She was a favorite of the financier and was at his bedside when he died in Rome on March 31, 1913.

Miss Hamilton and Mr. Woods were married here to-day. Bishop Rhinelander of Philadelphia, an uncle of the bride, officiating.

Friends of Mr. Woods, both in public and private life, had come to regard him as a confirmed bachelor. Even those closest to him in the affairs of the great department of which he is the head had no hint that he ever thought of romance as they went about the unsentimental business of the department together.

Miss Hamilton was introduced to society a year an da half ago. She stepped immediately into the front ranks of the young set in society. She became a member of the Colony Club and joined the Junior League.

Through her father and mother she is descended from well known American families that have been identified with public life for many generations. Her mother, who was Miss Juliet P. Morgan, is one of the four children of the late financier and philanthropist, the others being Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee and Miss Anne T. Morgan.

Mr. Woods, after having been Mayor Mitchel's private secretary for three months, was designated Police Commissioner in 1914.

The Commissioner is forty-three years old. In 1892 he was graduated from Harvard.

Before that date he had decided to find a career in public life. His first opportunity came in 1905, when he went to the Philippines in the party with Mr. William Howard Taft, then Secretary of War.

In 1907 he left the Police Department with Commissioner Bingham and passed some time in Mexico, remaining out of public life until 1912.

Russians Wipe Out 2 Austrian Divisions

(By United Press)

London—The Russian Embassy here to-day announces the complete rout of the Austrian armies at Czernowvitz, by Russian troops. Two entire divisions have been exterminated and many men, including several generals, and heavy artillery have been captured. The Cossacks are now harassing the retreating survivors who are in full flight.

The similarity between General Brusiloff's advance in the last week and the Russian drive against the Austrians at the beginning of the war is generally commented upon here. One difference, however, is mentioned—that General Brusiloff's initial blow has been considerably more effective and the retreat of the Austrians before it more precipitate than during the early events of 1914.

The net result of the week's operations has surpassed the expectations of the most ardent believers in the southern leader's ability. With upward of 72,000 prisoners (the latest official statements now place the number of prisoners at about 108,000) and immense booty, and with the communications between the Austrian armies around Czartorysk and Rafalowka and those in the neighborhood of Czernowitz seriously threatened, there is immense rejoicing among the military and civilian population.

It is obvious that an orderly retreat with such gigantic armies is an extremely difficult task. Once they are on the move, and with the Russians pounding at their rear, i is contended the great drive of 1914 through Poland and Galicia is likely to be repeated.

JAPANESE SOLDIERS MARCH INTO CHINA

(By United Press)

Tokyo, Japan—The Japanese government is sending four battalions of troops to Tien Tsin and Pekin, it was learned here to-day.

* * *

Washington—The State Department announced to-day that no report has been received from China indicating good reasons for the presence of more Japanese troops in Pekin and Tien Tsin. It was believed at first that the 2,000 additional Japanese troops which have been stationed in these cities were for the purpose of relieving the regular railroad and legation guards sent in by Japan at the beginning of the present uprising. Before the entry of the new troops, Japan had about 1,500 men stationed in China.

Speed Fiends Given Good Ducking When Auto Turns Turtle

Tearing toward this city at break-neck speed, a Ford touring car owned and driven by an Oswego man who refused to give his name, skidded on the river road near Stop 28 about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, crashed through the white guard rail that borders the road at that point, and turned turtle in three feet of water, throwing out three of the men and burying the driver under the car. A large crowd quickly gathered and the car was raised. Instead of finding a corpse, as they expected, the rescuers were startled to see the driver crawl out and rise to his feet, practically uninjured, save for a few minor bruises. The other members of the party, all of whom landed on the soft ground, were also unscathed, but they presented a sorry plight with their faces and clothing covered with mud.

The owner of the car refused to make any statement regarding the accident, and the license number of the car could not be learned today.

Residents along the road and other motorists report that the car was doing all that could be expected of a Ford car and a little more when the accident occurred, and it is supposed that the driver temporarily lost control of the car when the machine skidded.

To cap the climax, after the car had been righted and pushed back to the road by bystanders, the owner cranked the motor, climbed in, and accompanied by his friends, drove back towards Baldwinsville.

CYCLIST AFOUL OF AUTO ESCAPED BAD INJURIES

An automobile owned by Alfred H. Ames, of Oswego, and driven by B. C. Denton of the same city, ran down a motorcycle owned by Joseph Prosena of 5th and Seneca streets, this city, on the West River road near Oswego yesterday afternoon, about 3:30 o'clock.

Prosena, who has figured in two motorcycle accidents recently, claims the Ames car was on the wrong side of the road and that the driver refused to turn out for the motorcycle. Patrick Fells and Joseph Masole, both of this city were riding in the side car and tandem seat of the motor at the time of the accident, and all three men were thrown to the road and badly shaken up and bruised. The machine was badly damaged, but proceeded to a repair shop in this city under its own power. Prosena would not say to-day whether or not he would bring any action against the driver of the car.

Carranza's Terms to Be Rejected Flatly

(By United Press)

Washington—The answer of President Wilson to the latest Carranza note, which demanded immediate withdrawal of American troops from Mexican soil in view of their inactivity at the present time, will go to the First Chief the latter part of this week, before the President is renominated at St. Louis.

The note will be a politely worded, but flat refusal of the Mexican demands, and woll not only include a refusal to withdraw the American troops, but will also reject the plan to re-arrange them. The note is now practically completed, and is very long.

Among the reasons cited by President Wilson, is the fact that the murderers of Americans at Santo Ysobel have not been punished, nor have they been captured. The note will also recite as reasons against withdrawal the raids on American soil by Mexican bandits.

Honor Post Held by Ex-Governor Glynn

(Special to Evening Times)

St. Louis—The program for the Democratic National Convention is as follows: Wednesday, key note speech by Martin Glynn, former governor of New York. Thursday, more speeches and the platform. Friday, speeches and one nomination. Commencing at midnight Friday night there will be one roll-call on the Presidential nomination. Speeches nominating the vice-presidential candidate and several seconding speeches will follow.

The consensus of opinion here to-day seems to indicate the renomination of Marshall for vice-president, since the Republicans have nominated Fairbanks of Indiana.

Hughes Meets Party Leaders in New York

(By United Press)

New York—Justice Charles E. Hughes opened the campaign with a rush to-day by making a trip to New York for a conference with the Republican party leaders, arriving here at 7 a. m., and going directly to the Hotel Astor. He displayed true campaign form by sending word to the newspapermen to meet him at 1:00 o'clock.

While it is known that Mr. Hughes, famous for his stamina and long distance speechmaking tours, is anxious to start the battle at once, he probably will yield to the leaders and to the advice of the chairman he selects, if they advise delay.

Mr. Hughes promised to-night to march in the preparedness parade to be held here Wednesday, provided business does not take him out of town on that day. President Wilson, in response to an invitation from the Arrangements Committee, already has promised to head the parade, to review it from a stand in front of the White House, and later to deliver an address on "America First." The demonstration, in which many other high officials are expected to take part, will be the principal feature of the capital's celebration of Flag Day.

Senator Sees Disaster in G. O. P. Nomination

St. Louis—Agitation for a plank in the Democratic platform rebuking the Republican party for taking a man from the United States Supreme Court bench became general here this morning.

"The example is in every way a bad one," said Senator Stone who is slated as chairman of the platform committee of the coming convention, "and it will have a far-reaching effect in undermining the public's confidence in the integrity of the Judiciary. It should be sternly rebuked by the people at the polls in November," the Senator continued, "and I have no doubt it will be."

THE COLONEL MAY TOSS HAT IN THE RING TODAY

(By United Press)

Oyster Bay—Sagamore Hill is politically off the map to-day by the announcement of Col. Roosevelt; but before the day is over Sagamore Hill may be back on the map.

Two pilgrimages to Sagamore Hill to-day may result in important political activity by T. R. One party of Progressives may prevail upon the Colonel to accept the nomination, either by cajolery or by a threat that the party will bolt to the Democrats. Another party of G. O. P. pilgrims, headed by George W. Wickersham, followed by George B. Cortelyou and William Loeb will advance on the Hill waving the olive branch and talking peace in an effort to win the Colonel in support of Justice Hughes.

News has reached the Colonel that Frank Munsey, the publisher, called on Hughes to-day and promised the support of his newspapers to the candidate.

Sunday's New York Sun:

The Sun accepts with alacrity the opportunity to support for President of the United States a man like Charles Evans Hughes against the man that Woodrow Wilson has shown himself to be. We believe with Theodore Roosevelt that our present troubles with Mexico are "the direct result of an utter failure to prepare, and of our Governmental policy of almost unbelievable timidity and vacillation."

We hold with Colonel Roosevelt that it would be a crime against this nation to continue in power for four years longer the Administration thus by him impeached. We believe with Theodore Roosevelt that the American people "must make this nation as strong as its convictions." In the striking phrase here borrowed from the Detroit speech we have the broad doctrine of adequate preparation for defense and of undivided allegiance to the flag which The Sun has had the honor to proclaim, not merely for weeks or month past, but for years.

Yesterday afternoon, immediately after writing his resignation as a Justice of the Supreme Court and receiving from the proper quarter the acceptance of the resignation, Mr. Hughes gave to the public the text of his message to Senator Harding accepting the Chicago nomination and indorsing the Chicago platform. In direct force his declaration even transcends the platform. It is a statement of faith and intentions so admirable in every particular, so strong and clear and comprehensive in its terms, and so manifestly sincere and straightforward, that if its substance had been promulgated in advance of the meeting of the two conventions we do not see how any Republican or any Progressive could have doubted that the candidate of reunion desired and described by Colonel Roosevelt had in fact been found.

Sunday's New York World:

In nominating Justice Hughes for President the Republican Party has paid to Woodrow Wilson the highest compliment it was capable of paying to him. It has selected as its own candidate the Republican who in the popular mind most nearly resembles President Wilson in character, in ability, in temperament, and in capacity for idealistic public service. It has taken the Republican Wilson to be its standard bearer, because it did not dare take anybobdy who presented a contrast to the Democratic Wilson. It has brought the Supreme Court of the United States into politics, bcause it was afraid to nominate a candidate with a recent record of opposition to the President. It has named Hughes in the blind belief that history may repeat itself.

Ten years ago the Republican party of New York was torn by factional strife and smirched by the damning exposures of its partnership with insurance corruption and financial corruption. In despair the bosses turned to Charles E. Hughes. * * * The character and public service of Hughes were sufficient to subordinate the Republican record of corruption, and the Republican bosses were doubly fortunate in having as Hughes's opponent William R. Hearst, who had accepted a stolen nomination from Tammany, after Grady had done "the dirty day's work of my life."

Hughes was elected, and from the day of his inauguration the Republican bosses became his bitterest foes. * * * Hughes was unmercifully knifed in the election, and although Taft carried New York by 202,602, Hughes's plurality was only 69,462.

A shattered and discredited Republican machine has again turned to Charles E. Hughes, and invited him to provide a window dressing of character and respectability for the Republican campaign. The Republican bosses hate him now as they hated him when he was Governor of New York. They have taken him up as they took him up in 1906 only in the desperate hope that he will win for them and establish them in power. If he should be elected, they will fight his national administration as bitterly as they fought his New York administration.

The World has the highest respect for Mr. Hughes as a man and a public servant. There is nobody in public life for whom we have a higher personal regard, but we can find no reason why he should be elected President in place of Woodrow Wilson. We can find innumerable reasons why the sinister and crooked and un-American interests that are trying to use him for their own purposes should be overwhelmed at the polls.

Chicago Tribune:

The nomination of Justice Hughes as the Republican candidate for President was a sound one. Justice Hughes's declaration in acceptance makes it a brilliant one. The letter is a splendid call to arms. It will send a thrill through the nation. It rings with passionate sincerity and radiates the power of aroused Americanism. * * *

It seems to us that no candidate for President in fifty years has had such opportunity. No time in fifty years has the nation had such need. If it was feared that Justice Hughes's campaign would begin with less enthusiasm and confidence than one under the leader-ship of Colonel Roosevelt his acceptance will do much to remove that fear. It seems probable now that an inspiring campaign under a formidable leader is before us. He begins, too, with the advantage that if there was less intensity of conviction for him there was less intensity against him.

Boston Herald:

Common sense and common patriotism have triumphed at Chicago, in the nomination of Charles E. Hughes. It is the best that could have been made. It is a selection that does honor to the American electorate and affords new vindication of the sustained power of our great democracy. Charles Evans Hughes is a man of intellectual and moral distinction. The reasons which made the polticians hesitate are calculated to inspire right-thinking people with new confidence in the wisdom of the choice. The argument for availability is complete. New York's Electoral vote of forty-five will be almost decisive in the coming contest. The candidate is a New Yorker, known by its people, and tried in its popular contests. His freedom from any record in connection with the disastrous campaign of 1912 should prove in all respects fortunate. We regret the necessity of invading the Supreme bench, but believe that the greater includes the less, and that in filling the Presidential office the American people have a right to draft any man they want.

Philadelphia Ledger:

The nomination of Justice Hughes, his prompt acceptance and resignation from the Supreme Court, marked an epoch in the history of the country and of the party. And the manner in which this wholly satisfactory result was brought about will re-establish confidence among Republicans in the fundamental soundness of their party organization and in the generalship which overcame difficulties that at one moment seemed insurmountable and which left no scars and no regrets, no obstacles in the path of that reunion without which a triumph of Republican principles in November would have been made difficult, if not impossible. The nomination of Justice Hughes should put new life and hope into the Republican Party.

Los Angeles Times:

Charles Evans Hughes, the leader that the Republican National Convention has given us, illustrates in his character and his public utterances the most exalted ideals of American citizenship, and his election will be of benefit morally as well as materially to the nation. Justices Hughes is not a jingoist, nor yet an evasionist. He has never vaunted his Americanism as being superior to that of other men, but there has never been any doubt as to where he stands on the question of adequate preparedness for national defense, but not for national aggression. The nation is fortunate, indeed, in the selection by the Republican Party of the wise statesman, the great jurist, the patriotic citizen, Charles Evans Hughes, for its Presidential nominee.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Abe, the Mail Carrier | He Finds Cases of True Love

As I was passing Farmer Bennett's with my free delivery mail cart the other morning Mrs. Bennett stopped me to exclaim:

"Abe, I want to talk to you a minute. Something awful has happened here."

"Your husband or your daughter has been killed or anything?" I asked in reply.

"Well, what about Arabella? I hope she has not fallen off a fence and broken her leg."

"It's worse than that, Abe—far worse! I'd rather she'd fell off two fences and broke both legs than to have had this thing happen."

"But state your case, Mrs. Bennett."

"Well, about a month ago a young man came along here and wanted farm work. He was a nice looking young man and said he wanted to learn farm work so that he might buy him a farm and know how to run it. The idea that Arabella might fall in love with him never occurred to us, but she did—she did!"

"And did he fall in love with her?" I asked.

"Head over heels, Abe, but they was both sly about it. They didn't do any courting as we could see. Think of a daughter fooling her mother that way, Abe! I don't know that Arabella had a grain of slyness about her."

Facing a Storm.

"Well, cut it short. Where is that hired man now?" I asked.

"Gone, Abe—gone!"

"And where is the sly Arabella? Is she gone too?"

"Gone, Abe. She's gone too. Last night they said they would step over to Mr. Brown's a minute or two to see their new piano, and after an hour Mr. Bennett went over there. They hadn't been there at all. They were seen going the other way, and the feller was carrying a satchel. Isn't it awful, awful, awful?"

"Where do you think they have gone?" I asked.

"We can't tell, only that they have gone. My husband is so mad about it that he says he won't go a rod after them, and you see I can't go myself. I may never see my Arabella again."

"And just how can I help you, Mrs. Bennett?"

"Abe, you go down this road as far as Black's crossroads. Keep your eyes open. They may have stopped at some farmhouse to be married. If you should get to see them I want you to talk right up to them. Tell the feller that you are a government officer and that the great United States won't stand for any such foolishness. Tell Arabella that unless she comes home within two days I shall be dead of a broken heart."

"But if they come back?" I queried.

"They will be forgiven," she answered. "I may scold a little and Bennett may cuss for a time, but we shan't turn them outdoors."

I promised to keep my eyes open, and about a mile from the crossroads I came across them. They had stopped at a farmer's who was a justice of the peace and been married, and when they saw me Arabella cried out:

"Oh, Abe, did you see mother as you came along?"

"Yep, I did," I replied. "You two have been married, have you?"

"We have," replied the hired man.

"Then take hold of hands and walk right back to the paternal home. Mr. Bennett may give you the boot several times and Arabella's mother may do a lot of sobbing and calling names, but it will end in forgiveness and you will live happy forever more. You could have been married right there and saved all this trouble."

"Yes, but there wouldn't have been any romance about it," replied Arabella.

"Well, there may be romance in a nine mile walk over a rough road and facing a storm, but get along, my children—get along and have it over with, and don't think you have done anything very smart."

They were facing home as I drove on.

ALL ABOUT SUNSETS

Sunsets occur at irregular intervals when there are appropriate clouds in the sky and also people. No sunset is complete without one or more persons. Indeed, it is not too much to say that without this necessary accompaniment there would be no sunset.

Sunsets, like modest young girls, are noted for their heightened color when gazed at. Their dispositions are very changeable and greatly affected by the weather. Neither have they any capacity to linger. Just when you are beginning to enjoy your sunset and wish that it might stay a little longer it has faded.—New York Sun.

CROSS AND IN GOOD ORDER

There had been an application for indemnity filed under the workmen's compensation law by a farm hand. The blank form for the filing of claims contains two questions, evidently intended to apply to injuries sustained in mills or factories.

One of these is, "What was the nature of the machine by which you were injured?" The other question is, "Was the machine in good order at the time of your injury?" To the first of these questions the answer was "Cross" and to the second was an enthusiastic, heavily written and boldly underlined "Yes."

To the question, "How were you hurt?" the answer was, "I was kicked by a mule."—Christian Herald.

He Could Take a Hint

Old Andy Jimson's wife had been dead less than three months when Andy began to "take notice" of the Widow Bagley. Soon after this fact had become apparent some one asked Andy how he was "coming on" with the widow.

"We've quit," said Andy tersely.

"That so? How did that happen?"

"Well, by heck, when a feller up an' asks a woman to marry him an' she comes at him with a dipper o' hot water to throw over him an' sick her dog on him an' calls him nine diff'ent names an' threatens to horsewhip him he'll take a hint if he ain't an idjit, an' I took the hint an' left. Some folks can't take a hint, but I kin, by heck!"

"I took the hint and left!"

ALL IS NOT WORK WITH DELEGATES AT CONVENTION OF THE REPUBLICANS

Interesting Side Lights About Men and Women Who Had Lots of Fun at Chicago.

Only a Third as Many Colored Delegates This Year as There Were Four Years Ago.

Negro delegates have been seen on every hand at former Republican national conventions for years, but this trip they are few and far between. Such negroes as showed up were greeted with a handshake when they dropped in at the headquarters of the various candidates. They have been received with courtesy, told to come again whenever they felt like it and then have been passed along.

Gone are the days when the negro delegates were entertained lavishly, only to be taken in hand by representatives of each presidential candidate on a raise ante.

Four years ago, at this same Chicago, the negro delegates from southern states enjoyed the best the town could afford, and either the Taft or the Roosevelt headquarters — sometimes both—paid the expenses.

Only about twenty-five negro delegates in all have been elected to this convention—one-third the number in 1912.

This largely is because of the new basis of representation agreed upon by the Republican national committee for this convention, which reduced the allotment to the southern states.

In order to modify the feeling of the negroes, a few were squeezed into the delegations from northern states, but these men are decidedly of a different type from the southern beauty delegate. A sample is found in the New York delegation, where Charles W. Anderson of Manhattan, former collector of internal revenue, is an alternate at large.

Few Pickpockets.

Convention delegates or visitors from rural sections going to Chicago with forebodings of pickpockets and warnings against flimflammers have been treated to a surprise this year. Few cases of pocket picking have been found as yet, but there have been many startling discoveries of pocket stuffing. It was amusing to see several ardent Roosevelt men reach down into their pockets for coin and draw out in amazement handfuls of small blue tickets labeled, "Put on your overcoat and hustle for Hughes." The justice of the supreme court having no official boomer, it was impossible to find out who put the cards into the coats.

The Delegates' Wives.

One of the "convention wives" is nursing no delusions about the convention pleasures. "The convention wife," she said when found in one of the least crowded corners of the Congress hotel, "must have unfailing patience and understanding, more of it even than at home. If her husband forgets all about her, including his appointments with her; leaves her waiting for him in a hotel lobby for hours, neglects his meals and hers, stays out all night at a conference or caucus and lets her find or lose her way alone—well, she must simply accept it as all in the game and never let it ruffle her feelings."

Just then her husband appeared, and she acted naturally, but not as advertised. He was still listening to her when she pushed him out of sight and into Michigan avenue.

Owned Indiana's Vote.

W. H. Miller is of, for and from Ohio. As far as he is concerned Indiana is a barren wilderness somewhere off in the Rocky mountains, Lake Erie marks the jumping off place into the Arctic ocean, and Pennsylvania represents a negligible district on the east. He regards Cincinnati as the last thing on the south of anywhere.

He mopped his brow and dubiously trod the tiles in the Congress lobby. A Nebraska farmer was talking with a delegate from Indiana.

"There," said the Indiana person, pointing, "is W. H. Miller. He owns all the votes in Ohio."

"The dickens you say," observed the farmer, taking Miller in with a comprehensive optical survey. "I'd like to meet him."

"Come on," invited the Indianian. "He's like I tell you—owns all the votes in Ohio."

"Votes!" exclaimed the Nebraskan. "Never mind interducin' me. I thought you said 'oats.'"

Pepper Invented "Days Off."

Charles M. Pepper of the Root contingent is a newspaper immortal. Also he is a tradition and a landmark. He wears the laurel wreath of the gods of gossip, and there is a niche waiting for him in the heavenly gallery of journalistic fame.

Charles M. is the man who invented "days off" for morning newspaper men. Shall he be given three rousing ones and a tiger?

When Charles M. was a Chicago Tribune man thirty-three years ago it was the custom for all editorial employees to work seven days a week. But Charles M. had read somewhere, possibly in the Bible, that the world was made in six days. He tried it on the Tribune staff—the six day thing—and that schedule still sticks on every morning newspaper.

Along in the eighties Charles M. was regarded as the most punctilious person engaged in newspapering. Punctuality was not regarded as an enterprise of any note in those days, but Charles M. persisted.

One day he was an hour late. He apologized profusely, blushed very red and stammered a great deal.

"It won't happen again," he assured the managing editor.

"What was the cause?" demanded the managing editor in mock seriousness.

"Well, you see," stammered Pepper, "I stepped out to get married. It won't happen again."

Mr. Pepper has forsaken newspapering long since and has made fame for himself as United States tariff commissioner and in other capacities.

Looks Like a Rubber Plant.

In the lobby of the Congress there are several huge bronze jardinieres. They are some five feet in height and perhaps four feet in diameter at the center and taper to the floor. They each contain a rubber plant.

There was a shriek from the side lines.

"Hey, Tom, look out!"

The houseman looked around, frightened. An Oklahoma delegate in a settee laughed.

"By gum," said he, "I'd a swore you was pourin' water on Tom Smith. Tom's from McAllister, and he's a dead ringer for one o' them vases."

But in defense of Mr. Smith let it be written that he weighs only 300 pounds and doesn't resemble the bronze jardinieres at all.

Women Ask For T. R.

Mrs. C. H. Wharton, an attractive Seattle woman and president of the Womens' Roosevelt club, circulated among the Republican delegates a petition signed by 1,000 women of Seattle begging the convention to nominate Colonel Roosevelt. Mrs. Wharton has a faculty of keeping her eyes on Colonel Roosevelt's nomination and the delegates she is addressing at the same time. They are dark eyes. She negotiated for the privilege of introducing the petition on the floor of the convention.

Gardner's Comment.

Representative A. P. Gardner of Massachusetts, the original preparedness advocate in congress, who ran as a Roosevelt delegate in his state primaries and was defeated after Mr. Roosevelt announced that he did not indorse Mr. Gardner's candidacy, arrived in Chicago in jovial mood to work in behalf of the Roosevelt movement. Rumor says that he came after a conference with Mr. Roosevelt at Oyster Bay and at Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion.

"How is it going?" Mr. Gardner was asked.

"The whole city is for Roosevelt except the hotels in which the delegates are," he laughingly responded.

"Do you mean the hotels or the delegates are the exception?"

"You'll have to figure that out yourself. I am not going to say much just now after my experience in mussing things up in Massachusetts."

Paged Villa.

There was one mystery unsolved. A hotel page, brimful of good faith, swung solemnly through the crowded lobby and corridors of the congress for fifteen minutes, calling in ear splitting yells, "General Pancho Villa!" After wrestling valiantly during that time with the problem that has given so much pause to the United States army, the boy returned amid grinning crowds and reported to the desk that he couldn't find the general.

Weeks on the Job.

One afternoon two men were seated in the Congress hotel restaurant talking politics. In their conversation they referred to the fact they were convention delegates.

Political scouts working for the presidential boom of Senator John W. Weeks of Massachusetts overheard the conversation and butted into the game. On their invitation the delegates went upstairs to the Weeks headquarters and were entertained and fussed over by Senator Weeks and his colleagues.

"I surely would like to have you gentlemen vote for me in the Republican national convention," suggested Senator Weeks after the delegates had been treated to the fat of the land.

"We'd like to, senator," said one of the delegates, "but the fact is we are here to sit in the Progressive national convention instead."

After Weeks recovered he told his scouts to be sure they were snagging Republicans or else to head for home.

TOM MOORE

BEING ONE REASON WHY MOORE IS HIS OWN BARBER NOW

Tom Moore is a slender young Irishman of more than ordinarily acute sensibilities. Also, he is one of the stars of Pathe's "Who's Guilty?" series of photo-novels which the Arrow Film Corporation has produced. And his work on the screen makes him just that much more sensitive to every-day impressions. Which leads up to the reason why Moore now shaves himself.

Recently he had a few minutes between the scenes and so he chased out of the Arrow studios up in Yonkers, thinking to utilize the time to get his hair cut in a neighboring barbershop. Shortly after he had seated himself in the chair he noticed that the barber's dog sat down right next to the chair and began intently to watch the barber work.

"Pretty nice dog, that," said the genial Moore.

"Yes, sir," from the barber.

"Oh, it isn't just that, sir," said the barber. "You see, I sometimes make a mistake and snip off a little bit of a customer's ear."

And that barber still is wondering when he will see Moore again.

TOM MOORE FINDS THE BUSINESS END OF A DOG

Tom Moore, who is co-starred with Anna Nilsson in the new "Who's Guilty?" series of photo-novels, which the Arrow Film Corporation has produced for release through the Pathe Exchanges, once served an enlistment in the New York National Guard. Until recently he had never told why he so summarily left the militia service. Now he lets the cat—or dog—out of the bag.

It seems that Moore was doing sentinel duty one night in the annual camp. A rather flea-bitten dog prowled along Moore's dimly lighted post and bothered the young soldier nearly to death. Moore ended the affair in his own way.

The next morning he was summoned before his company commander. "Moore!" said the officer, "here's a young woman who says you killed her dog last night. What about it?"

"He did it, I know he did it," sobbed Moore's female accuser. "My dog was dead right where that soldier paraded back and forth. I think it's a crime to kill a defenseless dog like that!"

"Nothing defenseless about that dog," cheerily answered Moore. "He took a good bite at my leg—so I jammed my bayonet into him."

"Why stick him with your bayonet? Why," asked the captain, "didn't you defend yourself with the butt of your rifle?"

ELECTRICIAN LOSES LIFE WHERE PEARL WHITE DARED

Positive proof of the real danger which Pearl White, "Pathe's peerless girl," underwent when she painted the wall sign on the top of the Gerard Building, New York, a few days ago, was furnished by the fatal fall of an electrician from the same building on the afternoon of the 9th. The electrician, Martin by name, was making use of the electric sign as a ladder, just as Miss White did, and losing his footing, fell twenty stories to the street.

Pearl White, the "peerless fearless" (take it from the press agent) girl of the Pathe "Iron Claw" serial, laughed so hard in the telling of this one that we don't know whether we have it straight or not. However, last week, Pearl had occasion to hire a woman to come in and do work by the day. She was an English woman, and her references and appearance were all in her favor. Everything was settled but the consideration of wages. "What is your price?" asked Pearl. "If I eats myself, two dollars and a quarter," said the woman; "if you eats me, one seventy-five."

WOMAN U. S. DISTRICT ATTORNEY HAS MADE GOOD

(By United Press)

San Francisco — Mrs. Annette Adams, whose appointment as assistant United States attorney caused excitement in officialdom in Washington and San Francisco, has made good.

While here on a visit, Federal Judge Bledsoe of Los Angeles went out of his way to pay his respects to the federal prosecutor and tell her he was sorry he had opposed her appointment.

"I've got to take off my hat to you," said Judge Bledsoe. "You have made good, and never again will I refuse to endorse a woman in any capacity."

During the bomb plot sensation in San Francisco Mrs. Adams worked all night and prevented an important indictment from being quashed on account of technical errors.

Mrs. Adams is distinctively feminine, not only in her personal mannerisms and attributes, but in her methods of procedure in the courtroom. Her personality gives the austere chambers a "homey" atmosphere. She presents her arguments quietly, but with great fidelity to the essentials.

During the absence of District Attorney Preston, Mrs. Adams directed the affairs of the office without a hitch. Her handling of the U. S. neutrality cases especially won admiration.

GLYCERINE AND BARK PREVENT APPENDICITIS

The simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-i-ka, astonishes Fulton people. Because Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour stomach or gas. It removes such surprising foul matter that a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is astonishing. SURVIVORS DESCRIBE NAVAL BATTLE; GREATEST IN HISTORY OF WORLD

Fight to Death With Both Sides Holding on Like Bulldogs Until the Germans Retired to Their Base.

How the Big British Ships Were Sent to the Bottom. Warrior Abandoned After Fight to save Her.

AMONG the British sailors who on their return told of the North sea naval battle one describes a duel worthy of the Nelson tradition between the Invincible and a big German warship, the identity of which is uncertain.

"The two ships," he said, "fought like bulldogs, all guns firing at once and most of them hitting, with such an enormous weight of metal pouring out that the duel was bound to be short. It lasted less than thirty minutes.

"It was a fight to death, and both ships died. The German vessel burst into flames and sank. Almost immediately afterward the Invincible followed her to the bottom. Both sank with their flags flying. The water was strewn with men dead and alive. But in the midst of the fierce fight it was impossible to arrest the activities for the purpose of saving life.

"The Queen Mary was in the thickest of the fight and did heavy damage. She then became the center of the converging fire of several powerful German ships. She broke in two and went down.

"The lot of the Indefatigable was very similar. She was in a smashing fight at close quarters. Then the life was blown out of her. The Warrior had to be abandoned at high sea after being towed for ten hours.

"The Warspite, which was one of the earliest vessels to return to the base, dashed between the Warrior and her enemies and received a salvo meant for the badly hit Warrior. She did not save the Warrior, but probably saved the Warrior's crew."

Big Shells at Short Range.

"We got to very close quarters, less than 5,000 yards, I should say. It was fair weather, but misty. A westerly gale had subsided. The entire German navy seemed out against us and all ships were firing as fast as they could serve their guns.

"The whole sea looked like one bloody battlefield. At such short range you could scarcely miss. Great 14.2 inch shells were coming at us all the time. Some smashed clean through the ship, killing every man they touched. We engaged ship after ship. We accounted for two light cruisers and a destroyer.

"We saw the Queen Mary blow up as a result of concentrated fire. It looked as if a magazine exploded. She broke in two and went down like a stone. It was all over in a couple of minutes.

"The Indefatigable went down much the same way. She had given the enemy a pounding, and they gave the same to her. Our losses on the Warrior were few. We were badly holed. One of her engines was smashed, and the others stopped.

"One of our ships took us into tow and drew us out of the line—a grand bit of work in the middle of shell fire and torpedo attacks. We should have reached the base, I think, if the sea had not gone up. We shifted ships without any loss of life.

"All we want is another ship and another 'go' at the Germans, for they are jolly worth fighting."

Describes the Battle.

"The battle cruiser squadron was shoving through the water at twenty-five knots, destroyers and light cruisers in their appointed places. The sea was as smooth as a mill pond, the day was warm, and a slight haze hung over the water. For well nigh sixteen hours the squadron steamed steadily on, then the destroyer screen reported the presence of enemy craft—small craft, but significant perhaps of the presence of bigger vessels. A smart little destroyer action was begun. A light cruiser dashed up to assist, and soon the first phase of the battle was in full swing.

"Later the battle cruisers joined, and when the enemy appeared with the full strength of his battle cruiser squadron all the elements of an evenly contested battle were present.

"But the readiness with which the Germans accepted the challenge must have set Admiral Beatty to thinking hard. The Germans—and from their point of view it may be sound enough tactics not to fight unless they are there in superior force—do not fight as the British do, always and at any cost. For the first time since the war began they stood up to Beatty and his ships, and from the impressions gathered from Beatty's men who have come through the fight the Germans suffered heavily during that phase.

"It was a running fight. The Lion, as on the memorable day off Dogger bank, led the line, followed by the Tiger. Both performed marvels of speed, and there should be further honors for the engine room staffs. Opposite them at long range was, among others, an old enemy in the Derrflinger. In the Dogger bank fight the Derrflinger sent a shell into the wardroom of the Tiger.

"It was therefore with peculiar relish that the crew of the Tiger proceeded to demonstrate to their old enemy that they were very much alive. From the Tiger there went a shell which, as those in a position to observe reported, got one of the Derrflinger's turrets and wiped out a gun crew. Others were planted with equally deadly effect on the enemy, and unless the Tiger's men are greatly out in their calculations there is not much more likely to be heard of the Derrflinger.

"The battle raged with tremendous violence. The air was filled with white hot steel, dust and slivers. Ears were deafened by the tremendous crash and clatter. If all the opposing forces remained as they were the result was inevitable.

"The battle cruiser action was fought with the enemy lying close to neutral Danish waters off Jutland. Everything was going well with Admiral Beatty when the four superdreadnoughts came up and rushed in to cut off the enemy from his southern base. Admiral Beatty was then to drive in from the northeast and either force the Germans to shelter in neutral waters or to compel them to accept the challenge of the heavy battleships.

Germans Re-enforced.

"The strategy was excellent, but it was applied too late. From the south came re-enforcements which provided the explanation of the phenomenon of the Germans accepting Admiral Beatty's challenge. From the south came the major portion of the German grand fleet. The Warspite got the brunt of the first attack. It is said that she became isolated from her consorts and got surrounded by half a dozen ships. She made a brilliant fight. She disposed of more than one of them and by clever maneuvering showed a clean pair of heels. The other superdreadnaughts retired to the assistance of the battle cruisers, which were then faced with the dreadful ordeal of tackling unsupported the flower of the German navy. It is this phase of the fight which will go down as one of the most gallant deeds in British naval history.

"In naval construction you choose between speed and protection. Battle cruisers are built primarily for speed and are not intended to face up to a prolonged fight against heavy armored and heavily gunned ships. Admiral Beatty knew the risks he was to run, but he had to hold the enemy at all costs. He knew the grand fleet was not far behind, and he knew what it meant if he could hold on until Vice Admiral Sir John Jellicoe arrived. What Beatty and his men went through during those hours of inferno no one but themselves can ever realize. Strong men, physically strong and strong of nerves, men who had looked death in the face in naval actions before, shuddered as they thought of it.

"'It was like forty thunderstorms rolled into one,' said one of them.

"'It was as if all the ammunition in Great Britain and Germany had been let off in one-half hour,' said another.

"'It was hell,' was the commonest description of it."

Kept Record of Battle.

A correspondent of the Glasgow Herald writes:

"One man of the fleet who was in the thick of it possesses an odd relic of the fight of his own making—a time table of the battle giving the hours of the different occurrences and written on the back of a treasury note.

"It had all the appearance of one of those elaborate time tables that sporting writers give at the end of their description of some important game, when a dashing three-quarter goes through to score a brilliant 'try' which makes the grand stand rise as one man.

"At present and doubtless hereafter that treasury note will not be exchanged. It is not a scrap of paper with certain monetary value, but a historical document.

"It was soon after 3 o'clock that the battle opened at a distance of 7,000 to 9,000 yards. The German boats, hurrying along at full speed, were mere blots on the surface, moving under their canopy of smoke.

"Among the British battleships which were associated with the battle cruiser squadron in the first phase of the fight none took a more prominent part than the recently completed Warspite. She did not have the same disadvantage as the battle cruisers in the face of the enemy's battle fleet, and she took her full share and more in fight. It is said that to her is due the destruction of at least two German vessels. The measure of protection which she and her three consorts endeavored to afford our battle cruisers by tackling as many German battleships as would face them may account in some measure for the extraordinarily slight damage sustained by those of the battle cruisers which came out of the action.

"To another of the battleships, understood to be the Valiant, is ascribed the sinking of an enemy submarine. The U-boat appeared almost across the track of the battleship after having fired without effect at another British vessel. The Valiant, racing at full speed, rammed the submarine, which sank at once."

CITIES TARDY ABOUT TAKING UP NEW LAW

But few New York state cities have taken definite steps toward complying with the amended Workman's Compensation law requiring the insuring of employes engaged in occupations regarded as hazardous. It is reported that the State Industrial Commission is not yet ready for any of the cities to try and comply with the law's requirements.

The state authorities have not arrived at a decision with reference to what positions in the municipal service shall come within the meaning of the amended law. Until such a decision is reached the state authorities want the cities to wait.

Children and Elks to Honor Country's Flag

The complete program for the Flag Day exercises which will be held in this city Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Fulton Lodge of Elks has been announced. The exercises include a parade of the Elks and school children of the city, followed by oratory, a musical program by the Elks' band and a ritualistic service at the Elks' home.

The members of Fulton lodge, dressed in new white uniforms, including white hats and shoes, will meet at the club-house at 6:45 o'clock. Headed by the band, they will march to the Congregational church, corner West Broadway and First street, where the school children of the west side will meet. The marchers will then proceed to the East Side park via Broadway and Third street, where the east side school children will join the line. Each child will carry a small American flag.

Secretary Hollenga of the Chamber of Commerce will meet foreign-born Americans of the city on the Plaza at seven o'clock, and when the parade turns into South First street at Oneida street, the naturalized citizens will join the line.

The school children will be grouped near the porch at the Elks' home, and the opening chorus of the exercises will be the "Star Spangled Banner." Everyone present will be requested to join in singing.

Exalted Ruler Stevenson of the Elks, assisted by other officers of the lodge will then conduct the ritual service for the lodge, which will be followed by prayer, lead by Chaplain Edward P. Cole.

Bernard Jones, of Syracuse University Law School, will deliver an address, entitled, "The History of Our Flag." The school children, accompanied by the band, will sing several patriotic selections. and Claude E. Guile will speak on "The Elks' Tribute to the Flag."

Following a selection by the band, Hon. Charles N. Bulger, of Oswego will make the address of the evening.

Mr. Stevenson will close the oratorical section of the program with a few appropriate remarks and the Camp Fire Girls of this city will distribute souvenir flags to the school children. The exercises will conclude with a band selection.

A. E. Black, of this city, will act as marshal of the parade, and a squad of police officers, headed by Motor-Policeman Brown will precede the marchers.

ABOUT THE TOWN

Miss Mary Webb, of this city, is the historian of the Class of 1916 at Oswego Normal School, and Edward Carroll, also of this city, is the class prophet. Both young people are graduates of Fulton High school and rank high in their classes at the Normal.

* *

We don't vouch for the truth of this, but they say that Hon. Charles N. Bulger, of Oswego, who will speak at the Flag Day exercises at the Elks' Home Wednesday evening has a certain speech which has been delivered at some fifty picnics, clam-bakes, political meetings and banquets throughout the county during his career of political prominence. At the Elks' banquet in this city last winter, Claude E. Guile, toast-master, advised the diners that Mr. Bulger was the sole proprietor of this famous speech, and outlined it in advance. Mr. Bulger's address proved that Mr. Guile had the right advance information. It's a bully speech, and now they're wondering whether Mr. Bulger is brushing it up for service Wednesday evening. Inasmuch as it contains copious allusions to the Stars and Stripes, the rights of man, patriotism, etc., etc., it should be particularly appropriate.

UNCLE SAM MAY BUY DAM SITES

Chamberlain Bill Would Make Possible Wonderful Water Power Development in the Oswego River.

Then thousand horsepower in streams between Oswego and Fulton are being wasted and might be utilized by the government in a nitrate plant, if the proper steps are taken, so dispatches from Washington say. The government it is said has $15,000,000 to spend for horsepower.

According to the capital dispatches the provisions of the army bill signed by the president includes the purchase of some electricity and horsepower to be used in the manufacture of nitrates for ammunition.

The Chamberlain army bill provides for the purchase by the secretary of war dam sites where power plants could be built by the government to extract the nitrogen from the air and use it in ammunition manufacture. There are 33,880 tons of nitrogen over each acre of ground, the statisticans say.

The chief source of nitrogen in the past has been from the high pleateaus of northern Chile and from the atmosphere. Records at the capital show that the imports of sodium nitrate from Chile into the United States from 1867 to 1915 were worth $261,990,054.

Nitrates are also used extensively in making fertilizers so the manufacture of nitrates aids in military, commercial and agricultural preparedness.

Competition for the sale of the horsepower it is said will be keen from all parts of the country where water power is being wasted.

Dr. John A. Matthews, president of the Holcomb Steel Company for the establishment of a big nitrate plant than in Central New York.

SONS OF VETERANS WILL ORGANIZE DRUM CORPS

Gratifying to the membership of Pentlow Camp, S. of V., is the work of commander F. L. Hyde and his staff since their installation into office, is the sentiment conveyed by those who know. On every occasion when the Sons have been called to accompany the veterans they have responded in generous numbers, and it is now announced they will still further assist the G. A. R. by forming a fife and drum corps to assist in all marching events.

Eight guards have been added to the Camp in the last ten days and more are coming forward to become members. The fife and drum corps now comprises eight musicians, with Fred Weiss as major, and drills will be held in the city streets. The gun squad is in charge of A. Wild who will give his men training in the latest military tactics.

Every man whose father or grandfather served in the War of the Rebellion is eligible for membership in the camp, which meets each Monday evening over the Beckwith shoe store.

PEACOCK CLUB LOOKING TO MR. MOTT AND SPEAKER SWEET TO TAKE A STAND

If the Executive committee of the Peacock Men's Club of this city takes action on a suggestion made by Dr. F. E. Fox, former mayor of this city, at the second meeting of the club held yesterday afternoon at the First Presbyterian church, Speaker T. C. Sweet, of Phoenix, and Congressman L. W. Mott, of Oswego, will be asked to make public their stand on the Prohibition questions to the voters of this county before the elections next fall, when both of these men are expected to run for re-election.

Dr. Fox's suggesstion came as a surprise to some of the members of the club, but the majority of those present deemed it a most timely one. In the course of his remarks leading up to the suggestion, while he did not mention Mr. Sweet or Mr. Mott by name, Dr. Fox stated hat the "two men who represent this city in Washington and Albany have not made public their stand on the Prohibition question." He remarked that the Albany representative was in a position to exert great influence in matters of this kind, referring to the control Speaker Sweet exercises over the various appointed committees which consider bills presented to the Legislature, and added that all bills involving prohibitory legislation had been "killed in committee" in the past He stated that both these representatives would desire the votes of he men of this city and county when they came up for election again next fall, and urged that the Fulton club take steps to ascertain their sand on the Prohibition question before that time. Dr. Fox's suggestion was referred to the Executive committee, but whether or not this commitee shall take any action at this time was not decided.

Gets Peace of Mind.

About 200 men of the club attended yesterday's meeting, which was presided over by George L. Pratt, president-elect of the organization. After the meeting had been called to order, President Pratt called upon William White, John Mansfield, Edward Joslin and Harry Candee for prayer. A double quartet, comprising Messrs. Knapp, Howe, Goodjon, Paddock, Scott, Furness, Joslin and Farley rendered "Remember Me."

In his opening remarks, Mr. Pratt stated that six months to a day had elapsed since he had hit the trail at the Billy Sunday revival in Syracuse, and that he had been reviewing events since that time on his way to the meeting yesterday afternoon. He said he had experienced greater peace of mind since his acceptance of Christ than ever before in his life. He said he regarded all the discontent and ill feelings he had experienced before his conversion as due in a great measure to his fear of death. He had believed in the Bible and knew what was right and wrong, but had never been able to bring himself to an acceptance of Christ.

"Now, however, I stand with my house in order," said Mr. Pratt, "and I am willing to go at any time to answer the Master's call. I know in whom I have believed and I know that when I go, I will meet the Master face to face."

Mr. Pratt announced that an invitation to accept Christ will be extended at every meeting of the club in the future. About 50 men gave tesimony at the meeting yesterday.

Action To Retain Ensign

Rev. F. N. Darling, pastor of the First Baptist Church, closed the devotions with prayer. Mr. Darling then read a letter, which he has addressed to Col. W. A. MacIntyre, ranking officer of the Salvation Army in Northern New York, with headquarters in New York city, requesting that the order transferring Ensign Fitzgerald, who has been in charge of the Salvation Army work here for some years, to the Buffalo headquarters be rescinded. Mr. Darling stated that most of the ministers of this city have already signed the leter, and by a vote of the club, the President was authorized to sign for the organization.

It was further resolved that the Finance Committee of the club consider ways and means of making up to Ensign Fitzgerald whatever financial loss he might sustain by the rejection of the Buffalo call.

The club elected five directors at large yesterday as follows. Edward Beckwith, Congregational church; Albert Kinne, First Baptist Church; E. E. Morril, First Methodist Church; Day Rich, State Street Methodist Church, and William Hunter, Presbyterian church. At the call of President Pratt, the new directors will meet at the Citizens' club Wednesday noon at 12:15 o'clock.

Calls for gospel teams were received from three towns in this vicinity. A union meeting of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches of Mexico desires the services of five men next Sunday evening. A meeting of the Evangelical churches of Baldwinsville sent in a call for five men for services at the Presbyterian church in Baldwinsville next Sunday evening.

A call for five men, with singers, for a meeting at the Baptist church in Gilbert's Mills next Sunday at 2:00 o'clock was also received. The teams for these meetings will be appointed to?day.

The club adiourned at 5:00 o'clock to meet next Sunday at the Baptist Church.

BREEDERS DO NOT FAVOR NEW BILL

Owego county breeders of blooded cattle are interested in the bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman McDermott authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to register pure bred live stock. It is not just clear, to many of them, however, what the scope of the plan really is.

One of the officials of the Holstein-Friesan association says that he was not aware that any country, with the possible exception of France, with respect to horses, was following this plan. Pure bred live sock is usually registered by some association. He would not say whether he believed the registration such as provided in the bill would prove desirable.

"That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby empowered to create a board of registration of pure live bred stock, said board to be formed for the purpose of registering pure live bred stock within the United States under such rules and regulations as the secretary of Agriculture may prescribe. Provided that the fee of registration of pure live bred stock bred within the United States and imported foreign pure bred stock shall be fixed by the secretary of agriculture."

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

BEAUTIFYING AND MAKING A LAKE

How a Mill Pond Was Enlarged Into a Fine Body of Water.

About eighty years ago, when Stratford, Ont., was first settled, a millpond was constructed on a small stream called the Avon for the purpose of running a grist mill and a sawmill, says the American City. In the course of time these primitive industries ceased to be operated, and the millpond was purchased by the municipality and placed under the control of a board of public park management. This board has done much to improve and beautify the city, among other things dredg-

This is a great resort during the warm weather, boating is very popular and the lake is a suitable boating place for about one and a half miles. The board has also acquired drives on either side, that on the south connecting with Victoria park, in the eastern part of the city. Arrangements are being made to complete a drive down the stream to Avondale park, on the southwestern limits of the city, thus forming a complete chain across the city from east to west. The city council has furnished funds for carrying out these improvements by the levy of a rate of one-half mill on the dollar.

Stratford has a very progressive horticultural society, which, in conjunction with the park board, does much to beautify the city parks and streets by planting flower beds, making Stratford one of the most pleasing places in Ontario.

CITY PUBLICITY BOARD.

The permanent committee on comprehensive plans of Philadelphia in a report recently issued advocates the appointment of a municipal publicity commission that shall handle all matters connected with throwing the Quaker City into the national spot light.

In speaking of educating the citizens to a proper appreciation of their city the report charges that most citizens know little regarding Philadelphia and that little attention usually is given toward instructing them. In this respect the committee recommends that the following educational methods be applied, and the suggestions are good for other municipalities, large or small:

Institute a course of free lectures in city planning and municipal development. These should be given in series and be historical in nature, showing primitive planning and present day methods. Establish a lecture bureau for the citizens in order that various officials may be made easily available to address public meetings, thus giving first hand authoritative information, as well as unbiased reports of the projects in hand and contemplated.

To educate the children in city planning by means of textbooks, moving pictures and a graded course of study in the schools, the moving pictures could be shown at motion picture houses, with enough reading to supplement and carry the lesson to the spectators.

In regard to the committee, the report advocates that it be given permanent headquarters, where the public could come and see, by means of maps, pictures and books, the plans of the committee put forth pictorially and by means of circulars.

The report declares that the purpose of the committee and its advice to all citizens is to aid in making Philadelphia "more healthy, convenient, prosperous and beautiful." It is necessary, too, to prepare a program of progress, not alone for the present, but for twenty-five years ahead. It is suggested that the work be divided into three parts—development, exploitation and education.

To Improve Elgin.

Elgin, Ill., is to have a city plan, and one of the foremost municipal engineers in the country has been secured by the Commercial club to draw plans which will provide for the future growth and improvement of Elgin.

WASHINGTON WILL HAVE MODEL HOMES

Demonstrates Relationship Between Good Housing and Good Health.

Plans have just been completed for the erection of a series of model homes in the city of Washington for the purpose of demonstrating to the nation the relationship between good housing and good health. These are to be known as the Ellen Wilson homes and are not an experiment, but intended as a demonstration to the entire United States.

The intimate connection between bad housing and bad health and good housing and good health is clearly recognized in Washington, where the alley dwellings have long been a matter of concern both to the health authorities and to public spirited citizens who wish the Capital City to be an example to the nation. The alleys have been paved, sewers and water mains have been laid in them, they are lighted and cleaned as are the streets. Yet they keep their old lead over the streets when it comes to totaling the figures for disease and death.

In this Washington's experience has been like that of Liverpool and other European cities which tried unsuccessfully to make badly situated dwellings wholesome by cleaning and fumigating. After thirty-three years of unavailable effort to improve that which was fundamentally bad, Liverpool finally decided the only hope lay in wiping out its insanitary areas. It demolished the old houses by the acre and in place of them built new houses. Where dwellings have been crowded so close together that there was scarcely passage room for a stout man to squeeze his way to one of the old rear houses, it built new dwellings opening upon wide spaces which provided light and air. Immediately sickness and death decreased, and with them vice and crime. What had seemed a hopeless struggle for more than a generation was won.

Other cities in Europe have done the same and with the same results, but what makes Liverpool's figures of unusual value is that the new houses are occupied by the same people who occupied the old ones.

Congress has enacted a law which goes into effect on July 1, 1918, according to which all the alley dwellings in the District of Columbia must cease to be used for dwelling purposes. Meanwhile, in order that there may be accommodation for those who will be forced to seek new homes in street houses, there has been organized a limited dividend company which is to build houses that will be not only sanitary; that will provide not only abundance of light and air, but houses attractive architecturally, homelike in their arrangements and containing bathrooms and provisions for hot water in place of the old outdoor closets and hydrants.

Such houses as these cannot, of course, yield the return upon the investment that the old houses did. In fact congress in its act incorporating the Ellen Wilson Homes, limited its dividends to 5 per cent net.

SEEKS MODEL DWELLINGS.

New York City Immigrant Housing Committee to Offer Prizes For Plans.

The immigrant housing competition committee, meeting recently at the home of Mrs. William Bayard Cutting at 24 East Seventy-second street, New York, decided to offer prizes for plans of dwellings suitable for the use of toilers.

This committee is part of the national Americanization committee which was organized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor. The president, J. G. Schmidlapp of Cincinnati, said that the improvement of dwellings was especially needed at this time, when so many persons were living in more or less temporary houses which had sprung up about the great munition making centers. He declared that many of the manufacturers of war supplies permitted these buildings to be erected in the most haphazard way.

Competitors in the first groups are asked to supply plans for a house for a single family to include two bedrooms; second, a house for a family with four lodgers; third, a boarding house for thirty unmarried lodgers, two lodgers to each room, and providing for the separation of family and lodgers.

The object of the car competition is to provide a satisfactory substitute for the freight cars used to house construction gangs along the railroads. All railroad engineers know the great difficulty there is of providing decent community surroundings in a region where no community exists.

The prizes in the car competition include $300 for the first prize, $200 for the second and $100 for the third.

School Gardens In Cincinnati.

A census of all the vacant spots in Cincinnati suitable for school gardens was taken by the Civic and Vocational league of the chamber of commerce, and seeds and plants are being provided for the school children to beautify all the available spots.

To Preserve Bird Life.

Among the new activities which the Battle Creek (Mich.) chamber of commerce will take up during the present year will be a department especially devoted to the preservation and encouragement of bird life in Battle Creek and vicinity.

SOCIAL CENTERS.

Men and women interested in the social and industrial problems of to-day have long insisted that the people of the neighborhood should have a meeting place around which their leisure life and interests should center. What building, they ask, could be better suited to such a purpose than the schoolhouse? To that question they add a protest. Why should the schoolhouse which the taxes of the people build, equip and operate be used but some six hours on five days of the week and be a mere idle encumberer of the earth the remainder of the twenty-four, to say nothing of Saturday and Sunday? Would not a brightly lighted building, its wide open doors welcoming all to come to satisfy therein their human, civic and spiritual needs, have a better psychological effect upon the neighborhood than a dark, forbidding, tightly closed barracks?

Throughout this nation during the past few years the slogan has gone, "Use your school building as a neighborhood clubhouse and social center." And all over the country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in rural districts, in towns, in cities, it is heeded.

MODERN FIRE PROTECTION.

The separate high pressure fire main system of Jacksonville, writes Fire Chief T. W. Haney in the American City, is under the control and operation of the fire department. It consists of an electrically operated pumping station, located on the St. John river, supplied with power from the municipal electric light and power plant through a substation. Pumps take suction direct through independent lines and discharge into a gridiron of mains which covers practically all of the area included in the fire limits.

The pumping station is a small, one room building with re-enforced concrete walls, floor and roof, the latter covered with tile. All windows are of wired glass in metal frames. There is a standpipe with fifty feet of hose and nozzle in the station, and on the street, within 150 feet, are one high pressure and one domestic pressure hydrant. There are two ten-inch, four-stage centrifugal pumps, each direct connected to a 375 horsepower three phase, 2,200 volt motor. The rated capacity of each pump is 2,500 gallons per minute against 175 pounds discharge pressure at the pump. The suction head varies between six and nine feet. Each pump has a separate fourteen inch suction pipe and a ten inch discharge pipe with automatic relief valve. The latter pipe increases to twelve inch under the floor of the station, and the two join through a Y in front of the station into one twenty inch main. The pumps are primed through a four inch pipe from the domestic system or from a small centrifugal pump which is used to maintain about fifteen pounds pressure in the mains.

Good protection is provided in the congested value and mercantile sections and most of the warehouse districts included within the fire limits. As shown by tests, the full capacity of the pumps, 5,000 gallons per minute, can be delivered about any block at pressures sufficient for powerful streams. Each pump will furnish protection to the section covered about equal to that provided by four second size engines, and the total from both pumps is sufficient for any but the most serious fires. For such fires ample supplementary protection is provided by the domestic water supply and the fire engine service.

Favors Vacant Lot Gardens.

"The proper development of our citizenship is not possible until men are not afraid to lose their jobs or lose their business for fear of not making a living," said Louis F. Post, assistant secretary of the United States department of labor, in an address at the vacant lot garden exhibit in the Widener building in Philadelphia.

"We talk about being crowded," continued Mr. Post, "and we pass immigration laws to keep out the foreigners with the idea of giving our own people needed room to work and make a living, when the greater portion of our land is lying idle, a wasting opportunity for vast hordes of people to work upon it and win a successful living."

WOMEN'S CLUBS AID CIVIC WORK

What Has Been Done Throughout the Country.

MANY GREAT ACHIEVEMENTS

Since Women Have Organized They Have Accomplished Things Which Individual Women Never Would Have Attempted—Pure Food Bills' Passage Largely Due to Their Efforts.

"It is a well known fact that any body of persons can do more than one person can," said Miss Mary Garrett Hay, talking on the achievements and accomplishments of women's clubs in this country. "And since women have been federated together as they are they have accomplished things which individual women would never have dared to attempt.

"Probably the largest and most spectacular thing we ever did was to get the pure food bill passed a few years ago," she said. "There is no doubt that it would not have been passed at that time without the backing of the women. The general federation was in session when the bill was up before congress, and telegrams and letters were sent from state delegations to their senators and congressmen. This concerted action had great influence in passing the bill. Besides this one big, country wide achievement, some good laws have been put on the statute book of every state because of the united action of women, for the health and welfare of citizens and for beautifying and betterment of towns and cities."

One of the most recent things which the federation has done has been in connection with the celebration of baby week. Three of the federation departments co-operated with the children's bureau, and through their activity more than 10,000 communities observed the week.

"As to actual concrete monuments to the activity of clubwomen," Miss Hay said, "there is the establishment and maintenance of a rest home for women of southern California who are mentally ill maintained by southern California members of the federation. A free bathhouse has been maintained in Salem, Mass., for the past six or eight years and an evening school for foreigners in Portsmouth, N. H. The women of Kirksville, Miss., have had cleanup campaigns, and all over the country it has been the same way. These examples could be multiplied more than a thousand times. Each club differs from its fellows, but all work for civic betterment."

In Bloomington, Ill., clubwomen have made the summer playground a permanent feature of the community life. In Seattle, Wash., the women of the city federation raised $15,000 for their start, and the Home and Training school is giving unfortunate girls a chance in life and is training them to be of service. The club of Galesburg, Ill., maintains a girls' home. The Civic Improvement club of San Benito, Tex., installed sanitary drinking fountains in their schools, and the women of Benton, in the same state, went one better and put them in their public square as well. The women of the Cincinnati Improvement league of Langdon, N. D., have established a garbage collection system. The Anti-tuberculosis association of Norwalk, Conn., maintains not only a visiting nurse, but a free dispensary as well. The Civic league of New Canaan, Conn., supports a visiting nurse, who makes 2,000 calls a year. The Civic league of Lexington, Ky., has transformed one of the worst sections of the town and holds there all sorts of civic classes, including a mothers' club and campfire girls. The City Improvement association of Charles City, Ia., completely revolutionized the appearance of the city park. In San Jose, Cal., the Outdoor Art league beautified the roads leading to the foothills, and the first year a hundred trees were planted and cared for, the next eighty more, and the same plan was carried out along other shores, and hundreds of little sycamores, oaks, willows and alders now bear witness to the love of a band of women for the beauty of their town.

The Civic league of Plainview, Tex., has inaugurated a rest room, as have hundreds of other clubs, for the benefit of the women from rural communities.

Back Yards Made Into Gardens.

To encourage the use of back yards for vegetable and flower gardens the Brooklyn park department is preparing for exhibition four model back yard gardens.

These plots will be cared for by the gardeners of the park department, who will be on hand at certain hours of the day to explain the work and give information. Circulars have been prepared explaining just how a person should go to work to prepare such a garden, what to plant, when to plant it and how to care for it. The circular contains also a graphic chart showing a suitable arrangement of the plants.

Salvador's New Chamber of Commerce.

Salvador, Central America, has organized a national chamber of commerce. The work of this organization will be directed toward the development of the commercial, financial, industrial and agricultural life of Salvador, and it will include the promotion of international commercial relations.

RESTRICTING HOME STREETS

Home streets should be sacred to homes, and they should be protected from the invasion of all kinds of business. The home is the climax of urban activity, and it should never be sacrificed to commerce or industry of any character. A city wounds itself when it harms a home. And so there should be regulations and ordinances to protect the homes against business. Business can take care of itself; the home can't. A happy home, the most useful and honorable thing in a community, loses its high character if a shop of some kind is stuck up alongside of it. Yes; it is necessary for a man to make a living, but it is not right to make other people unhappy in doing it. We simply suggest that there is ample room here for a salutary regulation.—Ohio State Journal.

TEACHERS' COTTAGES.

Lack of Suitable Boarding Accommodations In Country Districts.

Teachers' cottages erected by the community in or near the schoolhouse and used not only as the teachers' residences, but also as the community centers, are advocated in a bulletin prepared by R. S. Kellogg and distributed by the department of the interior through its bureau of education to county superintendents and other officers in charge of rural schools. The bulletin describes the movement for teachers' residences in rural districts and gives plans for cottages of various sizes and types.

Lack of suitable boarding accommodations is one of the most serious difficulties in the way of securing suitable teachers for country schools, the bulletin declares. There are more than 200,000 rural school districts in the United States and over 16,000,000 children of school age who live in the country or in towns of less than 2,500 population, yet it is impossible because of the living conditions to get teachers of the highest type to remain in the country.

Mr. Kellogg says: "Many farmhouses have no accommodations whatever for a teacher, and often kitchen, living room and dining room are combined in one, with no heat in any other room in the house. The farmer and his family have to spend most of their time working indoors or out, eating and sleeping. Their occupations and hours of labor in no way correspond to those of the teacher, which increases the difficulty of fitting the teacher's necessary habits to those of the farmer with any satisfaction to either. A good teacher must spend a considerable amount of time almost every evening upon school work, for which a quiet, comfortable room is essential. If she insists upon such a room when she goes to board in the country she is likely to be considered 'stuck up' and exclusive. If she gets a room by herself it is often unheated and too uncomfortable for study in cold weather.

"On the other hand, if the teacher is forced to spend her entire time in the living room with the rest of the family she has no opportunity to prepare properly for her school duties and is also very likely to be drawn unavoidably into neighborhood gossip and factional disputes to the detriment of her teaching influence. Many of the better situated families in the country districts who have the facilities do not care to take a steady boarder, so that if a teacher gets a place to board at all she may be forced to go to farmhouses with only the barest accommodations."

Cleanest Town In the United States.

After the fever abated the residents of the town got together and determined that Lyndon should be made "the cleanest town in the United States." A special election was called and a bond issue of $65,000 voted—quite a bite for a town of less than 900 people. There were some who protested against the tax, but the determined cleaners finally prevailed.

With the $65,000 a complete sewer system has been installed and a new water system. Today every house, with one exception—a little unoccupied place at the very edge of the town—is connected with the sewer system.

So far as is known, there is no other town, large or small, in the country of which this can be said. The clubwomen of the town are especially vigilant, and the first words a child is taught in Lyndon are, "Swat the fly and bat the rat!"

City That Jack Built.

In the zinc mining districts the zinc ore as it comes from the mines is known as "jack." There are several varieties of jack, each with its own special name, and miners can identify each of them at sight. Joplin, the business and financial center of the southwest Missouri lead and zinc district, is now going to give jack due credit for the prosperity of the town and the district. A contract has been let for an electric sign, forty feet long and twenty feet high, to be erected at the union station of the city. On the side of the sign facing the station there will appear in gigantic letters the legend, "The City of Joplin That Jack Built." On the other side will be the names of several railroads entering the city. The sign will cost $5,000 and will be in red, green and white lights, the colors of railroad signals.

TREES AS CIVIC EMBELLISHMENTS

Climate, Nature and Conditions of Soil Must Be Considered.

THE SPACING OF TREES.

They and Other Vegetation Are Highly Desirable Features For the City Beautiful and Should Be Planted Wherever It Is Possible and Be Under the Control of the Municipality.

[By FRANK KOESTER, city planner and consulting engineer, New York. Author of "Modern City Planning and Maintenance," etc.]

Trees and other vegetation are highly desirable features of civic embellishment and should be employed wherever it is possible to utilize them. They temper the heat and the glare, afford agreeable shade, relieve the eye, improve the air, reduce the violence of the wind and limit the force of the rain, conceal defects and necessary structures, lessen the dust, improve the vistas and offer unending sources of variety and interest.

It is always advisable to have the trees under the control of the municipality and to have them planned to reenforce the character of the street.

In the denser business districts or where a rather complete view, as of some distant mountain or object, is desired the trees should be of a kind that will not grow too large. In other avenues the trees may be larger, leaving, however, an open space to the sky, as though through a wall of vegetation.

ARBOREAL STREET EMBELLISHMENT IN MUNICH.

In other streets it will be desirable to have the branches of the trees meet in the middle of the street, thus forming an arch, which may be very high for some purposes, giving an effect of spaciousness to the streets, as with great elms or cottonwoods, or such arches may be low, as with maples.

Most large trees span from twenty to fifty feet on either side of the trunk when their development is unobstructed, so that the future appearance of the avenue must be kept in view when such trees are planted. The trees being under the control of the municipality, unsuitable kinds will not be used, as would be the case had private owners the option of planting whatever suited them best.

In streets in quiet residential sections, in which architectural features are subordinate, trees may be allowed to grow in their own way, as an effect of individuality is thus obtained, which is lost when the trees are pruned too continuously.

In cities in which it is feasible to plant trees between car tracks it should always be done, as they prove in such location of exceptional value. With grass and shrubbery that side of the track is made more interesting to the passengers and the tracks are made less unsightly to the general public. The undergrowth absorbs a great deal of the noise as well. When trolley wires are used the trees conceal the poles, while shrubbery of large size serves to conceal structures of a purely utilitarian purpose.

Trees in cities must receive the best of care, as they are growing under anomalous conditions and are likely to succumb unless constantly looked after.

In selecting trees for city use, in addition to selecting those which are suited to the aesthetic purposes to be attained, the nature and condition of the soil must also be considered and suitable arrangements made for an adequate water supply. This may often be effected by blind drains laid at the time the tree is planted and regularly filled with water. The system of gutter seepage that is often employed is also useful.

Among the trees which are useful for city purposes are the following: Norway maple, sugar maple, English, Scotch and American elms, cottonwood, horse chestnut, red, white and pin oaks, ash, catalpa, linden, Kentucky coffee tree, thornless honey locust, Lombardy poplar, evergreen pines and cedar.

Natchez's Two Hundredth Anniversary.

Natchez, Miss., will celebrate her two hundredth anniversary late next fall by a gorgeous and spectacular pageant. The pageant will be the main feature of a week's celebration and will give in pantomime form the history of Natchez in seven episodes depicting the rule of the Indians, French, Spanish, English, the days of slavery, the war between the states and the days of modern progress.

FOR CLUBWOMEN.

An Army of Them Gathers In New York City.

"SERVICE" IS THE KEYNOTE.

The National Convention, Under the Presidency of Mrs. Pennybacker and Twenty Thousand Strong, Assembled From Forty-eight State Conventions.

The greatest organization of women in any nation of the world, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was born in New York twenty-six years ago.

For the first time it returned to its birthplace, to hold its thirteenth convention. So complete, well manned and vital is the organization that the entire body responds to the pressing of the button or by a wireless that extends to every remote section of every state in the Union. It has working departments in every line of activity—art, civics, civil service reform, conservation, education, home economics, industrial and social conditions, legislation, literature, library extension, music, drama, public health, and subdivisions of these committees to include child labor, woman suffrage, mothers' pensions, peace, preparedness, food sanitation, housing, prison reform, minimum wage, political science, tuberculosis, child welfare and hygiene, Americanization and current events and progress in every department of activity in national life. State federations, city federations and the clubs themselves are completely officered along this same organized line, all tributary to the General Federation.

The president of this huge activity, Mrs. Pennybacker, in a recent interview said of the first biennial she attended in Los Angeles fourteen years ago:

"The very immensity of the convention was an inspiration. There were women from every state in the Union, representing every phase, every group of our national life. While some feel that the General Federation must be reorganized so as to bring about a smaller attendance, let us never forget that a part of the inspiration comes from the bigness. History has never yet fully written the chapter as to the part the General Federation has played in wiping out sectional feeling. One reason why there is in this dear land of ours today so little north, south, east or west is because the women of all sections meet, counsel and labor together. When we learn to know each other appreciation comes and misunderstanding disappears. When we work together for some great cause petty differences drop from us like wornout garments.

"It was also a delight to see that beauty had its place in this great gathering of women. No one has forgotten the 40,000 calla lilies which were used as decorations the first two days, followed by carnations, they in turn giving way to numberless roses of every hue.

"Everywhere one felt that the women took their work seriously and with the conviction that it is truly worth while. On the last night this earnestness developed into a spiritual climax. We closed in a moment of ecstasy as we sang 'God Be With You Till We Meet Again,' while from the galleries the fair hands of the California women let flutter down millions of rose petals, covering us with fragrance.

"Is it not significant that these impressions make of themselves the one word 'service,' which is the keynote of our entire federation life?"

Cream Salad Dressing.

Mix one-half tablespoonful salt, two and one-half tablespoonfuls melted butter, one level teaspoonful flour, a shake of pepper and two egg yolks together until smooth. Add three-fourths cupful of thin cream. (You may take the top of the milk in the bottle and have the rest of the milk to use for something else.) Then add slowly one-fourth cupful vinegar or lemon juice, stirring as you add it. Cook over hot water until thickened. If too thick after standing to cool, thin with cream or milk.

A Fashion Tip.

The neck line of the modish summer frock is much wider and therefore much more becoming than was last year's—that is, the frock is cut away at the sides of the throat as well as in front, showing something of the shoulder line.

YOUNG FOLKS' CORNER

What Boys Know.

All boys know that it is dangerous to go swimming during dog days, but the period of dog days may be narrowed to suit the natatorial convenience of the individual. In other words, the dog days rule may be suspended by a vote of a good sized crowd of youngsters unable to resist the purling lure of the stream.

The danger from snakes and turtles while swimming does not deter youngsters, for it is a well known fact that a snake cannot bite under water, for the simple reason that the minute it opens its mouth to nab the unsuspecting swimmer it chokes. The same rule applies to turtles.

Another bit of swimming lore is the remedy of boyhood for water in the ears. A flat, sun warmed stone will draw all water right out of the ear of the boy who seeks relief.

The universal knowledge of boys extends well into the field of materia medica. A bee sting or an insect's bite may be instantaneously cured by placing the mingled juices of three weeds—any three—upon the discomfited portion of the anatomy. Ordinary cobweb is said to be a means of stopping the flow of blood when the jackknife goes wrong, but it is dangerous and should not be used.

Cured of Stoning Birds.

"Chief Grizzly Bear," who is Charles L. Smith, old time hunter, scout, trailer and guide of the Rocky mountains, is chief scout of Allegheny county, Pa., and assistant scout executive of the Pittsburgh Boy Scouts of America.

Grizzly Smith, as the boys call him, says that the new federal law against killing migratory birds is already showing good results.

"But a bigger cause for the increase of wild birds is the systematic teaching of bird life conservation in the schools," he says. "How do the boy scouts help? Well, this spring we heard of an instance.

"A boy had been caught throwing a stone at a mother robin. The scouts surrounded him, took him down over a bank to a brush pile, and when he came up he expressed the desire never to throw another stone at a bird.

"Our investigators asked the boys what they did to him. 'Nothin',' they said. 'But how did you convert him?' 'Oh, we just threw him on the brush heap and lambasted him till he promised never to throw a stone again.'"

Riddles.

What relation is that child to its own father who is not its own father's own son? His daughter.

What does a young lady do when she gets into church? Looks out the hims (hymns).

Why is life the greatest of riddles? Because we must all give it up.

Why is a lady's dishabille like a postman? Because it's a morning wrapper.

Hide In Sight.

Among games of search this is popular. The greater part of the company being sent out of the room, a thimble or other small object previously decided upon must be placed where it will not be noticed and yet be in plain sight when once the attention is directed to it.

As each of the party discovers the thimble he does not give any clew to its whereabouts by looks or actions, but indicates that he has found it by saying, "Rorum, torum, corum," and quietly sitting down, leaving the rest of the party to continue the search. The last one to find it must pay a forfeit for slowness.

A Jingling Match.

The jingling match used to be very popular at the English country fairs. A large circle inclosed by a rope was occupied by nine or ten people, and all except one were blindfolded. This one was called the "jingler," because he held in his hand a small bell, which he rang incessantly. His companions, following the sound of the bell, tried to catch him. If at the end of an allotted time he was not caught he received a prize; otherwise the prize went to the catcher.

How It Happened.

Now up to that time, so 'tis said,
All the squirrels of the woodland were red.
And that is the way
The first became gray—
It happened, dear, just as you've read.

A red squirrel, while lunching one day,
Saw a boy with a gun pass his way.
Alas for his plight!
The shock and the fright
Turned his red hair entirely gray.

Peacock of an Evening Frock

TULLE, volumes of it in a shade of pink best described as pale coral, is the material used for this engaging gown. Over a foundation wreathed with roses the pointed peplum is finished with two rows of rather wide pink satin ribbon. A negligible corsage is girded with tulle, the shoulder straps ending in angel wings. The effect is altogether dashing.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

Enchanting Warm Weather Frock.

Crossbarred muslin combined with organdy makes a lovely frock for warm summer days. Blue and pink are used in the daintiest checks of the season. This frock is typical of the new models.

This is called an ingenue frock because it is essentially youthful in character. Cross-barred muslin is used to develop the design, the underblouse being of sheer organdy. In medium size the dress requires 5⅞ yards 40-inch checked and 2¼ yards 36-inch plain material.

First, take up a dart in the sleeve at the shoulder as creased, and stitch, graduating the stitching into nothing at lower perforation. Close seam of elbow cuff as notched; plait, bringing "T" to corresponding small "o" perforations. Sew cuff to sleeve. Adjust sleeve, stitching edge having double "oo" perforation along indicating line of small "o" perforations in lining front and back bringing double "oo" perforations together; bring dart to shoulder seam. Stitch lower edges together, seams even easing the fulness. The frill may be omitted, if desired. Now, taking the skirt, close the center-back seams of upper and lower sections, leaving seam of upper section free above large "O" perforation for a placket. Gather upper edges between double "TT" perforations. Turn under lower edge of upper section on slot perforations and baste. Form tuck in lower section, creasing on slot perforations; stitch 4 inches from fold. Turn hem at lower edge of lower section on small "o" perforations. Adjust lower section to position, slipping underneath folded edge of upper section, centre-fronts, back seams, notches and edges underneath even; stitch 4 inches from folded edge in tuck effect. Adjust skirt.

Join the two sections of collar next as notched; sew to neck edge, center-backs even; and along small "o" perforations in front, bringing single large "O" perforations together. A narrow edging of braid gives a fashionable finish to the collar.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

A REAL DELICACY.

FRIED SWEETBREADS A LA BILTMORE.—Split six sweetbreads and saute in butter on both sides. When cooked dress on a round piece of toast on a platter and keep hot. In the saucepan and without removing the butter place six fresh mushrooms cut fine, two slices of Virginia ham shredded and stir on the fire for a few minutes. Moisten with two ponies of port wine and a cupful of sweet cream. Season to taste, being careful not to add too much salt, since the ham is salty; add a pinch of paprika and reduce on the fire until it becomes a little thick. Add a good sized piece of sweet butter and pour the hot sauce over the sweetbreads.

Sweetbread and Lobster.—Take four blanched sweetbreads and the meat of a boiled lobster, both cut in chunks; also eight fresh mushrooms cut in quarters, a large green pepper and a pimento cut in squares. Heat two ounces of butter in a saute pan, add the sweetbreads, mushrooms and green peppers and slowly cook, with frequent stirring, until golden brown. Add the lobster and pimentos, fry a little longer and put in two tablespoonfuls of sherry, two cupfuls of cream; season with a teaspoonful of salt and one of paprika; mix well and let simmer for ten minutes. Beat together in a cup three egg yolks and a gill of cream, a tablespoonful of sherry and add to the sweetbreads, stirring gently with a wooden spoon until it thickens. Remove from the fire and stir constantly while adding an ounce of butter. Serve with toast. This can be prepared in a chafing dish.

Sweetbreads With Mushroom Sauce.—This recipe will be more acceptable than the first one for the cook who disapproves of using wine in cooking. A larding needle is needed in the preparation.

The sweetbreads should be quite fresh and be steeped in cold water for three hours, the water being frequently changed. They should then be scalded in boiling water for about three minutes and then immersed in cold water for half an hour. They may then be drained and the sinews and fat trimmed off. Place between two dishes so that they will become somewhat flattened. Now lard them closely with strips of bacon. Place in a deep saute pan on a bed of sliced carrots, celery and onion. Add a bunch of parsley and thyme leaves, cover with a layer of fat bacon and lay a buttered paper over all. Fill the saute pan up to the paper with good stock and put on the fire to boil. Then remove to the oven basting the sweetbreads frequently with the gravy. Remove the paper covering the larding and glaze nicely. Dress the sweetbreads in a circle when serving, filling the center with fresh mushroom or bearnaise sauce.

Japan's Jinrikisha.

Curiously enough, the inventor of Japan's famed jinrikisha was an American and a minister, the Rev. Jonathan Gable of Philadelphia. It is on record that he accompanied Commodore Perry on his epoch making trip to Japan in 1853, where he seems to have remained. At any rate, in 1859 he was requested by Prince Ito to draw the plan of a vehicle that could be used in the imperial park at Yokohama. He took his idea from a London bath chair, substituting a man for the small front wheel.

BRUSSELS OVERRUN WITH SPIES WHO PREY ON TOURISTS

(By United Press)

Maastricht—Russia at its worst or Constantinople under Abdul Hamid never have been so overrun with spies as Brussels is at the present time.

Everlasting espionage has made life a burden for the Belgians and nowhere in the country are conditions so terrible as in the capital, according to reliable information smuggled across the frontier, despite all the vigilance of the kaiser's secret agents.

The spies are declared to be well paid—but only according to results. They do not draw regular salaries, but get their rewards on the strength of their reports' volume and supposed value.

Consequently, if they have no genuine information to turn in to their superiors, it is charged that they manufacture it. To be accused by them means arrest and much difficulty at the best. It is more likely to mean prolonged imprisonment.

It may mean a firing squad.

A reign of terror has resulted. Nobody feels safe, even in the privacy of his own home. The people live in a constant state of nervous dread. A tap on the shoulder, prison and perhaps, death may come at any instant.

In Brussels alone it is declared there are 1,500 spies. How busy they are is proved by the extravagant style in which they live. Whenever funds run short fresh victims must be found.

Women are numerous among the secret agents. They may be found all up and down the social scale, from the relative of Gen. von Bissing, who took advantage of her position to keep an eye on the most fashionable functions in the most exclusive residences, down to the humblest seamstress or domestic servant.

There are the demimondaines, who send in reports from the theatres, restaurants and boulevards.

There are men formerly prominent in business, of which now, practically, there is none, who use their former connections and acquaintance to keep the German authorities posted concerning doings in financial and industrial circles.

A case is reported from the Rue de Flandre, in Brussels, where the driver of a brewery wagon and his assistant were arrested because, after they had unloaded a heavy bbarrel of beer, one of them remarked: "The kaiser himself could not have done it so neatly."

JUDGE'S ORDER CAUSES COMMENT

The towns of South Granby, Lamson, Lysander and Little Utica are affected more than any others by the decision of Federal Judge George W. Ray to the effect that the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad need not restore the two trains it took off on the Oswego-Syracuse lines.

Judge Ray holding that the order of the public service commission was "unreasonable" says that the above towns have some train service, but by driving three and one half miles residents are able to catch a trolley every half hour. The question he says is simplified to this: Should the complainant be compelled to operate these two trains at a loss of thousands of dollars per year for the greater convenience of the very few people desiring to use them at uncertain and indefinite times, the court believed it was a gross injustice to compel the service.

The court held that there was no dispute about the facts, unless it be the inference that might be drawn as to whether or not public convenience demanded the restoration of the two trains.

The court held that a trolley line parallels the railroad most of the distance and he mentioned the other railroads that serve the disputed territory. Automobiles, he says, are also in use in the territory.

For a great many years the railroad had operated four trains but in November 1914 discontinued two of them. The gross revenue had decreased from 1884 to 1912 from $103,660 to $36,111 and in 1912 the four trains were operated at a loss of $149,563. On one day in November one of the trains discontinued had a gross revenue of but twenty cents.

F. W. Thompson, of Syracuse, represented the complainants; L. P. Hale, of Albany, represented the public service commission and S. J. Kelley, of Syracuse appeared for the residents of South Granby, Lamson and Little Utica.

AUTO VICTIM REFUSED AID

Lay in Rain for Hours Before Any Person Would Help Him.

Vineland, N. J., June 3.—Fearing a hold-up, three different automobile parties refused to stop at the call of a man who lay by the roadside in the rain for two hours near Richland last night. About 1 o'clock in the morning James H. McMahan, a fruit shipper, came by and, hearing the cries, stopped to find a stranger helpless from being run over by an automobile. The man said everybody else had shunned him, and he was afraid of dying alone in the woods.

There were seven in the McMahan automobile, but the stranger was held on the running board until a hotel was reached. The proprietor was aroused, but McMahan declares he refused to take the injured man in, saying he did not keep a hospital. The sufferer was brought on to the Buena hotel, where the proprietor declared no one should be turned away from his door. He sent for a doctor, who pronounced the stranger badly hurt but no bones were broken.

The man refused to give his name but said he was thrown out of a Philadelphia-bound automobile because he objected to the chauffeur drinking any more, and that another machine ran over him.

FORDHAM'S 75TH ANNIVERSARY

Catholic Institution of Learning Begins Week of Elaborate Celebration of Founding

(By United Press)

New York—The Diamond Jubilee of Fordham University, the seventy-fifth anniversary of the establishment of this Catholic institution of learning—will be celebrated elaborately during the week beginning to-day.

Founded by Bishop Hughes, in 1841, and in a place that was then far in the country outside of New York, Fordham has grown from a tiny school to one of the biggest and best equipped universities in the land.

Fordham was begun as a result of the "Know Nothing" movement in the '30s, when that party agitated bitterly against Catholicism and insisted upon providing books for the public schools that were anti-Catholic. Bishop Hughes led the opposition to the "Know Nothings."

Originally known as St. John's College, it was formally opened by Bishop Hughes in June, 1841. The Rev. John McCloskey, who later became the first American Cardinal, was the first President, and associated with him were several men who attained distinction.

In 1846 Bishop Hughes learned that a Jesuit college in Kentucky was unable to make any headway. Wishing to place his college in the hands of some regular order devoted to educational work, Bishop Hughes wrote a letter to Kentucky, pointing out that New York was thickly populated and would give the Jesuits larger opportunities than the South afforded. As a result, the priests came to New York and were placed in charge of Fordham College, which has remained under the direction of the Jesuit fathers ever since.

The celebration will be participated in by church dignitaries from all parts of the country, and by distinguished men of all walks of life and all religions. Although primarily a Catholic College, Fordham is not sectarian and many distinguished men of other religions have been graduated there.

In connection with the Diamond jubilee, the Fordham University Alumni Association is raising a fund of $75,000 intended still further to make known the merits of the place. Cardinal Farley, himself a graduate, is Chairman.

The campaign will be in charge of Father Joseph A. Mulry, the new [illegible]. Before coming to Fordham a year ago, Father Mulry [illegible] founded St. [illegible]er's Club and built for it the largest Catholic club house in the country.

The names of the chairmen of leading committees connected with the celebration follow: Morgan J. O'Brien, Arthur J. McAleenan, Henry Heide, Jr., Gen. James R. O'Beirne, Charles W. Sinnott, Joseph B. Uniacke, Dr. Cornelius F. Orben.

WILL THE PROGRESSIVES FLOP TO JUDGE SEABURY?

With the rejection by Colonel Roosevelt of the Progressive nomination for President of the United States rumors are flying thick and fast as to what course the Progressive organization in New York state will take in the forthcoming state elections.

One of the most persistent rumors is to the effect that the leaderless Bull Moose will throw themselves heart and soul into the movement to nominate and elect Justice Seabury, a Democrat, as governor.

The Seabury non-partisan league, formed in Buffalo a few weeks ago has been making progress recently, although the work of Seabury boomers has not been receiving much publicity because of the Chicago conventions. It is said that Progressives in New York city have already formed a Seabury league in that city and that they will support him against Governor Whitman, who was one of the chief Hughes backers, and who nominated the Supreme Court Justice at the Chicago convention.

Horace Wilkinson, two years ago bitterly fought the nomination for governor of Mr. Whitman and it is believed that he might be induced to climb on the Seabury bandwagon for this if for no other reason.

There are those who say that the Governor was warned not to declare himself too strongly for Hughes so as to "keep in" with a certain element of the Progressives, but he refused to listen and climbed on the Hughes wagon at the start and was still aboard when it led the procession at Chicago.

Democrats, especially those in Central New York, are looking forward with curiosity as to what Francis Hendricks, the veteran Onondaga leader, will do now that Hughes is nominated.

Mr. Hendricks voted for Roosevelt along with Willard A. Rill, on every ballot except the last at Chicago. Before he went to the convention he told Speaker Sweet that if Hughes were nominated it would mean defeat of the Republican state ticket, including Governor Whitman. It was assumed at the time Mr. Hendricks made this statement that it was his belief that with Hughes nominated, the Progressives of the state would endorse the Democratic candidate, and thereby bring about Whitman's defeat. The belief prevails that Mr. Hendricks believed the Colonel would run upon a third ticket.

The way local and other central New York politicians size up the situation to-day is as follows:

1.—William Barnes has lost most of his power in the G. O. P. state organization.

2.—If Roosevelt finally accepts the Progressive nomination, runs on a third ticket and fights Hughes, Wilkinson and Hendricks will line up to a certain extent.

3.—No matter what Roosevelt decides Justice Seabury's chances for nomination and election have been enhanced by the Hughes' nomination because there are many dyed-in-the-wool Progressives in the state, who are violently opposed to Hughes and will line up with the Seabury forces.

OIL FOR CITY'S STREETS COSTS $496.00; CURB GASOLINE TANKS ARE TABOO

William E. Sliter, of Albany, representing the road department of the Standard Oil Co., secured an order to furnish this city 8,000 gallons of oil for use on the streets of this city, at the regular meeting of the Board of Public Works last night. John Hitchcock, representing the Barrett Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of Tarvia, who sought to induce the Board at last week's meeting to use the tar product this year on the streets, was not present when the Board took action, and although he was to appear later in the evening, the Board adjourned before he arrived.

Mr. Sliter quoted the Board the same prices he had offered at last week's meeting, but afterward withdrew, when he learned that the Board would not take action. The specifications call for an asphaltic oil, known as No. 6, which contains from 60 to 65 per cent. asphalt. The oil will cost the city .062 per gallon delivered, and the shipment is to be made at once, in order that the street work may start as soon as the Fremont sewer, which is ccupying the attention of Superintendent Frank Rumsey at present, is completed.

A question as to whether or not the oil contract should be advertised was settled when W. S. Hillick, city attorney, advised the Board that no advertising was necessary, under Section 23 of the charter, which states that work involving the repair and maintenance of the streets may be contracted for by the Board without bids. Accordingly, an order was given Mr. Sliter, the total cost of the oil to be $496.

The Board took drastic action on two applications made for curb gasoline tanks, refusing to permit either James Cole, of First and Oneida streets, or Wilson and Scott, of Cayuga and Second streets. to install tanks.

The Board informed both Mr. Cole and Theodore Wilson who appeared for the taxicab company, that an investigation had been made of both proposed locations during the past week, and that the members were unanimously of the opinion that both tanks would interfere seriously with traffic. Mr. Cole was advised to install a tank on his premises, in order that cars might drive in from the street and not block traffic on the eastern end of the bridge.

Mr. Wilson made a strong plea for a tank at Cayuga and Second streets, stating that the taxicab company was considering the erection of a building 17x24 at that point, which would be started as soon as conditions justfiied it, and that the company had planned to carry on the sale of gasoline in connection with their taxicab business. At present, he said, the company needed the tank most for its own use, because every local garage closes early in the evening and gasoline is not obtainable after certain hours. The Board refused, however, to reconsider the application.

Edward Van Amburg, whose application for a curb tank on West First street was refused after a petition signed by several property owners in his neighborhood had been presented to the Board, filed a counter petition with the Board last night, signed by Arvin Rice, Almon Bristol, D. M. Mills, Laurence Kozak and Josef Wilowiak, five property owners whose holdings adjoin the store occupied by the applicant, which stated that the signers had no objection to the tank. The petition received short shrift at the hands of the Board, and was pigeonholed with the usual "received and placed on file" formality.

Fred Beesaw applied for a water main to his house on Eighth street. Alderman Malone asked for a 100 cp. light on West Fourth street between Oak and Pine streets, and the Board ordered the light installed.

Acting on a suggestion by Mr. Hillick, the Board ordered the Empire United Railways Company to repair the paving along its tracks south of Broadway at once. Mr. Hillick told the Board that the manager of the railway company had promised early this year to take action on this matter, but nothing had been done.

G. Clayton Hill, city engineer, asked the Board for authority to add another man to his force for a period of a week or ten days, as he is obliged to detail one man to the Fremont street sewer work, and is short-handed in his office as a consequence. The Board took no action.

Mexico City—General Carranza, first chief of the Mexican Republic, today took steps toward the establishment of civil government throughout Mexico, when he issued a decree calling for municipal elections on the first Sunday in September, the officials chosen to take office on October 1, 1916 and they will immediately establish civil government.

ROUMANIA ENCOURAGED BY RUSSIAN ADVANCE

(By United Press)

London—The prospect that Roumania will join the Allies in the war against the Central European Powers is growing daily, with the advance of the Russian armies into Bukowina, according to reports in diplomatic circles here to-day.

The sympathies of Roumania are said to be growing in favor of the Allies. Roumania has been holding off due to her economic dependance upon Germany.

The Bulgarian Legation at Bucharest has received information that the Bulgar-Roumanian frontier will be temporarily closed against passengers or merchandise, says a Reuter despatch to-day from the Raumanian capital. It is believed, adds the despatch, that Bulgaria has taken this step in order to mask important troop movements.

PARIS ADMITS GERMAN GAINS EAST OF MEUSE

(By United Press)

Paris—The Germans in a night attack on the east bank of the river Meuse penetrated some of the French trenches east of Hill No. 321, according to the official War Office statement today.

All other points of the attack were repulsed by the infantry charges made along the entire sector west of the Chiamont farm.

Americanization Day Occurs July Fourth

Some changes have been made in the program for the Flag Day exercises at the Elks' Home tomorrow night. Miss Leonora Eames will give a recitation, entitled, "The Story of Old Glory," which will precede the principal address of the evening by Hon. Charles N. Bulger, of Oswego.

Secretary Hollenga announced this morning that the parade of foreign-born American citizens and the Americanization day exercises which were to be held in conjunction with the parade of school children and Flag Day exercises have been postponed, and will be held on July 4th, in connection with a monster preparedness parade which will be staged on that date. Most of the foreign born citizens work until six o'clock at night, and consequently many would have been unable to reach the Plaza in time to join the school-children's parade.

The parade from the Elks' Home will start promptly at seven o'clock to-morrow night, and all members of the lodge are requested to be on hand at 6:45 p. m.

Petrograd—Hurtling westward with seeming superhuman vigor, the Russian armies under General Brusihoff are now hammering their way toward Lemburg, the Galician capital, in giant strides. The demoralized Austrian defenders are now rolling back before the Russians. It is now estimated that more than one-third of the men of the Austrian armies on the east front have been killed, wounded or taken prisoners in the giant offensive started June 4th.

HOLLAND'S WAR BREAD CAUSES INDIGESTION

(By United Press)

The Hague—Holland's war bread, which has been in use for the last few weeks, will have to be changed. The Holland populace says so, the physicians of Holland says so and the government is expected to agree.

Unlike the war bread of all other European countries; the Holland bread was made of flour which contained the husks of the wheat. Even the sturdy Dutch stomach was unable to endure the scrapings and scratchings of the wheat husks and shortly the physicians of Dutch cities and towns had a rush of patients whose digestive organs had gone wrong. The doctors quickly traced the trouble to the war bread.

Haven of Safety Awaits Mr. Colby

(By United Press)

St. Louis—Democratic National Chairman William F. McCoombs to-day wired Bainbridge Colby, of New York an invitation to join the Democratic party.

The action was based on Mr. Colby's repudiation of Theodore Roosevelt for whom he made the nominating speech in the Progressive convention last Saturday.

McCoomb's action was the most striking development of the Democratic leaders' efforts to find a way to kidnap 4,000,000 votes of the Progressive party, which they consider "orphaned" by Roosevelt's declaration not to be their candidate.

The telegram read as follows:

"Bainbridge Colby, New York:

"I have read your statement. It appears that Colonel Roosevelt has attempted to send his former enthusiastic followers stumbling along to destruction. Progressive Democrats cordially and sincerely offer them safety.

"WILLIAM F. McCOOMBS,
"Chairman Democratic National Committee."

New York Tribune:

A liberal minded doctor of medicine writes to The Medical Council on behalf of the irregular practitioner, asking what truth or justice there is in pretending that medicine is an exact science and forbidding those to practice healing who are not duly licensed by the state. He thinks that instead of pretending to possess "all knowledge of therapeutic measures" and "floundering in their own quagmire of therapeutic uncertainty" his colleagues ought to be kind to the outsiders and "use their methods honestly, conscientiously, as they would use them" after taking pains to "cull out the positive good" in them.

Like many others who have put forward a similar plea, he cites Cabot's figures comparing clinical diagnoses with post-mortem findings:

> "The average percentage of correctness of these diagnoses in these cases, taken as a whole, was 47.3. In 1913 the Committee on Inquiry into the Department of Health, Charities and Bellevue and Allied Hospitals, in the city of New York, continued the autopsy findings in Bellevue Hospital with the clinical diagnoses, and this comparison revealed the fact that clinical diagnoses were confirmed in only 52.3 per cent. of the cases."

Query: If regular physicians go wrong in their diagnoses in half of the cases under their care, what must the percentage be of their failures in treatment? Can the irregulars do much worse? May not some of them do better?

This is all plausible enough, but the conclusions drawn are far from satisfying. Doctor Cabot's experience is not, indeed, encouraging, and ever since he published his statistics the irregulars have made the most of them. It is absurd, however, to pretend that they justify the sweeping generalizations commonly found on them. The evidence of the deadhouse is questionable for the obvious reason that in a large proportion of cases exhaustive post-mortem examination presupposes doubtful diagnosis.

New York Commercial:

At Perth Amboy, down the bay, a new industry has been established which may attain vast proportions. It is a tin refinery, the first in America and the first of its special kind in the world. Hitherto all tin ore and tin matte reaching the United States or produced here was sent to Europe to be refined, and most of this work was done at Swansea, Wales.

American interests have secured control of large tin mines in Bolivia and are also possessed of promising properties in other parts of South America, Alaska, Dakota and Montana. Bolivia tin will be the most important for some time to come.

This tin has been used chiefly in making bronze, type metal and other alloys. The Swansea smelters found it practically impossible to refine Bolivian tin to a degree of purity that would fit it for tinning iron and steel plates, especially the standard black plate which is the base of most of the sheet tin of commerce.

This Perth Amboy refinery now is refining Bolivian and other impure tins by an electrolytic process which yields a product even purer than the best English tin. Direct importation of tin ores and matte from Bolivia and other South American countries will stimulate our trade with the west coast of South America, where the Guggenheim interests are operating in the mining field in connection with their smelting interests in this country among which is this tin refinery.

Preparedness is now interesting the American people as never before and much is heard in Washington of industrial preparedness in connection with the re-organization of our military forces. Tin is an indispensable commodity for all countries engaged in war. Armies in the field and the crews of ships of war are fed almost exclusively on meats and other preserved foods which are packed in tin cans and other receptacles. This is the only practical method of feeding soldiers and sailors. The invention of the common tin can, and of the simple process of preserving foods in it, has wiped out scurvy on board ships and in military camps and has done more to improve the condition of men in active service than anything else that has been developed since the cave men fought their battles with clubs and stones. The British Government placed a single order amounting to $15,000,000 for canned beef stew with American packers a few weeks ago.

The United States is the world's greatest consumer of tin and most of it is used in coating plates for use in the canning industries, yet this country has never before produced a single pound of refined tin. In case of war or of interruption of our intercourse with South America and the East Indies by any cause the loss of our import trade in tin would be more disastrous to our industrial life and to our military efficiency than any other deprivation, for it would be possible to make nitric acid from the nitrogen in the air and thus dispense with Chilean nitrates which are now used almost exclusively for this purpose. The closing of the Panama Canal is a handicap at present but it will soon be removed and then the United States will command a supply of high class tin that will regulate the cost of this indispensable commodity.

New York American:

Mr. Hughes's letter of acceptance is just what a Presidential candidate's letter of acceptance ought to be.

It is brief.

It is clear.

It is straightforward.

It contains sound American doctrine.

Nearly every proposition that Mr. Hughes advances has had the steady and sincere support of The American long before Mr. Hughes advanced it.

Naturally, The American is bound to indorse a statement of principles and purposes which is in perfect harmony with the principles and purposes steadfastly held and advocated by The American.

Mr. Hughes does not pussyfoot. Neither does he befog. His letter gives us a strong impression of sincerity and courage, with a very grateful absence of personal brag and bombast—two things of which we must confess we have had rather more of late than a healthy stomach cares to digest.

Even a careless man cannot fail to remark the difference between Mr. Hughes' attitude and the attitude—or, rather, the fifty-seven varieties of atttitudes—assumed by the various bosses manipulating the Republican Convention.

The convention was as timorous as a hutch of rabits.

The leaders acted more like small boys stealing jam than men manfully meeting the great responsibility of voicing the nation's sentiments.

Moreover, Mr. Hughes has given interest to the coming Democratic Convention, which promises to be about as interesting as the doings of a colony of clams holding a mass meeting in a mud-bank.

The country wants to hear what the Democratic Convention has to say in reply to Mr. Hughes.

We say "in reply to Mr. Hughes," because the country could have gone without a reply to the Republican Convention, which said nothing that deserved a reply. But the Democratic Convention, and Mr. Wilson, too, MUST reply to this letter of acceptance, and we suspect that they will find themselves rather hard put to it to reply convincingly.

The impression made by Mr. Hughes's first utterance is that he stands flat-footed for a policy of vigorous Americanism, PUT INTO PRACTICAL DEEDS INSTEAD OF PRETTY PHRASES.

Seattle Post-Intelligencer:

The complaint that food producers are not receiving enough for their product and that consumers are paying too much for it hath a familiar sound, and, though oft reiterated, still remains unanswered and unsatisfied.

When the parcel post made it convenient for the city man to order direct from the farmer the problem appeared in the way of a solution, but time is demonstrating that the consumer prefers to order of his grocer by telephone and have his produce delivered when and where he wants it; also it has been evident that the producer desires to absorb this middleman's profit without doing his work. Quite all of the old plans for facilitating and cheapening the handling of farm products have failed of their purpose.

Annually we have the complaint that fruit remains unpicked for want of a remunerative market, even when consumers are paying a fairly high price for it. Peaches and apples go to waste while the urbanite groans over the price he is compelled to pay for the fruit delivered at his door.

The National Housewives' League is now lending its support to a plan for the market auction, with some hope of success. The states are to be asked to furnish the machinery of operation through the various food commissioners, and the national government is to co-operate. Farmers are to be invited to organize for the shipment of carlot consignments of produce, vegetables and fruit to the large market centers. These shipments are to be auctioned at the centers, direct to the consumers.

A representative of the agricultural department of the federal government is now in Seattle to look over the field and to consult with the various interests involved in the auction plan. At this stage of the proceedings the government is merely collecting information and feeling out the scope of the proposed work.

In some of the Eastern states the auction plan is far advanced, and we shall soon be hearing something of its practical operation. The difficulty with farm produce is that it is handled almost to death before it reaches the consumer, who insists on having it brought to his door but objects to paying adequately for the service.

Auburn Citizen:

It will be well to keep close tabs on your loose $10 notes and look them over well to see that they are not spurious, queer or phony. Auburn bankers have received a warning against two different brands of counterfeit 10 spots that are said to be in circulation hereabouts. Two Federal Reserve Bank notes are said to have been counterfeited recently and placed in quite wide circulation and they have been causing some trouble about the state.

Early in the week bankers were notified that a counterfeit $10 note was being circulated in this part of the state. This counterfeit was on the Federal Reserve Bank, of New York. Yesterday they were informed of another spurious note on the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, Texas.

The treasury circular describing this note says:

"This note is from poorly executed etched plates on cheap paper with red and blue lines used to imitate the silk fibre in the genuine note. The bill is an eighth of an inch smaller than the genuine."

The check leter on the counterfeit is "K565775A." The counterfeit bears the alleged signature of W. G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, and John Burke, treasurer of the United States. It also bears the portrait of Andrew Jackson.

ANTI-SMOKE LAW VALID, SAYS COURT

"So far as the Federal Constitution is concerned, we have no doubt the state may by itself, or through authorized municipalities, declare the emission of dense smoke in cities or populous neighborhoods a nuisance and subject to restraint as such; and that the harshness of such legislation, or its effect upon business interests, short of a merely arbitrary enactment, is not valid constitutional objection. Nor is there any valid Federal constitutional objection in the fact that the regulation may require the discontinuance of the uses of property, or subject the occupant to large expense in complying with the terms of the law or ordinance."

In this language of Mr. Justice Day, the United States Supreme Court sealed the validity of municipal anti-smoke legislation in the recent case of Northwestern Laundry et al. vs. City of Des Moines (36 Supreme Court Reporter, 206).

Plaintiffs sued to enjoin enforcement of an ordinance adopted by defendant city, which provided that the emission of dense smoke in portions of the Iowa city should be a public nuisance, and prohibited the same. To that end the ordinance authorized the appointment of a smoke inspector, and otherwise dealt with the subject with a view to effecting the prohibited purpose declared. It was insisted by plaintiff that the ordinance was void because its standard of efficiency required remodeling of many existing furnaces, because licenses for such remodeling were required, because the smoke inspector and the smoke abatement commission were given unrestrained discretion to prescribe equipment requirements, and because the ordinance does not operate uniformly throughout the city. All these and numerous minor objections against the validity of the ordinance were overruled by the Supreme Court.

JOHN B. RATTO.

ADMITTEDLY the cleverest character impersonator on the Chautauqua platform today, John B. Ratto will make his appearance here stand out as one of the most enjoyable events of Chautauqua week. Mr. Ratto's work differs from that of the usual impersonator both in method and quality. His program as a whole presents a panorama of logically connected characters and forms a novel and most delightful entertainment.

ONE THOUSAND MEN WILL REPORT CONVENTION

(By United Press)

St. Louis—With the addition of several hundred seats in the press section at the Coliseum, the seating facilities for metropolitan newspaper correspondents at the Democratic National convention which opens here tomorrow exceeds the press "coop" at the last convention in Baltimore. The seating capacity of the press sections in that city were nearly five hundred. St. Louis' arrangements will accommodate nearly twice that number.

A special balcony to be reserved for the editors and workers on Democratic dailies in Illinois and Missouri has been built close to the speakers' stand.

Delegates and alternates will occupy the main floor of the Coliseum exclusively. Visitors will be seated in the galleries and boxes and the sergeant-at-arms has been instructed to see that none but delegates, alternates and members of the press are permitted on the main floor.

About 7,500 seats are set aside for visitors in the two galleries and the boxes.

SHOW GREATEST OPEN PIT IRON WORKS IN WORLD

(By United Press)

Chrisholm, Minn.—In a special train arranged for them, 3,000 delegates to the Forty-fourth annual state convention of the Minnesota state fire departments were taken for a trip through the largest open pit iron mills in the world.

There they saw gigantic steam shovels producing iron ore at the rate of 75,000 tons every 24 hours, or greater operations than were carried on in building the Panama Canal. Then the visitors were taken 400 feet underground, where they were shown miners taking out the ore in a different method. Governor Burquist will be here for the occasion.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal befor putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside-bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

ENGLAND HONORS HEROES OF AIR

(By Wilbur S. Forrest)
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London—Six new names were written to-day on England's newest honor list—the aerial gallantry roll.

As the result, six medals of the Distinguished Service Order or the Military Cross has been awarded to members of the Royal Flying Corps for a type of gallantry unknown before the present war.

One of the birdmen newly honored is Lieutenant Malcolm Henderson, Seaforth Highlanders, who lost a leg by shell fire at an altitude of 7,000 feet. Despite his injury he succeeded in maneuvering his machine from above the enemy's lines to a place of safety behind the British lines, thus saving his aeroplane, his life and the life of his observer.

Lieutenant Frank Hudson, 18, was severely wounded in the head while on reconnaissance duty flying over the German lines. He clung to consciousness until he had piloted his aeroplane to a place of safety and then fainted. On previous occasions he had brought down two enemy machines.

"For conspicuous gallantry and skill" is the officially worded announcement of honor for Captain J. E. Tennant, Scots Guards, who effected a night bombing of an enemy aviation shed. He shut off his engine, descended to within thirty feet of the objective and dropped his bombs. Although the explosion damaged his machine, he restarted the engine and escaped only to request another machine on his return with which to repeat the operation.

Lieutenants Thomas Howe and Edward Legget, in the same machine, merited decorations for downing two enemy machines during a single flight. After dispatching the first they winged to a higher altitude and engaged the second. Both enemies were downed by machine gun fire.

A number of conspicuous feats are attached to the record of Lieutenant Henry Yates, the last named on the official honor roll. His outstanding accomplishment was the destruction of an enemy waterworks under terrific fire.

With anti-aircraft guns roaring and a company of infantry firing on him he brought his machine down to within six hundred feet and launched his bomb. It dropped in the center of the waterworks destroying it. He then intrepidly attacked the infantry with his machine gun and routed it.

EIGHT THOUSAND MEDS. IN HEALTH PARADE

(By United Press)

Detroit, Mich.—Marking the close of the American Medical association's sixty-seventh annual convention, Detroit to-day will celebrate "Public Health Day," with some 8,000 visiting physicians participating in the ceremonies. The feature of the day will be a public health parade, in which banners on more than a hundred gigantic floats will preach the doctrine of right living.

The parade, which is to be one of the most novel ever seen here, will be staged under the direction of the state board of health, co-operating with officers of the American Medical association. Of the various floats, 12 will be furnished by Detroit women's clubs, nine by the city recreation commission, 12 by the state board of health, nine by the Anti-Tuberculosis society and five by medical colleges.

HEALING IN OUR DAILY LIVES

V. O. Strickler Explains to Large Audience in Oswego Practicability of Christian Science.

About twenty-five Fulton peopls attended the lecture on Christian Science delivered in Oswego last night by Virgil O. Strickler, C. S., of Chicago. The small church building in West Second street was filled with an audience whose silence was such that a pin could have been heard if dropped, figuratively speaking.

Mr. Strickler's address was clear, concise and convincing, and his illustration of points in the use of practical Christianity in our daily lives, lucid.

The address in part was as follows:

As it becomes more generally understood that through the ministry of Christian Science people are being healed of sickness, sin, unhappiness, worry, fear, and other discordant conditions, there is an ever-increasing desire upon the part of the general public to learn how these results are accomplished. It is the purpose of this lecture to explain how Christian Science does these things. There is no mystery about Christian Science healing, nor is it difficult to understand. It can be stated without any reservation whatever that every person who is willing to do so may learn how to heal sickness and to destroy the desire to sin for himself and others through Christian Science.

In approaching the investigation of this subject one should do so with an open mind. Christian Science is producing certain very definite and very beneficial results, and it behooves every thinking person to try to understand how they are accomplished.

Students Increase in Number.

Both in the medical profession and among the clergy there are many such open-minded students, with the result that some eminent physicians are now sending to Christian Science practitioners those of their patients who do not recover under medical treatment while many clergymen are openly declaring from their pulpits that the fruits of Christian Science are good, and not a few of them have left their pulpits to become Christian Science practitioners. These facts are worthy of serious consideration.

If it is true that Christian Science is teaching people how to rise above sinful appetites and desires, and how to be healthy and happy, then surely it is the greatest and most vital thing that can engage human thought. That Christian Science does these things to some extent at least is no longer an open question, and the proof of it is to be found in the practical benefits that have come to its adherents.

Although the healing of physical and mental diseases by spiritual means was widely practiced both in Old Testament and New Testament times, and was expressly commanded by Jesus, and, although Christian Science during the last 50 years has actually healed in this way large numbers of people from all kinds of physical and mental diseases, there are still a great many people who honestly find it difficult to understand how it is possible for the sick to be healed without drugs, and entirely by spiritual means. Even among those who profess to believe in the Bible and in the omnipotence of God, there are many who have honest doubts that the power of God is sufficient or available to deliver from sickness, and these doubts often prevent the effort to gain an understanding of the way by which spiritual healing is accomplished.

It Was Jesus' Teaching.

To all such it can be said that Jesus healed the sick without drugs, and, what is more important to us, he taught other people how to do so, thus proving that his method of healing physical disease by spiritual means could be taught to others, and understood and practiced by them.

Later these same disciples taught the Principal of spiritual healing which they had learned from Jesus to their own disciples, and history shows that on down through a period of about ten generations the healing of the sick by spiritual means continued to be a part of the regular ministry of the Christian church, and that the dead were raised during the first and second centuries. Moses and the prophets also healed the sick and raised the dead and did many other wonderful works in demonstration of the power of spirit to meet human needs, and the Old Testament is filled with such instances.

It will thus be seen that the knowledge of spiritual truth, and the method of its application to deliver people from sickness, sin, and every kind of evil human condition has reappeared upon the earth at many times, and it is claimed for Christian Science that it is the reappearance in our own generation of the understanding of the same spiritual law that was known and understood in part by Moses and the prophets, and which was perfectly understood and demonstrated by Jesus, and by him taught to his disciples. There is no mystery about it, and the results produced by Christian Science are the results which have always followed, and must necessarily follow, from the apprehension and demonstration of spiritual truth. Christian Science is nothing more nor less than a return to primitive Christianity, and every one who turns to it fairly and honestly will find in it that which will satisfy his spiritual aspirations and meet his human needs.

Mrs. Eddy is acknowledged to be the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, and many people ask what it is that she has discovered. In reply it can be said that she has discovered the Law of Spirit which is Spiritual Truth.

Mrs. Eddy discovered the law of Spirit as truly as Sir Isaac Newton discovered the law of gravitation, and this fact should be thoroughly understood. Just as Newton discovered that the movements of material bodies were regulated and governed by this material law, so Mrs. Eddy discovered the Principle that governs the entire universe, including every detail in the lives of men. That supreme, creative, governing, omnipresent Mind or Principle, is God, the only Cause, the only Creator, the only Ruler of man and the universe.

"BLOSSOMS" MADE THEM LAUGH

The Cherry Blossoms summer road company, comprising the more prominent members of the original Cherry Blossoms musical comedy company, opened a two-day engagement at the Quirk theatre yesterday, with a musical tabloid. The company will present an entire change of program, wardrobe and effects to-day, when the famous comedy skit, "A King for a Night," will be offered. Good houses greeted the players at both performances yesterday, and it was unanimously considered the best company of its class which has appeared here in some time.

The tabloid is staged in one act and occupies about an hour. Virginia Kelsey the "double-voice" prima donna of the Cherry Blossoms company, made a big hit yesterday with her rendition of popular and semiclassical numbers, in the singing of which she alternately used a clear high soprano, and a vibrant baritone.

Frank Ernst plays the leading comedy role, and his work as the "nigger" of the sketch, in connection with Howard McDonald, the straight man, is excellent. Miss Anna Lempke, ingenue, sings "Circus Day in Dixie" and several other current musical numbers very acceptably, and with Mr. McDonald executes a novel and graceful dance. Tommie Lonzell, who appeared to advantage in the difficult role of the Italian tough, completed the list of principals.

The work of the chorus was exceptionally good in every respect. Miss Martha Richards, a winsome and lively dancer, made one of the hits of the evening with her rendition of the solo "My Hero" from the Chocolate Soldier. The chorus also includes Anna Lempke, Flo Wallace, Eddie Weston, Muriel Vernon and Jacqueline Gray.

ABOUT THE TOWN

Dr. C. L. Fessenden, of South First street, was in Syracuse yesterday in attendance at the funeral of his grandfather, George H. Dillenbeck, who died at his home 221 Elliott street, that city, on Saturday last.

In the near future, on a date as yet undecided, a special committee appointed for the purpose will hold a public hearing for the members of the Chamber of Commerce at which time matters of "vital importance," in the words of Secretary Hollenga will be brought to the attention of the organization membership. Every member of the Chamber will be urged to attend this meeting.

* * *

Good Roads day idea is not dead, but sleeping! It was the intention of the Chahber of Commerce to have Governor Whitman and Speaker T. C. Sweet in this city for the occasion, and the Governor was to be accorded the honor of turning over the first spade-full of earth. The duties of the Speaker were not decided upon, but as he has already shown pronounced ability in handling recalcitrant members of legislative committees the suggestion has been made that he be permitted to drive a mule-team.

The fact of the matter is, both Mr. Whitman and Mr. Sweet have been very busy during the past week assisting Messrs. Penrose, Crane, Harding, et. al. in planning the future of the Republican party. They have now returned to the Empire State, and are at liberty, so to speak, to accept other engagements.

Secretary Hollenga of the Chamber now plans to hold the Good Roads Day during Old Home Week. He wishes to state, however, that none of the former Fultonians who visit here during the reunion will be asked to go to work.

* * *

Following the example of several other large cities of the country, Fulton will have its own Preparedness parade during Old Home Week, probably on July 4, when Americanziation Day exercises will be held for foreign born citizens of this city and county. A committee is now at work on plans for the event, which was suggested by a local newspaper some two weeks ago.

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these—
It might have been."

Such was the plaint of Harry M. O'Brien, city sealer, who lost an opportunity to bring the State Convention of Sealers to this city next year because the telegram of invitation from the Common Council was not received until after the delegates had decided upon Binghamton as the 1917 convention city. Fulton had an excellent opportunity to gain the honor, and Mr. O'Brien, assisted by County Sealer F. H. French finally succeeded in forcing a compromise through the convention, which rescinded its previous action and designated Syracuse as the next convention city. The officers of the convention also promised Mr. O'Brien that an invitation to spend one day of the convention period in this city would be accepted.

* * *

Frank Rumsey, in charge of the construction of the Fremont Street sewer, was authorized by the Board of Public Works last night to offer $2.00 per day for laborers, as few unemployed men can be found in the city who were willing to go to work at the prevailing rate.

* * *

Would action on the part of the Chamber of Commerce of this city accelerate to any degree the progress of the State Department of Highways in advertising and awarding the contract for the paving of South First street, or must this city sit with folded hands until the Albany moguls finish their political log-rolling and finally take up the matter? What we want to know, and what hundreds of other people in this city want to know is this—what occasions the delay?

If the contract is not to be awarded this year, let the Board of Public Works take some action at once to fill some of the yawning chasms in the thoroughfare with cracked stone, if only for appearance sake, during Old Home Week!

Mr. French was appointed a member of the executive committee of the state organization. Syracuse was decided upon as the next convention city.

THE QUIRK TODAY.

Yes, there is real venom sometimes in the making of movies. And it helps the director to make the movie move.

For example in William Fox's masterful production, "A Wife's Sacrifice," the villain Peppo (Stuart Holmes) gives a coin to a hand-organ grinder, who has a real monkey to attract attention and coins.

Now little Jane Lee, one of Fox's tots, hates monkeys. But she hates villains more. Holmes makes such a capital villain that little Jane cannot prevent her hatred from showing just as the children (and some grownups) cannot help hissing the bad man in the melodrama.

It chances that little Jane in "A Wife's Sacrifice" has to show her hatred for Jeppo (Mr. Holmes in the flesh). She does it by kicking at him and sticking out her tongue, which is the worst insult little girls know. One even notes in the picture that there is real hatred in it. And there is.

A full line of hand-embroidered articles suitable for graduation gifts and June brides; also stamped goods, for sale by Mrs. F. H. Ure, 721 Cayuga street. Phone 1502.—Adv. tf

To ALL PERSONS INTERESTED:

Please Take Notice that the undersigned intends to file with the commissioner of the Land Office at the office of the Secretary of State on the 15th day of June, 1916, an application for a grant of the abandoned Canal Lands described as follows:

Turfmen Arrange for Racing July 4

Another event to be added to the already extensive Independence Day program, and one which will doubtless prove the prime drawing card for most Fultonians, will be staged at the Fair grounds on that date through the efforts of a number of progressive horsemen of the city. A committee comprising Birney Clark, Charles F. Jones and Mert Reynolds have completed arrangements for a turf meeting at the Fair grounds, to be held in the afternoon of the Fourth, and entries have already been received from some fifteen horse owners in this vicinity.

A baseball game between a local team and a visiting semi-professional aggregation will be played on the Fair grounds diamond early in the afternoon, and the races will begin about 3:30 o'clock.

Three events are on the card,—a pace for "green" horses, a 2.35 trot, and a free for all trot and pace. Suitable purses will be awarded, probably to first, place and show horses.

So far, several owners have signified their intentions of entering horses. Among the entries for the free-for-all are Reuben D. 2.06 1-4, owned by a local syndicate; Lancer 2.19 1-4, owned by Charles F. Jones; Tony Texas, 2.15 1-4 owned by two local horsemen, and several other fast steppers.

In the 2.35 event for trotters, May Cliff, Birney Clark, owner; Mandy Lee, Curtis Dubois owner; Miss Loveland, Judd Loveland, owner; Lady Direct, John Ingalls, owner, and several others are entered.

Mr. Ingalls will also enter a fast pacer in the novice event and other entries include Frances Audubon, Thomas Burns, of Oswego, owner; Bobbie, Edward Jones, owner, and others.

All entries should be addressed to Merton Reynolds, this city. Charles F. Jones and John W. Stevenson will act as judges, and John W. King, of Syracuse, will start the horses.

Mr. Stevenson's string of horses is now in training at Lebanon, Vt., under the direction of Edward Sunderland, and one of the fastest pacers may be brought to this city for a trial against the track record at the meeting.

Plans for motorcycle races to follows the harness events are under consideration, and further additions to the program may be made within the next two weeks.

BERNHARDT'S COUSIN CHICAGO'S POOR OLD MAN

(By United Press)

Chicago—Maurice Bernhardt, first cousin to the world's greatest actress, Sarah Bernhardt lives to-day by himself in a dingy rooming house in North Chicago. He is eighty-two years old, nine years older than the "divine Sarah."

Bernhardt is a hero of the Civil War. His ancestors served under Napoleon. His father was, in his time, the most prominent oculist in Paris.

Maurice Bernhardt came to America as courier of the French ambassador Lascases in 1856.

Some years later Bernhardt was appointed official interpreter by President Lincoln. Maurice speaks nine languages—English, French, German, Spanish, Italian, Flemish, Yiddism, Portugese, and Dutch.

At the outbreak of the Civil War Maurice joined the Union forces and was appointed first lieutenant of the cruiser Kearsarge.

He was assistant in command on the memorable cruise which resulted after two years in the sinking of the Confederate raider Alabama off the coast of Cherbourg.

After six years in the navy Bernhardt was given his honorable discharge.

He lost a small fortune in New York in the perfumery business, then came to Chicago. He ekes out his existence by the sale of perfumery.

His $90 pension quarterly goes to the maintenance of his son's three children in an orphan asylum.

Bernhardt has not heard from his cousin Sarah since the war started; before the war they were in constant communication.

OPERA STARS TO SING IN BASEBALL PARK

(By United Press)

Cleveland—Grand opera in a baseball park will be heard June 22 in Cleveland. The park seats about 25,000. The opera is being presented by the local musical arts association. "Seigrfried" will be given. Mme. Gadski, Mme. Schumann Heink, Miss Frieda Hempel, Johannes Sembach and others being in the cast.

On the same day, twenty-five thousand poor children between the ages of six and 14, will be given an outing at Luna park, the "white city" of Cleveland. A hundred society women sold flowers to raise the funds.

WASHINGTON STRONG FOR HUGHES' ELECTION

Washington—Progressive Republicans in Washington are indorsing the nomination of Hughes. Senator Norris, of Nebraska, one of the most radical, came out unreservedly to-day for Hughes.

Royce Claflin, District of Columbia member of the Progressive National Committee, sent a message to Colonel Roosevel to-day urging him to make his tentative declination to run on the Progressive ticket definite and final. He said he considered Hughes a staunch Progressive and he could see no reason why every Progressive should not support him.

FINAL DECREE GRANTED MRS. OUDERKIRK

A final decree of divorce was entered in Oswego yesterday in the case of Maude Ouderkirk vs. George Ouderkirk both of this city. Mrs. Ouderkirk is permitted to use her maiden name, and is awarded the custody of their ten year old child, Etta. The court further ordered that Ouderkirk be required to pay his wife $5 alimony.

MICHIGAN WILL TURN IN FOR THE JUSTICE

Lansing, Mich.—It is generally believed the Bull Moose party in this State will support Hughes. A few of the leaders are willing to continue the fight without Roosevelt, but they are in the minority, and without Roosevelt on the ticket the Bull Moose vote will be very slight.

This is Travel.

To travel, then, is to do, not only to see. To travel best is to be of the sportsmen of the road. To take a chance and win; to feel the glow of muscles too long unused; to sleep on the ground at night and find it soft; to eat, not because it is time to eat, but because one's body is clamoring for food; to drink where every stream and river is pure and cold; to get close to the earth and see the stars—this is travel.—Mary Roberts Rinehart in Collier's Weekly.

Kansas Gas Price Takes a Plunge

(By United Press)

Washington—Gasoline prices have reached their maximum and will be lower throughout the country. Prices for the commodity in Kansas have dropped from 21 to 17 1-2 cents a gallon. This was the feature of the evidence given at to-day's hearing by the Federal Trade Commission in the gas price situation.

CLUB RUN MADE POPULAR BEYOND EXPECTATIONS

The first run of the Fulton Auto club which was scheduled to take place this evening, after a postponement two weeks ago, has been once more deferred, owing to the fact that the Run Committee found it impossible to make adequate arrangements at Pathfinder Island for the large number of motorists who intended to participate. Up to Saturday, everything was going along according to schedule, but some 50 motorists accepted the club invitation over Sunday and yesterday, and the club committee decided to postpone the event rather than to subject many to inconvenience at the Island, not only as regards dinner service, but also the parking of cars.

It is now the intention of the committee to hold the run next week, with the Onondaga or Yates at Syracuse as the probable destination. If suitable arrangements can be made, and if the plan meets with the approval of the majority of the club members, the committee will probably reserve one of the dining rooms in either hotel or a section of the Onondaga grill for the evening.

DISLIKE NEW IRISH PLAN

Dublin—Public opinion on Lloyd George's proposals for the settlement of the Irish problem is not hopeful about the success of the scheme. Of four daily newspapers two Unionist and two Nationalist, published in Dublin, three condemn the proposed plan. The only newspaper supporting it is the official Nationalist organ, Freeman's Journal, which assumed that Redmon dhas accepted it.

The Irish Independent raises the important point that the scheme must fail to secure the government's object of propitiating Irish opinion in the United States. It urges that no scheme which fails to appease Ireland can hope to appeal to America.

The present state of Ireland is not satisfactory. The Sinn Fein element in Dublin is beginning to reassert itself even under martial law. Sinn Fein badges are worn freely in the streets and demonstrations of disloyalty have been made in picture houses and other places.

Possibility of further unrest and mischief are not negligible. Responsible Irishmen await the development of Lloyd George's efforts with some anxiety. The feeling of many moderate men on both sides of the scheme is that it ought to be dropped for the present has been strengthened by Redmond's revelation of its temporary character.

Belfast—The Ulster Unionist Council, while showing no enthusiasm for the proposed home rule compromise, at a meeting to-day presided over by Sir Edward to proceed with the negotiations.

The attitude of the members was that they were willing to make sacrifices in order, as the government desires to procure a settlement which will be strengthening to the empire and would aid in winning the war.

The meeting was private. A statement of the proceedings, however, shows that the counties Cavan, Monaghan and Donegal protested against separation from the rest of Ulster, but agreed to abide by the decision of the other six Ulster counties.

The meeting further adopted a resolution stating that in the event of the failure of negotiations complete freedom of action was reserved to oppose the whole policy of home rule.

CULPRIT'S FINGER PRINTS TAKEN

New York—Finger-print records were taken yesterday of three boys who were arraigned in the Washington Heights Police Court for playing baseball in the street. The charges against them was disorderly conduct, and each was fined $3 by Magistrate Simms.

When the Bagistrate ordered finger-print records made of the youthful offenders, their relatives protested vigorously, declaring such action an "unnecessary indignity." After the boys' finger impressions were made and compared with the records the Magistrate was informed that none of the two had ever been arrested before. He then fined each $3 and released them.

The boys were Walter Sharke, seventeen years old, of No. 523 West 151st street; John Mehrtens, sixteen, of No. 1887 Amsterdam avenue, and Ulrich Hofel, eighteen, of No. 560 West 161st street. They were arrested by Policeman Rice.

"A Herald of Progress"

BRYAN'S PART AT ST. LOUIS MEETING

Will He Play Great Role as He Has Done In the Past?

WON HIS FAME IN 1896.

With Only Fifteen Minutes Allotted Him He Swept Gathering Off Its Feet and Continued For Forty Minutes—One of the Most Thrilling of All Conventions.

What part will William Jennings Bryan play in the Democratic convention in St. Louis? This question presents one of the most interesting features of the gathering. He is an avowed pacifist; Wilson is in favor of preparedness. Will the peerless leader support the administration or not? These are questions that only actions can answer.

There is no doubt that Bryan has tremendous influence in the Democratic party. He is accredited with being responsible for Wilson's nomination at Baltimore. In this connection it is interesting to remember how Bryan obtained such influence in the party.

When the Democrats went to Chicago in 1896 the choice of a presidential candidate was a matter of secondary importance. The one big question before the party was free silver. In June the Republicans had declared for "sound money" and had chosen William McKinley as their leader. A big and powerful wing of the Democratic party was just as unalterably opposed to free silver. But the south and the west thought they had discovered in bimetallism a panacea for all ills, and they threw themselves into the fight with the fanaticism of religious crusaders. The convention took place in July.

The silverites were in absolute control. Led by Senator Stone of Missouri, they were more than twice as strong as the gold Democrats under the leadership of David B. Hill.

But in all the pages and pages of dispatches which poured into the newspaper offices before the convention assembled there was in the gossip about candidates no mention of the name of Bryan. He was unknown.

Hill himself had been up, not merely one night, but several. He was a fighter and had 300 other good fighters at his side. But the silver machine rolled over them all and left them flat. Hill's speech was answered first by Tillman, sporting a silver pitchfork and indulging in a harangue so fierce and uncontrolled that the galleries became disorderly and were threatened with expulsion.

Several other delegates followed Tillman, and then, with the time scheduled for discussion almost exhausted, Senator Jones called his last speaker. It is said that Jones had chosen Tillman, Altgeld and Bryan to speak for his amendment and that the first two had used up all but fifteen minutes of the allotted time. The remaining quarter of an hour really belonged to Jones. But he yielded it to Bryan.

Speech to Gallery Gods.

The speech that followed has been called "the greatest ever delivered to the gallery gods." He started with an allowance of fifteen minutes. He talked for forty minutes. Tillman and the other speakers except Hill had been interrupted by cries of "Time, time!" But the only breaks in the Bryan ovation came when roars of uncontrollable applause burst forth.

"We are clad in the armor of a righteous cause," declared the orator. And such was the power of his eloquence that they saw him in that armor instead of in the wrinkled coat and baggy trousers. "Old leaders have been cast aside, and new leaders have sprung up. The farmer is as much a business man as the stock gamblers on the board of trade. The miner is as much a business man as the few financial magnates who in a back room corner the money of the world.

"When we are asked why we say more about the money question than about the tariff we reply that if protection has slain its thousands the gold standard has slain its tens of thousands. They tell us the issuance of paper money is the function of banks and that the government ought to go out of the banking business. I say the issue of money is a function of the government and that the banks ought to go out of the governing business.

"The man who used to boast that he looks like Napoleon shudders today when he thinks that he was nominated on the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo. He can fancy that he hears in the distance the sound of the waves on the lonely shore of St. Helena.

"You tell us the cities are in favor of the gold standard. And I say burn down your cities and leave our farms and your cities will grow again. But destroy our farms and the grass will grow in the streets of every city in this country. [Great cheering.]

"My friends, we shall declare that this nation is able to legislate for its own people on every question without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation on earth. [Cheers.] Upon that issue we expect to carry every single state in the Union. I shall not slander the fair state of Massachusetts nor the state of New York by saying that people of those states declare our helpless impotency as a nation to attend to our own business.

"If they dare to come out in the open and defend the gold standard as a good thing we shall fight them to the uttermost, having behind us the producing masses of this nation and the world. Having behind us the commercial interests and the laboring interests and the toiling masses, we shall answer their demands for a gold standard by saying to them, 'You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns. You shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold!'" [Tremendous cheering.]

Value of Intensive Methods

Intensive methods, which include the right use of suitable available plantfood, are again responsible for enormous and profitable yields. The time has come when the farmer must look at intensive methods from the business standpoint. The manufacturer who is making most out of his factory sees to it that conditions are best for his workmen and that he is equipped with the latest modern machinery. If there is anything that he can do, to make the machinery turn out more products, and to enable his men to be more efficient, he finds it out, and makes the improvement. The farmer must look at his factory in the same light. If available plantfood, coupled with good soil management, gives him larger crops of better quality (and it has been demonstrated over and over that this is the case), it is good business for the farmer to so fit his factory that it returns maximum results.

STORY OF A "RUN DOWN" FARM

TWO YEARS' MANAGEMENT BRINGS PROFITS AND TRIPLED VALUE IN BROOME COUNTY.

Intelligent farm management is highly profitable. A man bought a farm in Broome county, New York, two years ago, at $16.32 per acre and in two years made it pay 32 per cent. on his investment, while during the same period his management made it triple in market value. It was poor land,—the kind sometimes called "run-down"—but by the use of fertilizers and the introduction of cover crops and dairying into the year's program, the soil was made profitably productive.

The first year, the yield of potatoes was 90 bushels per acre, and the second year 150 bushels per acre. Liberal amounts of fertilizer were used each time. Lime and fertilizer were used in raising buckwheat and oats and the yields materially increased at once. The orchard was renovated and ten head of young cattle pastured on the farm. The tenant and his family made a comfortable living, and the second year sold his share of the field crops for $500. Scores of similar instances are found throughout New York State, illustrating that the right kind of farm management is profitable.

MAKING FARMING A BUSINESS

"Too many farmers are today giving themselves merely hired men's jobs. It is all because they fail to realize that farming is a business as much as running a saw mill, a steel plant or a bank," said Carl S. Vrooman, assistant secretary of the U. S. Department of Agriculture at an Eastern agricultural college not long ago. "What farmers want is not only large production, but profitable production. From the standpoint of pure agronomy, they say our average yields per acre of wheat, for example, can be doubled."

Business methods applied to farming bring greater yields per acre. Above the average yield is where the profit lies. It costs little more to grow a high quality crop than a low quality crop. The business farmer is willing to invest a little more money when he knows that he can get larger returns and greater profits. Better products, at less cost per bushel can be obtained when more intensive methods, including the liberal use of commercial fertilizers and all other factors, are employed.

Cornell Investigates 2743 Farms

The Cornell University Experiment Station has investigated 2,743 farms during the past eight years. On the same farms, of practically the same area, the same kind of crops, the same production per animal, one farmer may have a labor income of a few hundred dollars per year and another of several times that amount. The difference is in the management. The same thing holds good in soil management. With the same kind of soils, containing the same original productive ability, the same kind of drainage, one farmer will produce much better yields than his neighbor, and get better quality crops. Fertilizers should be included in every farming system, as they bring quality, large yields and earlier maturity.

More Wheat From Less Acreage

Less labor with more seed, more manure and more fertilizer, would enable Ohio farmers to grow as much wheat on a million and one half acres as they are now growing on two million acres. This is the conclusion of Director C. E. Thorne, head of the Ohio Experiment Station, who for more than a quarter of a century has been reaching sound conclusions for the benefit of Ohio farmers. A half million acres in corn last year, saved from the wheat fields, would have stored much wealth in the crib with corn at its present prices.—Breeders' Gazette.

HOW UNCLE SAM HELPS NATION'S BUSINESS MEN

Pratt Points to Large Orders Obtained Through American Agents.

"I hope that the present prosperity which we are experiencing in the United States will not blind you to the importance of foreign trade," said Dr. Edward Ewing Pratt, chief of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, in an address before the Business Men's league of St. Louis Friday, May 26. "We in the United States must not get the idea that foreign trade will come to us without our seeking it, nor must we get the idea that we can afford to devote ourselves exclusively to the increasing amount of domestic business and forget entirely foreign trade."

Dr. Pratt's address was concerned principally with the importance of foreign trade and with the assistance his bureau is in a position to render to any American who is selling or wants to sell goods in foreign countries. To prove the practical nature of the service rendered to exporters by the bureau numerous examples of actual results were cited, ranging from a $1,500 order for road machinery to orders that run into millions of dollars, including textile machinery for the Chinese government, flour for Turkey and hydroplanes for Spain. These orders came to the American exporters as a direct result of the activities of the bureau and its representatives in foreign countries.

"The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce," said the speaker, "should be judged by its deeds. If we are not accomplishing definite, practical business results it is time the bureau were discontinued. If, on the other hand, we are accomplishing definite, concrete business results it is time the work were enlarged and that even greater efforts were made by the government to promote our trade in foreign countries."

NEW YORK IS GREATEST PORT.

New York now leads all other ports of the world in commerce. A table just published in the "Statistical Abstract of the United States, 1915," compiled in the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, department of commerce, credits New York with an aggregate foreign trade of $2,125,000,000, which exceeds by $200,000,000 the commerce of London, now second in rank.

	Imports.	Exports.
New York	931.0	1,193.[illegible]
London	1,232.1	696.[illegible]

PETROLEUM AS ENGINE FUEL.

Figures just made public by the United States geological survey disclose a marked increase in the use of petroleum as a locomotive fuel by the railroads of the United States in 1915. The data at hand show that the quantity of oil fuel so consumed last year was 36,648,466 barrels, an increase of 5,555,200, barrels, or 18 per cent, over the similar consumption in 1914. This increase is ascribed to the relatively low prices prevailing for fuel grades of oil during the past year and a half as a result of the increased production of low grade crude in the gulf coast states and in Mexico and of the augmented output of suitable residuals from refineries operating in ever increasing number in Oklahoma and Kansas.

The total distance covered by oil burning locomotives in 1915 was 124,255,525 miles, and the average distance covered per barrel of oil fuel consumed was 3.39 miles. Oil fuel is now used to some extent on forty railroads in the United States, having tracks in twenty-one states.

MINERALS IN FOODS.

A Discourse on Ingredients Needed For Pure, Red Blood.

There are a large number of people who have some indefinite notion about iron in foods, thinking it is in amounts big enough to see with the naked eye if they but know how. It is not. Prospective mothers begin to learn about their mineral needs when the doctor prescribes lime tablets, which contain the inorganic mineral, known to be far less absorbable than when organic, as in plants. The plants take the inorganic minerals of the soil and make them over into live stuff for him. He cannot seem to get them so well in any other way.

Not only anaemia, but many other illnesses come because not enough foods containing minerals are eaten, or if eaten are made ineffective because the strong acids taken go after them for their own use. If we could talk baby talk to them we might say, "The acids will catch you if you don't watch out."

Now, just to get a little bit of a notion about how very slight in quantity, though so wondrous in quality, these vitalizing minerals are, any cook and any eater should study some reliable book on the matter. You will learn that there is nothing quite so heavy in lime as turnip tops, which also means the tops of the kohlrabi. How much lime? Oh, about one-half of 1 per cent, but that is a lot compared with what is in the valuable spinach, which has only .09 per cent. Sherman calls these minerals "ash constituents," which is a bit old fashioned. Others call them "nutrient salts," and common everyday people say mineral matter. How great are little things is what we need to realize in this connection. They are almost comparable with radium in this respect.

A Shampoo Scheme.

The possibilities of the hot water bottle as an adjunct in drying the hair after a shampoo have just been discovered by one woman. Half filled with hot water and applied to the scalp and hair it dries both rapidly and pleasantly. With a second bottle applied to the length of the hair it is possible to recline luxuriously with a book while one's hair is almost drying itself.

Pound Cake.

Take one pound two ounces of sugar, a pound of butter, a pound of flour, ten eggs, vanilla to taste. Cream the sugar and eggs together and the flour and butter. Mix both of these together, add vanilla and beat until light and creamy. It is best to use one's hand, as it makes the cake much lighter. Bake in moderate oven one hour. This makes four pounds.

Way of Women With an Old Shirt.

Men's shirts are usually made of such good materials that it seems a shame to discard them because the fronts and cuffs are worn. One woman makes good looking aprons of them by using the back of the shirt for the front of the apron, finishing with a bias and cut from the worn fronts and getting strings from the sleeves.

Apricot Tapioca.

Simmer three tablespoonfuls of tapioca in two cupfuls of milk, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and half a teaspoonful of almond extract. Cool, add a cupful of whipped cream and pour over crushed macaroons soaked in apricot sirup. Serve chilled with whipped cream and apricots.

GOOD RESULT OF A BLUNDER

Roger Shook was a self made man who in his youth received no educational advantages. He made a fortune and had but one child, a daughter, to inherit it. This daughter, Amelia, he sent to school and to college. She developed literary tastes, but of this her father knew nothing, for he had no knowledge whatever of literature. When he heard his daughter speak of "The Light of Asia" he supposed she referred to the illuminating substance used in that part of the globe. On hearing her say that she had spent the morning with "Dombey and Son" he told her to have the bill sent in at once, since he was closing up all outstanding accounts. "Very Hard Cash" he supposed meant a specie basis.

So frequent were these blunders that Amelia dreaded to speak of anything beyond her father's ken, for he was liable to mortify her by blurting them out in the presence of educated people. Indeed, the old man was rather fond of taking the lead in conversation, and the less he knew about a subject the more anxious he was to prove his familiarity with it.

Mr. Shook, not having a son to whom to leave his business, had brought up a young man from office boy to succeed him in its management. This man, Thomas Jones, he desired should marry his daughter. Jones was a fine business man and a fine fellow, and Amelia liked him very well, though she didn't care to communicate the fact to her father or to Mr. Jones. Jones was even more anxious for the match than his employer. He was not insensible to its advantages and was desperately in love with the girl. But, while he did not fear to tackle any man on a business proposition, he had no courage whatever in telling a woman that he loved her. The consequence was that the match hung fire.

One afternoon Mr. Shook went home from the office to find his family gadding. Some one was ringing on the telephone. He took down the receiver.

"Is Miss Shook in?" called the soft voice of a woman.

"No. Any message for her?"

"Tell her 'Adam Bede' has just come in."

"Adam who?"

"Bede—B-e-d-e."

There was an aside in the dialogue that was unexpressed by Mr. Shook.

"Well, I'll be jinged! I never thought that of Amelia. I didn't believe she'd meet any one in an underhanded way."

The phone was not working very well. There were some incoherent words, ending with "'Nicholas Nickleby' next week."

"Great heavens!" muttered the father to himself. "Is she playing two of 'em?"

"Any more?" he asked, dissembling.

"'Tristram Shandy' will"— What followed was not to be distinguished.

"Please repeat the name."

"'Tristram Shandy' [unintelligible words], 'Sterne.'"

"What Sterne?"

"Laurence."

"Just so. Now, will you listen to me?"

"Yes. What is it?"

"You have Thomas Jones there tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, punctual, and don't you forgit it."

"'Tom Jones,' by Fielding?"

"Tom Jones by his father—Thomas J. Jones, managing man of Shook & Co."

"Who's talking?"

"I'm Miss Shook's father."

There was a brief pause, then, "All right, Mr. Shook; I'll do as you say."

A faint giggle accompanied the click that marked the hanging up of the receiver, but Mr. Shook was too much in earnest to notice it.

The next afternoon at 3 o'clock there was a telephone ring. Miss Shook responded.

"Mr. Jones is here."

"Where?"

"At the library."

Amelia was astonished. She was about to ask for an explanation when it occurred to her that the least said the soonest mended. She didn't care to let the librarian into any affair that had gone wrong. Her father was liable to interfere between her and Mr. Jones at any time. She would go and get the explanation from Mr. Jones herself.

"All right; I'll be over directly."

She found Mr. Jones pacing to and fro nervously. She led him into an alcove.

"Well," she said, "what can I do for you?"

"What can I do for you? The librarian sent me a line saying you would like to see me here at 3 o'clock."

There was a conference, during which Miss Shook went to the librarian and learned that the message had come from her father. Indeed, she drew forth the whole dialogue.

"Singular," she muttered, "that my name should be Amelia and his Tom Jones." Then she asked for a copy of Fielding's novel, "Tom Jones." The librarian gave it to her, and she gave it to Mr. Jones. He took it home and read a love story of which the hero was Tom Jones and the heroine Amelia. It gave him courage to make a proposal for the real Amelia's hand. The old man, instead of spoiling it, had brought it about. When, long after the marriage, he was told of what he had done he merely remarked, "I thought them fellers had mighty queer names."

Dainty separate waist of pink lawn with a deep yoke of white. Revers and collar of white have a pink hem.

One of the charms of this separate blouse is its color scheme. The model is fashioned from pink lawn, but the deep yoke is of white, with collar and revers of the same. A pink hem is hemstitched to the collar and revers, giving the necessary touch of color after a sudden "break" from pink to white in the waist and yoke. In medium size the design requires 2 yards 36-inch pink and ¾-yard 36-inch white lawn. Either pink or white may be used for the narrow ruffle that outlines the deep yoke.

Since a contracting material is used for the yoke, unusual care must be taken with the cutting of the waist. Note the part of the cutting guide which shows the placement of yoke and revers. This shows that the pattern must be placed on a lengthwise thread of an open width of material. Now, this rule must be followed in using white lawn, just as if the waist were being developed entirely in pink.

The sleeve and cuff, however, are laid on an open width of pink material, after which the lawn is folded to cut the remaining parts of the waist. A strip of lawn long enough to accommodate the back yoke will have to be cut from the white material and the yoke placed on the lengthwise fold as illustrated, with the collar included. The back of the waist is laid on a lengthwise fold of pink lawn, while the front and trimming piece are placed on a lengthwise thread.

The underbody requires 1 yard of 36-inch material and this is folded as also shown in the cutting guide. Place the back directly on the lengthwise fold, then put the peplum and front on a lengthwise thread.

With the various pieces properly placed, the home dressmaker may proceed with the cutting, confident that there will be no waste of material, nor mistake in the work.

The smartest of the new blouses feature deep yokes which are made of all kinds of materials in contrast to the waist proper. Herein lies a strong hint for the dressmaker who has a genius for combining small quantities of goods into a delightful whole.

Separate skirts usually fashioned from one of the soft woolen materials, are generally made on conservative lines, wide enough for comfort in active exercise but not over full, well supplied with pockets and a trifle high in the waistline.

THE JEWELRY CRAZE.

Dirty Ornaments Not Attractive, So Polish Up Your Treasures.

All jewelry that is constantly worn should be washed every month or six weeks. It is not a difficult matter either. All you have to do is to make a soapy lather and add a few drops of ammonia. Take an old toothbrush and brush all the dirt out of the crevices. When quite clean take the jewelry out of the water and rub perfectly dry with a chamois leather or ordinary tissue paper.

When cleaning an article that is set with stones, such as a ring, be more gentle with the toothbrush, for if you brush too vigorously you may easily loosen a stone. A pendant set with emeralds, rubies or diamonds is better immersed in a little eau de cologne than water.

If you happen to be the lucky possessor of any pearls remember they must never be put in soapy water, though sea water is good for them. Pearls that are shut away and seldom worn lose their beautiful sheen, so if you have such a necklace wear it regularly, even if under your waist. The contact with the skin will keep pearls a good color.

Turquoise are best washed with warm water and a little ammonia, but no soap. Soap is apt to turn their pretty blue into a green. When you are cleaning opals be careful not to drop them, for they are brittle and chip with alarming ease. In fact, they have earned a name for being unlucky simply because they are so fragile.

When you are not wearing jewelry do not leave it lying about or in a drawer knocking against other ornaments. Keep it either in a piece of leather or in cotton wool. Steel ornaments should always be wrapped up carefully in tissue paper, for the air will quickly spoil their beauty.

SPRING DISH OF EGGS AND SPINACH.—One-quarter peck of spinach, six eggs, one tablespoonful butter, one tablespoonful flour, one teaspoonful salt, one-eighth teaspoonful white pepper, one teaspoonful grated onion, one-quarter teaspoonful paprika. Wash and clean the spinach and then wash through several waters; put on to boil with one cupful boiling water, cover until it comes to a boil and then uncover and keep turning ten to fifteen minutes, or until tender. Drain (save the water), chop fine and cover with the sauce made as follows: Put the butter and onion into saucepan, add the flour and mix well or until smooth, then add the spinach water (if there is not a cupful add enough cold water to make one cupful); boil three minutes; add the salt and pepper; pour over the spinach and spread on platter (one that can be put in oven), and with spoon make six places big enough to hold one raw egg. Be sure the cavity is deep enough. Break one egg into a saucer and slide into the space in the spinach. After the six eggs are in the spinach dust with salt and paprika, place in moderate oven five to six minutes for medium cooked eggs, ten minutes for firm eggs.

Savory Rice.—One cupful rice, two cupfuls tomatoes, one-half cupful finely cut onion, two tablespoonfuls chopped parsley, one teaspoonful drippings, one teaspoonful salt, one-fourth teaspoonful paprika, one-fourth teaspoonful Worcestershire sauce. Put the onion and drippings into pan, fry until the onion is tender; add the strained tomatoes, salt, paprika, Worcestershire sauce and rice, which has been washed, boiled, drained and blanched; stir until the rice is hot; sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Tipsy Potatoes.—Take large sweet potatoes. Peel and cut in slices about half an inch thick and place in a baking dish, adding sugar, mace, lemon peel, ground cloves, a single peppercorn and half a cupful of boiling water. Bake until soft. Then uncover and add a glass of rum. Sherry or claret may be used instead. Keep warm, but not hot, until ready to serve.

Beet and Egg Salad.—Cut six boiled beets into dice, marinate with French dressing and let stand one or more hours. Cook four eggs twenty minutes in water just below the boiling point; then cover with cold water; let remain ten minutes, strip off the shells, chop the whites and press the yolks through a sieve. Arrange the beets in a mound, surround with alternate rows of the whites and yolks and garnish with mayonnaise and sprigs of parsley.

Americans Must Aid Europe After the War

President John Grier Hibben delivered a baccalaureate sermon Sunday to the students of Princeton University, at Princeton, N. J. The exercises took place in Alexander Hall. The other two events of the day were a memorial service to the dead members of the senior class of 1916, and an open air song service in the evening on the steps of Nassau Hall.

True patriotism, the relation of the individual to the nation, and of the nation to the world; problems of the day vital to the citizens of the country, and moral and material preparedness were some of the theme discussed by President Hibben. He said in part:

In our day and generation we have 'dazzled by a too near view of material things.' The 'man without a country' to-day, is not the exile, the outcast, the traitor, but the one who lives in smug respectability and self-content with no thought of his country's needs and no concern for the realization of her manifest obligations. It is not the foe without, but the enervating forces within which cause a nation to sicken and die, and this is our greatest menace.

"Patriotism is not a selfish love, my land against all others, but my land for all others. The spirit of nationalism is a spirit of service, the individual for the nation but the nation for the world. Love of humanity, therefore, and the love of country are not mutually exclusive, but complimentary.

"There has been too much talk in times past in our country of the rights of man. The time has come to emphasize the common duties of man. If we are as ready to recognize our evident obligations as we are to fight for our inalienable rights we are in the way of solving many of the most perplexing problems, both of our national life and of our international relations. Patriotism cannot be adequately defined merely as a love of country, for that love may be wholly selfish. True patriotism is consciousness of obligation and readiness for sacrifice.

"We dare not regard the peoples of other lands and other races in the spirit of aloofness. Overwhelmed by the great world disaster, they need our help, and we are abundantly able to give it. When finally they emerge from the valley of the shadow of death we must unite our powers to theirs, in order to guarantee and enforce the reign of permanent peace.

"America is being criticized abroad to-day with words not only of bitterness, but of scorn. It is alleged that we think only of our material comfort and conveniences, and that all our thoughts range on the level of the things that can be weighed and measured and counted. We may resent this, but we must confess with no slight degree of humiliation that there is a measure of truth in the indictment. It will not do merely to deny this statement in anger and in pride. We must show by our deeds that we prize honor above comfort, and justince above gain, and mercy above justice, and that we would gladly lay down our lives rather than by living to ourselves in peace and prosperity prove false to God and man.

"Members of the Class of 1916, you are to do your work in a world of stirring events and in a country which will be compelled, even contrary to her immemorial traditions and policies, to take a significant part in them. We in America have been spectators of the great European war. In the period of reconstruction we must be actors. The supreme test of our country will be whether we will be equal to our opportunities."

The Flax Plant.

Linen is obtained from the flax plant, a small, delicate annual with a tiny blue flower. The plant is pulled by hand in the summer, the seeds, known in commerce as linseed, being removed and the straw subjected to various processes to separate the fibrous part which constitutes the linen. First it is steeped in water and then passed through a drying and heating process on revolving wheels until all foreign matter is removed. It is then ready for manufacture.

Telling the Difference.

"No, sir; not a penny!" was the reply of young Ardup's opulent but immovable relative. "I've lent you more money already than you will ever pay back. You can shift for yourself henceforth. The difference between us is that I am provident and you are improvident."

"The difference between us," vehemently retorted young Ardup, with his hand on the doorknob, "is that I'm a man of moderate means and you're a man of immoderate meanness!"

Then he fled.—Pittsburgh Telegraph.

EARL KITCHENER WAS POPULAR IDOL; LOVED BY ALL THE BRITISH PEOPLE

"Man of Iron" Won Fame by His Daring Feats In India and Africa In Quelling Rebellions.

Named Secretary of State For War on Outbreak of Present Struggle and Had Directed Armies.

WHEN Earl Kitchener, British secretary of state for war, lost his life as the armored cruiser Hampshire sank the popular idol of the English people was taken away.

Kitchener had won his popularity by daring feats in India and Africa and on the outbreak of the present war succeeded Premier Asquith as head of and directed the affairs of the war office in London. Kitchener made frequent trips to the firing lines in France and was in close touch with all military operations. The Germans had been after Kitchener since the war started, and they knew that he made frequent trips across the channel, but until the other day they always failed.

The "man of iron"—that exactly sums up the character and career of Lord Kitchener. Thorough, resolute and possessing that virtue of virtues—silence—the work Lord Kitchener accomplished stamps him as one of the greatest soldiers and administrators Britain has ever produced. Work, not talk, was his motto.

Take the Boer war, for instance. Kitchener went to South Africa in the black days, when Great Britain had suffered a succession of defeats—Stormberg, Magersfontein, Colenso—and British military supremacy was in grave danger. And how the "gentlemen" of the ranks and others hated his methods! Soon letters were arriving in England complaining of his arbitrary ways. He was "making himself hated everywhere," "insulting voluntary officers of noble birth daily," "ruining the organization" and so on. But never a word from Kitchener until he broke the silence with the laconic dispatch, "Send me more men." And with these he won through.

"I understand," a friend remarked to him as he was about to sail for South Africa, "that you intend to reorganize the transport as soon as you arrive."

Takes Boer Capital.

"Reorganize!" replied Kitchener. "I am going to organize it." And he did, with the result that the army was able to march on the Boer capital.

It was a cousin of Lord Kitchener who told the story of how the famous field marshal got his first chance. A tall, overgrown lad, nearly six feet one inch in height, he managed somehow to scramble into Woolwich. He was not high in the lists, and no one thought anything about him. After leaving Woolwich young Kitchener was gazetted to the corps of Royal engineers and appointed on the Palestine survey because he knew how to photograph. The authorities at that time wanted some one to go to Palestine to take photographs, and it was his knowledge of photography which led to young Kitchener's appointment and gave him his chance.

His False Prediction.

Curiously enough, Lord Kitchener was a fatalist and on several occasions had expressed some very strong convictions as to his future. During the Soudan campaign he was once warned not to expose himself so recklessly to the enemy while in action. To this remonstrance he replied: "I shall never be killed. When my time comes I shall die peacefully in my bed."

His capacity for work was amazing, and he had no patience with a man less energetic than himself. It was characteristic of him that his first question when he entered the war office as secretary for war was, "Is there a bed in the building?" "No, sir," replied an official. "Then get one," said Lord Kitchener. Then the official knew that day or night he would find Lord Kitchener at his post.

During the South African war he seldom had more than three or four hours' sleep a day, rising regularly at 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning and working hard until night. Officers knew that Kitchener always meant business. He had no use for regimental ornaments; practical soldiers were what he wanted. One officer in command of a column had not been heard of for some days. Telegrams were sent in all directions to find him bearing two questions: "What are you doing? Have you taken any Boers and how many?"

His grim, laconic humor was well illustrated by his reply on one occasion to the war office authorities who were pressing a certain weapon.

"Keep the gun," he wired. "I can throw stones myself."

No man had a greater faculty for estimating a man's capabilities at a glance. Men did the impossible at a word from him.

"Twelve hours in which to carry this dispatch?" he remarked to an officer on one occasion. "You must do it in six." And the officer, who had asked for twelve hours, did it in five.

Time to Kitchener was everything. While engaged in building a bridge for the advance upon Pretoria the engineering officer, apprehensive of danger to his workmen, hinted his fears to Lord Kitchener, explaining that a different mode of construction would be much safer than the one employed, which might, indeed, cost the lives of twenty to thirty men. Kitchener listened patiently and then asked, "How much longer would it take to do the work by this safer method?" "Not more than an hour longer, sir." "Very well, do not change the plans. You will continue the work as it is begun."

LIKED SINGLE SOLDIERS.

Although in his sixty-sixth year Lord Kitchener had the vigor of a man ten years younger. He was straight as a dart, stood six feet two inches, his black hair only slightly tinged with gray. His penetrating gray eyes and stern, cold expression were the terror of army loafers who either "get on or get out!"

Lord Kitchener was a bachelor. Society he detested. For women he had no time. He dedicated himself to his work and did not believe in the domestic joys for the soldier. All his officers when he commanded the army in Egypt had to be bachelors. He did not want to have men around him sighing for home and wife and children. Those things were not for him.

COLD AND RAIN STOP ACTIVITY IN FLANDERS

London—The British official statement issued at midnight reads:

"There were no infantry actions in the last twenty-four hours. The operations were confined to artillery and mining. The most noticeable occurrence was a heavy mutual bombardment between hill No. 60 and Hooge this afternoon.

"South of Loos and La Boiselle we effectively bombarded a hostile work with heavy artillery. Mining was especially active near the Neuville-St. Vaast-Loos salient. The weather was cold and rainy."

The following official communication concerning the operations in Egypt has been made public.

"Hostile aeroplanes bombed Kantara (thirty miles south of Port Said on the Suez Canal) and with a machine gun fired on Romani yesterday. They were driven off by British aircraft with a few minor casualties at Kantara. No one was injured at Romani.

"There have been successful skirmishes with patrols on the eastern border of the Quatia district."

LUTSK SURROUNDED BY ROWS OF ENTANGLEMENTS

London—All the special despatches from Petrograd remark on the fine work of the Russian artillery, to which the recent swift advance is mainly attributed. They contend that the Russian advance proves that the German constructed field fortresses of steel and concrete, which were supposed to be impregnable, can be taken by assault despite all the latest scientific devices. The incomparable Russian guns and mining, says one correspondent, made short work of five-fold fortified lines.

It is reported that in some places where the Austrian preparations were most elaborate the Russians captured twelve lines of intrenchments in rapid succession, while armored automobiles supplemented the cavalry in pursuit of the retreating forces. The pursuit was facilitated by the excellence of the roads which the Austrians had constructed for their own transports.

Lutsk was surrounded by nineteen rows of entanglements when the Russians received the order to storm the place at dawn on Wednesday. The issue hung in the balance until noon; then a breach was made in the Austrian position.

The town of Dubno, say the despatches, was almost demolished by the Russian artillery fire which preceded its occupation. Before they fled the Austrians removed all the civilians capable of working.

BLAMES STATE FOR MURDER HE COMMITTED

(By United Press)

Denver—Twice reprieved when he was in the death cell, Col. James Bulger, slayer of Lloyd F. Nicodemus here two years ago, will have another hearing before the Colorado board of pardons June 20.

The novel plea that the state was a partner in the crime for having licensed the saloon which sold Bulger intoxicating liquor was expected to be made. Commutation to life imprisonment was hoped for by Bulger's friends.

The Pentateuch.

The Pentateuch, or, as it is usually called, "The Book of Moses" (the first five books of the Old Testament), is not thought by the scholars of today to have been written by Moses. Moses could not have written the whole work since it contains the account of his death and burial. The opinion of the best scholarship of today is that Genesis dates from 750 to 850 B. C., Leviticus about 450 or 500 B. C., the whole five books (Pentateuch) reaching its present shape between 450 and 550 B. C.—New York American.

Had a Ready Reply.

An Irish soldier had lost his left eye in action, but was allowed to remain in the service on consenting to have a glass eye in its place. Being a typical "absentminded beggar," he appeared on parade one day minus his left "lamp."

"Nolan," said the officer, "you are not properly dressed. Why is your artificial eye not in its proper place?"

"Sure, sir," replied Nolan, "I left it in my box to keep an eye on my kit while I'm on parade."—Boston Transcript.

Russian War Loan Builds Up Hopes

The statement from New York city this morning that the new Russian loan of $50,000,000 was consummated yesterday gave rise to the report here that the Hunter Company was now practically sure of securing an arms contract at once. The Hunters have been in negotiation with representatives of the Russian government for the past two months, and the question of funds was the only obstacle to the signing of a contract. It is understood that the Hunter company will receive a portion of a large contract which will be given the Westinghouse people.

At any rate, several local men who appear to be conversant with the situation and in close touch with the Hunters, said this morning they believed the wheels would start to turn once more, now that the Russians have succeeded in obtaining the new war loan. The loan was made by a banking group, with the J. P. Morgan Company, as usual, among the backers.

President Marches in Flag Day Parade

(By United Press)

Washington—For the first time in history a President of the United States marched on foot to-day in the historic Pennsylvania avenue, as a participant in a propaganda parade. The event was a Washington plea for preparedness and a tribute to the flag, to-day being the anniversary of the adoption by Congress of the Stars and Stripes as the national emblem.

Militia Looked to as First Aid on Border

(By United Press)

Washington—A call for the militia of the states will be the Government's first step should there be need for more troops on the border."

This was the statement made at the War Department to-day by a member of the General Army Staff.

Outside of 10,000 of the coast artillery corps not now on the border, there are only 1,500 available regulars and continentals in the United States and 500 in Alaska.

The remainder of the regular army, about 40,000 men, are scattered at posts in Hawaii, the Phillipines, and the Canal Zone.

COL. ROOSEVELT UNDER DOCTOR'S CARE TODAY

(By United Press)

New York—Colonel Roosevelt is to-day suffering from a severe pain in his side and as a result frequently presses his hand to the side nearest his heart. The pain developed while the Colonel was motoring to the home of his son-in-law, Dr. Richard Derby. He had been to the dock to welcome his son Kermet, wife and baby. The Colonel said the pain was of no consequence, but the physician cautioned him to keep as quiet as possible.

The Colonel made the following statement.

"One year ago I broke one of my ribs in the left side when a horse I was driving fell down and threw me. For the past few months I have had some coughing spells, and this morning had an unusually severe one and probably strained a few ligaments on the injured side. There is nothing seriously wrong and the fuss made about it is simply ridiculous."

St. Louis, the Coliseum—Democratic representatives never met under such ideal conditions as they did here to-day. The party was unanimous in its choice of candidates for the national ticket. There was complete accord on the platform on which the candidates will be pledged to appeal to the public and fullest agreement on the program.

The convention opened at one o'clock (eastern time) and was called to order by William F. McCoombs, national chairman, after which ex-Governor of New York, Martin H. Glynn gave the keynote speech.

The convention sang "America" and the invocation was made by the Rev. James Weed, of St. Louis.

At 12:43 Chairman McCoombs began his opening speech. Immediately after Mr. Glynn concluded his speech the announcement of the committee on resolutions was made and a permanent organization was effected. The work of the convention this afternoon was the naming of President Wilson and Vice President Marshall as the candidates for the nomination.

FRENCH INFANTRY TAKE ALL GERMAN OUTPOSTS

(By United Press)

Paris—There were no infantry attacks on either bank of the Meuse last night, according to the French official statement to-day.

East of Soisons the French by infantry attacks captured all German posts. French airmen made a successful raid near Veniel in the Vosges. A french sortie at Soison resulted in the capture of some prisoners.

VETERANS OF 184th MEET ON FAIR GROUNDS

Fifty-four men, grey with age, many carrying canes and wracked with the pain of old wounds, squared their shoulders and stood erect for the roll call, when the One Hundred and Eighty-fourth Regiment of the State of New York met for its annual reunion this morning at the Fair grounds. For the first time in several years, no veterans of the regiment from other states attended the reunion, but many made trips from distant point in this state to reach the gathering to-day.

Most of the veterans were accompanied by their wives, some by their families, and the morning hours were spent in renewing old acquaintances, and recounting experiences and events that transpired in the days when thesse men, then boys, wore the blue and fought to preserve the Union.

The committee appointed for the purpose had a bountiful dinner ready at noon, and the veterans and their guests enjoyed the meal, which was attended by speeches andreminiscences.

At two o'clock, the business program, including the election of officers, was begun. After opening remarks by President John Diston, of this city, Rev. Charles S. Robertson, of the First Presbyterian Church led in prayer.

Dr. Robert Simpson, the secretary read the minutes of the last meeting, which were accepted. A committee on nominations was then appointed, and D. C. Morehouse, an Oswego attorney whose father was a member of the regiment, made an address.

Mr. Morehouse is a speaker of some ability, and he held the attention of his audience from the inception of his address. After felicitating the survivors of the regiment on their excellent showing, and their hospitality, Mr. Morehouse launched into a discussion of preparedness, which he termed one of the most vital questions of the day.

'We have seen tremendous changes in the front of the world during the past two years," said Mr. Morehouse. "We have seen nations unwillingly forced into war, and we are now observers of the greatest conflict of all time. We have changed our opinions on several subjects as a consequence and we are right.

"The topic which most interests the thinking men of to-day is Preparedness. We must prepare, I know that you will all concede that.

"I don't mean simply the building of ships, the manufacture of huge guns and the storing up of ammunition. More than that—we must prepare ourselves in other ways. We must prepare the men of this country for war, for after all is said and done, the main burden rests upon the shoulders of the men.

"Friends, we are fast approaching the time when we must face the question of universal military service in this country. I don't mean the training of young men for a short time, but I mean a thorough education in military tactics, the addition of thousands to our armies, a training of six months or three months a year for every citizen able to bear arms in defense.

"We can look to Germany at this time and learn many lessons. In Germany every time you put your hand on a citizen, you put your hand on a trained soldier. In England it is different. England was like we are at present, she had to get ready after the war had started. Trained men are essential and unless we have trained men we are sure to meet with disaster.

"In reviewing the conflict which is now raging in Europe this question

Flag Loved By All Hearts in Parade

When the parade of Elks' and school-children in celebration of Flag Day passes through the streets of the city to-night, the residents along the route will be treated to a novel and interesting sight. Under the direction of James E. Lanigan, principal of the Phillips St. School, the children of that institution will carry flags, portraying the evolution of "Old Glory" from the small banner which was unfurled by a group of fighting farmers in their first armed resistance to British tyranny before the Revolution proper began, up to the present day, when the banner which will be honored to-day represents a firmly welded union of 48 states.

The Phillips Street section will have its own marshalls, elected by the girls and boys of the school. Each grade will have two captains and two lieutenants, of both sexes. They will assist the teachers in maintaining order and uniformity of alignment among the scholars, and will carry the banners.

The old New England flag,—a blue ground, with a red Cross of St. Andrew on a white field, which was carried by the minute-men at Bunker Hill, will be followed in regular sequence by the Green Pine tree on a white ground, the rattle snake flag, with the motto, "Don't Tread on Me!" and the flag of 1777 with 13 stars and stripes for the thirteen states which were then battling for freedom. The flag of to-day will complete the display.

The Phillips Street pupils have devoted some of their spare time to drilling during the past few days and their instructors expect them to make a splendid showing in to-night's parade. The flags were made by the pupils of the school, under the direction of the teachers.

The complete program for the exercises to-night, as revised by the Elks' Committee is as follows:

(By United Press)

Berlin (via wireless to Sayville)—During the war to date Great Britain has lost one hundred thirty ships of her navy totalling more than 600,000 tons, according to statistics gathered by German newspapers and corroborated by the naval officials.

German troops have captured French positions to the west and south of Phiaumont farm on the east bank of the Meuse, Verdun front, according to the Berlin official statement to-day. The defenders of the position, 793 officers and men, were taken prisoners; 15 maxim guns were also taken.

The Woman's Journal:

What has become of that move for the repeal of equal suffrage in Colorado? At the close of the Massachusetts campaign, Mrs. Harold Stephens, of this State, in behalf of the anti-suffragists, offered Mrs. Rose Clark $35 per week and her expenses if she would go out to Colorado and work to get equal suffrage repealed. Mrs. Clark, being a suffragist, declined, of course. She not only declined, but reported the offer at suffrage headquarters. Failing to secure her services, the antis no doubt sent somebody else. That was seven months ago; but we have not yet heard of any initiative petition for the repeal of equal suffrage being started in Colorado. Unquestionably, when the emissary got out there, she found that she had undertaken an impossible task.

State Senator John Hecker of Colorado was reported two or three years ago to intend introducing a measure for the repeal of equal suffrage, and Eastern antis exulted almost as much over the report as if suffrage had already been repealed. As a German, and as secretary for years of the Liquor Dealers' Association, Hecker naturally looks upon woman's ballot with no friendly eye; but when it was stated that he went to work for its repeal, he came out in the Denver papers with a prompt denial. He said he was opposed to equal suffrage, but he had no intention of trying to take it away, and he did not believe anybody else was going to introduce such a measure. "Even if introduced," he added, "I do not believe there is any sane man who thinks it would have a ghost of a chance of passing."

"Whenever a law is disapproved by the people, expression of that sentiment is found in appeals for its repeal," said U. S. Senator Shafroth in a recent speech. "Colorado has had equal suffrage for 23 years, yet no petitions for its repeal have ever been presented. The fact that no member of the General Assembly of Colorado has ever even introduced a bill to resubmit the question to the people shows that there is no demand for any change."

To be sure you pay good money for a whitish mixture of chalk, ditchwater and alum, which is called by that honorable title. Fraud, cheat, hoax, imposter! Buttermilk! To any one who in the cool damp, precincts of the spring-house reached with a long-handled dipper into the deep churn and drew forth that creamy, tanky, liquid that flowed direct from the fount of the gods—to such a one this evil stuff that masquerades as buttermilk is a toadstool for mushroom.

Albany Knickerbocker Press:

A Chicago banker who had initimate personal association with James J. Hill has related a little incident which throws light on the character of the great railroad man and builder of civilization. Mr. Hill had commissioned the banker to perform a task which required a journey out of town. Here is the story:

"'How soon do you want this, Mr. Hill?' said I.

"'Right away,' said he.

"I suppose he noticed a fleeting expression in my face, for he asked, 'What's the matter?'

"'Well,' said I, 'my family is across the lake, but that doesn't make any difference. I'll start in the morning and ——'

"Mr. Hill held up his right hand and said, 'Hold on. Let me give you a fact born of my long experience. All the real fun a fellow has in life is within the four walls that inclose his family. Go across the lake and see your family, and start on my job when you get through with the home folks.'"

Here is something for the ambitious young man who has not yet got his bearings to paste in his hat. Few men have achieved so much as James J. Hill. Few have struggled against heavier odds or won success in so great measure. But the home remained the chief thing in his life. That is a realization that comes to most men at some time or other. They are lucky who grasp it early.

New York American:

You business men should be preparing for peace.

Peace may come suddenly at any time.

When peace does come the first demands Europe will make upon us will be for raw materials with which to start their factories and employ their idle millions. And since the goods manufactured from these raw materials will be piled upon our markets at the lowest possible initial prices, it is the part of good sense to maintain the highest possible prices for raw materials for export.

A concert of American financiers and bankers anr principal producers and sellers of cotton, coal, petroleum products and a few other prime necessities of manufacture could keep the export prices high while maintaining a lower scale at home, and thus effectually prevent a flood of cheap European manufactures from deluging our markets and distressing our own producing concerns, until we can again erect a wall of tariff protection.

Sentimentalists will object, of course, that this suggestion is not sympathetic nor heroic. But we are not trying to talk heroics. We are endeavoring to TALK BUSINESS AND GOOD SENSE.

We think that American financial institutions, which are stuffed with gold, should extend credits cheaply and liberally to American enterprises and dearly and grudgingly to foreign borrowers.

We think the Congress should LEGISLATE AN AMERICAN MERCHANT MARINE INTO EXISTENCE without any delay, and rid the statute book of the ridiculous laws which make it impossible to sail ships on foreign voyages under the American flag.

You business men should bring the whole weight of your influence to bear upon Congress to re-establish our merchant marine, by buying and operating a great fleet of American ships as public property.

Then we should all see to it that a President and a Congress are elected PLEDGED TO PUT UP A STRONG TARIFF PROTECTION against the deluge of cheap foreign manufactures.

That is a very vital consideration, and it is a matter which you MUST DECIDE one way or the other, because it is an issue—and a very great issue—at stake in November's election.

Business men, these are matters which should interest you deeply at this time, because they profoundly affect not only your individual welfare, but the welfare of the nation.

New York Sun:

After all, are we not to pay that extra dollar which the secretary of the Executive Committee of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association said a few days ago would be put upon each pair before the end of the year? There is an indication that all the members of the trade do not think it necessary, and besides that the carrying capacity of the consumer has about reached its limit.

Some of the largest producers of shoes and leather have shown an inclination to accept a fair profit and to take their share of the burden of the present war conditions. One of the leading retail companies of the country and the owners of chain stores, after conferences with the manufacturers, have agreed not to raise their prices.

The president of the association in sustaining its position said that before the war the United Staes produced ony 50 per cent. of the leather needed for its use, and that the remainder came from Russia, Germany, Austria, France, Italy and Scandinavia. But the chief organ of the trade, Hide and Leather, believes that the average shoe and leather dealer knows nothing about the true state of our imports and that he is influenced by market gossip rather than by facts and figures. It says that the imports from Mexico, Argentina, Brazil and Colombia have greatly increased, and:

"It is thus apparent that our loss on imports of hides from Europe has been more than compensated for by imports from other places."

It adds this pleasing information:

"From careful study of conditions in the hide and leather industries, there does not seem any reasonable ground for experiencing shortage in raw or finished materials. Outside of stocks of leather and shoes in first hands there are accumulations to some extent of shoes and other leather merchandise carried by jobbers and retailers. Undoubtedly there may be scarcity of novel styles in shoes, but the great trading in staple goods does not seem to be hampered in any way by dearth of supplies."

Still at It.

"They kept company for a long time before they were married, didn't they?"

TALKS ON BANKING

SAVINGS BANK CENTENNIAL SERIES

No. 11—YOUR BUSINESS CHARACTER

In all business operations involving credit, certain requisites are essential to the one who extends the credit. These requisites are best expressed in what has well been termed the "Three Big C's of Credit," namely, Character, Capacity and Capital. This talk will cover the first.

In order to possess a business character, a man need not have what is ordinarily known as business honesty, for business honesty is not as big a thing as business integrity. Neither need a man say long prayers, and pass the plate, however admirable these traits may be. He must have more than a semblance of religion;—he must carry the religion of the Ten Commandments, the Sermon on the Mount and the Golden Rule into his business life. He must do no tricky thing;—he must be on the level. He must give the square deal. His words must be better than his bond. He must mark goods fairly, advertise honestly, rectify any error, correct any misunderstanding, and never forget that his best advertisement is a satisfied customer, and satisfied customers are made only by business integrity.

The underlying reason why some men have become great merchants is to be found in the "spirit of the house." There are great stores in every large city whose greatness is due to the single fact that they have back of them business character. Their good will, worth millions, is a good will of integrity. It has taken years to build it up.

The buying public soon finds out the spirit of the house. You can catch a sucker but once. It doesn't pay to try the second time. You do well to inquire how this element of integrity enters into your business life, for if the banker does not believe in you, you can get no loans from him. You can lose this priceless asset by a single lapse from business virtue, and once it is lost it is hard sledding to regain it.

A certain bank made a large sized loan to a builder for a specific operation, with the understanding that the funds were to be used to purchase material, and pay labor for that one job. It soon developed that in spite of the fact that the contractor claimed to be progressing well with work, nothing had been done—he had used the money elsewhere. It was a breach of trust. The banker had checked him up, as bankers generally do. He has lost his character in that bank, and his word no longer goes.

Another concern was buying automobiles with the bank's money, giving the bank a trust receipt whereby cars could not be delivered without obtaining a release from the bank and paying on the loan. The banker became suspicious that something was wrong and checked up the cars presumed to be in stock on the trust agreement, and found that four had been sold without accounting to the bank. Result—a hasty calling of the entire loan, loss of confidence, loss of a helpful business arrangement, friendship.

You cannot play fast and loose in business and win out. You cannot deceive your banker for long. He has a knack of finding things out. Gossip gets to him fast. He has a second sense that smells danger. He is a detective.

Therefore, build your business structure with character as the first of three supporting piers. Be as active in the church as you like be as good as you pretend to be, but remember always, that in business it is not what you seem to be but what you are that counts, and your true nature will soon become manifest to those who are in position to find things out and can help you if they trust you, but cannot if they don't.

Health Service Advises Three-Cornered Insurance

(By United Press)

Washington—Twenty-five of every 1,000 employes in American industries are constantly incapacitated by sickness.

The average worker loses about nine days a year on that account.

Much of this loss is preventable waste. The waste can be reduced by a system of governmental health insurance.

These are the conclusions reached to-day by the Public Health Service, after an investigation of working conditions in the United States. This is what the service says about health insurance:

"Any system of health insurance for the United States or for any state should have as its inception prevention of sickness as one of its fundamental purposes.

"This country should profit by the experience of European countries, where prevention is being recognized as the central idea necessary to health insurance if health insurance is to attain its greatest success in improving the health and efficiency of the idustrial population.

"The system in this country ought to provide these five things:

"1.—Cash benefits and medical service for all wage earners in times of sickness at much less cost than now is possible. Adequate medical relief thus would be placed within the reach of even the lowest paid workers, who are most subject to ill health.

"2.—Distribute the cost among employers, employe and the public as the groups responsible for disease-causing conditions; and afford these groups a definite financial incentive for removing these conditions.

"This can be done by means of small weekly payments from employes, supplemented by proportionate contributions from employers and government at a rate reducible in proportion to the reduction of sickness.

"3.—Link the co-operative efforts of the three responsible groups with the work of national, state and local health agencies, and utilize these agencies in the administration of the health insurance system.

"4.—Afford a better basis for the co-operation of the medical profession with public health agencies.

"5.—Eliminate the elements of paernalism and charity-giving by making employes and the public, as well as the employers, joint agents in the control of this fund.

"A governmental system of health insurance," the statement concludes, "can be adopted to American conditions and, when adapted, will prove to be a health measure of extraordinary value."

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only way way to cure catarhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

Stiff Neck Quickly Cured.
A stiff neck is usually caused by rheumatism in the muscles of the neck. It comes on suddenly and is often mistaken for a sprain. It is quickly cured by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. Mrs. Conrad Oliver, of Little Falls, N. Y., writes: "About three years ago my husband sprained his neck. We had a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment in the house and applied it. It afforded quick relief, and after using it a few times all of the lameness and stiffness in his neck and shoulders had entirely disappeared."

EXPRESS CO. INSTITUTES LIABILITY INSURANCE

Charles Lockrow, manager of the Wells Fargo Express Company branch in this city, yesterday received a notice from the officials of the company advising him that all employes of the Fulton branch will hereafter be provided with sickness and accident insurance by the company.

The company requires an employe to be in service six months before he is entitled to the insurance, and at the end of that period, an insurance policy covering sickness and accident is taken out for him. In the event of injury, either while on duty or off, any employe bearing insurance will receive a regular weekly payment until such time as he is able to resume work. In case of death, the company will provide for the insured man's family for a certain period.

Mr. Lockrow expects to receive detailed instructions covering the new plan within the next few days. The company has set aside a sum from its earnings which will be used to finance the insurance project and the employes will not be required or asked to contribute to the fund by deductions from their salaries, as is the case in insurance plans of other corporations.

ABOUT THE TOWN

Three mounted policemen will head the Flag Day parade to-night, which will start from the Elks' Home at seven o'clock. The members of the "finest" detailed to the mounted duty have been brushing up on their horseman-ship during the past few days, which accounts for an eager desire on the part of these same gentlemen to stand at all times, even when requested to be seated. One officr frankly admits that he has never ridden anything since his "hobby-horse" days, but it is understood that the entire trio will do them-selves proud this evening. After a long search, a local veterinary has selected three steeds for the occasion, any of which, he states, would give even "Don Quixote's" fiery charger a run for the money.

In answer to an advertisement inserted in this paper yesterday, for the services of several young men and women to take part in a home-talent minstrel show which will be staged here during Old Home week, (see adv.), the advertiser received the following letter from one of the genus rube, with histrionic aspiration, as follows:

> Deer Sir:—I seen your ad in the Times, and I would like to take part in your minstrel show. I see you want somebody to work in a Olio. Now I don't know what a Olio is, but if you will tell me I might take the job. I worked some at the cannin facktry last sümmer. Hopping to here from you sun, I remaine,—

In to-day's Post-Standard, W. P. And then he occupies two columns in proving that he is right.

From the Springfield Republican—description of Charles E. Hughes—

> "The body has remained remarkably young and the former justice bears himself very much as a naval officer. He stands about 5 feet 11 inches, but would be a full two inches shorter if it were not for the long and serviceable legs."

Prospective local concessionaires who had in mind the strip of State land on South First street as an ideal location for their booths will do well to cast about for other sites, as it is not likely that the city Park Commission will permit anyone to use the property.

Jesse A. Morrill, who has spent a great deal of time and some money in improving the appearance of the river bank park, said this morning the matter would be brought to the attention of the Park Commissioners at once. He stated, however, that the park had just been put into fair shape, and the lawn rolled and cut, and expressed a doubt that the Commission would care to permit the park to be torn up and trampled upon, which would be the inevitable result if concessions were permitted to occupy it.

Mr. Morrill is now collecting a fund of $100, which will be used in further improvements on the park, and in keeping the grass cut short during the summer months. A portion of the money has already been contributed.

PUBLIC BAND CONCERTS MAY SOON BE HELD

Lynn Richardson, manager of the Elks' band, has returned to this city after a short business trip following the attendance at the Elks' State Convention in Peekskill, and will confer with the Common Council committee this week relative to the band concerts, for which the council voted the sum of $300 at the last meeting.

The band is to provide seven concerts for the appropriation made, and it is practically certain that the first concert will be held within a week or ten days. The committee will arrange the schedule of concerts with Mr. Richardson, setting the dates for the three west side concerts and the four to be held on the east side of the river.

SHOULD SLOAN'S LINIMENT GO ALONG?

Of course it should! For after a strenuous day when your muscles have been exercised to the limit an application of Sloan's liniment will take the soreness and stiffness away and get you in fine shape for the morrow. You should also use it for a sudden attack of toothache, stiff neck, backache, stings, bites and the many accidents that are incidental to a vacation. "We would as soon leave our baggage as go on a vacation or camp out without Sloan's Liniment." Writes one vacationist: "We use it for everything from cramps to toothache." Put a bottle in your bag, be prepared and have no regrets.

MILK GRADING BEGINS SOON

Health Officer and Meat Inspector Will Determine Classification of Milk Served to Consumers.

Dr. W. W. Kennedy, meat inspector and veterinarian and Dr. Hall, city health officer, have completed arrangements for the grading of the milk sold in this city, and will start work at once on analysis and inspection.

The State Bureau of Health this year has divided all saleable milk into three grade, Class, A. B. and C.

To qualify in the class A grade, the milk dealer's dairy score must be 80 or over. Dr. Kennedy will make a careful inspection of the cattle, and Dr. Hall will investigate the sanitary conditions in the dairies in classifying the various farms. The bacterial count for Grade A milk must not exceed 500,000, and the milk must be marked "Clear" of sediment. It must contain four per cent. fat, and 12 plus in solids. The temperature at all times must be no higher than 50 degrees.

Grade B milk must carry a dairy score of 70, bacterial count not exceeding 100,000, and have a mark of "Fairly Clear" of sediment. It must contain not less than 3.5 fat, and 12 plus in solids.

All milk from dairies scoring 70, which contains 150,000 bacteria, and has a sediment rating of "Fairly Clear", will be classed as Grade C milk. This grade must contain 3.7 fat and 12 plus in solids, with a temperature of 50 degrees.

The dairies and milk sold by all twelve dealers of this city will be examined by Drs. Hall and Kennedy, and the ratings of each dairy will be published. The inspection will require about two weeks' time.

WILL LECTURE TO WOMEN

On Wednesday, June 21st at the Baptist church, Mrs. W. C. Elmore, of Hamilton, N. Y., will deliver two lectures on missionary work in India, and will relate some of her experiences while a resident of that country. The afternoon lecture will be reserved for the women of the church and their friends, while the evening lecture will be open to all.

Mrs. Elmore was a resident of India for twelve years, and was stationed in Calcutta, Bagdad and other principalities during that time. She is a well-known speaker on missionary subjects, and was one of a group of Baptist missionary workers which visited most of the cities of the country in connection with the Jubilee of Women's Foreign Missionary societies. She lectures in Indian costume, and describes very vividly the conditions that obtain among the Hindus. Her lecture, "Behind the Purdah" which is delivered to women only, portrays the life of the Hindu women, many of whom are held prisoners in their homes.

WILL NAME THIRD SET OF RECEIVERS

Justice Andrews, in Foreclosure Action, May Rename Two Former Members for Empire United.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Justice Andrews Saturday, will name a third set of receivers for the Empire United Railway, Inc. The receivers will be for the Empire United in the foreclosure action. It is expected that C. Loomis Allen and H. S. Holden will be named.

Messrs. Allen and Holden are already receivers of the road having been named when the road went into voluntary receivership following the default of the bonds. At that time receivers were asked for in a creditors' action.

The present receivership is asked under foreclosure proceedings instituted by the Equitable Trust Company as trustee under the mortgage in a bonholders' action and which Justice Andrews granted to the Equitable Trust Company, April 15.

The third receivership for which a bond of $50,000 has been filed is for the Rochester, Syracuse and Eastern and Justice Andrews named Messrs. Allen and Holden at the request of the bondholders' protective committee of the R. S. and E.

As soon as the foreclosure proceedings are instituted by the bonholders' committee of the Syracuse, Lake Shore and Northern that Justice Andrews will name Messrs. Allen and Holden and that a similar proceeding will be instituted under foreclosure proceedings of the Auburn and Northern. This will make five separate receivership in the affairs of the company pending toward a re-organization.

PRESIDENT REVIEWS FLAG DAY PARADE

(By United Press)

Washington—Washington to-day held a mammoth Flag Day "Preparedness" parade. Citizens of the capital, including 40,000 employes of the Federal Government turned out en masse in an impressive demonstration in favor of adequate national defense.

Following the historic route along Pennsylvania avenue, the marchers bearing with miniature American flags, and to the music of national airs passed before the reviewing stand in which were President Wilson, members of his cabinet and foremost officials of the Government.

The President has asked the country to give an especial significance to this Flag Day and this is Washington's way of doing it.

Employes of the Department marched in units, Joseph Tumulty, secretary to the President, heading a delegation of twenty-five White House officials and newspapermen assigned to the Executive Mansion.

Invitations to former Presidents Roosevelt and Taft to march in the parade had been sent out, in addition to about one thoisand special invitations to men prominent in the preparedness movement.

The city mail service was suspended so employes of the Post Office Department as well as those of the city post office might march.

TWO MILES OF SILENT WOMEN AT ST. LOUIS

(By United Press)

St. Louis—Thousands of American suffragists here to-day to impress the Democratic convention, stood in a silent line from the Hotel Jefferson to the Coliseum, almost two miles, as a plea for a suffrage plank to the Democratic platform.

The "Golden Lane" so-called because of the garb of the women—white suits draped with yellow sashes—was under the direction of the Equal Suffrage league of Missouri.

The delegates and visitors from the Jefferson will be forced to ride through line if they go via automobile or chose to walk up St. Louis' Downtown Automobile "road."

Speech making tours of the various state delegation headquarters will be made by the women during the convention.

There are ten women delegates to the democratic convention from five states.

"A Herald of Progress"

BREAKING THE ICE

By ALAN HINSDALE

My cousin Polly was a witch—at least there was a witchery about her that drew men to her as flowers draw bees. I called her a flirt, not doubting that she purposely exercised this fascination upon men in some such spirit as a fisherman decoys trout.

One day when we were sitting at a table looking over a book of pictures together Polly drew closer to me than was necessary for her to see the pictures, and some loose strands of her hair grazed my cheek. I turned upon her and said:

"None of that, Pol. You and I are cousins. We have been brought up together like brother and sister. If you throw a spell over me you'll spoil it all."

She seemed hurt. Her only reply was a reproachful look through those expressive eyes of hers. I considered it one of her wiles, and it irritated me.

"Do you know what you're trying to do? You're bent on scooping me in as you have so many other fellows. You want me to be soft on you for awhile; then, when I get beside myself with love for you, you'll say, 'What a pity that you should have so misunderstood me!' All our cousinly friendship will be gone, and there will be nothing to take its place."

She listened to me, looking as if she were about to cry, till I had finished, then said in an injured tone:

"You have no right to assume that I have ever treated any man dishonorably. Men have sought my society, and, since girls like the companionship of the opposite sex, I have encouraged them to be friends. But I deny that I have encouraged them to be lovers."

With this she walked out of the room, keeping her back to me, evidently to hide a dampness in the eyes.

I was puzzled. Was this a part of her method of enticing a man for the purpose of refusing him, or was she speaking the truth? Whether it was her game or whether she wanted me, I was at a loss to decide. If she wanted me it seemed likely that she had made a move to break through the ordinary friendliness of my treatment of her, which would be perfectly legitimate in any girl toward any fellow she desires to be on lover-like terms with.

Whichever of these propositions was true the effect was the same. Polly had inoculated me. With what? I don't know. Was it curiosity? That was an ingredient. Was it a realization that I had not before experienced that I wanted her? Possibly. Whatever it was it had got into my blood and had produced that fever which accompanies love.

While before this episode it had not occurred to me to trouble myself about how many fellows Polly had turned down, I now began to dread that the next man who was attentive to her she would accept. Then it occurred to me that she might have felt an incipient love for me which I had nipped in the bud. A bud destroyed will never bud again. The thought was maddening. I wanted to go to Polly and undo what I had done.

But supposing she had simply been tempted to try her fascinations upon me? If I went to her with a serious and sorrowful face she would laugh at me. At any rate, what I had said to her about breaking up our cousinly status was true. When next we met there would be something that had never existed before between us—constraint. She would be shut up like an oyster, I like a clam.

And so we were. There was no more "Hello, Pol!" "Morning, Bob!" then an interchange of chaff, in which I usually got worsted. Polly seemed distrustful of looking at me. And I was glad of it, for if I caught her eye I wouldn't know what to express in mine. I remarked that it was a very disagreeble, damp morning, and she replied, "Very," in a tone that indicated the conditions between us were more disagreeable than the morning. Then she took up a book and pretended to read. I looked out through a window. Presently I tired of the situation and nerved myself to break it.

"You seem very much interested in your book," I remarked.

Silence for awhile, at the end of which I said, "I presume I owe you an apology."

She looked away from the book, but not at me. She was evidently ready to listen.

"I should not have accused you," I went on, "of drawing fellows in to throw them over."

What marvelous consistency! Quite worthy of a woman. Nevertheless there was a telltale look in her eye that belied her words. I drew my chair nearer. She did not move away.

"Pol," I said, "I believe I would like to feel those stray hairs graze my cheek."

No reply. I drew my chair close beside hers and looked at the book she was reading. It was upside down. In order to see the better I placed my cheek so near hers that they touched.

The ice was broken—that is, if a kiss can be spoken of as ice. Then I talked a lot of what I now call balderdash, though Pol pronounced it "very sweet." If she had referred to the kiss the words would have been something approaching a description of what it was.

SCIENCE—INDUSTRY.

Artesian Wells Made to Pump.

The field men of the United States geological survey in their investigations of the ground water resources of the Virginia coastal plain have observed that the flows from many artesian wells in that region are utilized to drive hydraulic rams for the purpose of lifting the water to higher levels. Along the lower courses of the Potomac and Rappahannock and along the shores of the many inlets that run back from Chesapeake bay above the James there are hundreds of artesian wells that supply a perennial flow of beautifully clear water, which is, as a rule, excellently adapted to all domestic uses and is largely utilized by the canning factories and other industrial establishments that abound in that part of the country. Though the pressure of the water from the wells is ample at the shore level, the head diminishes so quickly with increase in elevation that no flow can be obtained along the higher banks above the shores where the water is most needed. One method of obtaining it at these higher levels is to use the force developed by the artesian flow to operate hydraulic rams, which in turn raise the water to the heights desired along the bluffs above the river and inlets. Thus it may be said that the artesian wells pump themselves.

Cascara Bark Industry.

Thirty-six thousand pounds of cascara bark were cut on the Siuslaw national forest, in Oregon, during the latter half of last year, according to the government's foresters. A steady demand for this bark for medicinal purposes both in the United States and in Europe is reported to exist. Before the war most of the exported product went to England and Germany. The cascara bark industry began, it is asserted, in California about 1865, and for many years California led in the production of bark, exporting as much as 50,000 pounds in a single year. Now western Oregon and, to a lesser degree, western Washington are the chief sources of supply. The forest experts say that the destructive methods usually practiced in obtaining the bark have resulted in almost exterminating the cascara tree on privately owned land, leaving the national forests as the last source of supply.

Holding Bricks on Roof.

Bricks and material for the reconstruction of a chimney may be safely and conveniently placed on a roof by using the frame shown in the sketch, says Popular Mechanics. It is simple in construction and requires less lumber than a platform. The latter, if rested on the roof gutter, may cause damage, and if the gutter is not in good condition an accident may result.

FRAME HOOKS OVER THE RIDGE.

Electric Furnace Best.

An electric furnace for the heat treatment of steel used in automobile construction has been introduced. Its method of producing uniform, dependable heat that is so urgently sought by automobile manufacturers is quite novel in electric furnace practice, although its principle is comparable to that of the well known Nernst lamp. Both the floor and the domelike covers of this furnace are of a refractory material which is practically nonconducting at ordinary temperatures. To start the furnace a current is passed through a bed of coke laid on its floor. On being sufficiently heated the floor becomes a conductor and in turn heats the walls and top, rendering them conductive, until finally the entire furnace becomes incandescent. It is stated by those who have tried the furnace that its use in the heat treatment of automobile parts promises to be extensive in the future.

The Romans as Fighters.

The Roman became the greatest soldier in the world simply because he made soldiering his one supreme aim and business. The Romans studied war just as the Greeks studied art, the men of the middle ages theology, the Egyptians the art of agriculture. They despised literature, art, philosophy, commerce and even luxury and set their whole heart on becoming fighters and conquerors. In that way they developed very naturally the genius and means for successful warfare which made them the masters of the world.

There was nothing miraculous in the prowess of the legions. It was the natural result of their undivided effort, protracted through generations.

Where to Begin.

"Look here," said the reforming husband. "We must have things arranged in this house so that we shall know just where everything is kept."

"With all my heart," sweetly answered his wife, "and let us begin with your late hours, my love. I should very much like to know where they are kept."—Stray Stories.

ARTHUR'S WOOING

By ETHEL HOLMES

Jeannette Wild was an incorrigible flirt. Perhaps it was not her fault; perhaps it was. There was something about her that attracted men, whether it was intentional or not. A pleasant smile hovered about her lips; there was a sparkle in her eye. When she said anything droll she had a way of cocking her head on one side, like a bird, that was very attractive. Jeannette was an innocent girl in every respect, and no word of scandal was ever spoken against her.

But her flirtations were very annoying to her mother. In the first place, her daughter was too young to make an intelligent choice of a husband; in the second, she had not finished her education. When she was nineteen years old, having become entangled with three suitors, her mother resolved upon drastic measures. The spring was coming on, and the good lady, dreading the advantages that summer possessed for love affairs, resolved to take her daughter where a man could not get near enough to fall in love with her.

Mrs. Wild had no confidence in any place of abode that was not isolated. A land fortress would need a moat, which was impracticable. No place would do unless surrounded by water. So an island it must be.

In Casco bay, on the Maine coast, are a number of islands. In the center of one of these islands is a cottage. Mrs. Wild rented this cottage with a view to removing her family and servants there. But, alas, it is difficult for women to get on without men. Mrs. Wild dared not live on the island without one. Besides, she needed one to run her motorboat. There was another reason for a man's presence. Mrs. Wild desired to prevent any of her daughter's suitors from landing on her retreat, and she needed some one strong enough to keep them off.

Mrs. Wild advertised for a person to fill this requirement. Several young men answered her advertisement, but the lady did not engage any of them. She waited till an elderly one applied for the job and engaged him.

John Doolan had white hair and a white beard. But he seemed to be quite strong and said that he was perfectly able to hold the dock against all comers. He went to the island a couple of days before the family to make preparations. When they arrived all was in order for their reception.

As Mrs. Wild had anticipated, they had not been at their summer home long before one of Jeannette's suitors appeared at the dock. He was refused a landing by John Doolan. He sailed around to another part of the island, but John was there with a gun to receive him. Mrs. Wild was so pleased with this action of John's that she gave him a five dollar gold piece. Soon after this another boat appeared, and a handsome young fellow in yachting costume was about to step out on to the landing when John ordered him off. He poked a card at his opposer, but John said that if he were the president himself he could not come ashore. Argument having failed, the visitor tried bribery. John proved incorruptible. There was nothing for the yachtsman to do but sail away.

Mrs. Wild, to whom John reported all these noble acts of defense, was delighted. On several occasions he brought the cards that were given him to his mistress. Some of the men who had left them she knew, and some were strangers to her. It made no difference who they were. She had determined to keep men away from her daughter for that summer, and, having secured the services of a man who was capable and trustworthy, she gave herself no concern. She declared that it was the first summer she had felt easy about Jeannette since she was fourteen years old.

But one day a thunderbolt came out of a clear sky. The fond mother while taking a stroll over her island, walking through a thick wood heard voices near her. She listened and recognized Jeannette's voice. Then came a man's deeper tones. The latter sounded much like John Doolan.

Could it be that the flirt, deprived of association with men, had cast her toils about the old servitor? The suspicion brought a shock to the doting mother.

Advancing toward the sounds, she peeped through a break in the leaves, and there, sitting on a log with their backs to her, were John and Jeannette, John's arm around Jeannette's waist.

Mrs. Wild tore through the underbrush like a fury. Hearing the noise of breaking brush behind them, the culprits jumped to their feet, turned and confronted the angry mother.

While she was delivering a tirade of reproaches John pulled off his white beard and stood revealed as the most persistent of Jeannette's suitors.

"Woe is me, Mrs. Wild," he said with head bent low. "I confess myself a great sinner. Jeannette wrote me that you were to remove her here, and I, seeing your advertisement for a defender, applied for the place in the uniform of a veteran. I have performed my duties to the best of my ability."

"It's all right, mamma," pleaded Jeannette. "Your bringing me here has brought me to a decision. I love Arthur and will marry no one else. His wooing has charmed me."

Since Arthur was an eligible young man with a fortune Mrs. Wild made a virtue of necessity, forgave them and consented to an early marriage.

MINERALS IN FOODS.

There are a large number of people who have some indefinite notion about iron in foods, thinking it is in amounts big enough to see with the naked eye if they but know how. It is not. Prospective mothers begin to learn about their mineral needs when the doctor prescribes lime tablets, which contain the inorganic mineral, known to be far less absorbable than when organic, as in plants. The plants take the inorganic minerals of the soil and make them over into live stuff for him. He cannot seem to get them so well in any other way.

Not only anaemia, but many other illnesses come because not enough foods containing minerals are eaten, or if eaten are made ineffective because the strong acids taken go after them for their own use. If we could talk baby talk to them we might say, "The acids will catch you if you don't watch out."

Now, just to get a little bit of a notion about how very slight in quantity, though so wondrous in quality, these vitalizing minerals are, any cook and any eater should study some reliable book on the matter. You will learn that there is nothing quite so heavy in lime as turnip tops, which also means the tops of the kohlrabi. How much lime? Oh, about one-half of 1 per cent, but that is a lot compared with what is in the valuable spinach, which has only .09 per cent. Sherman calls these minerals "ash constituents," which is a bit old fashioned. Others call them "nutrient salts," and common everyday people say mineral matter. How great are little things is what we need to realize in this connection. They are almost comparable with radium in this respect.

A Shampoo Scheme.

The possibilities of the hot water bottle as an adjunct in drying the hair after a shampoo have just been discovered by one woman. Half filled with hot water and applied to the scalp and hair it dries both rapidly and pleasantly. With a second bottle applied to the length of the hair it is possible to recline luxuriously with a book while one's hair is almost drying itself.

Pound Cake.

Take one pound two ounces of sugar, a pound of butter, a pound of flour, ten eggs, vanilla to taste. Cream the sugar and eggs together and the flour and butter. Mix both of these together, add vanilla and beat until light and creamy. It is best to use one's hand, as it makes the cake much lighter. Bake in moderate oven one hour. This makes four pounds.

Way of Woman With an Old Shirt.

Men's shirts are usually made of such good materials that it seems a shame to discard them because the fronts and cuffs are worn. One woman makes good looking aprons of them by using the back of the shirt for the front of the apron, finishing with a bias and cut from the worn fronts and getting strings from the sleeves.

Apricot Tapioca.

Simmer three tablespoonfuls of tapioca in two cupfuls of milk, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and half a teaspoonful of almond extract. Cool, add a cupful of whipped cream and pour over crushed macaroons soaked in apricot sirup. Serve chilled with whipped cream and apricots.

GOOD RESULT OF A BLUNDER.

Roger Shook was a self made man who in his youth received no educational advantages. He made a fortune and had but one child, a daughter, to inherit it. This daughter, Amelia, he sent to school and to college. She developed literary tastes, but of this her father knew nothing, for he had no knowledge whatever of literature. When he heard his daughter speak of "The Light of Asia" he supposed she referred to the illuminating substance used in that part of the globe. On hearing her say that she had spent the morning with "Dombey and Son" he told her to have the bill sent in at once, since he was closing up all outstanding accounts. "Very Hard Cash" he supposed meant a specie basis.

So frequent were these blunders that Amelia dreaded to speak of anything beyond her father's ken, for he was liable to mortify her by blurting them out in the presence of educated people. Indeed, the old man was rather fond of taking the lead in conversation, and the less he knew about a subject the more anxious he was to prove his familiarity with it.

Mr. Shook, not having a son to whom to leave his business, had brought up a young man from office boy to succeed him in its management. This man, Thomas Jones, he desired should marry his daughter. Jones was a fine business man and a fine fellow, and Amelia liked him very well, though she didn't care to communicate the fact to her father or to Mr. Jones. Jones was even more anxious for the match than his employer. He was not insensible to its advantages and was desperately in love with the girl. But, while he did not fear to tackle any man on a business proposition, he had no courage whatever in telling a woman that he loved her. The consequence was that the match hung fire.

One afternoon Mr. Shook went home from the office to find his family gadding. Some one was ringing on the telephone. He took down the receiver.

"Is Miss Shook in?" called the soft voice of a woman.

"No. Any message for her?"

"Tell her 'Adam Bede' has just come in."

"Adam who?"

"Bede—B-e-d-e."

There was an aside in the dialogue that was unexpressed by Mr. Shook.

"Well, I'll be jinged! I never thought that of Amelia. I didn't believe she'd meet any one in an underhanded way."

The phone was not working very well. There were some incoherent words, ending with "'Nicholas Nickleby' next week."

"Great heavens!" muttered the father to himself. "Is she playing two of 'em?"

"Any more?" he asked, dissembling.

"'Tristram Shandy' will"— What followed was not to be distinguished.

"Please repeat the name."

"'Tristram Shandy' [unintelligible words], 'Sterne.'"

"What Sterne?"

"Laurence."

"Just so. Now, will you listen to me?"

"Yes. What is it?"

"You have Thomas Jones there tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, punctual, and don't you forgit it."

"'Tom Jones,' by Fielding?"

"Tom Jones by his father—Thomas J. Jones, managing man of Shook & Co."

"Who's talking?"

"I'm Miss Shook's father."

There was a brief pause, then, "All right, Mr. Shook; I'll do as you say."

A faint giggle accompanied the click that marked the hanging up of the receiver, but Mr. Shook was too much in earnest to notice it.

The next afternoon at 3 o'clock there was a telephone ring. Miss Shook responded.

"Mr. Jones is here."

"Where?"

Amelia was astonished. She was about to ask for an explanation when it occurred to her that the least said the soonest mended. She didn't care to let the librarian into any affair that had gone wrong. Her father was liable to interfere between her and Mr. Jones at any time. She would go and get the explanation from Mr. Jones herself.

"All right; I'll be over directly."

She found Mr. Jones pacing to and fro nervously. She led him into an alcove.

"Well," she said, "what can I do for you?"

"What can I do for you? The librarian sent me a line saying you would like to see me here at 3 o'clock."

There was a conference, during which Miss Shook went to the librarian and learned that the message had come from her father. Indeed, she drew forth the whole dialogue.

"Singular," she muttered, "that my name should be Amelia and his Tom Jones." Then she asked for a copy of Fielding's novel, "Tom Jones." The librarian gave it to her, and she gave it to Mr. Jones. He took it home and read a love story of which the hero was Tom Jones and the heroine Amelia. It gave him courage to make a proposal for the real Amelia's hand. The old man, instead of spoiling it, had brought it about. When, long after the marriage, he was told of what he had done he merely remarked, "I thought them fellers had mighty queer names."

A Gown For the Good Old Summer Time

THIS model clever women may copy at home. It is developed in white net, tiny ruffles climbing up a skirt that has four embroidered net panels that fall like aprons. The surplice waist drape is held with white crochet buttons. White taffeta ribbon girdles the waist line, and the bishop sleeves are ruffled four times at the wrist. This makes a charming house gown for hot days.

Pink Lawn, White Yoke, Revers and Collars.

Dainty separate waist of pink lawn with a deep yoke of white. Revers and collar of white have a pink hem.

One of the charms of this separate blouse is its color scheme. The model is fashioned from pink lawn, but the deep yoke is of white, with collar and revers of the same. A pink hem is hemstitched to the collar and revers, giving the necessary touch of color after a sudden "break" from pink to white in the waist and yoke. In medium size the design requires 2 yards 36-inch pink and ¾ yard 36-inch white lawn. Either pink or white may be used for the narrow ruffle that outlines the deep yoke.

Since a contrasting material is used for the yoke, unusual care must be taken with the cutting of the waist. Note the part of the cutting guide which shows the placement of yoke and revers. This shows that the pattern must be placed on a lengthwise thread of an open width of material. Now, this rule must be followed in using white lawn, just as if the waist were being developed entirely in pink.

The sleeve and cuff, however, are laid on an open width of pink material, after which the lawn is folded to cut the remaining parts of the waist. A strip of lawn long enough to accommodate the back yoke will have to be cut from the white material and the yoke placed on the lengthwise fold as illustrated, with the collar included. The back of the waist is laid on a lengthwise fold of pink lawn, while the front and trimming piece are placed on a lengthwise thread.

The underbody requires 1 yard of 36-inch material and this is folded as also shown in the cutting guide. Place the back directly on the lengthwise fold, then put the peplum and front on a lengthwise thread.

With the various pieces properly placed, the home dressmaker may [be sure] that there will be no waste of material, nor mistake in the work, [and may] proceed with the cutting, confident

The smartest of the new blouses feature deep yokes which are made of all kinds of materials in contrast to the waist proper. Herein lies a strong hint for the dressmaker who has a genius for combining small quantities of goods into a delightful whole.

Separate skirts usually fashioned from one of the soft woolen materials, are generally made on conservative lines, wide enough for comfort in active exercise but not over full, well supplied with pockets and a trifle high in the waistline.

THE JEWELRY CRAZE.

Dirty Ornaments Not Attractive, So Polish Up Your Treasures.

All jewelry that is constantly worn should be washed every month or six weeks. It is not a difficult matter either. All you have to do is to make a soapy lather and add a few drops of ammonia. Take an old toothbrush and brush all the dirt out of the crevices. When quite clean take the jewelry out of the water and rub perfectly dry with a chamois leather or ordinary tissue paper.

When cleaning an article that is set with stones, such as a ring, be more gentle with the toothbrush, for if you brush too vigorously you may easily loosen a stone. A pendant set with emeralds, rubies or diamonds is better immersed in a little eau de cologne than water.

If you happen to be the lucky possessor of any pearls remember they must never be put in soapy water, though sea water is good for them. Pearls that are shut away and seldom worn lose their beautiful sheen, so if you have such a necklace wear it regularly, even if under your waist. The contact with the skin will keep pearls a good color.

Turquoise are best washed with warm water and a little ammonia, but no soap. Soap is apt to turn their pretty blue into a green. When you are cleaning opals be careful not to drop them, for they are brittle and chip with alarming ease. In fact, they have earned a name for being unlucky simply because they are so fragile.

When you are not wearing jewelry do not leave it lying about or in a drawer knocking against other ornaments. Keep it either in a piece of leather or in cotton wool. Steel ornaments should always be wrapped up carefully in tissue paper, for the air will quickly spoil their beauty.

SPRING DISH OF EGGS AND SPINACH.—One-quarter peck of spinach, six eggs, one tablespoonful butter, one tablespoonful flour, one teaspoonful salt, one-eighth teaspoonful white pepper, one teaspoonful grated onion, one-quarter teaspoonful paprika. Wash and clean the spinach and then wash through several waters; put on to boil with one cupful boiling water, cover until it comes to a boil and then uncover and keep turning ten to fifteen minutes, or until tender. Drain (save the water), chop fine and cover with the sauce made as follows: Put the butter and onion into saucepan, add the flour and mix well or until smooth, then add the spinach water (if there is not a cupful add enough cold water to make one cupful); boil three minutes; add the salt and pepper; pour over the spinach and spread on platter (one that can be put in oven), and with spoon make six places big enough to hold one raw egg. Be sure the cavity is deep enough. Break one egg into a saucer and slide into the space in the spinach. After the six eggs are in the spinach dust with salt and paprika, place in moderate oven five to six minutes for medium cooked eggs, ten minutes for firm eggs.

Savory Rice.—One cupful rice, two cupfuls tomatoes, one-half cupful finely cut onion, two tablespoonfuls chopped parsley, one teaspoonful drippings, one teaspoonful salt, one-fourth teaspoonful paprika, one-fourth teaspoonful Worcestershire sauce. Put the onion and drippings into pan, fry until the onion is tender; add the strained tomatoes, salt, paprika, Worcestershire sauce and rice, which has been washed, boiled, drained and blanched; stir until the rice is hot; sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Tipsy Potatoes.—Take large sweet potatoes. Peel and cut in slices about half an inch thick and place in a baking dish, adding sugar, mace, lemon peel, ground cloves, a single peppercorn and half a cupful of boiling water. Bake until soft. Then uncover and add a glass of rum. Sherry or claret may be used instead. Keep warm, but not hot, until ready to serve.

Beet and Egg Salad.—Cut six boiled beets into dice, marinate with French dressing and let stand one or more hours. Cook four eggs twenty minutes in water just below the boiling point; then cover with cold water; let remain ten minutes, strip off the shells, chop the whites and press the yolks through a sieve. Arrange the beets in a mound, surround with alternate rows of the whites and yolks and garnish with mayonnaise and sprigs of parsley.

LUXURY GROWS WITH SALARY

A Discussion of How, With Increase of Income and No Apparent Increase of Pleasures, Coin Still Takes on the Vanishing Qualities of Mist.

"It is easy enough to make money," said a business man the other day. "The hard thing to learn is how to save and how to spend it. The first year I was married I was earning three thousand, last year I pulled down four, and this year I am getting away with five. As I've said, it's easy enough to make money—any man with average intelligence can do it—but how in the world are you going to save it? I don't seem to be getting any more pleasure or comfort for the five thousand than I did for three. I am certain I don't put away any more than I did on the smaller salary, and the question that stumps me is, Where does the money go? There is certainly a leak somewhere. The whole trouble lies in the fact that I don't know how to spend it."

This situation is one that many a family faces. All may not be in circumstances as comfortable as those of the man mentioned above, but the situation is practically the same.

Family thrift is almost an unknown quantity in the average American household. Our men are famous for their generosity, and most of their wives run their households on the same generous scale. As the income grows larger the demands on it grow bigger, but so gradually does this change take place that it is almost imperceptible. A luxury or two here, a pleasure there, little things which seem of no consequence at the time of their indulgence, but mount up at an alarming rate at the end of a year.

It is quite true that a man might not be able to put his hand on a single tangible thing which he was enjoying with a salary of $5,000 a year that he did not have when his earning capacity was little more than half this amount. Extravagance creeps upon us so gradually that the inroads it makes upon our incomes are hardly noticed at the time. It is only when we sit down and take account of our mode of existence that we realize we are spending more and getting less for the money.

Every sane man and woman wants to save. They know it is their only insurance against the future. No matter how well matters are going at the present moment, every family stands the chance of facing a rainy day, and if they are wise they wish to be prepared for that dreary occasion. Sickness or loss of position has nothing like the dread for the man and wife who have a comfortable savings account tucked away in some bank as it has for the poor individuals who spend every cent as it comes in, draining the family exchequer to its last cent at the end of each month. Sickness or loss of position to such persons is a disaster, sometimes even a tragedy.

Perhaps you think it is impossible to save on the salary you are earning at present. In many instances, unfortunately, this is true. But, whatever your income, sit down and make out a family budget that shall provide for a certain percentage of savings regularly.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About a Fairy and a Poor Farmer.

A LEGEND FROM GERMANY.

How Luck and Fortune Came to a Good Natured Plowman—Finding the Magic Rake—A Little Lady on Horseback—Information For Little People.

Polly Ann and little Ned were getting sleepy when uncle began his story. It was about

THE MAGIC RAKE.

Hans was a plowman, but was very poor, for, no matter how hard he worked, his wages were so small that he was barely able to get enough to eat.

He was a most obliging and generous young fellow, however, and never wearied of helping his neighbors when they needed assistance.

One day when Hans was busy plowing a field he found, to his surprise, a broken rake lying on the ground.

"I wonder whose rake it is?" said Hans to himself. "It is a fine rake and only needs a little mending to make it as good as new."

Stooping down, he picked up the rake, which was of a different pattern from any he had ever seen.

"Some one has lost it," thought Hans, "or perhaps has put it down until he can have it mended."

When the day's work was done and Hans was ready to go home he noticed that the broken rake was still lying unclaimed by any one.

"I'll take it home and mend it," he decided. "Some one will most likely come and search for it tomorrow."

So Hans took the rake home, and, as he was very handy with tools, he mended the rake so skillfully that it was indeed as good as new.

The next morning Hans set forth to complete the plowing of the field and, taking the mended rake with him, laid it down where he had found it.

On his way home he passed the spot where he had placed the rake, but it was no longer there.

"The owner has come for it," said Hans aloud.

Hans turned in astonishment, and there stood a little fellow not more than a foot high, dressed in brown leather, with a curious, conical cap on his head.

"Thank you very much, Hans, for mending my rake. I have been able to do nothing with it for a long time, but you have made it better than ever," said the little man. He added: "Take it for your own. It will bring you luck."

So Hans became the owner of the magic rake. Ever after his crops grew wonderfully, and in time he became rich.

A Painter and His Pet.

Rembrandt, the famous painter, had a monkey he loved very much. The monkey took sick and died as Rembrandt was painting the picture of a noble family. He was told at once, and he commenced to cry, and then he started to draw the picture he was making. Nothing would stop him from doing this, although every one tried to do so. When the man he was painting the picture for saw the picture he refused to take it, for Rembrandt told him the picture was of the monkey and not of his family. It is said this picture is still in existence.

THIS WAS FLAG TAG DAY AS WELL

It was a hard hearted man indeed, who refused to purchase a flag from the six young women of the Fulton Surgical Dressings Committee, who were on the streets bright and early this morning selling flags of all dimensions for the benefit of their organization. Business proved so brisk that the venders were early lamenting the fact that they had not purchased a larger stock, and indications point to a more successful campaign than the one waged on Decoration Day, when $30 was collected for the purchase of materials with which the ladies make surgical dressings for the United States Army.

The present-day Samaritans hope to collect $50 to-day and if their stock holds out it is very likely that the total sum will reach that figure. Every member of the committee met with great success this morning, and except for occasional pauses to compare notes, they were busy gathering in the nickels, dimes and quarters from the willing purchasers.

Those detailed to the work are Mrs. F. L. Marvin, Mrs. Russell Rogers, Mrs. Wilcox, Mrs. William Lane, Miss Gertrude Whitaker and Miss Blanche Hall.

THOSE POPULAR CLUB STAG DAYS

The House Committee of the Pathfinder Boat Club was not able to complete arrangement in time to open the regular series of Wednesday stag days at the Island to-day, but Maurice Conley of the committee said the first stag event will be held at the Island next Wednesday, and an elaborate program is being arranged for the event.

The stag days proved very popular with the business men and merchants of the city last year, and as most of the stores in the city close on Wednesday afternoon during the summer months, the club was a favorite rendezvous. A baseball game, quoits, tennis and a hearty dinner comprised the usual program, and these features will be continued this year.

Friday the club will hold another field day, which will be followed by a dance for the young people in the evening. C. Milton Allen, Jr., will be in charge of the dance. Dinner will be served as usual.

Ban Will be Placed on All Unlicensed Taxis

Several owners of private sea-going taxicabes who have paid no license fee to the city in accordance with the city ordinance, but who continue to accept local hacking on the quiet, are due for some unpleasant experiences within the next few days, according to a statement made by Chief of Police Dyer this morning.

The department has been making a quiet investigation for the past few weeks, and the Chief has learned that several men are operating taixs for profit within the city limits who have paid no license fee. Most of the offenders station themselves along the street corners late at night, and solicit joy-riding parties as well as local fares.

Local taxi-cab companies which have paid the $50 license fee for public vehicles have complained to the Chief of the unfair competition and have asked that steps be taken at once to put an end to the practice. Enough evidence has been secured, the chief said to-day, to assure the conviction of one notorious offender, and several others will be asked to explain certain trips they have made within the past two weeks.

In addition to soliciting business which they have no legal right to accept, the "private" taxi-owners quote prices below the regular rates in order to get fares. They are well able to do this since they pay no license fee, and make no effort to serve the public except at such times as they are at liberty and feel inclined to do so. For instance one man who will be charged with an infraction of the ordinance, is employed at a local manufacturing plant during the day and only makes an effort to rent his car when he feels like making gasoline money.

VETERANS OF 184TH MEET

enters my mind—was or was not the soldier of the days of '61 the equal of the soldier of to-day? I think so! The armies of your day were commanded by men, human beings, and men are in command of the armies of Europe to-day. The weapons are different, it is true.

"Some time ago I saw a picture of Napoleon; seated upon a throne, and before him lay an aeroplane, a battleship and a locomotive. Napoleon was saying, "O, that I had had these playthings in my day."

"Napoleon, the commander of the French armies of a century past, was the military genius of his age. He worked with the crudest of appliances, including feeble artillery, poor transportation facilities, poor communication facilities. Yet, if he were alive to-day he would still be the military genius of his age, as he would have modern appliances of all kinds equal to those of his enemies.

"So I think it is with you veterans. In '61 you didn't have to face 17 inch howitzers, but you had no trenches thirty feet under ground, nor the facilities for digging them. You didn't have to combat liquid fire, but you had no clay shields to protect you. You never had to face poisonous gas bombs, but you had no protecting helmets. As the weapons increase, so do the means of defense increase, and the relative position of the soldier remains the same.

"The despatches we receive from the firing lines do not tell the complete story and perhaps we shall never know all the truth about this war. But I think events will prove that the soldier of o-day does not surpass in courage the soldier of '61. Human beings are limited by the laws of nature. You have endured as much as they endure, and you had not the facilities those days that they have now. You had to be content with the surgeon of 50 years ago, while the wounded to-day are treated by methods of modern surgery.

"You gave your country the full measure of your strength, and you gave her all your courage and devotion, and after the truth about this great war becomes known, I think it will be found that the position the boys of '61 attained will still be unassailable."

Rev. Charles S. Robertson was also on the program for an address, but he was obliged to limit himself to a few minutes because of another engagement. Mr. Robertson used his time to good advantage however, and delivered some straight-from-the-shoulder statements favoring preparedness. He said he had changed his mind about a number of things in the past eighteen months, and consequently felt that President Wilson should not be censored for changing his opinions on important questions during the same period. He said he believed this country would rise from its lethargy as France did in the event of war, and prove to the world that it wass not a nation decadent in courage and manhood.

Teachers and Pupils Vied in Friendly Spirit to Make Flag Day Parade Pretty---Judge Bulger Excelled in His Favorite Theme

Orchestra Plans Concert in July

An executive committee of the Fulton Symphony orchestra will probably reject a proposal made to the organization by Charles P. Gilmore, of Oswego, lessee of the Quirk Theatre, to the effect that the orchestra give a concert in the theatre July 5, during Old Home Week, on a percentage basis. Under the plan proposed by Mr. Gilmore he was to furnish the services of Mme. Fultoni, the well known singer, and after all expenses had been paid, the theatre was to receive the first $125 of profits, the orchestra to get the remainder.

This scheme did not appeal to the members of the executive committee as a good business proposition for anyone except Mr. Gilmore, and they have practically decided to reject it.

The orchestra plans to hold a concert under its own auspices, however, probably in the Fulton tabernacle on the date mentioned. According to one authority the tabernacle can be secured at practically no cost. It has the advantage of a greater seating capacity, with better ventilation and excellent accoustic properties.

The committee feels that the orchestra should benefit primarily from any concerts held, and they are seriously considering the tabernacle site for the occasion. One member of the committee stated to-day that if the concert is held, it will be under the absolute control of the orchestsra and under the auspices of no organization or private person.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS OF 50 YEARS AGO IN REUNION

(By United Press)

Faribault, Minn.—The romantic and stirring times of school girl days during the Indian wars here were recalled to-day when the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of St. Mary's school for girls was celebrated.

"Old girls;" some of whom were among the earlier graduates of this school that was hewed out in the wild northern woods, gave several thousand dollars to-day for the erection of a gymnasium for the young girls.

The original object of the school was to give daughters of clergymen doing missionary work among the wild Dakota Indians here half a century ago, a chance to get an education.

One of the most beautiful public spectacles ever witnessed in this city, and certainly the most inspiring, was the parade of 600 school children and about 150 members of Fulton Lodge B. P. O. Elks, which was the outstanding feature of the Flag Day exercises held at the Elks' Home last evening. Hon. Charles N. Bulger, the principal speaker of the evening, when complimented on his speech by several members of the Elks, summed up the impression made upon the minds of almost everyone of the 2,000 people present with the words, "Gentlemen, the greatest speech of the evening was made by those little children!"

The members of the lodge, wearing white trousers and dark coats, and carrying walking sticks, gathered at the club house at seven o'clock and were shortly afterward joined by a delegation of 50 boy scouts of the city, who were attended by the Scout drum corps. Headed by the Elks' band of thirty pieces, the parade marched to West Broadway and West First street, where the school children of the west side were waiting to join the line. On the counter march across the Broadway bridge, the west side children, in close formation, occupied the entire structure, and carefully marshalled by their teachers and pupils elected for the purpose they marched with precision and in perfect alignment to East Side park, where the pupils of the State Street, Fourth street and Erie street schools joined the line. The marchers then proceeded to Oneida street, west to First street and south to the Elks' Home.

Pretty Work by Children

As the column, now headed by A. E. Black, grand marshal, with Mounted Officers Bray, Pare and Sweet as aides, neared the club house, the Elks deployed to both sides of the street, and the children marched between the lines to the southern lawns where they were alotted to positions by John W. Stevenson, exalted ruler of the lodge.

Many of the spectators had the first opportunity of viewing the parade as the children marched in, and audible comments of praise were heard as the small boys and girls, some carrying banners in novel effects, and all visibly conscious of their important parts in the affair, took their place.

The Phillips Street children, led by a banner bearing the name of their institution, were the first in line. A large American flag was carried by six boys of the school baseball team, wearing their uniforms, and these were followed by pupils of the school carrying flags to represent the history of the development of the national banner from its earliest stage to its present character.

The Oak Street children were accorded prolonged applause as they marched in, with ten little girls carrying a flag of flowers. The stars and stripes were made of red and white peonies and the blue field of blue cornflowers. 50 small girls carrying a double daisy chain followed.

The classes of 1918 and 1919 of Fulton High school were at the head of the Fourth street school section, and both classes displayed their banners, and the children carried flags.

The Erie Street section was headed by a boy carrying a large orange and white banner bearing the school name, from which flew orange and white streamers, carried by 30 school girls.

How the Elks Appeared

Mr. Stevenson opened the exercises with the Flag Day ritual service of the Elks, in which he was assisted by E. P. Cole, as chaplain, and Edward Rugg, Frank Rumsey, A. E. Black and John Painter, officers of the lodge.

Bernard Jones delivered "The History of Our Flag" from the ritual, and after a band selection Claude E. Guile, for the Elks, gave "The Elks Tribute to The Flag."

Miss Leonora Eames recited the poem, "The Story of Old Glory" in a very acceptable manner. Miss Eames was presented with

Nominations To Be Made at 8 O'Clock

(Special to Evening Times)

St. Louis—Temporary Chairman Glynn of the National Democratic Convention called the session to order at 11:40 o'clock this morning. At 11:55 the Committee on Credentials made its report which was adopted at once. The Committee on Permanent Organization made its report at noon and James was announced as permanent chairman. James was escorted to the platform where he delivered his key note speech.

In his address he spoke in loud praise of President Wilson and every mention of the President's name brought forth loud applause. James said, "President Wilson talks, he doesn't rant. He builds, he doesn't bluster. Without orphaning a single child, without widowing a single wife, without the firing of a gun I say to you Woodrow Wilson has won from the most militant power that ever bruted over a battlefield complete acquiescence to his demands of American rights."

James was forced to repeat this statement and the second time the crowd literally raised the roof registering its approval.

It is now understood that Wilson and Marshall will be renominated tonight and that the convention will adjourn to-morrow.

CANADIANS MAKE WEARY ATTACKERS AT YPRES

The Youth's Companion:

In the eager effort to be on the best social level we run after all the new fashion of dress. No color is so glaring, no cut so audacious, no fancy so whimsical, that thousands will not be found to adopt it and exaggerate it, in the hope of being thought to belong to the best social set, to move easily and naturally among those who are at the top. No one can estimate the money that is spent, the homes that are ruined, the hearts that are broken, in the effort to tag ourselves with the social label that fashionable dress is supposed to give. And, after all, in many cases the dashing outside only makes a more violent contrast with the emptiness and vulgarity that are within.

If women did but know it, there is one social label that is a far surer guide than dress and that costs nothing, the label of speech. A lady may or may not be known by her apparel. Her speech cannot be mistaken. A quiet, refined voice, delicate, sensitive inflections and intonations, instantly and irrevocably mark the class to which the speaker belongs. By a considerable outlay of money, by sedulous consultation of fashion books and dressmakers and tailors, you may produce a fairly creditable imitation of a lady until it speaks. Then, if it is only an imitation, some harsh tone flies out, some crude phrase or expletive, and all your costly tailored fabric dissolves like an exhalation, leaving bare just the common soul beneath. Why not take half the pains with your speech that you take with your clothes?

But, you object, clothes may be bought if you have a long enough purse or a good enough credit. Speech is admired, not acquired. In the first place, the clothes are of no use without the speech. Then, the speech can be acquired. To be sure, fine, delicate intonations are a matter of old breeding and long inheritance. But with patience and attention everyone can learn to speak gently and quietly and to avoid coarse, rough, offhand expressions and phrases. Those things are not to be bought of tailors, but they help social position far more than anything that tailors sell.

New York American:

The conditions in Mexico are rapidly bringing about the exact situation which The American pointed out as inevitable as long ago as March 25.

The dilly-dallying and inexcusable indecision of the Administration have put our troops at a disadvantage, and when the fighting begins they will be opposed by superior numbers posted advantageously.

We do not doubt that the American forces can beat the Mexican forces. But that is not the point.

The point is that by rapid and decisive movements in the very beginning of the expedition into Mexico our troops would have been placed in such strategic positions that no Mexican forces could have been placed in positions to threaten trouble and no Mexican forces would have tried to threaten them in northern Mexico.

Had Funston been given the mobile army reinforced by the National Guard, as he so earnestly besought the War Department, and told to go ahead, he would have seized the Chihuahua and Durango and Sonora and Sinaloa railroads and effectively controlled the whole situation.

Carranza and Obregon COULD NOT HAVE MOBILIZED in the north the strong Mexican forces which now threaten Pershing's flank and his long line of automobile communications.

We know that our army officers cannot say what they think of all this stupidity. But we can say it for them.

And our deliberate opinion is that the course pursued by the War Department, under Mr. Wilson's direction, has been an inexcusable offense against our soldiers.

The Administration has been so tenderly apprehensive of hurting Senor Carranza's sensitive pride that it has not had time to listen to the representations and remonstrances of our commanders in the field or to permit our troops to make themselves secure and dominant in the midst of armed and bitterly hostile forces.

The result will be written in more American blood that need not have been and would not have been shed had the Administration listened to our generals and acted bodly, decisively and quickly last March.

New York World:

In speed, displacement and guns the new battle-ship Pennsylvania, which went into commission Monday at Norfolk, marks a step in advance over the Oklahoma, which was delivered to the navy on May 2. The Pensylvania's speed is 21 knots, displacement 32,000 tons and she carries twelve 14-inch guns, as against the Oklahoma's 20.5 knots, 27,500 tons and ten 14-inch guns.

As compared with the newest British battleships of the Queen Elizabeth class, the Pennsylvania is their superior except in speed. The Queen Elizabeth, Warspite and Malaya are rated as super-dreadnoughts of 25 knots, 27,500 tons and carry eight 15-inch guns each. The Warspite in the North Sea engagement was disabled by a German torpedo and towed home; after service at the Dardanelles the Queen Elizabeth was forced to undergo repairs, due in part, it was reported, to the action of her own heavy guns.

Those alarmists who are panic-stricken over the immense inferiority of the United States navy, and complain that nothing is done to bring it up to the standards of foreign navies, ignore certain very important facts. Six more battleships of the Pennsylvania class, the Arizona, New Mexico, Mississippi, Idaho, Tennessee and California, are to-day under construction or have been authorized by Congress. In size and guns they will all outrank any of the super-dreadnoughts of the navies engaged in the war in Europe.

With the building programme now under consideration in Congress, it is a question whether American ship-yards will be able to meet the demands made upon them by the Government in upbuilding the navy. But while the United States is rapidly adding to its naval strength, Germany and Great Britain are destroying each other's navies and are bound to come out of the war in weakened condition.

Utica Dispatch:

In spite of the inclement weather, the woman suffragists paraded in Chicago Wednesday in large numbers. Even the adverse vote in Iowa, of which they were only too well aware, did not make them waver from their purpose to impress upon the Republican national convention that their cause had the substantial backing of millions of voters quite capable of making their demands effective. The Republican platform makers showed wisdom in recognizing the inevitableness of the movement represented by these plucky women. They were evidently convinced that it would be dangerous to ignore the issue, in view of the great extension of the suffrage cause in those States which already have granted political equality to women, and also because of the formidable votes in favor of suffrage in those great States in the East which within the last year or two passed on the question.

By including a suffrage plank in their platform, the Republicans will at least avert the danger of arraying millions of women voters in the twelve suffrage States against them on the narrow issue of the franchise. The Progressives are already committed to the cause, and there is every reason to believe that the Democrats will follow the same path. The effect will be to remove suffrage as an active issue in the coming national campaign.

SOME KIND OF LIGHT

We can't all be electric lights,
But an oil lamp's just the same
If it does the best it can o' nights
To scatter wide its flame.
Just so we are some kind of light,
Some hope, some help, some cheer—
It makes it worth the while to fight
In the fine old struggle here.

We can't all be the biggest guns,
But a little gun may find
There's lots of need where this life runs
For the guns of every kind.
And many a battle has been turned back
To victory from defeat
Because of some small battery's whack
When the army thought it beat.

Some kind of light, some kind of cheer,
Some kind of help, some strength;
We've all a part to follow here
That means a lot at length;
We all can shine a little way
With the light we have to give;
We all can turn the shadows gay
With a smile that helps men live.

Don't worry if you're not a gleam
Set high o'er tower and town;
The world can take a candle's beam
And march to a great renown;
And the little ray you cast may be
Just the light some neighbor needs
To lead him on through life to see
His way to nobler deeds.

Dictionary of Military Terms—From the Trenches

(By United Press)

London, June 8 (by mail)—A brand new "Encyclopedia of Military Terms" published in the "Listening Post" the official organ of the First Canadian Division in France, has just reached London, as follows:

"BARBEDWIRE—Invented by Mephisto. It is surprising that he should invent anything of such an affectionate and 'clinging' nature. It is used for giving an artistic touch to a trench. No trench is complete without it. It is planted at night so the artillery can plow it up in the morning. A small crop has been known to prevent opposing armies from arguing the 'point.'"

"BILLET—A billet is anything from a shed to a chateau. A billeting party, sent ahead, is instructed to locate the most draughty and leaky barns in the country. At this they are experts. The generous hearted farmers then inform their cattle and pigs that they must be very polite and wipe their feet before walking over a brave soldier's blanket.

"BUGLE—Except in a band this instrument of torture is seldom used. There are only three popular bugle calls: 'No parade today,' 'Come to the cook house door boys,' and 'Letters from Sister Susie.' The bugler who sounds 'Reveille' at 5:30 on a frosty morning has no friends though he is often presented with anything nearest to hand.

"BAYONET—This is the business end of a rifle; it has many uses both in and out of the trenches. A few inches of it pushed through the clothing of an enemy will convince him that he is not 'Uber Allies.'

"BOMBS—These are good things to keep away from. That is if the other fellow has them. For cleaning up a 'bivvy' full of enemies, a bomb is better than a bayonet.

"BISCUIT—The military biscuit 'take the biscuit.' On active service, biscuit are used by the troops to sharpen their teeth on, to write home on, or (when pulverized) to make puddings of. After the war they will be used for making roads, feeding crocodiles, or shooting at made elephants.

"'BULLY,' OR CORNED BEEF—The government issues this when it wishes to convince a hungry soldier that he is not hungry. It is served under many disguises. It may be boiled, baked, stewed, fried, or scrambled. A candidate for a cook's job must pass the bully beef test. When he can make bully beef taste like an omelette he is called a 'chef.' If he fails he is called something else."

Marconi Foresees Aerial Passenger and Message Service in United States

(By Wilbur S. Forrest
United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, June 1 (by mail)—In future, when giant aeroplanes are making non-stop mail and passenger runs between New York and Chicago and between other American cities air passengers will be kept in minutest touch with the day's news by wireless; and officers of the aircraft will receive their orders that way, too.

This dream is legitimatized to-day by Signor Marconi, the youthful father of the wireless, here from Italy.

Through a series of experiment carried out in Italy, Marconi announced that the problem of transmitting wireless messages to aeroplanes has been solved. Hitherto this has been impossible. Explaining the invention, Marconi said:

"Before now aeroplanes have been at a disadvantage with airships in wireless work because, while they were able to transmit messages, they have not been able to receive them.

"This was because the receiving signal was too faint to be distinguished over the noise of the motor.

"We have been able to strengthen the receiving signal sufficiently to enable messages to be taken."

Great commercial opportunities are open to the wireless after the war, Marconi also announced.

Long distance transmission has been signally improved.

The wireless telephone already is playing its part in the war.

Marconi is a soldier and therefore cannot give details of his new discoveries. But he added significantly:

"The war has by no means hindered the development of wireless science."

Marconi is expected to make important announcements after the war.

Man Power.

There is a distinct difference between power and endurance. The average woman seems to have quite as much endurance as the average man, but in actual physical power she is entirely outclassed. In a series of experiments to determine this point it was found that the average energy a man can develop is one-fifth horsepower, that of a woman only half as much. The machine for making the tests is a bicycle mounted on a fixed frame and geared to a brake wheel. The person under test works the pedals, and the point at which the friction of the brake causes the machine to stop indicates the horsepower he has reached.—Pittsburgh Press.

UNCLE SAM WANTS A BIRD CENSUS

(By United Press)

Washington—When Mr. Robin Red Breast and Mr. Robert Thrush swing on the branches near their homes, enjoying the spring breeze and singing and bragging, this month, census enumerators from the United States Bureau of Biological Survey will count them.

A really accurate count of a bird population can be made by one bird lover going over a 60 or 80 acre unit, says the bureau.

The females, busy with spring housework are often missed; but it's a scientific fact that the males are so swagger and conspicuous that it is hard for a counter to miss them.

So the method to be employed in this census—the survey's third—is to count the males of each species, and then multiply by two to get the total

The Survey is calling for volunteer hunters. Especially it wants data on the fruit districts of the Pacific Coast and the South Atlantic and Gulf states.

Reports are wanted, too, on mountain, prairie and semi-arid regions. It doesn't ask expert knowledge.

If bird lovers will take a walk over the fields just as the sun is geting up. they'll find every bird worth counting in any sort of census singing, the Bureau further advises.

This is a prelude to an extensive campaign to persuade the country that when a bird is killed, the nation loses an asset.

England's Rich Will Be Greatest Losers By War

(By United Press)

London—Somebody is going to lose financially by the war, of course, but authorities are not agreed as to whether it will be everybody or not.

The answer most generally given is the affirmative—that all classes will suffer.

Certain optimists, however, think perhaps—they are not certain—that the masses will be better off after, than before the war. Their hope is that those who have hitherto been society's parasites will have to foot the bills.

These theorists argue:

"The parasites' money did the masses no good when the parasites had it; it can do the masses no harm to have it taken away from the parasites."

It is further argued that such a situation would imply an economic readjustment which must make for better conditions except for those who have lived in the past on production by the actual workers.

The view is not held by socialists alone. A number of men who belong to the class which must do the financial suffering, should the forecast be borne out by events, think the same thing, or, rather, are afraid the prediction is an accurate one.

It looks as they express it, as if "the aristocracy will have to go to work."

H. G. Selfridge, the American department store proprietor, for several years now in business in London, for example, in effect expressed this opinion in a recent exclusive interview to the United Press.

Selfridge, however, as a man himself actively in business, spoke of the possible development as a thing to be desired.

A good many others who agree with him want no such change because it will be at their expense, but nevertheless they believe the signs indicate that it cannot be avoided.

PLUMBING RULES MUST BE OBEYED

Individuals and Unlicensed Practitioners Given Warning by City's Law Department.

The members of the Plumbing Board and the Sanitary Inspector of the city have been informed that persons other than registered licensed plumbers are engaged in and conducting plumbing business in this city. Furthermore, it is reported that individuals and frms not licensed are doing plumbing work without a license.

City Attorney Hillick, to whom the matter was referred, said this morning that the law would be strictly enforced.

Mr. Hillick added that, without doubt, the danger to the health by reason of leakage of sewer gas and unsanitary plumbing was far greater than the danger from any other unsanitary condition; that not only the safety of the sewer system and water system of the city, but a proper regard for the health of the people make it imperative that plumbing, particularly when connected with the city sewer system, should be installed in the most officient manner.

The State has prescribed that no person should engage in the business of plumbing unless he be a licensed plumber, having passed an examination showing fitness and knowledge, necessary to properly do such work. The City of Fulton has passed an ordinance conforming to the State law. The law department of the city will cordially co-operate to enforce the law and exact penalties for violations in relation to this matter.

The City Attorney makes public the regulations concerning the plumbing ordinance as follows:

1.—No person shall conduct the trade, business or calling of a plumber except he be a registered and licensed plumber. This does not mean that an individual is prohibited from doing any plumbing work, but that he cannot do any plumbing work for compensation, either direct or indirect, or in connection with his business. It means that no merchant or other person can sell plumbing fixtures and install them unless the installation be done by a licensed plumber. It means that no person can hire out or receive pay for work installing plumbing except he be a licensed plumber or in the employ and under the personal supervision and direction of a licensed plumber.

2.—All plumbing installed in the City of Fulton, must comply with the Plumbing Code of the city and be installed in accordance with that Code. And no connection can be made with the city sewers or city water until such plumbing has been duly inspected by the Sanitary Inspector and found to comply with all the provisions of the Code. That means that all plumbing, by whoever installed, must absolutely comply with the Plumbing Code, and any person hiring out to do plumbing or working at it for pay, either directly or indirectly, must be a licensed plumber or under the direction and supervision of a licensed plumber.

KIMBALL CAUGHT IN WATERTOWN

Romaine Kimball, of this city, charged with the abandonment of his five small children, was arrested yesterday in Watertown, and will be brought to this city to-day by a Fulton officer. Kimball's arrest followed some quiet but effective detective work on the part of the Fulton police and the Watertown officers were given detailed instructions in regard to his arrest.

Kimball has given the police trouble in the past and it is quite likely that he will be severely dealth with this time. Some time ago his legal wife left him and is now living in Ogdensburg. Kimball thereupon took another young woman into his home, and she died shortly after he left the city. His five children were near starvation when their plight was discovered by neighbors, and a few days ago they were placed in an Oswego orphan asylum by Charities Commissioner James R. C. Somers.

The exhibition was to be open to women only.

James Thomas, appointed one of a committee to arrange motorcycle races in connection with the Old Home Week celebration is well qualified for the honor accorded him. Thomas was the first Fultonian to own a motorcycle of a modern type, and participated in several track and road events in this sport throughout the state during his career as a rider. He later purchased a high powered automobile which was easily the fastest in this section, and in an amateur event at Rochester last year he won first prize. Finding the car too fast for ordinary road work he disposed of it, and is now back to the two wheel motor. Thomas is of Italian descent, has many friends in this section and should be able, with proper co-operation to arrange a good card of motor events for the celebration.

Loren J. Parsons, of New Haven, was elected chairman of the County Board of Supervisors in regular session at Oswego yesterday. Mr. Parsons was nominated by Wade S. Gayer of this city. The supervisors will probably order the improvement of about 26 miles of roads in this county this year. The session continues today.

O. T. Day, one of the largest muck-land growers of this section, said to-day that heavy rain for the past month would mean a short crop of early lettuce this year, and added that probably 50 per cent. less lettuce would be shipped from this city in July than was shipped in the same period last year. On low ground, Mr. Day states, there is little or no lettuce growing, and the onion crop, which is one of the principal sources of revenue to growers in this district has also been damaged considerably by the rain. So far the celery crop has sustained little injury, but continued rains would cause great losses for celery growers also, Mr. Day said.

As $5,000 is exempt from taxation, the tax is one per cent. on $192.96 or $1.93 each. The debts and expenses of the estate were slightly over $2,000.

After an excellent exhibition of skilled horsemanship, Mike finally pulled his steed into line, while the crowd applauded.

KRUPA SET FREE BY CITY COURT

The trial of John Krupa, a Pole of the west side, who assaulted a fellow countryman named Nick Laboda about three weeks ago, came up today in City Court, before Judge Wilson and a jury of six men. James R. Somers was in charge of the prosecution, and George M. Fanning defended Krupa.

Krupa had cherished a grudge against Laboda for two years, according to a statement he is credited with making before the fight, and when he saw his enemy in a West Broadway saloon recently he started a quarrel, telling Laboda that he was due for a beating. Laboda started to go toward his home in Pine street, Krupa followed him, and after knocking him down from behind, kicked him in the face, opening a large cut, according to the complaint.

Mr. Fanning's questioning tended to show that Laboda was under the influence of liquor on the night in question and had been quarrelling with everyone in the saloon. Krupa claims the intoxicated man insulted him in a vile manner and that he was the aggressor in the battle.

The jury at 12:30 returned of verdict of not guilty.

FLAG TAG DAY PROVED FINANCIALLY SUCCESSFUL

The five young women who sold flags in the streets of the business section yesterday for the benefit of the Fulton branch of the National Surgical Dressings committee collected the sum of $39.24, according to the report of Mrs. William Lane, who was in charge of the work.

Mrs. Russell Rogers, Miss Gertrude Whitaker, Mrs. Wilcox, Mrs. F. L. Marvin and Mrs. Lane comprised the squad, and there were few pedestrians or vehicle owners who were overlooked in their careful canvass. The money collected will be used to purchase materials from which the Fulton women, at their semi-weekly meetings, make surgical bandages and dressings for the soldiers of the United States Army.

WIERD PACT IS BOY'S DEFENSE

Trial Begins Today of Boy Accused of Murdering Sweetheart --- He Claims Suicide Pact.

(By United Press)

Providence—A unique and tragic twist of Fate's "eternal triangle" will be bared in the Superior Court here to-day, when James O'Brien, a one-armed youth, is put on trial for the murder of his sweetheart, Beatrice Walter.

The crime for which O'Brien will be tried was committed at midnight, May 31. Beatrice Walter, a pretty little eighteen year old girl, was found dead in a lonely field near Field's Point, a bullet wound in her left breast.

O'Brien, with whom she had been walking since early in the evening told the police a weird tale of a suicide pact, and claims that Beatrice shot herself with his revolver.

"Wouldn't it be nice if we could die together" are the words the girl is alleged to have used. It is O'Brien's contention that he twice attempted to shoot himself, after Beatrice sank dead at his feet, but that each time the bullets struck his belt buckle and were deflected.

The police and Beatrice's parents scout the suicide theory as ridiculous.

"It is murder, pure and simple," Chief Inspector O'Neil told the United Press. "The Walter girl's parents know of no reason why she should wish to die."

It is in this connection, that the "other man" enters into the case, with evidence which may be damning to the one-armed youth on trial for his life.

George S. Larkin, twenty-two, has brought forward conclusive evidence that he and not O'Brien, was Beatrice Walter's sweetheart. He has informed the police that O'Brien twice made threats to kill him, if he did not leave Beatrice alone.

The testimony of this youth, and that of the medical examiner, who performed an autopsy on the dead body, will be of the greatest importance, and may be the final weight which will carry the scales of justice. James O'Brien is twenty-one. On account of the loss of one arm he works as a messenger boy in a jewelry store in Providence. He was in love with Beatrice Walter, pretty daughter of a city inspector.

He was known to be insanely jealous of her, and to resent the attentions of other men, going so far as to threaten them, and to carry a loaded revolver.

On the evening of May 31 O'Brien and Beatrice Walter left her father's house to walk through the woods. What happened during the evening may never be known, but about four o'clock the next morning, the youth entered the Walter home, aroused William Walter, her father, and told him that Beatrice had shot herself.

Led by O'Brien, the police and Walter went to the lonely spot where she lay. A bullet wound beneath her left breast and powder stains on her dress showed that she had been shot at close range.

O'Brien's revolver, five chambers empty, was found near the spot. A slight scraping wound in his abdomen, and a dented belt buckle he offered as evidence of his own attempts at suicide.

He told of how Beatrice, taking his revolver had fired the shot which ended her life. So confusing were parts of his weird tale of the death pact, that he was at once arrested, and arraigned, charged with murder, on the second of June.

Good Templars Add Many New Members

The 183rd quarterly session of the Oswego District Lodge Independent Order of Good Templars was held in the home of the Fulton lodge in West Broadway yesterday. The election of officers was the principal business of the meeting, and the result of the election was as follows:

D. C. T., Charles Headley, Pulaski; D. V. T., Laura Babcock, Pulaski; D. S. J. T., Kate Hosmer, Vermilion; D. E. S., George Grant, Fulton; D. Secretary, Ernest Etewart, Fulton; D. T., Clarence Rounds, Southwest Oswego; D. Chaplain, Jennie Pummer, Fulton; D. M., Franklin Haven, Minetto; D. D. M., Flossie Schoolcraft, Fulton; D. G., Oliver Schoolcraft, Fulton; D. Sent., Anna Casterline, Pulaski; D. C., W. F. Stewart, Fulton.

Reports of the officers submitted yesterday show that the district lodge is in a flourishing condition, both as regards finances and in membership. An increase of 20 members since the last session was reported, and 21 candidates were given the lodge degree yesterday.

The place and time of the next meeting was referred to the Executive committee for decision. A report on the Junior Templars lodge was received, which placed the number of Juniors, boys between the ages and 5 and 12 years, at 40. The memorial services were omitted yesterday since no deaths have occurred among the members of the district lodge since the last quarterly session.

Declaring that the measures introduced were inadequate in that they asked for local option and not prohibition the district lodge went on record as being opposed to the liquor legislation promulgated by the State Anti-Saloon league.

An agency exhibit, exploiting the work of Pacific coast advertising agencies, is on display at the Spokane Ad Club to-day.

BARNES WAS HIT FOURTEEN TIMES

The Fulton High school lads won over the Baldwinsville team in a loosely played game at the Fair grounds yesterday afternoon. Several of the Fultonians were guilty of serious errors, and on one occasion Green gave a correct imitation of a paralytic, when two men were on base and a throw was made to his position.

The visitors touched Barnes for fourteen hits, but he managed to keep them scattered, while Fulton's twelve bingle came in clusters.

LEADERS' EYES TURN TO SEABURY FOR GOVERNOR

(Special to the Evening Times)

St. Louis, Mo.—With the candidates for president and vice president already selected and nothing remaining for the convention except to put on the stamp of approval, Democratic leaders from New York state in confab here are spending much of their time discussing gubernatorial and senatorial candidates. This city is just littered with booms of all kinds, but all eyes seem turned on the Empire State's selections.

Plans are being made to make the coming campaign a particularly hot one. All the leaders recognize that Governor Whitman running for re-election on a Hughes ticket will be a hard candidate to beat and that the same thing will apply to the Senatorial fight. Consequently the party leaders are going to choose their candidates with extreme care.

A well developed boom for Justice Samuel Seabury for governor has struck this city. Upstate leaders have received some letters from "back home" suggesting that he be the party nominee. The movements is well organized and is practically state wide. Seabury strength as a vote getter is admitted by both Tammany and up state men and he is undoubtedly the strongest candidate in sight at the present time. A close second is ambassador James W. Gerard whose friends are expected to become very active within the next few days.

Several other names are being mentioned for the governorship. One is that of Charles E. Tremain, of Ithaca, who was commissioner of public works under Governor Dix. The sentiment for Tremain is strongest in the central part of the state. The name of W. Caryl Ely, a traction man of Buffalo, is also being discussed, as is that of Charles M. Heald, one of the commissioners of Buffalo. Ely has the support of the Mayor Fuhrmann faction of Buffalo.

Party managers frankly admit that the selection of a candidate for United States Senator to succeed Senator O'Gorman, will not be an easy matter. The Democratic National Chairman William F. McCombs, is seriously considering the advisability of becoming a candidate. The names of Samuel Untermeyer, Mr. Gerard and William Church Osborn, former state chairman are also being considered.

No definite action will be taken regarding the state situation, however, for a month or so. The New York leaders will get together at that time with the hope of agreeing upon the names to go on the ticket. Many elements will enter into the choosing of the candidates particularly that of geographical location. If a candidate for governor is selected from New York City the candidate for senator [illegible] come from up-state and vice-versa. Mr. Osborn will not discuss possibility of his running for Senator. He admits there is much [illegible] of Justice Seabury for governor and said that both Mr. Tremain [illegible] Mr. Ely would make strong candidates.

The fact that Democratic leaders here have criticised the drafting of a candidate from the Supreme Court bench would not apply to Justice Seabury, Mr. Osborn said, because there was a vast difference between the Supreme Court of the United States and the State Court of Appeals.

"A Herald of Progress"

Sam and Sue

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Sam Horton was a young butcher. He was short and squat and twenty-two years old. He had a waddle like a goose when he walked. He moved over from the town of Grand Ledge to the town of Eaton Rapids and opened a butcher shop.

Sue Smith had got eighteen years old. She was a good looking girl, but pert to the point of impudence.

Miss Sue owned a crosseyed cat. She was not a handsome feline, but she was an affectionate one. Unlike most cats, she would follow her mistress about town like a loving dog. When Sue Smith heard that a new butcher had come to town and that he was a young man who would probably be looking around for a wife she did not wait long before she presented herself at the shop and asked for a juicy piece of meat for her companion. The cat, of course, followed her. She had also heard the news, and she hoped for a change from the old butcher.

While the young butcher was smiling and bowing and filling the order and saying to himself that a good looking girl stood before him his bobtailed dog entered the shop. There was a growl and a snarl, and crosseyed cat, bobtailed dog, girl and butcher and sawdust seemed to be all mixed up. The row lasted until the cat flew out, and then Sue Smith turned to the butcher and said:

"I would like to burn your dog, sir!" exclaimed Miss Sue as she flashed the young man a look of indignation.

"Oh, as to that," he replied with a faint smile, "your old cat may suddenly disappear off the earth!"

And that was how her crosseyed cat and his bobtailed dog first met, and there were no cooing doves around to make them remember the first meeting with pleasure. Miss Sue went around telling all her friends that the new butcher not only had the heart of a fiend, but he dared stand right up to her and sass back.

During that year they met time after time. Sometimes the dog and the cat were along, and sometimes they were not. When they were not there was just as much cause for sarcastic words as when they were. For instance, when the butcher was about to pass Miss Smith's gate one day and Miss Sue was hanging over it he lifted his hat and made a grand bow and said:

"I trust, Miss Smith, that your old cat is dead and buried."

"Sir," she replied, wanting to hit him in a new place this time, "I was watching your walk as you came up the street. It is not a walk; it is a waddle. You walk like a goose, sir."

And they glared at each other and glared and glared, and Sam finally passed on, and Sue went into the house with tears in her eyes, to be asked by her mother:

"What's happened now?"

"It's that Sam Horton. He had the cheek, after what I have said about him, to accept an invitation to Molly Hard's birthday party last night. Yes, he was there. Not only was he there, but Molly had several good words for him. Oh, how I hate him!"

"There, there, daughter. Don't get so worked up about it," soothed the mother. "This is a strange world, and it wouldn't be so very strange if love came to you both by and by."

"Never!" was the terrible reply.

Sam Horton was hurt by having his walk called a waddle, but there was nobody to console him. Therefore as he sawed a beef bone in two he consoled himself by saying:

"Darn that Smith girl! I will marry her or die!"

One day Sam Horton had gone out into the country with his horse and wagon to buy a calf. On that same day Miss Susie Smith had taken a walk about a mile and sat down on the bank of the river. She was a bit worried over the young butcher. It was becoming more and more difficult for her to find hard words to apply to him. When last he had passed her his face almost wore a smile.

She was meditating very deeply on this weighty subject when Sam and his cart and calf came in sight of the road. He was driving like all butchers drive. The horse was at his best trot, and the driver was looking around to view the landscape. That horse was headed in an almost straight line for the girl. She saw it and gasped. She saw it and hastily rose up and rather more hastily the treacherous soil under her feet crumbled away, and she went tumbling down the bank and landed in the river with a great splash. She did not know when the butcher pulled up his horse and jumped from his cart. She did not know when he came limping after her. She did not know when he dived after her and crawled up the bank with her dripping form in his arms. She did not know when he arrived at her father's gate with the cheerful calf and the half drowned girl in his cart.

In fact, Miss Sue Smith was not much on the know for a good many hours and then came back to her normal condition to hear her mother say to her father:

"There! That settles it. You see if they aren't married within six months. All that was needed was something like this!"

Bowser's Dead Horse

By M. QUAD

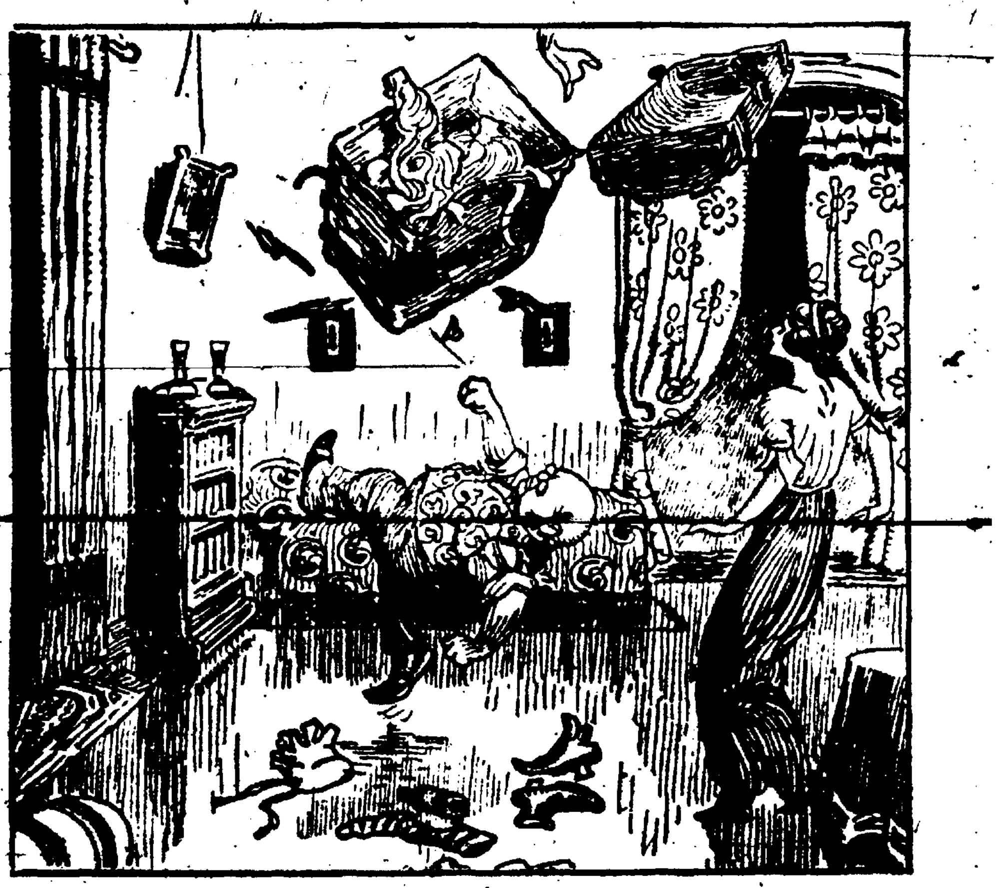
MRS. BOWSER had never heard of the term "dead horse" except as applied to a dead horse in the street—a poor old nag who had given his life to humanity and had come to the end of his days and let go of life.

On the contrary, Mr. Bowser had often heard the term used and had seen it many times in print. He knew that unclaimed baggage kept in the express company's offices over six months was called "dead horse" and sold by auction as such. Mr. Bowser had often dreamed of attending these "dead horse" sales and of buying an old trunk covered with an inch of dust and tied around with a piece of bed cord and sending it home to be opened. His successful bid for the trunk was only 25 cents, and when he came to open it he found a million dollars' worth of United States bonds looking him in the face. Whenever Mr. Bowser had dreamed this dream he awoke with a shout of exultation, and for a week thereafter he closely scanned the advertising columns for a "dead horse" sale.

The other evening Mr. Bowser discovered the advertisement he had been looking for so long, and he almost jumped out of his chair as he read it. Mr. Bowser determined to attend that sale. He wasn't going to say a word about it to Mrs. Bowser until that trunk came home. She would be sarcastic and sneer over his finding any bargains at such a sale. He would produce before her face and eyes such a bargain as she had never heard of and thus take her down a few pegs.

Mr. Bowser got to that sale so early that he was the first one there. The things to be auctioned off were piled high, but yet he had scarcely stepped within the door when his eye caught sight of that old trunk which had caused him so many dreams. Yes, it was tied up with a piece of bed cord, and it looked mean enough to belong to any miser in the country.

Mr. Bowser stood with his eyes on that trunk while 100 other articles were sold. Then he demanded that the miser's trunk be put up for a bid, as he had no more time to spare. The old trunk was therefore yanked out amid cheers and laughter. It didn't look to contain anything of more value than 25 cents,



A TREMENDOUS KICK.

but the crowd saw that Mr. Bowser had a peculiar interest in that trunk, and they determined to make him pay for it. The bidding started at 10 cents and reached $15. That sum was Mr. Bowser's bid. The money was paid, a wagon called, and the trunk was sent to Mr. Bowser's house. He reached home an hour later, and his first words as he entered the house were:

"Yes, an old contraption called a trunk came up, and you will find it in the basement hall. Did you buy it at some auction?"

"I did," replied Mr. Bowser, "and I think it will prove the greatest bargain of my life. I'll show you a thing or two after dinner. I have had my mind made up what the contents of that old trunk are for more than a year, and you can prepare for a great surprise."

When dinner was finished the old trunk was brought up into the sitting room, and the crisis came. Mr. Bowser was trembling with excitement. The rope was cut, the trunk was locked, but the cook was called upon for a hatchet and the hasp broken.

The lid was carefully raised and was finally lifted to its full height. There were a number of parcels wrapped in newspapers. There was an old cinnamon colored dress skirt, there was a woman's nightdress, the worse for wear; there was an old pair of shoes, with an old pair of stockings to match; there was an old sunbonnet and an old waist. There was also a bunch of dried catnip and a half pint bottle of goose oil.

"So that is your bargain, eh?" laughed Mrs. Bowser.

"By Jehosephat!" whispered Mr. Bowser in an awed voice. Then he began to strike the air with his fists and to jump up and down and to try to give utterance to his true feelings. Thus for a minute, and then he gave that old trunk such a tremendous kick that half of the packages flew to the ceiling and the splinters flew after them. Then a window was raised and everything was thrown out of it into the back yard, and Mr. Bowser turned to the smiling woman at his elbow and grimly said:

"Woman, this is another of your inhuman tricks, and I will live a thousand years to get even with you!"

And Mr. Bowser went out into the evening and sat down on the front steps and chewed the rag and went out of the "dead horse" business forever and ever.

The Mighty Fallen

HE had returned to his village home from a trip to Washington, and that same evening he appeared at the drug store to entertain an admiring audience with his adventures.

"Saw our congressman, I suppose?" queried the blacksmith.

"Of course, and took dinner with him."

"You did, eh? By George, but that shows we are no one horse folks here! See the president?"

"I did by special appointment."

"Shake hands with him?"

"I did."

"Seemed to be glad to see you?"

"He did."

"Did you call him Woody?"

"Why, no!"

"You didn't dare call him Woody."

"Certainly not."

"Well, that's all I wanted to know, sur. You own the gristmill, woolen factory, three stores and the tavern and have been to the legislature and give us to understand that you were a heap of a feller, but you hain't. You went down to Washington and talked to the president and dasn't call him Woody, and I don't foller you further. Come on, boys; let's go to Church's grocery and see that feller who fit seven rounds of a prizefight last week."

If I should steal a little kiss.
Such pouting lips would never miss
The dainty bit of plunder.
If I should steal a little kiss,
Oh, would she weep, I wonder?

SHE.

HE longs to steal a kiss of mine—
He may if he'll return it;
If I can read the tender sign,
He longs to steal a kiss of mine.

Why cannot he discern it?
He longs to steal a kiss of mine—
He may if he'll return it.

One of Summer's Fascinations.

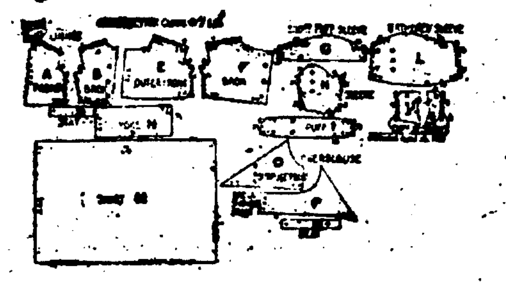
Let the mind picture this frock in sheer blue voile over a foundation of pink, with underblouse of all-over lace, and the general decision will be that it is one of summer's fascinations. In medium size the frock requires 3 yards 36-inch voile, with 4 yards 36-inch taffeta, if it is lined throughout, to 1 yard of silk if the waist only is lined. Two yards 40-inch all-over lace will make the guimpe and puff sleeves.

Make the lining in the usual way by closing shoulder and under-arm seams. Hem the back and gather the lower edge, then adjust the stay. The outer waist may now be taken up. Close the seams as notched and turn hem in right back at notches. Gather along shoulder seam; also gather upper and lower edges of front and back between double "TT" perforations, and 2 inches above lower edge; if low round, or oval shaped neck is made, gather entire upper edge. Gather 2⅜ inches below shoulder seam and stitch straight bands of material 1 inch wide to position, with center of bands over gathers. Arrange outside on lining.

Next, close sleeve seam as notched and gather the lower edge, after which gather the upper edge between double "TT" perforations. Sew in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam.

The skirt is simple to construct and very graceful when finished. Adjust, stitching upper edge of yoke over upper row of gathers in waist, small "o" perforation at seam.

To make the overblouse, lap the right surplice front on left; large "O" perforations indicate center-front. Adjust straight front and back on cated by double "oo" perforations.



surplice front, center-fronts even; stitch lower edges together. If desired without straight front, close under-arm seam; center-back (indi... Bring the pointed ends at shoulder together and tack. Gather entire lower edge; sew belt to gathered edge, center-fronts and center-backs even (large "O" perforation in belt indicates center-back), bringing small "o" perforation to line of small "o" perforations in front and back section; and bring the lower side end of surplice front to large "O" perforation. Adjust overblouse on waist centers even. Use ribbon for the girdle. There is no more fashionable trimming this season.

Two Sinners.

"It is very wrong to tell a falsehood," said his mother to little Jimmie, whom she had caught in one.

"Then we're both offul sinners, ain't we, maw?" queried Jimmie.

"Both! What do you mean?"

"Why, you told Mrs. Smith yesterday that you hoped she'd call again, an' after she wuz gone you said you wished she'd never come again."

Flowers and Scents.

Some flowers appear to change their scents at different times. The common jasmine flowers, when first opened have a delicate, fresh perfume which, after a time, becomes grosser and at tracts bluebottle flies. Flowers of the orchid Odontoglossum hebraicum have a cinnamon fragrance and a hawthorn scent at different periods of their bloom.

A Novel Development of Percale.

The simplicity of this frock is its distinguishing feature, and attention may be called to its inexpensiveness, percale being used to develop the model.

Percale of good quality in a plain color will make up most effectively after this model. A novel feature of the frock are the bands which outline the cuffs and collar. These are of finely tucked self material, cut on the bias from the same strip tucked for the vest.

The fronts overlap above the vest, while the narrow girdle of self material end at either side under large tinted pearl buttons. The front gore style and so arranged that the vest of the four-piece skirt is in panel may be omitted, allowing the panel to extend above the waistline in straight effect. In medium size the dress requires 4½ yards 44-inch or 6 yards 36-inch material.

Unless one has had some experience with changing the lines of models, it is safer to cut the front panel with the extension than stitch the tucked vest effect over it. The front gore is placed on a lengthwise fold of the fabric, with the back of the waist and the back gore of the skirt placed to the right of it in the order named.

The side gore, front, sleeve, cuff, trimming and shield are laid on a lengthwise thread of material. The shield in all probability will be omitted, because at this season the open neck is in greatest demand.

The belt is placed on a lengthwise fold of the percale to avoid a seam.

Some of the smartest frocks intended for morning wear in city or country are made of percale or gingham. An ingenious idea is to make the vest so that it can be attached to the front panel with snappers. In this way any color vest may be used to vary the effect of the front. Because it is neat and pretty as well as inexpensive, this model is sure to prove exceedingly popular this summer.

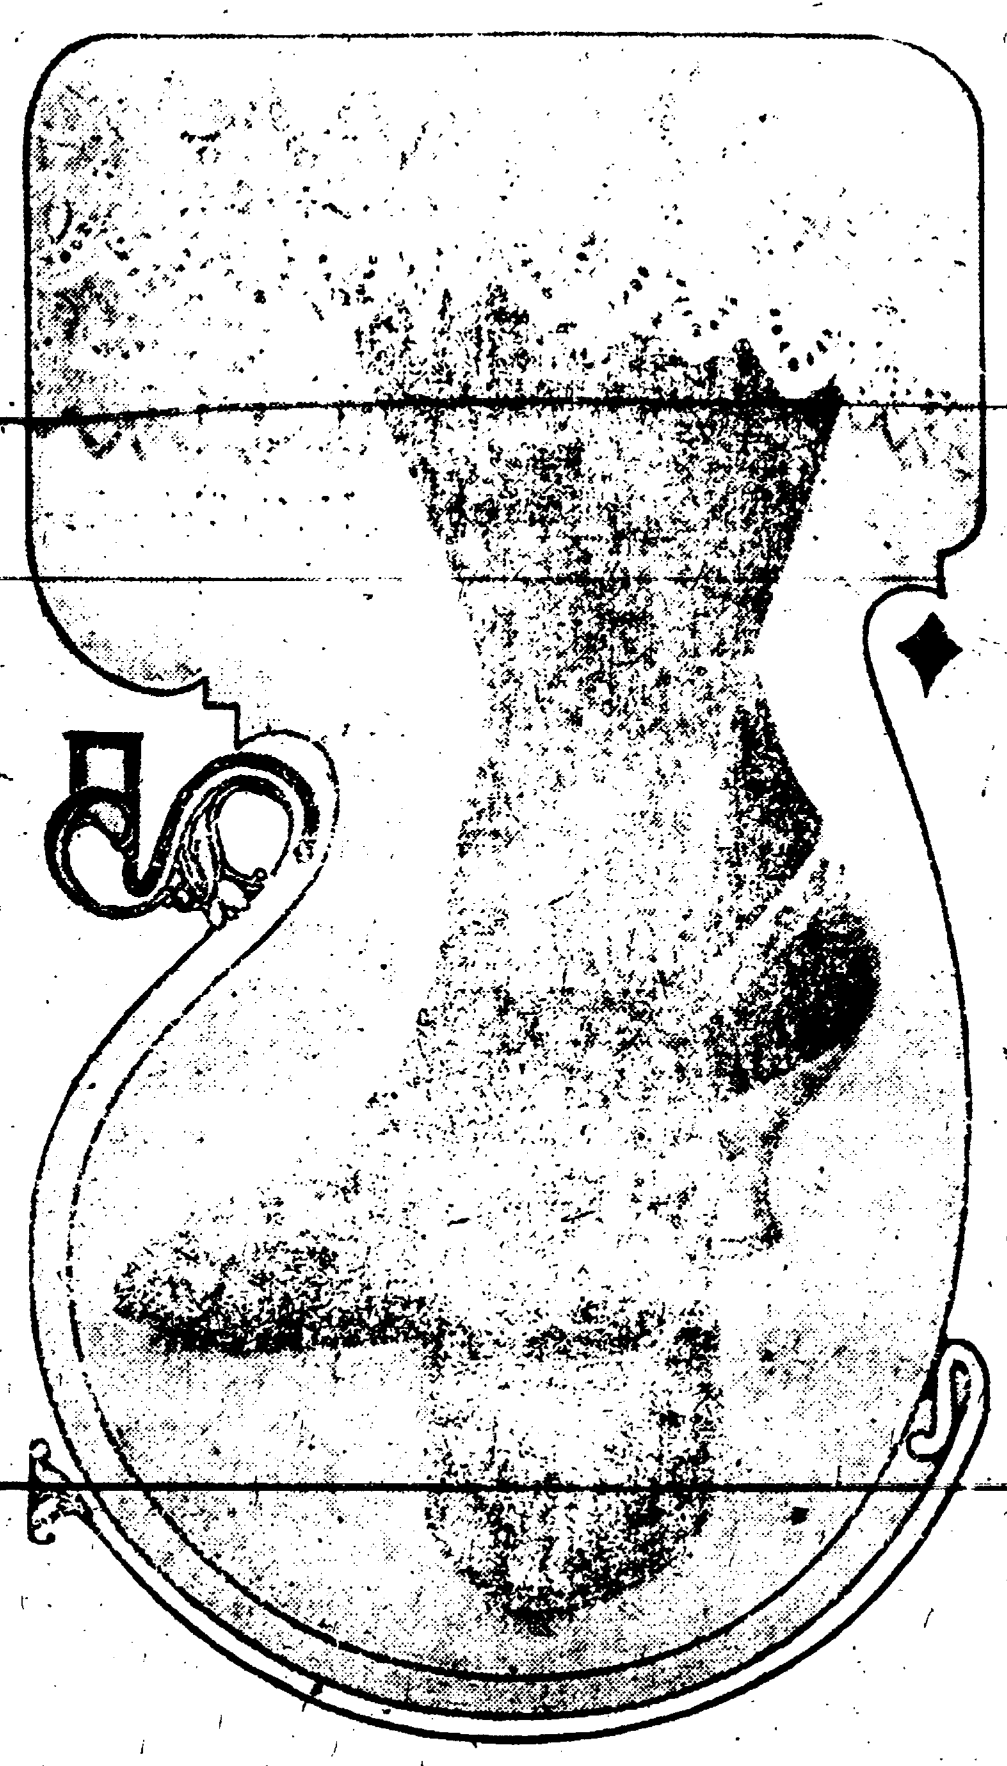
Beads From Head to Toe



FOOTGEAR still runs to the fantastic, and it's a daring woman who ventures out without silk stockings these days. Those pictured are bronze colored to match bronze kid slippers daintily beaded. Colonial pumps are again the vogue, with leather, silver and metal buckles.

• • •

A girl in an ivory white glazed kid motor coat, with a saucy hat to match, is very sure of her smartness as she trips from her car into a restaurant. These new coats of soft kid fit beautifully, and there are a richness and luster about the glazed kid surface that are handsomer than the handsomest broadcloth. Of course there are colored kid coats, but in a white kid coat and hat there is particular allurement.

• • •

One of the new veil fashions is the frill—really a loose floating veil attached to the crown of the hat. It should be worn only by a woman with a well poised head.

ESCALOPED VEAL.—Chop two cupfuls of cold cooked veal, add one-fourth teaspoonful of onion juice and one teaspoonful of lemon juice; mix one-half cupful finely chopped ham, one-fourth teaspoonful of mustard, a few grains of cayenne, two tablespoonfuls of cracker crumbs and moisten with white stock. Brown one-fourth cupful of cracker crumbs in one-fourth cupful of butter, add to the chopped veal and moisten with white stock. Line a mold with slices of hard cooked eggs, fill with alternate layers of ham mixture and veal. Pack tightly, cover with buttered paper and steam one hour. Cool and serve in thin slices.

Jellied Chicken.—Boil a chicken until tender, remove skin and bones; season to taste. Put bones back into liquid and boil until there is one quart of liquid left; take from the fire, strain and add one-half box of gelatin, the juice of one lemon; pour over the chicken, set on ice to harden. Cut in thin slices and serve garnished with chopped parsley.

Chicken à la Hollandaise.—Take out the breast bone of a large young fowl and fill up the space with a nice forcemeat. Make a batter as for fritters, and when the fowl is half roasted pour the batter over, let dry and then pour in more until it is thickly coated and a rich brown in color. Remove from pan, cut up as for a fricassee, place in platter, lay corn fritters around the edge of dish, scatter some sprigs of parsley over and serve at once, with melted butter and lemon quarters. Oyster forcemeat is nice.

Madras Steak.—Steak served this way is delicious. Get a nice thick piece of steak, dip it in flour and place it in a baking tin sufficiently large to permit of its lying quite flat. On top of this slice a couple of onions. Cover with a grease proof paper and then put on a lid or plate and cook in the oven for twenty minutes. Mix together one teaspoonful of curry powder, seasonings to taste, one tablespoonful of vinegar and a cupful of hot water. Add this to the steak, replace cover and let all stew gently for one and a half hours. Serve very hot with onions on top and the gravy poured around.

A Strange Toast.

There used to be a curious toast which one of the Scottish regiments quartered at Edinburgh castle in the early years of last century was accustomed to drink at mess. The toast was, "A clean sword and a dirty Bible." If the sword had to be drawn it must only be in the cause of honor, for the protection of the weak, for the defense of the helpless. The dirty Bible meant a Bible whose leaves were thumbed and frayed with constant use. The second condition secures the first, for the Bible is the foundation of chivalry and honor and the only effectual and enduring antidote to strife between man and man.—London Standard.

Classes Disappear When Men Work Together For the Common Good

By JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, Jr., Capitalist

THE inactive army of Christian men will be drawn into service the more quickly when they have come to recognize the brotherhood of man as a necessary corollary to the fatherhood of God.

An interesting and unique argument recently advanced for compulsory military service in this country is that the sons of the well to do might thereby be thrown into close contact with the sons of the working people, so that the great gap which too often exists might be bridged and as a result of daily association in common tasks THESE TWO CLASSES OF MEN BROUGHT TO SEE THAT THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THEM IS SUPERFICIAL RATHER THAN INHERENT.

When men of widely separated stations are thrown together, come to know each other, when they are working side by side for the advancement of a common interest, THEN AND THEN ONLY DO PERSONAL DISTRUST, HATRED AND MISUNDERSTANDING GIVE WAY TO A SPIRIT OF FAIR PLAY, JUSTICE AND A DESIRE FOR THE COMMON GOOD.

The Season's Bathing Suits.

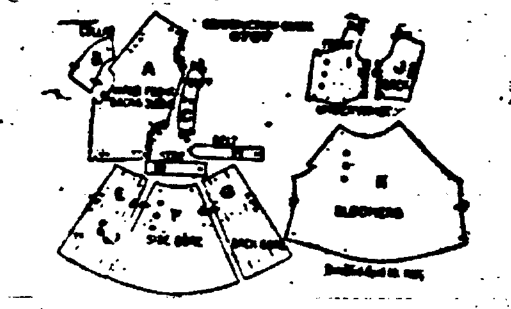
In this model the season's bathing suit expresses itself in plain terms of jersey. Silk braid is summoned to apply the niceties of decoration.

Jersey trimmed with braid is used for this model, which has the neck finished in open effect and short sleeves cut in one with the body. The attached four-piece skirt is plaited. Under the suit is worn knickerbocker bloomers attached to a sleeveless underwaist. In medium size the suit requires 5½ yards 44-inch material, with 5 yards 1-inch braid and ¾ yard 36 inch lining.

The home dressmaker will find pleasure in making this costume, because it develops quickly and is unusually smart. To make the waist, first close underarm and sleeve seams. Hem the front, then gather the lower edge of waist between double "TT" perforations and 2 inches above. Adjust stay to position underneath gathers, center-backs even, small "o" perforation at under-arm seam; and bring front edge to center-front. Close cuff seam as notched and sew to the sleeve, seams even, then add the collar to the neck. This is simply sewn to the neck edge, with notches and center-backs even.



As soon as the underwaist is ready, start on the bloomers. Close left seam as notched; turn hem at lower edge on small "o" perforations, insert a drawstring. Close center seam from upper edge of back to the extension in front; turn under extension in right front on small "o" perforations, lap on left front to small "o" perforations and stitch to position at lower edge of extension. Sew to lower edge of underwaist, center-fronts and center-backs even.

Adjust the belt to position and trim with buttons.

WOMEN'S CLUBS AID CIVIC WORK

What Has Been Done Throughout the Country.

MANY GREAT ACHIEVEMENTS

Since Women Have Organized They Have Accomplished Things Which Individual Women Never Would Have Attempted—Pure Food Bills' Passage Largely Due to Their Efforts.

"It is a well known fact that any body of persons can do more than one person can," said Miss Mary Garrett Hay, talking on the achievements and accomplishments of women's clubs in this country. "And since women have been federated together as they are they have accomplished things which individual women would never have dared to attempt.

"Probably the largest and most spectacular thing we ever did was to get the pure food bill passed a few years ago," she said. "There is no doubt that it would not have been passed at that time without the backing of the women. The general federation was in session when the bill was up before congress, and telegrams and letters were sent from state delegations to their senators and congressmen. This concerted action had great influence in passing the bill. Besides this one big, country wide achievement, some good laws have been put on the statute book of every state because of the united action of women, for the health and welfare of citizens and for beautifying and betterment of towns and cities."

One of the most recent things which the federation has done has been in connection with the celebration of baby week. Three of the federation departments co-operated with the children's bureau, and through their activity more than 10,000 communities observed the week.

"As to actual concrete monuments to the activity of clubwomen," Miss Hay said, "there is the establishment and maintenance of a rest home for women of southern California who are mentally ill maintained by southern California members of the federation. A free bathhouse has been maintained in Salem, Mass., for the past six or eight years and an evening school for foreigners in Portsmouth, N. H. The women of Kirksville, Miss., have had cleanup campaigns, and all over the country it has been the same way. These examples could be multiplied more than a thousand times. Each club differs from its fellows, but all work for civic betterment."

In Bloomington, Ill., clubwomen have made the summer playground a permanent feature of the community life. In Seattle, Wash., the women of the city federation raised $15,000 for their start, and the Home and Training school is giving unfortunate girls a chance in life and is training them to be of service. The club of Galesburg, Ill., maintains a girls' home. The Civic Improvement club of San Benito, Tex., installed sanitary drinking fountains in their schools, and the women of Benton, in the same state, went one better and put them in their public square as well. The women of the Cincinnati Improvement league of Langdon, N. D., have established a garbage collection system. The Anti-tuberculosis association of Norwalk, Conn., maintains not only a visiting nurse, but a free dispensary as well. The Civic league of New Canaan, Conn., supports a visiting nurse, who makes 2,000 calls a year. The Civic league of Lexington, Ky., has transformed one of the worst sections of the town and holds there all sorts of civic classes, including a mothers' club and campfire girls. The City Improvement association of Charles City, Ia., completely revolutionized the appearance of the city park. In San Jose, Cal., the Outdoor Art league beautified the roads leading to the foothills, and the first year a hundred trees were planted and cared for, the next eighty more, and the same plan was carried out along other shores, and hundreds of little sycamores, oaks, willows and alders now bear witness to the love of a band of women for the beauty of their town.

The Civic league of Plainview, Tex., has inaugurated a rest room, as have hundreds of other clubs, for the benefit of the women from rural communities.

Back Yards Made Into Gardens.

To encourage the use of back yards for vegetable and flower gardens the Brooklyn park department is preparing for exhibition four model back yard gardens.

These plots will be cared for by the gardeners of the park department, who will be on hand at certain hours of the day to explain the work and give information. Circulars have been prepared explaining just how a person should go to work to prepare such a garden, what to plant, when to plant it and how to care for it. The circular contains also a graphic chart showing a suitable arrangement of the plants.

Graveyard Marriages.

A strange custom prevails among a certain tribe in the Caucasus. When a single young man dies some one calls upon a bereaved parent who has carried to the grave a marriageable daughter in the course of a year and says: "Your son is sure to want a wife. I'll give you my daughter, and you shall deliver to me the marriage portion in return." A friendly offer of this description is never rejected, and the two parties soon come to terms as to the amount of the dowry, which varies according to the advantages possessed by the girl in her lifetime. Cases have been known where the young man's father has given as many as thirty cows to secure a dead wife for his dead son.

Prettiest of Pretty Flag Day Parades

a beautiful bouquet of Killarney roses by Mr. Stevenson, following her recitation.

Mr. Stevenson then read the Flag Day Proclamation drafted by President Woodrow Wilson, and introduced Mr. Bulger as the speaker of the evening.

Following Mr. Bulger's address the band played two selections and the exercises concluded.

Judge Bulger's Eloquence

Mr. Bulger's address was undoubtedly one of the best ever delivered at a public gathering here in some years, and the prolonged applause which punctuated his speech proved that the speaker struck the popular chord.

His address in part follows:

Fellow citizens and members of the Elks,—I have not words to express my delight and appreciation of the scene I have been fortunate enough to witness to-night. I want to compliment these children, who have passed in review, their mothers and their teachers, and I will say that it is the most inspiring sight I have witnessed in many days.

Whenever I gaze upon a spectacle of this kind, in honor of our flag, I find my mind running beyond, and I find myself inquiring what it means, what this flag of ours symbolizes and for what it stands, for surely, we, as citizens of to-day have a more definite conception of our national banner than mere reverence to the warp and woof from which it is woven. There is more than mere sentiment in our contemplation of this ensign, the appearance of which is a signal for us to doff our hats, and to which we have sworn unfailing fidelity, even if it means the sacrifice of our lives.

Before the founders of our government took action that resulted in the birth of our nation, they had learned many things from active participation in affairs of the old world, and many of them had been profoundly affected by certain facts. One was that civilized people had been spending centuries carrying on wars over matters of belief, not only of political and social beliefs, but also because of religious differences,—in matters of rights of men, in matters of conscience.

When the founders of our nation set up a government in this country under which they and their posterity might live, therefor, they conceived the idea of a government of freedom to which they invited the oppressed people of all the world.

We sometimes forget that we are not aborigines, we sometimes forget that this country and our government was not established by Americans. It was first founded by British subjects, and men from all nations of the earth participated in its early development. Let us then be liberal in our thoughts and remember that representatives of many nations stood beside Washington. Let us remember Kosciusko, Steuben, DeKalb and Lafayette—they, too assisted in the foundation of this great republic.

Let us not forget the principles upon which this nation was founded. There is a certain feeling of reverence in us when we think of Lexington and the men who fought there, of Concord, Monmouth, Saratoga and Yorktown.

These men were actuated by more than mere sentiment; they offered their lives in defense of certain fixed principles and after the war was over they offered their services in the great work of establishing our government, upon a scheme which would insure a just, noble and broad government to all.

But wise as they were, and they were wise beyond their day, they found, that their original constitution of seven paragraphs was not sufficient, and the addition of fifteen amendments was necessary. The fundamental principles of our government remain the same to-day and such questions as the rule of the majority by honest vote and expression, freedom of worship, the freedom of the press and others were most carefully considered and set forth.

Principles Haven't Changed

No matter how circumscribed by conditions a man may be in this country of one hundred millions, he is accorded every personal liberty within the law of nature. He can do as Washington did in the darkest days of his life at Valley Forge—kneel before his God in prayer, and with no possibility of interference from anyone. And anyone who would seek to deprive any human being of the free exercise of the right of worship is worse than a coward and infinitely more despicable than a knave.

The right of property was another question definitely settled by the founders of our country. They declared that a man shall be allowed to possess the fruits of his labor, and that no one shall have a right to take his property from him, not even the government, without due compensation and with his consent.

These are some of the principles for which our flag stands, and it was for these principles that the men of Lexington laid down their lives, and in the dark days of '61 when eleven states thundered a defiance to the North and attempted to wreck the Union, it was to establish these principles for all time that some of the men who are here to-night shouldered arms and fought from Manasses to Appamatox. Thousands still sleep on the southern battlefields and hundreds of thousands who returned are sleeping in the church yards of their native homes, but their work effected the perpetuation of the chart of freedom upon which this nation of ours is founded.

Be it said to the glory of her people and with due credit from the world that this banner has had a history more glorious than that of any other flag in all time. And it has remained true to its purposes—it has never been carried at the head of an army in conquest for profit, but it has stood solely for freedom and in aid of the oppressed.

But, are you willing to listen to the song of the sirens of peace, who would lull this great nation into a sense of false security, when a struggle the like of which has never been seen rages across the water and on all sides of us?

In the Way We Have Lost

For eighteen long years we have been enriching ourselves, devoting all our time to the amassing of countless sums of wealth, but taking no steps to protect ourselves. Now the world has gone mad, and the peoples of the earth have not only forgotten the principles of the brotherhood of man, but they seem to have lost all vision of the Lord God Himself, who holds the world in the hollow of His hand.

For eighteen years we have slept, and our beautiful seacoast is almost as defenseless to-day as it stood when the Mayflower landed. Some people suggest that we build a great navy, second ondly to that of Great Britain. Why second to Great Britain or any other nation? Much as we love peace, why not build a navy second to none in the world, not for conquest, but to protect our homes!

Let us take money, and assisted by the art and genius of the great men of to-day, let us fortify our shores against the world, and build a navy that can enforce our rights as Americans no matter in what part of the world we may be. No matter what it may cost, no matter what the sacrifice, we must prepare to defend our rights by force if necessary, so that the American flag, at home and abroad may symbolize liberty, justice and protection for our citizens, whether they be in China, Japan, Borneo or the furthermost ends of the earth.

Some of the members of the press may recall the name of the English statesman who once said that the last refuge of a scoundrel is patriotism. But there are two kinds of patriotism, the one that seeks to fool people, the sort of patriot who claims a monoply upon all the patriotism in the country and wishes to make it appear that he carries it all in his own bosom. But the everyday American man and woman is the real patriot.

You owe it to your children, the hope of the future, and to your duty to God, to tell your children the true story of this nation and the true meaning of our flag. Never tire of telling them the story of Paul Revere, of Concord and of Lexington. Tell them why this nation was founded so that they may understand what this flag means.

Let us be proud of our flag. As it stands today it has 48 stars representing 48 states, and there are 48 states for every star on that banner. Fall into line and turn a deaf ear toward those who would have you believe that we should attempt to maintain our place by peace alone. Pray for those who will not be convinced and reason with those who will listen to reason.

And let us not forget the children of foreign born parents. They are the Americans of the future. Don't be tired with them because they need help to understand these great truths about our country, but explain the history of our flag and its principles to them. Tell them what Americanism really means, tell them that the blood of Poland, France and Italy and every great country was shed to help us lay the foundation of this nation.

And so long as this stream makes glad music on its way to the northern sea, so long as it reflects the stars of heaven at night, and God's glorious sunlight by day, these children and their children to come will call you blessed.

Russia Menace Plains of Hungary

(By United Press)

London—Czernowitz is semi-officially reported and the Russian offensive is now busy driving westward toward Stanislau in an effort to completely cut the Austrian communication between Lemburg and all of the southern points of the line. If the Russians are successful the Austrian Czernowitz army will either have to stand its ground or retreat through the Carpathians down on the plains of Hungary, for were the Russians to reach and occupy the rich farming country of the plains it would be a serious blow to the Central Powers, now possibly dependent on the coming harvest for enough food to enable them to continue the war.

Reports from Berlin to Petrograd and Vienna all make patent that the Austrian effort to prevent a complete cut-in order has stiffened their defense. This is most apparent in the sector directly east of Lemburg. It is also noticeable in the region of Baranovichi.

GERMANS LOSE HEAVILY IN SHARP NIGHT ATTACKS

(By United Press)

Paris—After a period of inaction of forty-eight hours, the Germans launched a violent infantry attack against the Chiamont farm and Tarlette woods in the sector of the Verdun front on the east bank of the Meuse last night, says the French official statement to-day.

All of the attacks were repulsed. At times the French artillery fire was so heavy that the Germans were killed in their trenches before they were able to reach the west bank of the Meuse. The Germans launched seven counter attacks on the slope of Dead Man's Hill. All of thse were repulsed, the French impounding 185 Germans.

On the east bank, at 6 p. m., the Germans made a powerful offensive north of Chiamont farm, from Hill 321 to 320. All of the attacks were checked by the fire of machine guns, the Germans losing heavily.

Further attacks were launched at 10 p. m. on the edge of the Carelette woods. These were checked by French curtain fire, but the men were unable at some points to jump out of their trenches. In the official statement of last night the French claimed the capture of 130 prisoners when they attempted to take a German trench on Dae d Mab's Holl.

VEGETABLE GROWERS WILL MEET NEXT TUESDAY

Secretary J. E. Day of the Fulton Produce Growers' Association, announces an important meeting of the association for next Tuesday evening at Grange Hall at eight o'clock sharp. At this meeting, the members will decide upon four or five commission houses in New York city to handle Fulton lettuce this season.

There was an informal discussion on this subject at the last meeting of the association, and several representatives of commission houses were present to explain the advantages of their particular establishments. O. T. Day, one of the prominent growers of this section, suggested at the last meeting that two of the houses supplied last year be retained this season, but that two new houses be selected in place of the other two firms which have handled the Fulton lettuce. No action was taken at the last meeting, but in all probability some new arrangements will be completed Tuesday evening.

EX-SENATOR HENDRICKS IS CONVALESCENT

Syracuse—The condition of former State Senator Francis Hendricks, veteran Onondaga county Republican leader, who was injured Wednesday night in an automobile accident near here continued to show steady improvement to-day.

Despite his age the former senator rallied well after the shock of the accident wore off and according to physicians it is but a question of giving time for his injuries to heal from now on. The worse injury he suffered was a long and deep cut to the side of his head.

KINDRED, $22,000 THIEF, ARRESTED

New York—Edward C. Kindred, cashier of the Flynn-O'Rourke Contracting Company, who disappeared last August, as did $22,000 of the firm's money, was yesterday brought back from Boston.

The police say $3,000 was found in Kindred's apartments. Kindred will be arraigned to-day.

Orchestra Gives Up Idea of Concert

In explaining to a reporter for The Evening Times the proposition advanced by Charles P. Gilmore, of Oswego, lessee of the Quirk Theatre, relative to a concert by the Fulton Symphony Orchestra in the Quirk during Old Home Week, one of the committee inadvertently made an error.

The committeeman told The Times' reporter that Mr. Gilmore proposed to engage a singer for the affair, and that the theatre was to have the first $125 of the net receipts, after all expenses were paid. In justice to Mr. Gilmore, the error is now rectified, as it appears that his proposition was that the theatre was to have the first $125 of the gross receipts, and was to pay all expenses out of that sum. The orchestra was to receive the second $125 and the remainder was to be divided.

The committeeman stated this morning that some of the members of the orchestra were inclined to favor Mr. Gilmore's proposition while others insisted that the concert should be held under the orchestra's own auspices, and at the Fulton Tabernacle, which can be secured for practically the cost of the lights.

A decision between the two sites was found unnecessary, however, as the organization has decided not to give a concert during Old Home Week, since most of its members will be very busy elsewhere. The members of the organization who play in the Elks' band will have little spare time as the band has booked concerts for almost every afternoon and evening during the celebration, and other members of the orchestra are working on committees, which will preclude their participation in other events.

Old Home Week Will See City in Gayest Attire, a Certainty

Some novel features have already been planned by the Chamber of Commerce committees in charge of the Old Home Week celebration in July. It was announced at the committee headquarters to-day that several small balloons, bearing the inscription, "Old Home Week," will be sent up a few days previous to the celebration. To each balloon will be attached a card donated by some local merchants, which will be good for a certain amount in trade at their stores.

The event will be well advertised in neighboring towns, and a squad of billposters will distribute 500 half sheets and 100 three sheet posters in Syracuse, Oswego, and other neighboring cities next week.

On Monday the concession committee will sit at the headquarters to receive all bids for concessions during the celebration. Milton J. Crandall has been engaged as the official decorator of the city, and Mr. Crandall will not only supervise and plan all the street decorations, but will also be open to engagement from any merchant who wishes his establishment decorated.

Next week almost every committee appointed for the affair will have important meetings, at which the attendance of every member is requested. The meetings announced for Monday are as follows:

Reception committee, at 10 o'clock.

Grand Stand Committee at 11 o'clock.

Farmers' Picnic Committee at 3 o'clock.

Motorcycle and Bicycle Committee at 4:30 o'clock.

Concert Committee at 8 o'clock.

The following committees will meet on Tuesday:

Historical Parade Committee at 10 o'clock.

Flower Corso Committee at 2 o'clock.

Water Pageant Committee at 7:30 o'clock.

Lake Neahtawanta Committee at 3 o'clock.

Wednesday the parade organization committee will meet at 7:30 o'clock, and on Thursday, the religious services committee will meet at 10 o'clock.

Democrats Reject Suff. Amendment

(By United Press)

St. Louis—Unmeasured denunciation of the hyphenated American and a proudful lauding of Democratic achievement during the past three years and a fervent endorsement of Americanism and preparedness—these were the principal planks in the platform submitted to the Democratic national convention to-day by a resolutions committee that wound up a continuous twenty-two hours' session full of spice and ginger.

Woman's suffrage was one of the principal bones of contention. It was held to be a state issue and not one for decision by a constitutional amendment. It was a long document, twenty-five planks constituting it. The Democrats point with pride to its promises and pledges for the future and endorsement of the past. These words are limned in about 5,000 words.

The platform holds that the part of intervention in Mexico is revolting. The convention met this morning at 11:29 and the hall was only half-filled when Chairman James dropped the gavel, many of the delegates having left for home before that hour arrived.

CONVENTION ADOPTS SUFFRAGE PLANK, 25-20

(By United Press)

St. Louis—The complete harmony program for the Democratic convention was thrown wide open to-day. Harmony reached its climax near midnight when President Wilson was renominated by acclamation. At 7 a. m. when the resolutions committee was putting the finishing touches to its night report after twenty-two hours' consecutive session, it was apparent that at least one fight of that long grind would be carried before the convention. This was in relation to Suffrage. The committee fought out the equal ballot pledge for hours and it was defeated and a plank for straightout suffrage was inserted in the platform in favor of a constitutional amendment for woman suffrage. The plank was adopted by a vote of 25 to 20. It reads as follows:

"We recommend the extension of the franchise of the women of the country by the women of the states upon the same terms as the men."

This substitute was not satisfactory to the backers of the suffrage movement.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat:

Never before has the office sought the man with such persistency; never before has it had to overcome obstacles set up by the man himself or by the circumstances of his position. Nothing less than an absolutely overwhelming public sentiment in his favor could have accomplished this result; nothing less than a complete confidence in his ability, his integrity and his courage; nothing less than a profound conviction that Charles Evans Hughes was the one man fitted in every way for the present situation.

The development of this sentiment and conviction is not measured by weeks nor yet by months. It has been slowly growing in the minds of the people for a long time. Earnest men throughout the country, men, for the most part, not connected with political activities—business men, professional men, farmers, workingmen, all classes of citizens who have the interests of the country and of the party at heart, have been giving thought to the question of the candidate to be put forward by the Republicans at this time, and a year ago the trend of opinion toward Hughes was plainly discernible. The Globe-Democrat saw this trend then, and as far back as February publicly recognized it and approved of it.

There should be good reason for such unanimity of popular opinion, particularly so when it is uninfluenced by personal appeal or partisan passion—and there is good reason. The public became aware of the qualities and abilities of Mr. Hughes through his conduct of the gas and insurance investigations in New York in 1905-06. The popular approval at that time forced him into the office of governor of the state after he had declined the nomination for mayor of New York City. He did not seek the gubernatorial chair. Then, as now, he felt that the call for his services, if his services were desired, should come from the people without solicitation. He was bitterly opposed by certain strongly entrenched political and corporate interests, but the people would have no other. Nor were the people mistaken in their judgment.

"No individual or group of individuals and no private interest will be permitted to dictate my policy," he said, when notified of his nomination for governor in October, 1906. "I shall decide and act according to my conscience and as I believe the public interest requires."

And when he became governor he did exactly what he said he would do. His administration was notable for its absolute independence of action. It was a continuous battle against hostile intrests for the public welfare, and his triumphant re-election, against all the powers that could be brought to bear against him, was one of the most dramatic and striking events in the history of American politics. His removal from the office of governor of New York to the higher position of justice of the Supreme Court of the United States in 1910 took him out of the field of political and executive activity, but he left a record as a public administrator for the public good that impressed not merely New York but the entire country.

The Country Gentleman:

With $238,000 to study marketing problems the Government experts ought to be able to make the subject interesting. The proof of their report will be the reading of it. Let us hope it will escape the fate of most reports, which go to the wastebasket or the cellar. For $238,000 we expect something worth while. Here, we believe, is one problem that needs all the publicity it can get. So there is peculiar importance in making this report popular and understandable. Some time ago we had an article on the markets of a city, and it was developed that there was quite a graft in stalls. The fortunate renters held the stalls under a very old arrangement and paid practically nothing for them, but they re-rented at stiff figures and pocketed the difference. The facts were not known to the city authorities and the publication led to a change, so that now the stalls are open to public bids. This is what publicity means in reform.

In another instance, insistence upon the value of the home market in one of the smaller cities turned gloomy old market house into a busy and profitable mart, with the result that the stalls this year brought five times as much as they did four years ago. Publicity brought the producers and consumers together, and the advantages were mutual.

In a town of 1,600 a farmers' market is held for two hours every Saturday afternoon. The local merchants provide the facilities free, and the whole thing works out to the general satisfaction. Marketing is a community opportunity, and producers and consumers profit by coming together.

States are doing good work. Massachusetts with the new law authorizing public markets in commuunities of over 10,000, California with a state commission market system, Idaho with a director of farm markets, and others, are instances of progress. But in all of these—national, state or local—the need is convincing the farmer that it is worth his while to try the home market, and the buyer that it is to his interest to patronize it.

Markets should have publicity all the time, and the more they have the better.

New York Herald:

In intimating that the reply of the American government to the demands of General Carransa is being delayed from considerations of politics, are not officials of the administration rendering distinct disservice to President Wilson?

If the Navy Department has chartered a number of merchant steamships to be used in bringing Americans from Mexico's Atlantic ports as Washington despatches assert, it must be in anticipation of developments of a serious nature. Taken in connection with the news from El Paso that practically all the American consular officers have been recalled from Northern Mexico, this action of the Navy Department has an added significance.

With conditions under Carranza admittedly going from bad to worse, dallying and delay would seem just about the worst policy the United States could pursue. The right kind of a word from the United States may bring the First Chief and those around him to their senses. There should be no delay in sending that word.

This is no time for more Watchful Waiting.

New York Telegraph:

Ohio is the latest State to attempt the enforcement of a blue law against the opening of moving picture theatres on Sunday. The Supreme Court has decided that the statute is constitutional, and for the present, at least, owners and managers will be annoyed. In combating all this effort to deprive the people of an innocent form of entertainment on the first day of the week seems to us that those favoring the personal liberty of the individual have overlooked an essential feature. It will hardly be contended that objection would be made by any one except the most dogmatic puritan if it were proposed to open an art gallery on Sunday. Addled indeed must be the ideas of a man or woman who believes that it would desecrate the Sabbath to enter a room or a hall and look at a painting hung upon the wall; and purblind the person who can make a distinction between a succession of pictures in motion and a stationary work of art.

It might not be a bad idea to call the motion picture theatre a gallery. If it be objected that an admission fee is charged the same can be said of almost anything else that is permitted within doors on Sunday. The churches expect their pew rent, and it is not unusual for a silver collection to be taken up at the door of a Y. M. C. A. auditorium.

In any event the problem of Sunday film "shows" will be solved, and with sanity, at no distant day. It may not be a pleasant thing for the "Sabbatarians" to contemplate, but the majority of the people of this country are Sunday patrons whenever they have the opportunity to be, and in the end the majority will rule.

Kansas City Star:

We look into the books of statistics and find that in all of Persia there are only thirty-three miles of railway; Persia, with a population of nine millions. Turkey-in-Asia has only three thousand miles of railway, and its population is nearly twenty millions.

It is an amazing thing, when one comes to think it over, that millions and millions of people in this world never even saw a railway, and that there are other millions who live so remote from a railway they seldom see one, and get no benefit from one. The country in Asia through which the Russian and British are fighting now is the oldest in the world. The earliest traditions of the race begin there. Written history has its first page there, and yet the millions who live there are wholly without railways. Their methods of transportation have been always the crudest—the camel caravan, the creaking ox cart. Those people never got beyond the primitive state because, lacking transportation facilities, they lacked intercourse with the outside world and it moved on and forgot them.

China, with 400 million souls, and only a little more than half as many miles of railway as are in the State of Kansas. In the United States 255,000 miles of railway and on the whole continent of Asia only 63,000 miles. In the United States about one mile of railway for each four hundred persons. In China one for for each 76,000. In Persia, one mile for each 300,000.

Ships, railways, the easy highway road, the mail carrier, the printed page, they got together to civilize, to uplift, to make life better, easier, happier. The letters written and mailed in the United States each year and carried to destination by road and railway amount to eighty for each man, woman and child of our population. In Russia only ten letters per head per year are written; in India, only two; in Spain, only seven; in Mexico, only fourteen. And in all of Asia Minor and Persia, with nearly 30 million people, there is not a mail train nor a good road.

Those vast populations that slept while the outside world moved on are getting the beginning of railways now. But meanwhile they have lagged far, far behind, and it will take many years for the civilization that follows rapid transportation to do its work.

"No, sir: not a penny!" was the reply of young Ardup's opulent but immovable relative. "I've lent you more money already than you will ever pay back. You can shift for yourself henceforth. The difference between us is that I am provident and you are improvident."

"The difference between us," vehemently retorted young Ardup, with his hand on the doorknob, "is that I'm a man of moderate means and you're a man of immoderate meanness!"

GUARD EQUIPMENT TO BE OF THE SIMPLEST

There will not be any unnecessary baggage carried to Beekman, N. Y., this summer by the national guardsmen who will encamp there at specified times. Ever y national guardsman in the state will be at the camp some time during the summer.

Regiments and companies throughout the state will leave their respective armories Friday, July 7th. Each unit will be detrained at some spot 25 miles from camp.

Three quarters of a million dollars will be required for the expenses of this camp. The expense of transportation is one reason which caused the officials to change the camp from Pine Plains, the original site, to Beekman.

Orders just issued from headquarters say that the officers must minimize the baggage and bring only the barest of necessities. Officers will be limited to a roll of seventy-five pounds there and the men's marching equipment will be corresponingly light. There will be no heavy field ranges in camp, grates and light eqnipment taking their place.

An example of the minimization is found in that but two towels will be allowed each man. Every effort will be made to keep down the impediments as much as possible.

Individual cooking will be very common. Only eight draft mules and thirty-two horses will be allowed to each regiment.

Members of the guard will have to limit their packs to shelter tent, half poncho blanket, tooth brush, razor and the two towels. Heavy ice chests will not be carried this year, but light ones will be sunk into the ground. Washboards and light tubs will be an important part of the equipment.

Discipline at camp will be more strict than usual. No chewing of any kind will be allowed while troops are at attention, on drill or parade. Sleeves cannot be rolled except when guardsmen are engaged in manual labor or are off duty.

The amount of actual manual labor will be lighter this year as a result of the determination of the officials of the guard to devote more time to the explanation of the results and reasons in the working out of military problems.

Another of the slogans is "Don't send a boy." Officers will be instructed to send enough men to do anything required.

The first week at camp is to be devoted to individual instruction for the different arms of the service. During the second week the artillery, the infantry and the cavalry will be brought together with the other branches for combined manoeuvres.

DRYS MAY NOT TRY TO ELECT NATIONAL TICKET

(By United Press)

St. Paul, Minn.—Pledges of Prohibitionists to vote against any presidential candidate or party not pledged to the abolition of the liquor traffic, rather than an actual serious attempt to elect a national ticket, seemed the possible key note today of the national convention to be held here July 19.

On July 18, a preliminary meeting will be held of the 5,000,000 voter's league, which seeks to align 5,000,000 voters on the platform of a prohibition pledge, rather than for the prohibition ticket.

It is claimed that 150,000 voters in Minnesota alone, will be secured.

College men from the entire nation will hold an oratorical contset as a preliminary to the convention, on July 17.

"No, I'm not going to school at all," steadfastly declared the little chap. "I can't read, nor I can't write, nor I can't sing, so I'd like to know what good I'd be at school!"—Exchange.

Diplomats Will Have a Time at Remapping

(By United Press)

London, June 8 (by mail)—Re-mapping Europe after the war is going to be as colossal a diplomatic task as the war has been a military undertaking.

European statesmen believe it will take several years. Some say things will begin to adjust themselves gradually while the fighting still progresses and that the struggle will subside by degrees as these readjustments are affected in spots.

To show how complicated the situation will be, the following is a summary, from good diplomatic authorities, of the changes the allies unquestionably will demand if they win decisively over the central powers:

Belgium restored and possibly given possession of Holland as far as the river Waal; Holland, in this case, being compensated by a gift of German territory to and including Oldenburg.

The French frontier extended to the Rhine from the Swiss to the Belgian or Dutch frontier.

The Tyrol, Gortiz and Istria, including Fiume, transferred from Austria to Italy.

Vorarlberg possibly transferred from Austria to Switzerland.

East Prussia transferred from Germany to Russia, and Russian, German and Austrian Poland re-established as a self-governing nation under Russian domination.

Schleswig-Holstein returned by Germany to Denmark.

Hungary probably made a separate, independent kingdom.

Bukovina turned over to Russia.

Rumania made a present of Transylvania and possibly of a part or even all of Bessarabia, as a free gift from Russia. Another big slice of northern Bulgaria also transferred to Rumania.

Serbia and Montenegro united, with all of conquered Serbia restored and, in addition, Bosnia, Herzegovina, Dalmatia and part of European Turkey ceded to the pair.

Another fraction of Turkey handed to Greece, except in the now unlikely event that the Greeks should join the central powers.

Turkey, according to the generally accepted program, will be expelled completely from Europe.

Some diplomats favor a partition of the sultan's Asiatic possessions also among the allies. Others are disposed to leave him a remnant of this territory, with his capital, presumably, at Brussa.

There is no suggestion of any territorial allowance to Sweden or Norway, despite the fact that the former is exceedingly anxious for Finland. Her pro-German sympathies undoubtedly will prevent this but the assumption is that the Finns will be given the measure of self government which they have claimed all along.

Luxemburg presumably will be permitted to maintain a degree of semi-independence under French protection and domination.

Constantinople's fate is hard to determine. Russia wants and seems pretty likely to get it. This will give the czar his long desired warm water port.

It is not much of a secret that England is not very happy over this prospect. The British would rather see Constantinople internationalized—a neutral city.

It will be hard, however, to deny their allies the one thing they are most particularly anxious to secure. The issue may conceivably become the subject of discord between the two big powers.

This, however, only disposes of Europe.

Russia will get a big chunk of Turkey's Asiatic territory, perhaps as far south as Bagdad.

The czar will dominate northern Persia also, if he does not actually annext it.

England will hold a similar position in southern Persia and will get Mesoptamia and the sultan's possessions south from Bagdad to the Persian gulf.

Greece, if she is good, will get Smyrna, and a little territory surrounding the city.

In Africa, the Cameroons will go to France. Belgium will get part of German East Africa.

England will take the rest of the kaiser's African possessions.

Germany's islands will be kept by the powers which have taken them—Japan, England, Australia and New Zealand. Japan will retain Kiao Chau.

Some allied diplomats hold that war should continue until Germany and Austria are broken up into their original compoinant states.

Others see no objection to a continued federation, into which they predict Austria will be drawn. What will be the outcome nobody knows.

All this is taking it for granted the allies will be victorious.

If the central powers should win, it is accepted as a foregone conclusion that:

Germany will keep Belgium, perhaps take enough of Holland to give the kaiser control of the Scheldt, gather in enough of northern France to secure Calais, regain all lost German colonies, annex Courlan from Russia, wrest Singapore from England, as the gateway to the Orient, seize Indo-China from the French and establish Poland as a nominally self governing kingdom under German domination.

It is taken for granted further that Old Serbia and Montenegro will become Austrian, that Bulgaria will get Macedonia and a big mouthful of the territory Greece took from Turkey, that Germany will become paramount in Rumania, Albania and Persia and that, through his overlordship of Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey, the kaiser's rule will extend, in effect, as far as the Persian gulf.

From Italy, Austria is expected to get the province of Venice.

Earlier in the war there was much talk of big money indemnities to be paid by the losing to the winning side.

There isn't much of this talk now.

Each side is convinced that it can't get what the other won't have for a long time after peace is restored.

CELEBRATION OF STATE MOTORISTS

Indications point to the largest gathering of automobilists ever held in this country at Ogdensburg, Saturday, June 10th, to celebrate reciprocity in motor licenses between New York State and Ontario, which was recently put into effect after long, drawn out efforts upon the part of the New York State Automobile Association and the Ontario Motor League. Practically every one of the 110 clubs of the New York State Automobile Association will send representatives and more than 500 Canadian automobiles will be in the line up.

The celebration has been planned by the New York State Automobile Association, the Ontario Motor League and the Automobile and civic officials of Ogdensburg and will take the form of a mass meeting at the Opera House, Ogdensburg at 8:00 p. m., Saturday June 10th, at which speeches will be delivered by Hon. SUES EXPRESS COMPANY FOR LOSS OF A GOWN

Watertown—Through her husband, Attorney Henry B. Babcock, Mrs. Marion Babcock this morning started a suit in city court against the American Express Company to recover $50 and costs for the loss of a gown which was shipped by express to Mrs. L. M. Ayres, in Philadelphia, Pa.

Mrs. Babcock alleges that she went to the express office April 13 and paid 27 cents express charges to have the gown shipped to Mrs. Ayres. She valued the garment at $50 to one of the local agents. It is alleged that the gown has never been delivered to its destination.

FARM HELP SCARCE IN JEFFERSON COUNTY

Watertown—Unless help arrives from some unexpected source, Jefferson county farmers must be prepared to do their own harvesting and other labor this summer. Manager F. E. Robertson, of the farm bureau, sees no prospect for a relief of the labor situation, which has assumed the proportions of a drouth as far as rural employment is concerned.

In the past two weeks Mr. Robertson has not received a single application for work, despite the fact that this is the season of the year when men are usually looking for country employment. He has many requests for help from farmers, who utilize the farm bureau as a sort of employment agency. Mr. Robertson states that he could place a good many men if he had any available. Farmers are now offering from $25 to $40 a month, of course including board and lodging, for the summer season.

Vegetable Growers Confer Today With Railroad Officials

At a conference this morning between officials of the Lackawanna Railroad and Adams' Express companies and a committee representing the Fulton Vegetable Growers' Association, the first steps were taken in the campaign of the local growers to secure better shipping facilities to the large markets during the coming season.

Present at the meeting were the following men representing the transit companies: A. E. LeRoyd, of New York, general freight agent, and Nat Duke, of New York, general traffic manager, of the Lackawanna Railroad; Division Superintendent Cizek of Binghamton, Lackawanna; F. F. Peabody, of Binghamton, route agent of the Adams' Express Co.; G. C. Ferris, assistant superintendent of the Lackawanna, Syracuse division; F. H. Pike, division freight agent, Lackawanna, of Syracuse, and J. W. Bailey, Fulton freight agent for the Lackawanna.

The growers were represented by O. T. Day, O. W. Dwyer, Lee Beardsley, Edward Beckwith, William Hubbard, Edward Sasselein and Matthew Hall. The conference was held in the office of the Lackawanna in this city.

Under the present traffic scheme the Fulton produce is handled by express service, leaving this city on a noon train and arriving in New York and Philadelphia about eight o'clock, for sale in the markets the same night. The growers are well satisfied with this service, but feel that it will prove inadequate during the rush season, and they ask in addition a 48-hour freight service to the New York and Philadelphia markets. This freight service would collect the Fulton produce which is not quickly perishable each afternoon, and the cars would leave Syracuse about ten o'clock at night. The shippers want a 48-hour run to the markets assured, in order that the produce may reach the market in time for second morning sales.

The railroad officials were inclined to give this plan favorable consideration, but delayed in making any definite decision until an investigation can be made to determine whether or not such a service is practicable.

The matter of installing a switch for the growers at the junction of the Bowen's Corners road and the Lackawanna tracks was also discussed. The growers contend that the switch would work for speedier handling of produce here, and the railroad officials took the application under consideration.

The decisions involving the freight service and switch will be returned as soon as possible. The growers expect to begin heavy shipments about July 15 or shortly after.

COMMISSION FORM LAUDED BY GOVERNOR

Montclair, N. J.—Praise for commission form of government, as exemplified by its operation in Jersey City, his home, was voiced by Governor James F. Fielder, of New Jersey, in a letter to Henry McDonough of the Montclair Commission Government League.

The citizens of this town are to vote on the adoption or rejection of commission form of government at a referendum next Tuesday and the opponents of the new system have asserted that it tended to create an oligarchic form of municipal rule. The "antis" pointed to Jersey City as a "horrible example" of this influence. Governor Fielder was asked how he regarded the operation of commission form of government in Jersey City. He replied:

"I would say that commission government in Jersey City has proven itself a great improvement over the government we had under our old charter, and I do not think there is any citizen who would say he would be willing to return to the old system, nor do I believe there are many who would substitute any other form of municipal government for the present method."

"Be cheerful. You can always look about you and see people worse off than you are."

"That's true. And when the bill collectors come dunning me I can always tell them of a lot of people that have more money than I, but the trouble is they won't go to them."—Detroit Free Press.

STATE GUARD BARRED JEWS?

In National Guard Inquiry, Jewish Soldiers Assert That Officers Were Prejudiced Against Them.

New York—Non-commissioned officers of the Twenty-second Regiment Engineers, denied prejudice against Jews in their units of the National Guard, when the inquiry by Adjutant-General Stotesbury was resumed yesterday in this city.

George B. Hartley, who resigned recently as a captain in the Eighth Coast Artillery and who made charges against his battalion commander, Major Paul Loeser, was present. So was Major Loeser, but there was not time to hear them. The inquiry was adjourned to Monday, June 19.

It developed yesterday that Capt. Hartley's resignation was preceded by a fist fight between himself and Major Loeser.

Other officers separated them, and Captain Hartley was placed under arrest. He said this incident was the culmination of a series of petty persecutions.

Early in the Spring, at an inspection by State and Federal officers, Hartley's company was found to be below standard in numbers, discipline and property. It was hinted to him by Major Loeser that he ought to resign. He remained, and after more quarrels, the fight occurred.

Hartley says he was never courtmartialed, as would be usual in such cases, because Col. Austin did want a scandal.

Major Loeser said yesterday he made no discriminations of race. He had enlisted at least fifty Jews he added and had made several of them non-commissioned officers. He will answer Hartley's charges on the stand.

Maurice Simmons, attorney for the complainants, accused Col. W. B. Hotchkin, who died Tuesday. Meyer Shapiro, a City College graduate, of No. 970 Tinton avenue, Bronx, told how Col. Hotchkin returned his application, disapproved, when he tried to enlist in 1908. No reason was given but Sergeant Lynch said it was because he was a Jew.

EDISON COMPANY AUDITOR MISSING

New York—On the eve of his wedding John J. Nolan, auditor for the New York Edison Company, has disappeared. He was last seen Friday when he left the offices of the company, Irving place and Fifteenth street.

His bride-to-be, Miss Jeannette Wheelin, of No. 3213 Clarendon road, Flatbush, and his parents are distracted. They believe that he wandered away while mentally unbalanced through overwork. In addition to his regular work Nolan assisted his father in managing the Clarendon Garage, No. 253 East Twenty-ninth street, Brooklyn.

Miss Wheelin lasts saw Nolan Decoration Day. At that time he complained that he was not getting enough sleep and was thinking of either giving up his porisition or retiring from his father's garage.

An apartment in Flatbush had been selected for the young couple.

When Nolan left his work he did not draw his salary, neither did he draw several hundred dollars he had deposited with the company. He is twenty-five years old, is about five feet eight inches tall, has brown hair and wears glasses. He wore a black and white striped suit, brown fedora, and black patent leather shoes.

CHALMERS BEATS N. Y.—CHICAGO RECORD

New York—All automobile speed records between Chicago and New York were smashed yesterday by a Chalmers "6-30" roadster, which covered 1,047 miles in 31 hours. This clipped 4 hours 43 minutes off the Packard record of 35 hours 43 minutes, made by E. C. Patterson on July 15, 1915.

The car which left Chicago at 3 a. m. Tuesday morning was driven by B. F. Durham, and Al Walden, who acted as relief driver from Cleveland here, and carried full equipment, including fenders.

The runu was continuous, no stops being made except for gasoline, oil and water supplies. Durham drove from Chicago to Cleveland in eleven hours, four minutes for 371. Walden from Cleveland to Elmira, leaving at 3:55 p. m. and arriving at Elmira at 1:0 a. m.

A large registration already has been received from all classes of schools by the schoolmen's military corps in this city, which is in charge of arrangements for the camp.

The expenses for the boys will be approximately $16, exclusive of a uniform. The instruction will include physical training, athletics, hygiene, camp craft, hikes and camping on the surrounding estates, many of which have been offered already for this purpose by interestsed landowners.

"I'M DOWN AND OUT" SAYS T. R.'S COUSIN

New York—"Iam down and out. I have no money. I transferred property to my daughters. They pay all the bills."

In theses words John E. Roosevelt, cousin of the former President, summed up his pressent financial condition. While his income would amount to about $5,000 a year, he said, he had no ready money. He would have to wait till next January and trust to his daughters to pay the expenses.

Roosevelt was testifying in his own behalf before Justice Clarke in the separation action brought by Mrs. Edith Briscoe Roosevelt. He married her in Washington in 1914, and they went on a honeymoon to Egypt. While abroad and while at their Sayville, L. I. home, she says, he was cruel to her.

BREEDERS ASSOCIATION SHOULD TAKE CENSUS

Syracuse—At the annual meeting of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America in Detroit yesterday, Wing R. Smith of this city, treasurer, reported total cash receipts for the year to be $218,000 and disbursements $173,000. The balance of cash on hand, including reserve and cash accounts on April 30, showed upward of $215,000, in addition to which there was a bond investment of $62,651.25.

The association represents a life membership of 9,000 persons engaged in the breeding of Holstein-Friesian cattle, of which it is estimated there are now more than 300,000 head in the United States, owned by approximately 30,000 persons. This is the largest association engaged in improving the breeds of dairy cattle and was organized in 1871.

President D. D. Aitken, of Flint, Mich., in his annual address, recommended that census of the ownership of all Holstein-Friesian cattle in America be made during the coming year, and that, as a means of spreading the doctrine of the Holstein cow, the state and local Holstein associations be closely affiliated with the national organization and an appropriation made to cover this purpose, part of which should be devoted to the expenses of a corps of speakers to attend the meetings of the minor organizations.

AERO FIRMS PLANNING BIG COMBINATION

New York—Lawyers, representing the chief interest in the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Co., and the Wright Flying Machine Co. are formulating legal papers looking to the consolidation of those two companies, it was learned yesterday.

Under present plans, a new company will be formed with capital of between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000. The discussion has not reached the point where the officers have considered it, but it is known that large stockholders of both concerns are in accord with the plan.

A syndicate will be formed to underwrite the shares of the new company, which will also be offered to the public.

MUST WOMEN BE CHIVALROUS?

Have Business Demands on Men's Time and Modern Ways of Running Homes Put a New Chivalry In Women's Hands?

ACCORDING to the old conception of chivalry, woman was always the recipient of the care and protection of man. She and her household were defended by man from invasion by enemies, from plunder and other sources of harm.

But is it not possible today that there is a new conception of chivalry in which man is the recipient and toward whom woman must extend a peculiar kind of chivalry developed by modern demands, that the burden of responsibility for family welfare is being more forced into the hands of the woman in the home?

The taking of woman's industries out of the home has not resulted in freeing women from responsibility. On the contrary, it would seem that the more complex our modern living and the more apparently housekeeping burdens are being lightened the greater are certain kinds of burdens which the woman must assume.

Who is responsible for the kind of food, its quality and its nourishing value to the man and the other members of the family if not the woman? Must she not exercise a new kind of chivalry in protecting her family from adulterated foods, from foods made in insanitary conditions, from foods which are denatured of nourishment?

If the modern man is going to be able to meet the increasingly stern struggle for the survival of the efficient must not he be fitted physically to meet competition? The damsel of old was wont to offer her knight a sleeve of broidered pearls as an incentive to valor, or she gracefully handed him his plumed helmet to make him ready for the fight. But today it takes a great deal more than these slight courtesies on the part of woman to enable her to keep her knight in fighting trim. To a great extent the quality and blending of the foods he eats daily will have more to do with his success than any gaudy trophy woven by her hands.

Today the coffers of the home are guarded or betrayed by the woman. If she is extravagant, if she mismanages, if she refuses to follow businesslike methods in the handling of the gold intrusted to her care, the valor and bravery of the man are all for naught. With the new opportunity of sharing in man's income has come the new responsibility of expending it wisely.

In order to meet these new demands and needs of the times adequately, to assume the attitude of protector and guardian, which is becoming increasingly more difficult, woman will have to adjust her ideas and interests. Instead of spending hours weaving favors she must know if the garments she purchases are made in a sweatshop; instead of gracing the trencher board she must be acquainted with the foods that are used and be responsible for the nourishment of her family; instead of disbursing largess she will sit down with an account book and outline her expenditures after a budget plan.

Woman's chivalry to man—her protection and defense of the home in all of the newer, more ethical and spiritual interests—is the new responsibility the age imposes on her.

Three Small Meals Best.

At the first signs of hateful fat a woman should begin a vigorous campaign against the enemy before she is completely conquered by it. The first and most powerful weapons to use in this warfare against flesh are diet and exercise. The diet should eliminate all sweets, cakes, candies, desserts, sodas, sugar in tea or coffee, all starchy foods, such as rice, white bread, potatoes, beans, peas, and all fatty foods, such as cream, milk and chocolate.

However, it is a great mistake to cut down too much on the amount of food, for it will only produce weakness. Another point about the diet is that it is better to take three slim meals, consisting of nonfattening foods, than to eat only one meal a day in which enough is eaten to make up for four other meals. A great many women follow this form of dieting, giving up all but one meal, but they eat enough at this one repast to make up for all of their dieting.

Washable Dogskin.

We have almost all of us become devotees of washable kid gloves. And each season these gloves become more worthy of our devotion. Something new now is the washable dogskin glove—a really dark, heavy glove of dogskin, which is at the same time entirely and satisfactorily washable.

INSTEAD OF STIRRING.

To save yourself the trouble of constantly stirring such things as milk, stews, sauces and custards when cooking them, keep a large marble on hand in your kitchen. Place it in the vessel containing your boiling liquid and it will do the stirring for you by its rolling around automatically. You can then leave the milk, stew or custard and attend to other dishes instead of having [illegible]

The 1916 Girl Graduate Makes Her Own Gown

CLASS OF 1916.

IF every girl likes to make her own graduation frock this model is so simple that she can easily reproduce it. White net is the material, but voile or organdie is also suitable. The eight ruffles are edged with narrow white satin ribbon, and two ruffles give the finish of the babyish neck and sleeves. The yoke is a round shirr, and the white satin ribbon girdle is held by a tiny bunch of forgetmenots.

STRAWBERRY CHARLOTTE.

For this dainty dessert crush a quart of ripe strawberries and sprinkle generously with confectioner's sugar. Put in the refrigerator to chill and when thoroughly chilled drain in a wire sieve. Use only the solid part, reserving the fruit juice for sherbet, punches or sauces.

Whip until very stiff a cupful of cream and sweeten with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Have ready a stiffly beaten white of egg and add to the cream with the chilled berries. Split small lady fingers and arrange in log cabin fashion on plates. Pile the strawberry mixture into them and serve.

Lighter Diets.

Remember that summer is a good time to institute a diet containing less meat. Meatless breakfasts and luncheons are quite as appetizing and satisfying in summer as those containing meat are. And they are more healthful. So begin to substitute hearty salads or attractive vegetable dishes for meat at luncheon and cut it out altogether for breakfast, making eggs answer its purpose, and you will see the high cost of living go down as family health goes up.

Dress Trimmings.

Many of the new afternoon dresses have hip panels of ribbon, puffed or laid flat upon stiffened taffeta skirt. Galon cire, or varnished braid, instead of becoming a passing novelty has settled into a standard trimming and will be used on outdoor garments during the coming season.

Fleeing From War

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

When the pan-European war broke out I was in Berlin. I wished to reach London, where I could get a steamer for America as soon as possible, for I feared an interruption of travel. But there was such a crowd of fugitives besides the troops, being moved westward, that I concluded to wait till the trains were less crowded, so I remained where I was, and finally there came a time when I felt that I could go through comfortably.

I chose a way train, because the main exodus was on the express trains. The former are composed of compartments holding eight persons between which there is no connection. The latter are also compartments, but there is a passageway so that one can walk through the train, as in America. The compartment in which I started was full, but travelers kept getting out at the stations until there was but one person left, a woman who wore a veil thick enough to conceal her features.

As soon as she and I were alone she began to show signs of illness. I asked her if I could do anything for her, and she replied—in a coarse voice for a woman, I thought—asking me if I had any liquor. I told her I had not, whereupon she said that she had some [illegible] brandy, which she had intended to make a present to her mother, but she must use it. Taking it from her handbag, she poured a little of it into a glass she produced and drank it off. Then, suddenly remembering me, she poured the rest of the liquor into the glass and handed it to me.

"Drink it," she said. "My gift is spoiled."

"But it is more than I care for," I protested.

I did not propose to throw away such good liquor and drank it all. A few minutes after I had done so I began to feel dizzy and the power to move or speak leaving me. The woman at once discarded all appearance of illness and asked me how I liked her liquor. I could not reply, and when she was satisfied that I could not she threw off her feminine attire and appeared as a man. Then he took my traveling cap off my head and put it on his own. His next act was to go through my pockets till he found my passport, which he appropriated.

His German speech had been with a foreign accent, and now that he had taken my passport I suspected that he was a foreigner to the country trying to get out of it. I was completely helpless from the effects of the liquor, which had been undoubtedly drugged. Nevertheless, I was perfectly conscious of all that was taking place. The man put his woman's apparel under the cushion of the seat, and when the train stopped at the next station and the guard unlocked the door of the compartment he got out and hurried away. I endeavored to tell the guard to stop him, but I was powerless even to point to him. The door was again locked, and the train moved on.

The effect of the drug did not last long, and when I righted I found myself on a train leaving Germany and required to show a passport that I did not have. I was not permitted to remain undisturbed, for later on in the day, when the train stopped, a couple of German officials appeared at the door of my compartment, evidently looking for some one. They pounced upon me and demanded my passport.

I told them how I had been robbed of it, and I had but half finished my story when one of them exclaimed, "He is our man!" Then they ordered me to produce any secret papers I had about me. I protested, and they searched me.

It was evident that they were after a spy, and I believed that he was the man who had drugged me and taken my passport. They took me out of the train, and we boarded one going to Berlin. When we reached the capital I was taken before an officer and questioned. I did not correspond with the description he had of the spy, and I heard him tell my captors that they had made a mistake. I was able to produce letters received from America and told him that if he would permit me to communicate with the American embassy, where my passport had been visèd, I could further substantiate my identity.

They were about to call a messenger for this purpose when a telegram was received stating that a man had been arrested with military information on his person and bearing the passport of an American, the name being the one I had given. This proved my case, but I was held till the spy was brought to Berlin and to the office where I was detained. As soon as I saw him I recognized him for the man who had drugged me. He was a Frenchman and had gathered a lot of military information.

There was not much formality about such matters, and instead of trying the spy the officer who examined him told his captors to take him away. I fancied that this was an order to shoot him.

Having recovered my passport, I made another attempt to leave the country. This time I accepted no invitation either to drink or to smoke, but pursued my way without a word to or from any one except officials. I worked my way through Belgium to Ostend, crossed the channel and after much delay in London found passage for New York.

EAT DANDELIONS AND IMPROVE YOUR LAWN.

EARLY spring is, of course, the time to eat dandelions, for once the lion toothed weed has lost its youth it is unfit for humans.

The usual way of serving the dandelion is as a green. The leaves must be very thoroughly washed in many waters, for dandelions are usually gathered from the wayside and are even dustier than, though perhaps not so gritty as, spinach leaves. After the leaves are washed put them in a bowl, cover with cold water and let stand for two hours. Drain, add boiling salted water and boil for twenty minutes. Drain thoroughly, chop fine, reheat with plenty of butter and season with salt and pepper. Place in a dish and garnish with rings of the white of hard boiled eggs and sprinkle with the grated or crumbled hard boiled yolk.

For salad dandelions are also useful. Only the youngest leaves can be used for salad, and they must be washed thoroughly and drained. Then they should be mixed with French dressing and sprinkled with diced hard boiled eggs, diced beets or diced radishes.

Bacon and dandelion salad is truly delicious. To make it, wash and drain a quart of the white, tender leaves of dandelions. Season with salt and pepper. Fry crisp brown six thin slices of bacon and chop them fine and sprinkle on the greens. Add a quarter of a cupful of vinegar to the grease in the pan in which the bacon was cooked. Heat thoroughly and pour over the dandelion leaves.

Dandelion Salad.—Arrange dandelion leaves in a circle on individual salad plates. In the center of each plate place half of the yolk of a hard boiled egg, picking the egg with a silver fork so that it will resemble a flower. Pour French dressing over all.

Dandelion Wine.—Materials: Four quarts dandelion blossoms (good measure), four quarts boiling water, three and one-half pounds granulated sugar, four lemons. Utensils: Large granite pan, jar, grater, bottles. Directions: Pour boiling water over blossoms and let stand twenty-four hours. Add the grated rind and juice of lemons to the sugar. Dissolve on stove, then add to water which has been poured off the blossoms. Let stand in jar two weeks. Bottle, leaving uncorked for a time.

Among the New Blouse Models.

A blouse that will appeal to both summer matron and maid is this design in canary color crepe Georgette and lace. The tab fronts may be outlined with satin.

Blouses are prettier than usual this season as well as more numerous. One of the smartest of the new designs is pictured here, fashioned of crepe Georgette trimmed with lace and shirring. The waist may be either tucked or gathered at the shoulders, while overlooking the V-shaped neck is a flare collar of silk gauze. Anything daintier than the shirred sleeves would be hard to find.

In medium size the blouse requires 4 yards 36-inch crepe with ¾ yard 36-inch lining and 1½ yards lace 8 inches wide to trim.

Before attempting to do any thing with the waist, study the guide carefully. Then take the underbody and make it so that it can be fitted to avoid trouble with the waist proper. Trim the front and back of the underbody to crosslines of small "o" perforations. Face the front, from front edge to about 5 inches back, to form vest effect. Plait front and back at lower edge, placing "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations. Close under-arm and shoulder seam as notched. Turn hem at front edge of front at notches: Center-front indicated by large "O" perforations. Adjust 2-inch belting to position underneath lower edge for a stay. Sew standing collar to neck edge as notched: large "O" perforation in collar indicates center-front.

Then tuck the front of the outer blouse, creasing on slot perforations, and stitch ½ inch from edges; or, gather the space, if this treatment is preferred to tucks.

Underface front edge of front, and tab end. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Gather lower edge of front and back between double "TT" perforations, and 2 inches above. Bring single "T" perforation in tab to small "o" perforation and tack.

Sew collar to neck edge, notches and center-backs even.

Arrange outside on lining, center-backs and under-arm seams even; stitch gathers to position bringing large "O" perforation in tab end over large "O" perforation in lining front.

Peplum — Close center-back seam from large "O" perforation to lower edge, finish edges above for an opening. Gather upper edge between double "TT" perforations. Sew to lower edge of waist, center-fronts and center-backs even, small "o" perforation at under-arm seam.

Short Sleeve—Close seam as notched. Turn hem at lower edge on small "o" perforations. From shirred tucks, creasing on crosslines of slot perforations; gather ¼ inch from folded edges and draw to the required size. Sew in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam easing in any fullness.

As the season advances, designers come out more and more boldly in favor of open collars—that is collars rolling up against the neck in the back, but moderately low in the front. Wide, plaited frills, one or two dropping away from the deep collar, or attached to the sides in fichu effect, have returned to favor.

BILLY'S CAMPAIGN COST $61,854

Syracuse Managers Figure That Each Convert Cost Them $3.08—Party's Food Cost $500.

Syracuse—The Syracuse Evangelical Association, Inc., the organization which financed the Billy Sunday campaign in this city took stock of itself yesterday. These are the figures the treasurer F. A. Barton reported:

Total campaign expenses	$32,637 80
Thank Offering for Billy	23,446 40
Gifts to charity	5,770 40
Total	$61,854 60

The report of the treasurer shows that the association paid out $4,582.21 as "Sunday party salaries and expenses." This means carfare for Billy and his dozen workers from Omaha to this city and two thirds of the salaries of all his assistants. Expenses at the Sunday home were $2,096.49. This amount does not include heat, water, light or other necessities, but was largely for incidentals, and includes about $500 for food for the party. The report says that the construction and equipment of the tabernacle cost $12,855.91. Printing and stationery for the evangelist $1,422.98. Heat cost $312.45; light, $961.51. There were telephones all over the house where Billy lived and this bill was $110.30. Water used by the party cost $13.84; insurance added an additional $261.07 while stenographers at the Sunday headquarters, postage, etc., cost $1,140.59. Nurses at the tabernacle cost $905.[illegible], outside meetings conducted by Billy's assistants cost $855.64. Supplies for the tabernacle are listed at $73.27.

There is a balance on hand of $1,181.66 and the association will at a future meeting decide what is to be done with this.

"PEN" PRISONERS GIVE DAMAGING EVIDENCE

Syracuse—The State Prison Com- [illegible] tions at the Onondaga county penitentiary where all Oswego county prisoners are sent was resumed today. The hearing was started several weeks ago, but was postponed because of the absence of superintendent Markell. He has now returned and will probably be called to testify.

At the former hearings before the commission sensational testimony was given by several convicts who declared that the most barbarous forms of punishment were in vogue at the penitentiary. They told of being locked up in solitary confinement for long periods of time, of being forced to wear a ball and chain for lengthy periods and also criticized the food and treatment accorded them.

CHURCH WEDDING EARLY YESTERDAY MORNING

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Eckert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Eckert, of Bundy's Crossing, and Howard Simons, of Minetto, was solemnized at the Church of the Immaculate Conception yesterday morning at 7 o'clock.

Miss Bertha Eckert, sister of the bride, and Edward Eckert, her brother, were the atendants. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of friends of the young couple.

The bride wore a simple short gown of Copenhagen blue crepe de chine, and a large white picture hat. The bridesmaid wore a gown of the same material, and both carried white prayer books.

A wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride after the ceremony and about twenty-five guests were present. The couple left yesterday afternoon for a short trip through Central New York and on their return will make their home in Minetto, where Mr. Simons is employed at the Columbia Shade Cloth Company. Miss Eckert was formerly an employe of the Oswego County Independent Telephone Company, at its office in this city.

ORRIN HART'S FUNERAL TODAY

Former Resident's Body Found in Barn at Tully and Brought Here for Burial

The body of Orrin Hart, a former resident of this city, who was found dead in a barn at Tully a few days ago, was brought here last night, and will be buried in the family plot here to-day.

Mr. E. P. Cole, who was engaged by the man's survivors to make arrangements for burial here, experienced considerable difficulty yesterday when he went to Syracuse to get the [illegible] moved from Tully without a removal permit from Registrar Kenyon of that town, and were to have been sent from the Syracuse Morgue to the Syracuse University Medical College unless some relative claimed the body.

When Mr. Cole made application at the Syracuse Health department for permission to bring the remains here, he was informed that the department had no right to issue a permit, because the man had died outside of the Syracuse district. Although it has been a custom, frequently practiced, to move bodies from one district to another without the formality of a permit, such action is in direct violation of the law.

With such complications confronting him, Mr. Cole was forced to return to this city, and enlist the assistance of other city officials in securing the necessary permit.

The body was brought here last night. The dead man had spent most of the last twenty years traveling about the country, and there are few local people who remember him.

WEATHER FORECAST

Showers tonight and Saturday. Fresh south to southwest winds.

NEW GAME MAY BE TRIED HERE

Warnings have been sent to cities in Central New York to be on the lookout for a man operating a bran new flimflam game, which he has worked successfully in a number of places.

The game as worked by the stranger, consists of an interview with a business man on a proposition to install a news service in their respective stores. In some places the man has represented himself to be a representative of the J. R. Bennett News Service, of 139-141 West Thirty Seventh street, New York. For $5 the man agrees to send magazines, periodicals, etc., monthly. He tells each man that he is to have the exclusive service, but immediately tackles the next man.

Investigation by the authorities where complaints have been made shows that the address given as occupied by the news agency is in reality the site of a garage. In case the man attempts to work the game here the person should report the matter to the police immediately.

HOWARD ALLEN FREED OF ASSAULT CHARGE

Howard Allen, a young man living on North First street, was arraigned in City Court this morning on complaint of Miss Grace Pluff, who charged him with assault in the third degree. Both parties are employed in the twist room of the American Woolen Company.

Miss Pluff alleged that Allen entered her section of the twist room Wednesday, and after slapping her in the face, knocked her down and dragged her along the floor.

In his reply to the charge, Allen testified that his foreman had sent him into the neighborhood to get a box, and that when he entered a small alley in which she was working, she ordered him out, and when he refused to go, struck him in the face with two bobbins which she held in her hands. Witnesses of the affair made similar statements. There was an indication that the ill-feeling between Miss Pluff and Allen had arisen because of family disagreements. Allen was discharged by Judge Wilson.

No Loss.

"Congratulate me, old man. I got a notice from the bank yesterday that my account was overdrawn."

"But why the congratulations?"

"The bank failed this morning."—Exchange.

The Hospital of the Good Shepherd is now considered as one of the distinct units of the University and as head of the institution, Miss Hamill takes her place with the deans of the colleges.

In his annual report Chancellor James R. Day praised Miss Hamill for her work during the time she has been connected with the hospital.

"Under the management of the new superintendent, Miss Nellie R. Hamill, of Brooklyn, there has been a reorganization in every department," said Dr. Day. "Methods peculiar to herself and entirely original in this city have been introduced securing the confidence of our physicians and community.

"These showings referred to are to be credited to Miss Hamill's remarkable executive ability. They have attracted attention and commendation the fifteenth century will be worn, will be given in the art school tonight.

KIMBALL HELD BY CITY COURT

Charged with the abandonment of his five children and with disorderly conduct, Romaine Kimball, arraigned in City Court this morning pleaded not guilty and was remanded for trial on June 21. Kimball was admitted to bail shortly after he was brought to this city from Watertown, where he was arrested Wednesday. His cousin furnished the bond.

James R. Somers, charities commissioner, swore out the warrant for Kimball's arrest. The man left this city some months ago and took his five children to Watertown, where he took up his residence with his daughter and son-in-law, William Quance. When Quance made a trip to the home of his mother in Hannibal not long ago, Kimball, it is alleged, asked him to take the children with him, and said he would come to Hannibal after them in a few days. Quance brought the children to his mother's home, but Kimball did not offer to remove them on to pay for their support. They were thrown upon the charity of the city, and last week Commissioner Somers sent them to the Oswego Orphan Asylum.

Hubert L. Gilman will defend Kimball, and Mr. Somers will press the charge.

LAST INCOME TAX DAY JULY 1

Syracuse—Income taxes are being paid in this district more promptly than ever before, according to word sent out from headquarters at Syracuse. The revenue officials hope that the last few days prior to July 1, the time limit of payment, will not be so rushed as in former years.

Judging from the way the taxes are coming in the income tax receipts from the twenty-one counties in this district will exceed last year's by a large amount.

As the government prohibits any figures being given out just what the gain will be cannot be learned, but it is certain that it will show a substantial increase.

Notices to those who are liable for special taxes including theatres, movies, pool rooms, etc., have been mailed and within a day or so the returns from these notices are expected to come in adding to the flood of work now swamping the force.

BROTHERHOOD PREPARES PRODUCTION OF PLAYLET

DON'T MIND THE SHOULDER SPOTS

Fur Girls Fur Summer, Fur Wraps Have Gone Fur Enough

By Margaret Mason
(Written for the United Press)

Cause furriners in furrin parts
Wear furs in summer time
Our summer girls still keep it up
Sans reason and sans rhyme.

New York—If you have a little mole on your shoulders than this [illegible] are more to be desired than bare shoulders, even if the bare shoulders be bear shoulders.

In plain words the summer girl prefers furs on her shoulders even to wings.

Like the snows of yesterday the snowy white foxes of last summer have vanished to give place to flat capes of unspotted ermine combined with moleskin, entire cape collars of kolinsky, all mole ones or all ermine ones..

They are very quaint, old fashioned and bewitching so what matter if they be a bit uncomfortable when the thermometer, which is no respecter of furry fashions, begins to climb.

One lovely model of moleskin, shaped like a little triangular shawl, is edged with fringe of chenille and in fact all these little fur shoulder capes put more things on edge than teeth.

A wide, straight piece of kolinsky that folds stiffly around the shoulders as if it were made of cardboard, fastens in front with two gorgeously enamelled buttons and is edged in a fold of chiffon

Yet another of mole cut like a semicircle is finished with a tiny quilling of taupe satin and another of unspotted ermine is edged in lovely white scollops of itself.

A stunning semi-circular cape of moleskin has a wide collar of ermine scolloped on the edge and taupe ribbon ties in front that end in cunning ball pompoms of the mole.

Just fresh from Paris on the shoulders of a war correspondent's wife arrived in New York the other day came the most gorgeous cape of all. It is of kolinsky that ripples full and falls to the waist line in back and in front throws flatly across the chest like a scarf and fastens on the left shoulder.

Quite the only way in which the erstwhile popular white fox is allowed to appear is a band trimming on a wee cape of unspotted ermine and as a high wide collar on the same.

On little shirred capes of taffeta bands and collar of white fox also are used.

Maribeau and ostrich bands feather a few taffeta capes also in lieu of fur, but this season fine feathers don't make nearly so fine birds as do fine furs.

This fur shoulder fad ought to prove a dandy reducing scheme not only for your pocket book but also for your embonpoint.

Verily a pair of too slump shoulders swathed snugly in mole or kolinsky during the torrid months will emerge drooping perceptibly when autumn calls.

Shrugging shoulders as well as hugging of shoulders will all have to be done under cover however and all the poor male human moths fluttering around their adored flames this summer will undoubtedly have the companionship of a large flock of moths au naturelle but there's one consolation—no naughty beauty will be able to turn the cold shoulder on her love sick swain this little old summer.

ABOUT THE TOWN

EXTRA! EXTRA! EXTRA!!

While crossing First street near the Elks' Home at seven o'clock this morning, a well to do citizen, slipped from the firm road and slid down the muddy bank into a miniature lake of water which is one of the scenic beauties of our city along the street at that point. Unable to swim, the man called frantically for help, and was just going down for the fifth time, when other bystanders rushed to his assistance and hauled him to safety. The man says he will sue the city, and when told of the occurence, city officials this morning made the following statements.

Official No. 1 said: "It's the man's own fault. In the first place he should [illegible]

Official No. 2. said: "That affords an excellent opportunity for me to advance my proposition that the city build four overhead bridges across First street between Rochester street and Broadway. That will make it easy for the public to cross the street, and they will forget about the paving. With a little more time, we will be able to give that paving contract to the man we have in mind."

Official No. 3: "Why was the man walking? Why doesn't he have a big car like mine? I have no patience with these pedestrians. They're always getting in my way."

Official No. 4: "Let the man bring suit. It is likely that our city legal department will not be very busy this summer, and perhaps we may find a way to engage another man. I know several good fellows who are out of work.

Official No. 5: "Tell the Chamber of Commerce about it. I think a committee should be appointed to sound the water in the street, ascertain how far the streams are navigable, and put in anchor buoys."

The new organization is an octette of talented local musicians, almost all of whom play two or more musical instruments, and will include Mr. and Mrs. F. Jess Newton, Miss Mae Brooker, James Brooker, Byron Newton, Linn Richardson, Arthur Guernsey and Herbert Adkins.

The members of the organization are all musicians of more than ordinary ability, and have appeared to advantage in the concerts of the Symphony orchestra and the Elks' band.

The factulty named the eight students from which the winner and the alternate were to be chosen, and the selection of Miss Fitzgerald and Mr. Carroll indicated their popularity among the students.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particulary those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

GIRLS TESTIFL IN TANZER PERJURY CASE

New York—The ghost of "Oliver Osborne," wrapped in a mantle of perfumery that smote the olfactory nerve like sweet attar of violets, minced into the courtroom of Federal Judge Wolverton yesterday.

"Oliver" himself did not appear to face the accusing but still adoring eyes of the battery of maidens whom he wooed and won in the days when he was the shipgirls' delight and the nursemaids' despair.

Chief among "Oliver's" victims, who aided the Government's contention that Rae Tanzer is guilty of perjury in her insistence that "Oliver" and James W. Osborne are one, was Miss Katherine Mackenheimer, of No. 2216 Eighth avenue.

Miss Mackenheimer is a tall brunette. In the Spring of 1914 she was employed as nursemaid in the family of Frederic R. Coudert. She was wheeling a baby carriage at Park avenue and Seventy-second street one afternoon when the child's hat blew off.

"Oliver" was on the spot. He rescued the hat, doffed his own headpiece, bestowed upon the nursegirl one look of affection and presto!—another home run was scored by "Oliver" in the Love League!

THE QUIRK TO-DAY.

Winning points of "The Unpardonable Sin":

Star—Master of Dramatic Expression, Creator of Character Roles.

Cast—A group of players whose names stand for all that is admirable and popular in motion picture acting.

Four acts of vaudeville are also provided.

$81,000 TO BE SPENT ON ROADS

At the meeting just concluded in Oswego, the county Board of Supervisors, added to an original appropriation of $30,000, the sum of $51,000, making a total of $81,000 in all to be spent in improving highways throughout the county. County Superintendent of Roads Howard will have charge of the work, which will be under the direct supervision of the officials of each town affected.

The Ira Hill road in Hannibal and the Volney Center-Drake Corners road, each 2.4 miles in length and each to cost $7,200, are two of the important highways in the immediate vicinity of this city to be improved. The total mileage to be improved is 26.9, which is considered a fair start on the proposed 150 mile improvement.

This city and Oswego will bear a large percentage of the cost although none of the improved roads are to be built in either city.

JUST BLOUSES.

Latest Notes About This Pet Hobby of All Women.

This is the season for blouses. They are needed for a multitude of reasons. The one piece frock has not vanished into the [illegible] separate blouse has come into fashion again. It appears to be necessary to have both even in the average wardrobe. There is always a struggle in the mind of the woman who is not plentifully endowed with clothes money as to how she should choose between a suit and a one piece frock for constant service, and probably the married man put it correctly for all women when he said that his wife brought the subject up to him semiannually every day for a fortnight, invariably decided in the end according to her own desires and was dissatisfied about her choice, no matter what it was, for the rest of the season.

One of the advantages of blouse buying is that the average woman can get half a dozen to suit her different needs and moods. This season they are unrolled before her like a brilliant, never ending carpet. The design and the color constantly change. They have reached a degree of variety and gayety that has not been touched in several seasons.

Fine colored muslins, solid and striped, are in the forefront of fashion, and white and colored organdies, which have been so extensively used for neckwear, have been cordially taken up by the makers of blouses.

The plain white organdie waists are embroidered with one or more colors sometimes in the simple and ever pleasing design of scallops, again in polka dots and triangles of brilliant red and blue, green, black and yellow.

Because polka dot frocks are in fashion we will be able to wear separate blouses of polka dot fabrics with the pleased feeling that we are quite in the middle of the picture. Taffeta and satin are not looked upon with any degree of warmth, but taffeta is applied to chiffon and then embroidered in gold and silver to build up an ornate blouse.

Every one knows by this time that the smartest of French blouses drops over the skirt instead of going under it after the manner of a miniature Russian blouse. Cheruit sent this out in white organdie, with a sash of colored silk, and it has led the way for a dozen other conceptions by our own dressmakers.

Suited to the Small Boy's Needs.

A lovely model for the small boy, carried out in natural pongee. A blouse with high neck and side-closing knee trousers comprise the suit.

A suit of pongee makes the average boy feel quite dressed up and the silk comes in such good quality at reasonable cost this season that a pongee suit might well be included in the average wardrobe.

For medium size 3¼ yards 27-inch silk will be sufficient for this model. It consists of a blouse and side-closing knee trousers, the blouse having a high neck and round collar, with which may be worn an artist's string tie. Pockets and straps may be omitted from the blouse, if desired, but they contribute considerably to the smartness of the suit.

An open width of material will be needed to cut the front of the jacket and the sleeves. Two widths are placed with right sides facing each other and on a lengthwise thread of the material the various sections of the pattern are laid. There will be enough space left for the pockets.

Fold the remainder of the pongee and on the lengthwise fold place the back marked "B". To the right of this lay the front and the back section marked "O," in the order named and on a lengthwise thread of the pongee. The collar and waistbands come next, laid on the lengthwise fold. The belt and sleeve band may be cut from the opposite edge of the silk along the facing.

The smartness of this suit does not depend upon its development in pongee, however, for it will look quite as well in linen, pique or khaki. In fact there is nothing more practical than khaki because it wears well in addition to looking well.

Striped linens are much liked for boys' suits, but in these days of unwarranted dyes, the wise mother is the one who selects materials about whose wearing qualities she need have no fear. Some of the prettier stripes "wash out" distressfully, and there is no hope of remedy because the stores frankly state that they cannot guarantee colors on account of the scarcity of dyes.

Shall It Be Colonel Roosevelt for Senator?

For UNITED STATES SENATOR—THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

That may be the reading on the voting machines this fall according to the "dope" flying around policital Central New York. to-day.

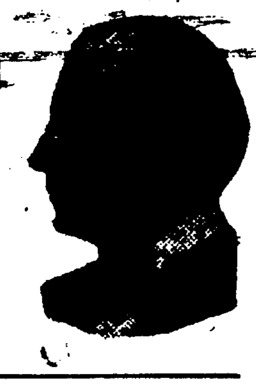
The Republican leaders in this section have received word from the "down state" folk who are trying to get the Colonel to get behind the Hughes candidacy, that consideration was being given to a plan to induce the former president to take the Senate nomination.

It is the belief of the New York city men that the success of the G. O. P. will be enhanced if T. R. had a place on the ticket and Moosers knew that Hughes would have the Colonel's backing during his four years as President.

It is also being said that if the senatorial scheme falls through, the Hughes men might try and get the Colonel and Hughes by letting it be surmised that if the former justice was elected a place in the cabinet would go to the erstwhile Moose leader.

Colonel George Harvey is the sponsor of the idea to have the Colonel run for the Senate. He sprung it several weeks ago and at that time it was received with smiles. To-day it is being given some consideration, but according to the Republican leaders it is extremely doubtful if the plan goes through. In the first place they do not think T. R. would consider it for a minute and they believe he intends to hold aloof, but ready always to criticise Mr. Hughes as he has Mr. Wilson.

Industrial Problems Can Be Solved as Efficiently by a Democracy as an Autocracy



By JOSEPH E. DAVIES, Chairman Federal Trade Commission

DEMOCRACY is the grand adventure in the growth of civilization. Whenever men have struggled to be free the world has progressed; but, after all, popular government is still an experiment measured in terms of world history. Above all, the struggle is not a political one. You and I and all men live lives that are more industrial and commercial and economic than political. And so political freedom is only a part of democracy—a part that has long since been won.

WHAT THE PEOPLE WANT IS NOT ONLY POLITICAL FREEDOM—IT IS INDUSTRIAL FREEDOM AND THE EQUALITY OF OPPORTUNITY. INDUSTRIAL MONOPOLY IS SIMPLY INDUSTRIAL MONARCHY.

The federal trade commission is a body of business experts and economists. Its procedure is simple, its methods are direct. It is now bending its every effort to the solution of problems arising out of the world war and which affect our industrial and governmental evolution. The whole problem, after all, is for a democracy to become equally efficient in an industrial way as an autocracy. I BELIEVE IT CAN BE DONE AND THAT THE BIG ECONOMIC PROBLEMS WHICH WE AS A NATION MUST FACE CAN BE WORKED OUT IN A MANNER COMBATIBLE WITH THE SPIRIT OF DEMOCRACY.

Died From Terror.

Perhaps the most remarkable death from fear was that of the Dutch painter Pentman, who lived in the seventeenth century. One day he went into a room full of anatomical subjects to sketch some death's heads and skeletons for a picture he intended to paint. The weather was very sultry, and while sketching he fell asleep. He was aroused by bones dancing around him and the skeletons suspended from the ceiling clashing together. In a fit of terror he threw himself from a window, and, though he sustained no serious injury and was informed that a slight earthquake had caused the commotion among his ghostly surroundings, he died in a few days in a nervous tremor.

"The proper development of our citizenship is not possible until men are not afraid to lose their jobs or lose their business for fear of not making a living," said Louis F. Post, assistant secretary of the United States department of labor, in an address at the vacant lot garden exhibit in the Widener building in Philadelphia.

"We talk about being crowded," continued Mr. Post, "and we pass immigration laws to keep out the foreigners with the idea of giving our own people needed room to work and make a living, when the greater portion of our land is lying idle, a wasting opportunity for vast hordes of people to work upon it and win a successful living."

HEIRESS WEDS, PARENTS PROTEST

Contrary to the wishes of her parents, who strongly objected to the match, Miss Margaret Rouss, the granddaughter of the late Broadway Rouss, who died in 1912, leaving an estate valued at $8,000,000 was married late yesterday afternoon to George J. Patterson, a member of the firm of Thomas J. Patterson, wealthy coal merchants of Brooklyn.

The marriage, which is the culmination of a rather troubled courtship, was performed by the Rev. Father York of St. Bridgid's Church, Brooklyn. Only a few chosen friends of the young couple were let in on the secret, and little or no information was given out before the wedding took place.

The Pentateuch.

The Pentateuch, or, as it is usually called, "The Book of Moses" (the first five books of the Old Testament), is not thought by the scholars of today to have been written by Moses. Moses could not have written the whole work since it contains the account of his death and burial. The opinion of the best scholarship of today is that Genesis dates from 750 to 800 B. C., Leviticus about 450 or 500 B. C., the whole five books (Pentateuch) reaching its present shape between 450 and 500 B. C.—New York American.

MODERN FIRE PROTECTION.

High Pressure Service of Jacksonville, Fla., Described by Its Fire Chief.

The separate high pressure fire main system of Jacksonville, writes Fire Chief T. W. Haney in the American City, is under the control and operation of the fire department. It consists of an electrically operated pumping station, located on the St. John river, supplied with power from the municipal electric light and power plant through a substation. Pumps take suction direct through independent lines and discharge into a gridiron of mains which covers practically all of the area included in the fire limits.

THIRTEEN HUNDRED GALLONS PER MINUTE FLOW FROM THIS NOZZLE.

The pumping station is a small, one room building with re-enforced concrete walls, floor and roof, the latter covered with tile. All windows are of wired glass in metal frames. There is a standpipe with fifty feet of hose and nozzle in the station, and on the street, within 150 feet, are one high pressure and one domestic pressure hydrant. There are two ten-inch, four-stage centrifugal pumps, each direct connected to a 375 horsepower three phase, 2,200 volt motor. The rated capacity of each pump is 2,500 gallons per minute against 175 pounds discharge pressure at the pump. The suction head varies between six and nine feet. Each pump has a separate fourteen inch suction pipe and a ten inch discharge pipe with automatic relief valve. The latter pipe increases to twelve inch under the floor of the station, and the two join through a Y in front of the station into one twenty inch main. The pumps are primed through a four inch pipe from the domestic system or from a small centrifugal pump which is used to maintain about fifteen pounds pressure in the mains.

Good protection is provided in the congested value and mercantile sections and most of the warehouse districts included within the fire limits. As shown by tests, the full capacity of the pumps, 5,000 gallons per minute, can be delivered about any block at pressures sufficient for powerful streams. Each pump will furnish protection to the section covered about equal to that provided by four second size engines, and the total from both pumps is sufficient for any but the most serious fires. For such fires ample supplementary protection is provided by the domestic water supply and the fire engine service.

The Flax Plant.

Linen is obtained from the flax plant, a small, delicate annual with a tiny blue flower. The plant is pulled by hand in the summer, the seeds, known in commerce as linseed, being removed and the straw subjected to various processes to separate the fibrous part which constitutes the linen. First it is steeped in water and then passed through a drying and heating process on revolving wheels until all foreign matter is removed. It is then ready for manufacture.

The "Barefoot" Tire—and Why.

CONSIDER now the means by which many Tires have been given maximum Traction,—i.e., by means of a "sandpapery" texture in the Rubber of their Anti-Skid Treads.

Every time the Brakes are put on, to make such Tires grip the road, the relatively hard, unyielding, and comparatively brittle, texture of the Rubber in their Treads causes these Treads to grind away on the pavement, to WEAR OUT fast at the point of contact.

The sudden efficiency of their grinding-Traction also tugs so sharply on the Rubber Adhesive between the layers of Fabric in Tire as to separate these layers.

There is little "give" to them—just as there is little "slide" to them.

So, they gain Traction at the expense of Mileage.

Naturally such Tires require a great BULK of such Rubber in order to deliver reasonable Mileage before worn out.

And, therein they differ radically from GOODRICH "Barefoot" Tires.

Because,—the Safety-Tread on Goodrich Tires is made of "Barefoot-Rubber," a new, and exclusive compound which discards unnecessary whitish "frictional" ingredients that are heaviest and inert, as proved by their lighter weight.

HERE is how it acts in Automobiling,—

—When the weight of the Car bears on this clinging "Barefoot-Rubber" Tread, and the power is applied to go ahead or reverse, the wonderful stretch in the "Barefoot" Rubber Sole (or Tread) of the Goodrich Tire acts as a sort of Lubricant between the Fabric Structure of the Tire and the Road.

Then, the Barefoot-Rubber "Toes," of the Goodrich Safety-Tread Tire, CLING to the pavement (instead of grinding against it), in such manner as your Bare Foot would cling to a slippery surface—without Grind, and so, with the minimum of Frictional Heat or Wear for maximum Traction.

Goodrich "Barefoot-Rubber" is now made into Goodrich FABRIC Tires,—Goodrich Silvertown Cord Tires,—Goodrich Inner Tubes,—Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Motor Cycle, and Bicycle, Tires, as well as into Goodrich Rubber Boots, Over-Shoes, Soles and Heels.

Get a Sliver of it from your nearest Goodrich Branch, or Dealer. Stretch it thousands of times, but break it you can't.

That's the Stuff that GOODRICH Black-Tread Tires are made of.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR MORE INDUSTRIES

French Artillery Swept Germans From Banks of Meuse

(By United Press)

Paris—Violent artillery attacks are continued on both banks of the Meuse, on the Verdun front, according to the official statement of the War Office to-day.

The duel of heavy guns in the Avacourt sector is particularly heavy. Dead Man's Hill last night was an inferno of shell fire. A German hand grenade attack at Avacourt was easily repulsed.

In the Vosges, east of Thann, a detachment of French infantry penetrated two German lines, killing many of the defenders and takign others prisoners. The attackers retired without suffering heavy losses.

Austrians Block Way of Advancing Russ

(By United Press)

London—That the Austrians driven back from their first line of trenches on the last front have settled into a new position of strength and are stubbornly resisting the Russian advance is the conviction gained here from the fact that the Russian official report does not carry statements of tremendous gains daily as in the first several days of the drive. The capture of Czernowitz is not yet officially confirmeda re reports unofficial from several sources. Its capture has not been denied from Vienna.

GERMANS RECAPTURE TWO LINES OF TRENCHES

(By United Press)

Berlin- via London—Reports of a French patrol attack near Beautne is officially reported by the German War Office to-day. Artillery duels are in progress on the Verdun front. A mine exploded northeast of Cellus, says the statement, which caused heavy losses to the enemy.

After these awards, the posters will be framed and assembled for an exhibit tour across the continent. This traveling exhibit will be conducted up to the country wide celebration during America's Electrical Week.

If Quest of Chamber of Commerce is Successful City Would Have Diversified Home Builders.

As a result of good work on the part of the Industrial Committee of the Chamber of Commerce as outlined in the report of the committee last night at a public meeting held in the Library, the chances are more than bright for the securing of one or more additional large industries in this city. Seven propositions have been considered by the committee, and a report on each was tendered to the members of the Chamber who attended the meeting.

John R. Sullivan presided, but after introducing Orrin Bogardus as chairman of the Industrial committee, he surrendered the chair to Mr. Bogardus, who read the report of the committee.

Propositions from the Willson S. Moore Buckwheat Flour Co., Kirschbaum Clothing Co., Standard Knitting Co., American Conduit Co., and a silk spinning concern, a radiator manufacturing company, and a dumping wagon manufacturerer were received.

The committee recommended that the offer of the Kirschbaum company be accepted. This involves the purchase of a site and the construction of a building, not to exceed in cost $50,000, the building to be sold to the company in ten years, meanwhile the sum to bear interest at 5 per cent. The Kirschbaum company's principal plant is located in Pennsylvania and they guarantee to employe 1,800 people in this city.

The building must contain 60,000 square feet of floor space and cover two acres. Two sites were considered, one on the west side between Phillips street and Broadway, and the other near the lighting

Gen. Bell Discredits Reports of Threats

THREATS TO KILL MADE BY MEXICAN GENERAL

(By United Press)

Washington—Mexicans will attack American troops if any more efforts are made by settlers to cross the border, or if any more attempts are made to move additional troops, according to the word of General Trevino, who has sent a telegram to that effect to General Pershing. General Bell reported to the War Department this morning through General Fred Funston.

Yesterday Was Annual Merry Making Day by Faculty and Students

Three hundred pupils of the Fulton High School celebrated the closing of school for the summer vacation, yesterday, with a jollification ceremony at the school which lasted for one hour and a half.

Called to order by Principal L. D. Wilcox at 9 o'clock, the classes, with the entire faculty seated on the rosfrum first listened attentively to the Principal's annual speech, which was directed principally at the class of 1916, which will be graduated next Friday night. In the course of his address, Mr. Wilcox gave the pupils a great deal of good advice, warning them that their work in the world is just about to begin, and that it is only by continued and earnest application and labor that they would succeed in their chosen fields. He counseled them against accepting the idea that they had learned everything in their school course worth knowing and said the faculty would consider its labor well rewarded if the members were sure that the foundation of a good character, based upon Christian principles, had been laid in the school life of each pupil.

Louisville Herald:

Those who love Germany—and there are still some of us left—will rejoice at the probability that the Fatherland is to be heard from as a fatherland and not as a bureaucracy.

We have been blinded by the war. We have forgotten the Germany that we knew and loved. We have been given over to abhorrnce and denunciation. We have delighted in the degradation of a marvelous people to a point where we are now unwilling to consent to a belief in its better self. And all the time the good old, true old, Volk was there. All the time the culture, the concentration, the constructiveness, the great heart, the splendid genius, the amazing craftsmanship of the German people was there waiting to be heard from and certain to have the word.

The decision of Berlin hangs uncertainly in the air. The decision of the German people is already indicated. It is a decision for peace, for cleanliness of purpose, for right dealing.

There has been an unholy campaign directed against all that was not pro-Ally. It has been impossible to get away from it. Where the editorial was silent the headlines spoke. Where the "leader" was elaborately neutral the paragrapher was smartly unneutral and always in one direction. And, accordingly, American public opinion, fed on one food, has been pretty much of one way of thinking.

Germany can change all that by consigning the submarine, in its most vicious manifestation, to the scrap heap. And by that same decision she can win back a place in the good opinion of the world that had always been hers by right.

New York American:

This war has already burdened the workers of Europe and their children to come with a debt of fifty thousand millions of dollars.

This is more than six times the value of all the gold coin in the world.

That imposes upon every working class family in Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Italy and Russia a debt more than four times the average family's entire savings.

This war has already killed or permanently crippled at least five million wage-earners.

Thus the working class families have both been saddled with crushing debt and robbed of their debt-payers.

It will be a miracle if the working people of Europe do not rise in despair and wrath and sweep away governments and institutions whose operations could result in such stupendous slaughter and waste.

We believe that every nation in Europe will be a democracy within a very few years, and that these democracies will find some way to put an end to the thousand years of warfare that have made Europe's history one long story of devastation after devastation and slaughter heaped upon slaughter.

Illinois State Register (Springfield):

The Berliner Tageblatt says that the committee of the German universities appointed in 1912 to study educational methods, have reported the results of their labors. The committee discovers that the modern school overburdens memory and under-develops reason, the "short cut to knowledge." The report says:

"The unconscionable mass of facts that constitutes every department of human knowledge, burdens memory to a point of confusion and is indefinitely worse than no knowledge at all. Many educators have, therefore, surrendered, hopelessly, to the modern trend towards utilitarian specialization. Yet a stratum of specialists is no better, from the educational viewpoint, than a stratum of trades people—both lower than the level of national culture."

The committee sees a remedy in the return to philosophy as the stamen, and as the diacriticil power to deal with the facts presented in the exact sciences.

Not alone for the intrinsic value as an educational factor, is philosophy of the most urgent importance but also as a ready and efficient means to shorten the road of memory towards a succinct and systematized appreciation of data, whether in a general or specializing curriculum.

Every educated man and woman, after this, must be trained in philosophy; and even those who wish to enter upon professional careers shall not be allowed to do so until they have acquired "the critical judgment which that study inculcates." In the study of philosophy the old Greek authors are special recommended, notably Plato and Aristotle, "the most competent in dialectic equipment."

The committee is of opinion that the facts and data of individual branches of knowledge are inadequately represented in books; and that t he philosophically trained mind can readily avail itself of those data as occasion might require; especially, if in its general training it has been given the rational skeleton of the leading sciences, a synopsis that adheres and appeals not to memory but to reason.

The skeletons, or synopsis, can be "clothed with flesh from the library."

Greek philosophers are preferred to modern writers on the subject, because "modern writers neglect the dialectic element, which is precisely the element of the greatest educational value."

Buffalo News:

The Bowery Mission of New York City recently had donated to it the sum of $10,000 by a rich philanthropist "for the benefit of poor and needy college graduates."

And nobody laughed.

The inference is that a college degree does not render a man immune from poverty. As a matter of fact it may be said that B. A. stands for "Badly Broke," quite as frequently as it does for the other thing.

A famous business man, discussing this subject of up-to-date education and the benefits accruing from a college education, tells the following story:

"The other day a man came to me bringing with him his son, aged nineteen. The boy was as big as his father. The father requested that I would supply the lad with a situation—in other words give him a job.

"I liked the looks of the youngster, and also wishing to accommodate the father, I cast around in my mind for some place that the boy could fill. And my first question was, 'What can the young man do?'

"And the father turned the calcium on the situation by promptly saying, with a look of surprise, 'Why he can't do anything; he's just out of college.'"

Up-to-date education is not a matter of text books. College may train a man to think. But a real educational system is one that will make a man think and do.

And thus out of his experience—working—he will cause his convolutions to vibrate.

The man who is going to do good work must be a thinker. Also he must be a worker.

These things may be bromides, but they need to be constantly affirmed for even yet there are colleges that cultivate the educational ole luxe, which is supposed to tend toward ease and luxury.

Oceans No Longer Serious Obstacles to Invading Hostile Fleets

© Waldon Fawcett.

By Rear Admiral AUSTIN M. KNIGHT, President of the Naval War College at Newport, R. I.

THE Atlantic ocean no longer can be considered a serious obstacle to the invasion of the United States.

Unless those waters are blocked by a fleet strong enough to command them absolutely the ocean is a highway, broad, spacious and convenient beyond any military road the Romans ever built.

What will the pacifists think of themselves if, as a direct result of their efforts, our fleet is destroyed by an enemy fleet twice its size? And I tell you now that if the fleet is defeated it will be destroyed.

And what will they say if, after our little army has been offered up as a further sacrifice upon the altar of unpreparedness, some hundreds of thousands of our so called citizen soldiery are in their turn offered up on the same altar and all to no effect?

WE URGE THAT THE UNITED STATES BE MADE GREAT IN PHYSICAL POWER IN ORDER THAT ITS MORAL POWER MAY BE MADE EFFECTIVE BEYOND ITS BORDERS. I BELIEVE THAT POWER IN THE NATION AS IN THE INDIVIDUAL IS THE NECESSARY BASIS OF USEFULNESS. WITHOUT POWER IT IS ASSUREDLY NOT POSSIBLE TO BE HELPFUL.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS

President American Society for Thrift

American extravagance becomes a very real and vital thing when we consider that we squander in this country eight billion dollars a year. Think of it! Eight billion dollars a year—here a little, there a little and larger amounts when the occasion, to our notion, seems to demand!

Though we as a people are wasteful, yet every little while we are told of a use that is found for something formerly considered a waste product. It has been demonstrated by the bureau of chemistry of the Agricultural department that the kernels of cherry pits yield an oil, very much like almond oil, worth 40 cents a pound; and a volatile oil like that of bitter almonds that could be used in making perfumes and flavoring extracts, worth about $10 a pound; what is left would make a meal for stock feed like cottonseed cake, worth $40 a ton. The juice that is wasted in pitting the cherries could be used in making table syrup, jelly and alcohol.

Three and one half millions tons of cherry pits are thrown away each season at the factories in this country where cherries are canned. This would make 200 tons of the fixed oil, worth $80,000; 6,000 pounds of the volatile oil, worth $60,000 and 350 tons of meal worth $14,000, a total of $145,000 besides more than 5,000 gallons of pure alcohol; 2,000 gallons of syrup or 85,000 gallons of jelly that could be made from the wasted juice.

Every wage earner should understand how systematic saving, though in small sums amounts up.

More than 8 in every ten or 81.3 per cent. of males in the United States, ten years and over were engaged in gainful occupations last year. National statistics list the workers as follows: 30,091,564 men; 8,075,772 women; 1,990,225 children 10 to 15 years, or over 18.2 per cent. of that group age, making a total of 40,157,561. If each of these wage earners saved a dime a day it would amount to $1,465,750,976.50 a year. Or if each saved a dime a week the total would be $208,819,317.20. A dime a month saved would amount to $48,189,093.20 in a year. And only a dime a year would total the sum of $4,015,750.10 in one year.

If each wage earner in the United States saved one dime a day from the time he first began to work and invested it what a valuable annuity he would have to fall back on when he could no longer work! It is the small savings of a large number that make a nation rich.

UNCLE SAM CLEARING PANAMA CANAL ZONE

Would Have Only Citizens of United States In Locality.

Uncle Sam is playing after a fashion in the Panama canal zone the part that the English played more than a century and a half ago in moving the Acadians bodily from an old to a new home. Twentieth century methods and American liberality are important elements in the present situation, however, so that satisfaction reigns instead of the heartburnings and sufferings that marked the enforced migration of Evangeline and her people.

The United States government desires to clear the canal zone of all natives, and of practically all other persons for that matter not employees of the canal or members of the United States army. This is desirable for both administrative and military reasons.

The matter of buying the little plots of land of individual "farmers" and inducing them to leave the zone has been simple enough, but the villages have presented more serious problems. The plan has been adopted of arranging with the Panama government for sites outside the strip of territory belonging to the United States; of paying the villagers liberally for their holdings and them moving them, bag and baggage, to the new location.

The latest procedure of this sort is going on now in the transfer of the half a hundred or more souls of the village of Chagres, near the mouth of the river of that name, to a new town site eight miles outside of the zone at the mouth of another stream. The American authorities have even built temporary homes for the exiles to occupy during the period required to invest some of the money they have received in the erection of permanent dwellings. The villagers and their effects are loaded on barges and towed to their new homes. When the last of them are gone the old village will be razed.

GRAPHITE MINING.

One of the many industries which have felt the stimulation of war conditions in the United States, it has been found by the geological survey in its stock taking of mineral developments, is graphite mining. While graphite is not used itself as an ingredient in war munitions, it is of great importance in the manufacture of many munitions and devices of war, since the melting of metals for the work is carried on almost exclusively in graphite crucibles.

The unprecedented demand for the substance has brought about the opening of mines in new locations in Alabama and in virgin graphite territory in central Texas. After a study of the situation the survey found that the old established mines in a number of the eastern states increased their output nearly 2,000,000 pounds in 1915. The opening of the new sources of the mineral will bring about an even more marked increase in the production the present year, the government geologists predict.

ALASKA GLACIER RETREATS.

Fifteen years ago a member of the United States geological survey mapped the front of the Barry glacier, which is in the northwest corner of Prince William sound, Alaska. In 1910 it was found that the front of the glacier had gone back about three miles from the position it occupied in 1899. B. L. Johnson of the geological survey examined the front of the Barry glacier in the fall of 1914 and determined that the total retreat of the glacier between 1910 and 1914 appeared to be about 8,260 feet, a retreat of four and one-half miles, in fifteen years. A short account of the retreat of this glacier by Mr. Johnson has just been published as professional paper 98 C. It includes a sketch map showing the position of the glacier front in seven different years and several reproductions of photographs of the glacier.

POTASH FROM WYOMING LAVA.

It has been known for a number of years that a lava in the Leucite hills Sweetwater county, Wyo., is composed largely of leucite, a mineral rich in potash. This lava, called wyomingite is there very abundant, and the total quantity of potash it contains is immense, estimated at 200,000,000 tons. Like the gold in sea water, however, it has not yet been profitably extracted. In a series of experimental studies of the reactions of various salts on wyomingite under certain conditions Roger C. Wells of the chemical laboratory of the United States geological survey has obtained interesting results as to the extraction of potash from wyomingite, which are published in the survey's professional paper 98 D. Mr. Wells' paper may prove suggestive to chemists who are studying methods of extraction of potash from igneous rocks.

SCANDAL.

Be too broad minded to encourage the sin of scandal. When a gossip begins to relate some scandal in your presence say to him, "Come; let us go to that person and see if the story is true!" Hannah More, the English author, always followed that course, and it never failed to work.

Days You'll Never Forget

HANDFUL HELD FORT VAUX A WEEK

A Thousand Frenchmen Tried to Hold Off Horde of Germans.

HAND TO HAND FIGHTING.

Besiegers Took to Using Liquid Fire and the Brave Defenders at Last Had to Give Way Before Tremendous Odds—Few Survivors Who Surrendered Were In Desperate Condition.

Fort Vaux, which was taken by the Germans in their advance toward Verdun, France, had been practically besieged for ninety days before it fell. Paris newspapers estimate that it cost the Germans 100,000 men to capture the fort.

When the situation at last became critical the commandant, Chief of Battalion Raynal, a tried soldier, who had risen from the ranks, had hardly more than 1,000 men with whom to continue the defense. His task was to hold the half ruined fort against overwhelming masses of infantry, supported by more than 100 batteries of heavy guns. Re-enforcements could not reach him owing to the terrible efficacy of the German fire.

For a week, alone and unaided, he and his men held out against very great odds. Two companies of Germans were already installed in a ditch of the northern bastion, and after three days that position had to be abandoned by the French.

Raynal then withdrew to the central redoubt. He was still able to communicate at night with the main body, and one of the last messages sent was that whatever happened he would never surrender. He kept his word. Step by step the Germans advanced from the west and south, gradually narrowing the circle surrounding the fort.

Messengers Volunteer.

Every night Raynal dispatched volunteer messengers to General Nivelle to inform him of the progress of events. Not one in five of these messengers got through.

At 3:50 o'clock one morning an officer from the French lines managed in the darkness to crawl through the German cordon and reach the redoubt where Raynal was holding out. The German artillery was still pounding incessantly at the roofs of the vaults, where the garrison had taken refuge. The officer succeeded in returning to the French lines and reported the desperate condition of the survivors.

The fighting of the two previous days had been awful. Whole German regiments at one stage tried to advance against the western bastion, where two batteries of fieldpieces were posted. They were met with a point blank fire and annihilated. One company climbed to within sixty yards of the guns, but could get no farther. Several German assaults were repulsed only after violent hand to hand fighting.

When at last the assailants reached the principal entry they were met by a counterattack, the garrison making use of their rifle butts, knives and fists and even their steel helmets, which they held by the strap and swung like maces. The Germans employed lachrymosal shells, bombs and liquid fire throwers in great numbers.

Gave Way Inch by Inch.

Inch by inch the enfeebled defenders receded, and when at last, worn out by seven days' watching and fighting, they were incapable of further effort, fresh enemy troops rushed the fort and captured the handful of heroes who remained.

Nothing is known yet of the fate of Chief of Battalion Raynal, who was gazetted on Tuesday a commander of the Legion of Honor for his gallant defense. He has been wounded several times in the present war.

Seven days of terrific bombardment, added to many previous periods of bombardment of less intensity, had reduced the fort to little more than a ruin. Its possession is still a matter of importance to the Verdun operations, however, because of the height which it crowns and from which it had been able to sweep the ravine to the north as well as the slopes of the Meuse heights to the east.

Although the position, so far as natural defenses were concerned, was one of the most difficult to attack on this bank of the river, it was selected by the Germans in preference to other points of less natural strength because from its position on the extreme east of the line it received the least support from the flanking batteries on the other bank.

Facing the Germans on the right bank of the river is the line from Froide Terre to the forts of Souville and Tavannes, both situated on heights of great natural strength.

RECRUITING NOW A DIFFICULT TASK

Officers Want a More Liberal Interpretation of Rules.

STANDARD REMAINS HIGH.

Only a Few of the 30,000 Men Needed to Bring Army Up to Full Strength Have Been Accepted—Regulations Enforced to the Letter by Officers In Charge.

Unless more vigorous enlistment measures succeed in getting the men required under the new army bill there is likely to be a shakeup in the recruiting branch of the service. Some army officers are inclined to complain that too many applicants for the army are rejected because of strict technical interpretation of the requirements.

Responsibility for recruiting the army up to service requirements under the new army bill rests with Adjutant General H. P. McCain. Officers of the army general staff are determined that the necessary improvement in recruiting shall be effected, and if Adjutant General McCain cannot produce the results efforts will be made to find a successor who can.

General McCain is aware of the responsibility resting on him. He testified before the house military affairs committee last January that under the voluntary system of enlistment the maximum number of men that can be recruited, using all proper methods, in any one year would not exceed 50,000. This figure represents only a very slight addition to the army, as the war department has been required annually to recruit between 30,000 and 40,000 men to fill vacancies due to expiration of enlistments and other causes. The adjutant general is not prepared to say, in face of the country's new interest in the regular army strength, that 50,000 is the maximum number that can be enlisted in a year. He is prepared to assume responsibility for getting the men required.

"It's up to me to get the men," he said recently in this connection, "and I'm going to get them."

Many Rejections.

Many army officers doubt if the war department can, without any provision for compulsory service, get the additional men required under the bill for 175,000 fighting men except by decidedly more vigorous and expedient recruiting measures and possibly some change in the way applicants are tested under the present recruiting standards. Of the 168,182 applicants last year the war department rejected 123,731, making the enlistment total about 45,000. General McCain says that the great number of rejections is due to the high standard of the army requirements.

However, some criticism is heard to the effect that the standards are too rigidly enforced, and much more to the effect that the measures of recruiting are not the best possible. Applicants for first enlistment must be "between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five years, of good character and temperate habits, ablebodied, free from disease, and must be able to speak, read and write the English language." It is pointed out that these general requirements are subject to pretty broad interpretation and that possibly some candidates for the army have been required to read and write better than was actually necessary for even a first class soldier. It is known, of course, that some congress leaders have not been averse to seeing the size of the army kept down and the validity of many rejections has been no cause of anxiety to them.

In view of the adoption of the conference report on the army reorganization bill new methods of enlistment are under consideration. While no one is seriously proposing that the army requirements shall be materially reduced, it will occasion no surprise if those who have the recruiting in charge adopt a somewhat less technical attitude toward these requirements as well as new methods. One criticism as to method is that in New York city recruiting stations have been maintained on Fifth avenue while the possibilities of the ferry approaches have been neglected.

ST. LOUIS WOMEN DELEGATES

Twenty-three Will Have Seats at Democratic Convention.

Twenty-three women will have seats as delegates or alternates in the Democratic National convention in the St. Louis Coliseum. They will be only a sprinkling among the delegates, however, as there are to be 1,092 delegates and as many alternates seated on the arena floor.

Of the women, fourteen are delegates and will cast their ballots in presidential and vice presidential nominations, as well as in the approval of the Democratic platform. Nine are alternates. Two of the women delegates—Mrs. W. A. Harris of Lawrence, Kan., and Alva B. Adams of Pueblo, Colo.—are delegates at large from their states.

Eight of the eleven states which have granted full suffrage to women are sending women to the convention. The lists of delegates from Oregon, Nevada and Montana—equal suffrage states—do not contain names of women delegates.

National Democratic Committeeman Edward F. Goltra returned to St. Louis from Chicago and said that a comparison of arrangements at the Coliseum in St. Louis with the arrangements in Chicago convinced him that St. Louis was much better prepared to take charge of delegates and visitors.

Bible Recovered From Sea.

J. Terry Morgan, in Sierra Leone, West Africa, ordered a Bible from a Chicago company, which sent the book on the steamship Falaba. When this boat was sunk the Bible was washed up on the shore of Scotland, where it was recovered, the shipper's address made out and the book sent back to Chicago, where it is now on exhibition.

A Cruel Custom.

In olden times deformed people were frequently thrown into prison to be kept out of sight.

FOURTH FALL OF LUTZK.

Fortress Taken by Russians Has Seen Much Fighting In Present War.

Lutzk, captured by the Russians in their latest offensive against Austria, is situated thirty-five miles from the Galician border and is a modern stronghold erected within recent years by Russia to ward off possible Austrian aggression. It is the eastern angle of the Volhynian fortress, the two others, Dubno, the apex, situated thirty miles to the southeast, still in Teuton hands, and Rovno, thirty miles to the east, having been built for its support. When the German and Austro-Hungarian armies last autumn compelled the Russians to retire on the whole 500 mile front Lutzk was one of the most bitterly contested points on the southern part of the line. It changed hands three times, falling last into Teuton hands on Oct. 1.

The fortress lies halfway between Rovno and Kovel, on the important railway line that runs from Brest Litovsk to the region southwest of Kiev. It is this railway sector, between Rovno and Kovel, that has been the objective of the Russian attacks ever since the Teuton offensive came to a standstill eight months ago, for its control would give the Russians a free hand to operate southward against the lines in Galicia.

Without holding Lutzk the Austrians will have a hard task maintaining themselves in the smaller Volhynian fortress to the southeast, Dubno, and once Dubno has fallen the road is open to the czar's forces for another invasion of western Galicia. Such an invasion, if accompanied by simultaneous attacks against the Bukowina lines, would present a formidable menace to the whole southernmost Austro-Hungarian front, as it would threaten it with being cut off or driven to the north into the hands of the army invading Galicia.

The town and district of Lutzk are of little commercial importance. Lutzk was at one time a thriving center, with a population of about 40,000, but since the Polish wars in the last half of the sixteenth century it has steadily declined.

FAILED TO REACH HER DYING SON

John Martin Died While Mother Was Hastening West In Hope of Seeing Him Alive.

In a race across the continent to reach the bedside of her dying son, Mrs. B. F. Martin, of Oneida street, this city, received word when she reached Chicago last night that she was too late, and that her son John, who had been living in Denver, Col., for the past few months, had already died. Mr. Martin became ill some time ago, and was ordered to a higher altitude at once. Two days ago his mother received a report from Denver that he was failing fast and could not live through the week.

Mrs. Martin immediately made arrangements to go to her son's bedside and left this city Thursday evening on a fast train for Chicago, where she intended to change to the Burlington route for Denver. Mr. Martin, however, sank rapidly yesterday and death came just as his mother reached Chicago, where she was notified by telegraph.

The remains will be brought to this city, and burial will be made from the Church of the Immaculate Conception, of which the young man was a member. In addition to his mother, who is a widow, the young man is survived by three brothers, Frank, Fred and Harold Martin. Hhis is the second death in the Martin family since May 3rd, when Miss Agnes Martin, a sister, died after a short illness.

John Martin was a member of St. Joseph's Council, Knights of Columbus, and the Catholic Men's Benevolent Association. Delegations from both organizations will attend the funeral services, for which arrangements will be made later.

WOODMEN'S DANCE MADE ALL PERSONS HAPPY

The headquarters of the Modern Woodmen of America were filled last night, the occasion being the last dance of the season. Dancing was the one and only form of amusement and it was enjoyed to the fullest extent by young and old.

The favors were white carnations, which gave to the guests a welcome incomparable. When intermission time came the Royal Neighbors served ice cream and cake. Many compliments were conveyed to the committee in charge of the event, and many expressions were heard favorable to a repetition of the event. The dancers left the hall at an early hour this morning, tired, but happy.

STRIKE OF RAILROAD MEN WOULD HURT THIS CITY'S MANUFACTURERS

As a result of the failure of representatives of the principal railroad brotherhoods of trainmen, conductors, firemen and engineers to effect a compromise at a conference which covered two weeks, prominent Brotherhood men in New York yesterday said there was every likelihood of a nation-wide railroad strike in the near future, which would involve about 500,000 members of the union and 50,000 non-union railroad workers. Strike ballots are now being printed and a canvass of the union members will be made at once, to be completed about August 1, or earlier. Officials of the brotherhoods believe that 85 per cent. of the railroad workers will favor a strike.

There are six men in this city who will be directly affected by the strike, if a vote of the Brotherhoods decides that action. These men, under the direction of W. A. Howard, comprise the switching crew of the Ontario and Western R. R. Co., which handles the greater part of the freight from local manufacturers. The New York Central railroad maintains no city switching crew but handles Fulton cars through the crew of the local freight trains, as does the Lackawanna road.

F. W. Richardson, agent of the Ontario and Western, said this morning that a strike would create a serious situation in this city, not only involving freight from other points received here, but also the local manufacturers.

The Volney Paper Co., Oswego Falls Paper Co., American Woolen Co., Peter-Cailler-Koehler and others would be seriously affected. Some of these manufacturing concerns have little or no store room, and load cars for shipment each day. A tie up in transportation facilities would result in serious losses to these companies.

Good Prospects for Additional Industries

company plant north of the city. Some of the members of the Chamber were of the opinion that the money necessary could be raised by public subscription.

The Standard Knitting Co., with a plant in Brooklyn, N. Y., offered a proposition that the Chamber should erect a building containing 36,000 square feet and covering one acre. They must be located where they can use 100,000 gallons of water every ten hours, and a site on Shaw street north of the city was considered. The Standard company wants free water and free taxes for ten years and engages to buy the building in twenty years, paying interest at 5 per cent. until that time. Their annual pay roll is about $150,000.

The proposition advanced by the American Conduit Co., of Chicago, manufacturers of wood fibre products, was considered the best received. This company asks no concessions, and will need a three acre site, they agree to build their plant. They questioned the freight rates on wood-pulp here, and the committee has not yet been able to get the rates.

The other propositions were also discussed at length and explained in every detail by Secretary Hollenga.

It was the consensus of opinion that some action should be taken at once in the case of the Kirschbaum company and the American Conduit Co., and it is quite likely that Mr. Hollenga may start to Chicago to-day, where he will confer with the American Conduit Co. officials.

Mr. Hollenga outlined a plan for a public forum to hear the various propositions and this plan was endorsed by those present.

In his remarks, the secretary brought up the subject of the Old Home Week celebration and requested the sincere support of all present in the task of carrying the project through to a successful conclusion.

The members of the Industrial Committee are Orrin Bogardus, chairman; D. M. Sullivan, F. W. Richardson, L. E. Hope, J. M. Caffrey, David Katz.

The committee announced that the advertising given the city by George Coffing Warner, of New York city, who has power interests here, had been largely instrumental in bringing the city's advantages to the attention of the manufacturers who have submitted propositions to the committee. Some of the manufacturers were secured direct.

SYRACUSE WANTS BILLY ONCE MORE

Syracuse—S. B. Groner, secretary of the Syracuse Y. M. C. A., left for Kansas City to-day to extend an invitation to Billy Sunday to conduct a second campaign in this city. The local Sunday men want the evangelist to come here during the fall of 1918.

The decision to invite the evangelist was unanimously made by the Syracuse Evangelic Association, the organization which financed the first campaign here the latter part of 1915.

It is believed that this is the first time on record of any city extending a second invitation to the evangelist.

While the local clergymen affiliated with the Evangelical association are hopeful that Billy will accept the second invitation it is doubtful whether he will come back to Syracuse. He has never yet conducted two campaigns in the same city.

In case he decided to return all the work of the first campaign will have to be done over. The tabernacle has been torn down and the lumber sold, while many of the committees organized to do shop work, etc., have gone out of existence. The Sunday enthusiasts, however, declare that with the experience gained in the first campaign they could conduct the second at a greatly reduced cost and have lists of names that would prove invaluable in hunting for workers in the second campaign.

Young Men Compete for Scholarships

Five young men, competitors for scholarships awarded by the State Grange in the Agricultural Short Course at Cornell University, were on hand early this morning at the Grange Hall, to take the examinations, which were in charge of L. D. Beardsley, master of Pomona Grange. The examination included questions on arithmetic, geography, history, civics and English composition. Entrance was restricted to members of any county Grange between the ages of 18 and 25 years.

Six young men had signified their intention of trying the examination, but only five appeared this morning. They were Richard Groundman of the Bernhard's Bay Grange, Fred Vant of Mt. Pleasant Grange, Leon Hill also of Mt. Pleasant, Glenn Rumsey of Bowens' Corners Grange, and Harold Dann of Oswego Falls Grange.

The State Grange has appropriated $600 to pay for twelve scholarships at Cornell, and the competitors will be rated according to their standings. The money will be paid as soon as the successful student begins work at the University.

classes, telling them of his regret at leaving for another position, but promising that he would not forget the friends he had made here, and concluding his address with the expression of an earnest wish that all might succeed in their respective vocations.

Donald O'Brien, captain of the baseball team, acquitted himself very creditably in a short speech, in which he thanked the faculty for its co-operation in many instances with the members of the team, and Mr. Merrill in particular, for his services as coach and advisor.

All the speakers were vociferously cheered at the conclusion of their remarks, and when Cheer Leader Moss called for an expression of sentiment from the students on Mr. Wilcox, Mr. O'Brien and the entire faculty, the roof fairly rang. In response to his question as to what was the matter with Mr. Merrill, the entire audience answered in chorus that there was nothing the matter with him.

The High school orchestra played an important part in the exercises, and under the leadership of Mrs. L. R. Owens, furnished the accompaniment for the school singing. In addition to the rendition of the school songs and the "Graduation Song" by the seniors, popular airs were sung with great enthusiasm by the students, and in "The Rocky Road to Dublin" and "Mother," two current popular numbers, voices never before heard were mingled with good effect.

The exercises concluded with a rousing cheer for Mrs. Owens, and the pupils resumed their classes at 10:30 o'clock.

Next week will be devoted to the Regents' Examinations and every spare moment of the pupils' time will be devoted to hard study in anticipation of the anual ordeal.

ABOUT THE TOWN

VALE MERRILL!

William Merrill, for the past two years instructor in chemistry, physics and mathematics at the Fulton High School severed his official connection with the local institution yesterday, and will go to Malone, N. Y., High school in September, where he will continue to teach mathematics and also act as vice principal of the school.

During his stay in this city, Mr. Merrill has won countless friends, not only among the students of the school, but among the business men and residents of the city. The boys of the high school, especially those who participate in athletics to any extent, "swear by" Merrill, and there is sincere regret in all quarters that he is to leave. Although engaged in teaching three of the most difficult subjects in the curriculum, Mr. Merrill nevertheless found time to coach the school athletic teams, and in several ways showed his good will and desire to co-operate with the boys of the school in elevating high school athletics to their present high standard.

The Fulton High school lads will not forget his efforts, and the writer joins with the pupils and faculty in wishing him continued success and all good luck in his new field.

Officer William A. Pare will return from his vacation next week, and Officer C. Herbert Boland will be the next member of the force to enjoy ten days' relief from the monotonous pavement pounding.

The Red Men will tackle the N. Y. Central team of Oswego at the Fair grounds to-morrow afternoon, and as the Lake City aggregation is reputed to be a collection of fast players a good game may be expected. Painter will probably bear the bulk of the hurling burden for Fulton, although "Bill" Milnes may be given an opportunity to unlimber his soup bone. The record attendance so far this season has once reached the 500 mark, but the contests are growing in popularity, and with fair weather a goodly delegation from Oswego is expected to swell the total to-morrow. A silver offering will be taken up.

"Huck" Woodbury, local newspaper writer and clubman, carried off first honors in the wild scramble for bass upon the opening of the season yesterday. "Huck" is credited with producing ten good sized striped bass as the result of a day's pastime on Lake Neahtawanta, but some of the other fishermen claim he had the fish trained. Dr. Claire Whitbeck was second with a catch of five, and several others raitled along with strings f otwo and three fish. All report good sport and fairly abundant fish.

"My friends in Oswego county and throughout the state have urged me to be a candidate and I shall do so," said Speaker T. C. Sweet, of Phoenix, representative of this county in the State Legislature yesterday, in making public announcement that he would be a candidate for re-election next fall.

There have been rumors to the effect that Mr. Sweet was after the senatorial nomination, and later it was said he was to receive appointment as Public Service Commissioner.

City Comptroller Herbert W. Adkins to-day received a communication from the State Tax Commission, informing him that an unexpended balance of $2,400, paid by this city into the Highway Maintenance fund, would be deposited to the credit of the city at once.

Under the amendment to the Highway law, second and third class cities will not be required hereafter to contribute to the fund but the balance unexpended from previous payments must be spent in improving state and county roads within the city limits.

A deed transferring to the Arrowhead Mills, Inc., property adjoining the Battle Island property in the town of Volney was filed in Oswego yesterday by Arvin L. Rice, of this city as trustee in bankruptcy for the Hunter Bros. Paper Co. The property was recently bid in for the Arrowhead company by N. L. Whitaker, the price being $3,000.

Thomas Hunter Denies Remodeling Story

"Not a word of truth in it," said Thomas Hunter of the Hunter Arms company in reference to a story in a Syracuse morning paper to-day, which stated that alterations in the Hunter plant were being made preparatory to the installation of rifle making machinery for a sub-contract for arms that the Hunter company had received.

When questioned further regarding the possibility of the Hunter company securing a war order Mr. Hunter said he preferred at this time to make no statement.

"There has been a great deal of talk on the subject and any number of unfounded rumors in circulation," he said. "Consequently, while we are hopeful and are doing our best to secure a contract, I prefer to make no statement now."

"Will the new Russian loan have any bearing on your efforts to secure a contract?" the reporter asked.

"We think so, but indirectly," replied the manufacturer. Mr. Hunter said the negotiations already in progress for some time were with representatives of the Russian government, and it is understood that the new loan will enable Russia to carry out plans involving the manufacture of munitions in this country which were interrupted because of lack of funds. Mr. Hunter said the contract for which the Fulton company is now negotiating was not a sub contract, but an order which would be given to this company direct.

FORT ONTARIO TO BE RESTORED

(Special to Evening Times.)

Washington—Fort Ontario, Oswego county, is one of the old fortifications dating back to revolutionary and Colonial times, and possessing historic and educational interests is one of the forts to be restored by the government and given to posterity as a result of a provision in the fortifications bill which has been passed by the House of Representatives this week.

The appropriations carried amounts to $225,000 which will permit the expenditure of about $10,0000 on the old forts and also provides $500 per year for maintenance. This latter provision will give employment to a caretaker at each of the old forts.

Besides Fort Ontario other old forts that are to be restored and maintained in the interests of education, Fort Niagara on the Niagara river near Buffalo will also be included. Both of these have modern military posts in connection but the old masonry of the posts especially at Fort Ontario have commenced to show their age by crumbling and deterioration of buildings and these hereafter will be kept up in as near their pristine condition as is possible.

Fort Montgomery at the outlet of Lake Champalin is also to be restored and it developed in debate on the bill that this fort was built by the United States on Canadian soil and after the cessation of the revolution was debatable ground until the Prussian emperor as arbitrator held that the United States built it in good faith and so awarded the land to the United States.

Three of the posts are on the boundary or near the boundary line between this country and Canada and cannot be made into fortifications, but it is carefully explained that such is not the intention as the old earthworks and masonry would be useless in modern warfare.

Work at Oswego will be started about July 1, according to present estimates.

LOVE AT SIGHT

Story of a Heroic Mexican Girl and a Yankee.

By F. A. MITCHEL

The Sierra Tarahumare range of mountains runs in a southeasterly direction through the Mexican state of Chihuahua. James Jernegan, a young American engineer, was called to a certain point in these mountains to build a dam on one of its streams with a view to utilizing the water power.

The nearest house to where his work was located was the home of a Mexican woman named Cavillo. Jernegan persuaded her to take him to board during his sojourn and was thus fortunate in escaping the necessity of camping. The house overlooked an extended territory beneath, and from its veranda one might gaze on a very attractive view. The grounds were not inclosed, and the whole mountain side might be considered as belonging to the place. Everything was kept tidy and was in better condition than might have been expected of a mountaineer's residence.

On the evening of Jernegan's arrival a little table was set for him on the veranda for his supper. On taking his seat he was regretting that he must sup alone when a girl dressed in the costume of the country appeared, bringing the viands.

"Oho!" he said to himself. "If I can have no one to sup with me I can at least have this little senorita to wait upon me, and I shall contrive to keep her with me as much as possible."

The girl, who was the daughter of Senora Cavillo and whose name was Inez, laid the dishes on the table and was about to depart when Jernegan, who spoke Spanish indifferently, said to her:

"I feel much honored, senorita, at having a pretty girl to wait on me. It would be much more fitting that I wait on you. However, since you have assumed the duty I beg that you will not be beyond call, for there may be something that I shall need which is not on the table."

The girl, who had never before listened to such deferential words from a man, was too confused and delighted to at once reply. A quick succession of blushes passed over her face, her eyes sparkled, and a happy smile played upon her lips.

"Ah, senor," she said presently, "it would not be proper for you to wait upon me, and it makes me very happy to wait upon you. If you want anything I will be within call."

There is no greater danger than for a man of superior caste to go among his inferiors and become involved with one of their women folk, especially if she be an attractive young girl. Jernegan, observing the effect of his words upon Inez, felt the necessity of caution. But it is one thing to feel a necessity for resisting a temptation and another to resist. He suffered the girl to go into a room opening on the veranda, but did not let her remain long there. He called:

"Senorita?"

"I am coming, senor." And from the few seconds occupied in her appearance it was evident that she had not been far away. Indeed, she was looking through a lace curtain that covered the opening between her and the handsome American. Those who believe that love must have time to take root and grow have never seen a country girl suddenly confronted by a handsome gentleman. In such instances the girl is liable to throw up her hands in token of surrender at a glance. At any rate, such was the case with Inez.

"Could you bring me some more tamales?" asked Jernegan in a tone of voice that he would have used to a superior being.

"Yes, senor."

When she returned with what he had asked for he suggested that if she would take a chair on the veranda she would not have to tire herself by coming to him, as though she had a long distance instead of a few steps to come to him. She accepted the suggestion and sat down in a bamboo rocking chair near him.

Now, there was a swarthy young Mexican who the very evening before had secured the little girl's promise to become his wife. He was a rough mountaineer and not very clean, but he was the best Inez had ever seen, and she was sixteen, and that is a proper age for a Mexican girl to marry. Jernegan had swept her away from this man, Manuel Corall, in a twinkling. It is questionable if after coming under the influence of the former she gave the latter a thought.

Nevertheless Corall was coming to pass the first evening after his betrothal with his promised wife. Inez was so wrapt in her companion that she did not hear Manuel coming. But he saw her sitting on the veranda, saw the gringo eating at the table and Inez's eyes resting upon him with a look of idolatry. Corall saw at a glance that the hated American had swooped down like an eagle from the sky to carry off the lamb that he had supposed had belonged to himself.

Corall paused, hid himself behind a bush and looked. He had already seen enough to tell him that this being, superior to himself in refinement, in intelligence, in manly beauty, had taken the heart that had belonged to him. What the gringo would do with it did not concern the Mexican. He was absorbed in vengeance. Resisting the temptation to rush upon the man who had dispossessed him, he finally slunk away, resolved to wait an opportunity to take his revenge without its reacting upon himself.

Jernegan, having finished his supper and smoked, went to the camp where the men who were to construct the dam were to begin work the next morning. There in conference with the superintendent Inez passed from his mind. It was 10 o'clock when he returned to Senora Cavillo's. The inmates were all in their rooms, but the house was open as it had been during the day, for the weather was warm, and, being remote from other places and persons, the doors were never shut at night. The only light on the main floor was one in the living room opening on to the veranda.

The engineer sat down on a bench on the veranda and was thinking of a problem that had arisen in connection with the construction of the dam when he saw the shadow of a human figure cast through a window by the light in the room behind him and heard a voice say:

"Senor, thinking you might heed refreshment I have iced some wine for you."

"Ah, senorita, always kind and thoughtful! I will drink the wine on condition that you drink it with me."

Inez brought out a tray on which was a small pitcher of a beverage she had concocted, and, drawing a table before the bench, the two sat down on the bench to regale themselves.

They had been seated some time and had emptied the pitcher. Jernegan's arm was around Inez's waist. On the table before them suddenly appeared the shadow of a head, then of a pair of shoulders. Lastly a shadow of an arm rose from the rest. Inez gave a shriek and, springing up, covered her companion with the upper part of her body. A blow descended upon her, and she sank down on to the floor.

Jernegan rose, turned and saw a Mexican holding a knife in his hand from which blood dripped. From this he cast a glance at the sinking Inez and took in the situation. An intention to kill him had been thwarted by her receiving the blow that had been meant for him. Seizing the only weapon at hand, the earthen pitcher on the table, he hurled it with all his strength through the window. It struck his opponent in the temple, and he fell senseless to the floor.

Forgetting his existence, Jernegan stooped, took up Inez and held her in his arms. Notwithstanding a severe wound in her shoulder she had not lost consciousness. She looked up at him with a smile that spoke volumes. She had received the blow that might have killed the man she loved.

Her shriek brought down her mother from the floor above and others. Senora Cavillo glanced at the figure of the would be murderer stretched on the floor with the bloody knife near the hand that had held it. She recognized Corall, but he did not interest her; her concern was for her daughter, whose shriek had brought her to the scene of the trouble. Going on to the veranda, she took Inez from the American, tore away the clothing that covered the wound and began stanching the blood.

Jernegan gave a shrill call to the men in the camp, and the superintendent and several other men came to the house.

"Take that man away!" cried the engineer. "He tried to kill me. This girl threw herself in his way and received the blow."

Corall, who was still insensible, was taken up and carried to the rear of the house. Inez was supported to her room by her mother.

Jernegan thought it best to spend the night at the camp. On reaching it he told what he knew of the story. This was not much. He did not know who the man was who had attacked him, but surmised it was some Mexican—possibly interested in Inez—who hated gringoes. Those engaged with him in construction work advised him to remain in camp with them, for, since he had excited antagonism, he was liable to be murdered. He had no stomach for the scene of his tragic adventure and took their advice.

Corall, who had been struck in a vital place, remained unconscious till a surgeon removed a fractured bone and its consequent pressure on the brain. Then he recovered consciousness, and it was not long before he was about again. He expressed much concern as to Inez's condition, his first words after regaining his senses being, "Have I killed her?" When he was assured that she was living and her wound was not mortal he expressed a wish to see her. But she would not grant it. As soon as he became able to go about by himself he was sent away without a word from her.

But four hours elapsed between the meeting of Jernegan and Inez and the climax of the drama. Each endured for a lifetime the consequences of a sudden outburst of love from her and a yielding to a momentary indiscretion on his part. They never met again. Indeed, Inez was soon convinced that another meeting would not be advisable. She realized the difference in their conditions. Why had she not done so in the first place? Because the flood came upon her too violently to admit of forethought.

Jernegan, satisfied that he had better leave the locality, did so, sending another engineer to take his place. He is now a middle aged man, but is not married. Inez has long ago passed into that condition of physical decay common to women of her race. She, too, has remained single. Strange it is how condensed may be events that determine human destinies.

PUMPKINS vs. SQUASHES

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Ebenezer Singleton was a young man of twenty-three. He was a good and industrious young man and had acquired quite a little property thus early in his career. He had just purchased a cozy house, and the next thing needed was a wife.

Sarah Jane Scott, twenty years old, was a very nice girl—very nice. She was good at needlework, housework and other kinds of work which would have made her a treasure of a wife. She and Ebenezer met one day, and they looked good to each other. From thence sprang a courtship, and there was no one who interfered or objected. Ebenezer could support a wife, and Sarah Jane could be of great help to a husband.

There was only one trait in the character in either one that could be criticised, and that was developed to each other just at the wrong time. Ebenezer had come courting, and his mind was about made up to ask Sarah Jane for her hand when the conversation happened to touch on astronomy.

"Isn't it singular how the sun moves around the earth from east to west?" queried Ebenezer just as he was ready to go home.

"But the sun does not move around the earth," mildly protested Sarah Jane. "The earth moves around the sun, and it moves from east to west because nature arranged it to, just as it did for a tree to stand on its roots."

"Did you ever watch the sun move?" asked Ebenezer, with a very sober face.

"Never, Eben, but I have watched the earth move. The sun stands as still as a great rock, while our earth moves along. Why, Eben, don't you remember the proof given in geography of the earth's moving round the sun?"

"Well, well, Sarah, you are a queer girl. The sun certainly moves, and if you have never seen it move there is something very wrong with your eyes. It moves from east to west, but I don't see why it can't just as well move from north to south."

Sarah Jane looked at Ebenezer for a long minute to see if he was joking. She found him very earnest in this belief, and it gave her an unpleasant shock. She had never found him an ignorant man in any particular, and this was ignorance of the grossest kind.

"Eben," she quietly said, "you are not wanting me to understand that the sun moves along like a man walking? You cannot believe this against the known facts. It has been hundreds of years since it was known that the earth moved around the sun."

"People may think so, but that doesn't make it so," answered Ebenezer as the light of defiance shone in his eyes. "I say the sun moves. I have seen it move. I saw it moving along not five hours ago. My eyes are good eyes. What my eyes see I am not going back on. Are you going to believe that the sun stands still just because a lot of nearsighted men claim it does so?"

"Oh, well, we won't discuss the matter any further," said Sarah Jane, realizing that it might lead to unfortunate results.

"But we will!" exclaimed Ebenezer as he set his jaw. "You believe one way and I another. Let us decide who is right."

"But how are we going to decide?" she protested in tones which betrayed vexation.

"Why, you are going to believe as I believe."

"But I can't. You won't find one in a million people who believe with you. You can keep on believing so if you will, but I can never agree with you. However, it is a matter that we need not get angry about. We have always got plenty of sunshine whether the sun stands still or moves along, and we probably always shall. We are having pleasant weather, aren't we?"

"Sarah Jane Scott," said Ebenezer as he laid his hand on the knob of the door to go out, "when you have come to believe as I believe just send me a little note to that effect, will you?"

And Ebenezer, the very good young man, but the very obstinate young man, walked out into the darkness. He never received the note referred to, and the reader will not wonder why. He expected it for a month, and when it never appeared he was more than ever determined in his belief that the sun moved right along and left everything behind it. As for Sarah Jane Scott, she was astonished, angered and humiliated, and you can't expect that the girl with such feelings is going to give up her point of view.

It wasn't necessary that either one should leave the town. Eben lived at one end of it and Sarah Jane the other, and they seldom met. When they did there was a cold nod exchanged. Several years passed away, and one day Sarah was married to a man named Peters. Before consenting to be his wife she questioned him about the sun. He readily answered that the earth moved around the sun, and the week later they were married.

When the news of her marriage reached the ears of Ebenezer he got a hustle on him, and three months later he was also married. Previous to his marriage he likewise asked the question that Sarah had asked—does the sun move around the earth or the earth move around the sun?

"I don't care a snap which way it is," was the answer Ebenezer received. "As your wife I shall agree with you."

TO THE FORE WITH CAMP COOKERY

Don't Eat Indigestibles Merely Because You Live In a Tent—Try Chicken a la Cowboy and Beans Baked In a Hole.

IN a permanent camp the fireplace may be built of flat stones, with an opening three feet above the ground, and this kind of fireplace eliminates the backaches that come from bending over a low fire. The log cooking stove is most convenient and is made by placing two green logs, their upper surfaces flattened, on the ground in a long, narrow V, the fire being built between them. The point of the V should be left open some three or four inches, the opening at the wide end being not more than nine inches. The coffeepot can be placed on a narrow end, and kettles may be hung on improvised cranes. A folding portable grate will be convenient.

Never start to cook until your fire is reduced to live coals, and to secure the proper bed of coals the original fire must be made of hard wood, as the embers from hemlock, pine or spruce lose their heat in a very short time. If you have a folding baker the bread, biscuit and cakes may be baked in it. Otherwise you will have to place the dough in a greased pan and cover it with another pan of equal size. This kind of baker is buried in the hot embers, care being taken that there are plenty of hot coals on the top of the pan as well as underneath.

Prepared flour is almost a necessity in camp, as it only requires wetting with milk or water to make delicious biscuit or pancakes. However, if you haven't this flour biscuits are also easily and quickly made by mixing two pints of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt and a piece of butter or pork fat the size of an egg, with sufficient milk to make a dough soft enough to roll out and cut into shape. Bread is made in the same way, except that the dough is thinned to form a batter which will just pour, and it must be baked in deeper pans. To make good old time southern hoecake mix one quart of cornmeal, one teaspoonful of baking powder and one teaspoonful of salt, with enough cold water to make a thin batter. Let it rise, then stir it well and bake. This is delicious eaten either hot or cold with butter or sirup. Toothsome flapjacks, which are the traditional fare of all outdoor people, are made by adding to two pints of flour two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt and one egg, sufficient milk to make a batter which will pour easily. Cook in a well greased frying pan over a hot fire.

The auxiliary oven or bean hole is the fireless cooker of the camp, and in it chicken, chowders, fish, stews, green corn (unhusked), potatoes in their jackets and many other good things may be cooked. In it you can cook the best baked beans you have ever eaten. Soak the beans overnight, and in the morning parboil them in fresh water until the skins crack when you blow on them. Put half the quantity of the beans in the pot, add a good sized piece of salt pork, the remainder of the beans and another portion of pork. Add two tablespoonfuls of molasses and cover with hot water. See that the lid fits on tightly. Slices of onion may be added if you care for the flavor. The oven in the meantime has been made ready by keeping up a continuous fire until the stones are hot.

If there should be a farm near the camp where you can procure a fat, yellow legged pullet to cook as the cowboys do you will find it greatly to your taste. Dress it carefully, dust the inside with salt, pepper and flour, adding a slice or two of sweet bacon. Treat the outside in the same way, putting a slice of bacon under each wing and across the breast and tying the wings down; then wrap it tightly in a napkin made from flour sack muslin and tie well. Drop the chicken into cold water, wrap another napkin around it and dip again. Then wrap in many thicknesses of newspapers, wetting very thoroughly each time. Rake the coals of the fire aside, cover the space with cold ashes to prevent the live coals from touching the chicken; then put in the well wrapped pullet, dust with cold ashes, pile on the hot coals and leave undisturbed for an hour. Remove the coals and charred paper carefully at the end of that time and from the inner napkin deftly turn out upon a dish the baked chicken.

THE GOING AWAY GOWN.

The bride is apt to be most deeply concerned about her "going away" and traveling costume after the vital matter of the wedding gown has been settled. Blue seems to be a favored color for "going away" gowns this season, and a few smart models in coffee tone have been recorded. One bride of important social standing appeared in a citron colored taffeta and citron cloth topcoat to bid goodby to her assembled friends. Since hat and buttoned boots were black, the effect is very smart indeed, but citron is a shade that admits no rivals in color alongside.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Here are displayed the exquisite possibilities of combination—a simple frock of floral printed crepe, trimmed with bands of satin to correspond with the quaintest little overblouse one could fancy. As if the pointed sides did not make the blouse dip sufficiently, silk tassels the same shade as the satin are added. For the average figure the dress requires 5 yards 40-inch crepe and 2 1-4 yards satin.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHOLESOME BREADS.

GRAHAM BREAD.—Scald one pint of milk and one pint of water, melt two tablespoonfuls of lard in liquid. When lukewarm, add one yeast cake dissolved in three-quarters cupful lukewarm water. Make soft batter by adding one quart graham flour, two tablespoonfuls sugar, two teaspoonfuls salt. Cover with doubled warm woolen cloth. Set in warm place over night. In morning add enough white flour to make stiff dough. Knead with white flour until dough will absorb no more and is elastic and does not stick to board (about ten or fifteen minutes). This makes four loaves or three loaves and pan of biscuits. Set to rise again in warm place (shelf over stove) till doubled in bulk. Bake in hot oven, 300 degrees, forty or sixty minutes. Whole wheat or rye bread can be made same way. A couple of handfuls wheat bran make it better added to sponge at night. Raisin bread can be made by halving batter in morning and adding teacupful raisins, cupful sugar and half cupful butter to one part.

Peanut Bread.—Two and one-half cupfuls flour, one-half cupful sugar, one cupful peanuts, chopped fine; two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one teaspoonful salt. Mix all together and add one egg beaten with enough sweet milk to make a stiff batter. Pour in a bread tin and bake forty minutes. This makes one loaf.

Spoon Bread.—One pint of milk heated to boiling point; stir into this one cupful of white cornmeal; cook five minutes; beat in two tablespoonfuls of butter and one-half cupful of cold milk into the mush; add two eggs, well beaten; once more add one-half cupful cold milk. Put into a well buttered dish and bake for one-half hour in rather quick oven.

Brown Bread. — Three cupfuls of meal, one and one-half cupfuls of graham flour, one-half cupful of rye flour, one scant cupful of molasses, just about a quart of milk or water, three level teaspoonfuls of soda, about a good teaspoonful salt.

SOCIALIZING OF OUR EMOTIONS

An Educator Discusses Childhood, Recommending That Women Turn Their Emotional Forces Toward Child Welfare.

DR. THOMAS D. WOOD, Columbia university, in a recent interview stated:

"To make the enormous emotional forces of women do constructive work is the problem of the future, for it is woman who will have to be the leader in social parenthood. I concede that woman has the greater genius for parenthood, but men and women alike just outgrow the ideal of tiger parenthood—the parents that fight for their own young at the expense of other young.

"Women are developing tremendously as social parents. The ideal of social parenthood, of universal mother and fatherhood, finds its expression in the Big Brother and Big Sister movement and in social settlements. Men must learn from women, and women must learn from men. I believe in woman suffrage not because I think it will work any social miracles, but because it will educate women.

"Men in the trenches in Europe today get better care than the children of America. Generally speaking, pigs and other live stock receive more intelligent treatment than children. Yet children are the greatest investment of a nation.

"The care of children is not a lost art, for the human race has never known how to care for its young. More human beings die annually from preventable diseases and accident than were killed in any year of the civil war.

"Child preservation is an art we are just finding. We have made mental education compulsory. Eventually we shall realize that the education of the body, the training of the instincts and emotions, is just as important as the cultivation of the mind.

"There are more than 20,000,000 school children in the United States today," Dr. Wood went on. "Of these three-quarters, or 15,000,000, need medical attention for physical defects which are partially or completely remediable.

"Among these defects are spinal curvature, defective vision or hearing, flat feet, enlarged tonsils and adenoids. At least 50 per cent. in some schools 92 per cent. have defective teeth, and at least a quarter of the number suffer from malnutrition. These children are the wards of the nation, more particularly the wards of its women.

"There should be some way of converting the tremendous emotional forces of women into energies which will save the children.

"But you know women can't rationalize their emotions until they decommercialize them," said the interviewer. "So long as a woman's emotions are her stock of trade, the things by which she gets a living, she can't be rational."

"I think I subscribe to that," Dr. Wood acknowledged, "but enormous creative powers are wasted in the emotions of women. I do not think there is much in the theory that women fundamentally lack creative ability. Women have spent their creative energies emotionally in forms not yet recognized as art; that's all."

Kitchen Convenience.

Keep a high wooden stool, with strong rungs, in your kitchen. When you have something to cook on the gas stove which needs continuous stirring bring it over and sit down, resting your feet on the rungs. When the cooking is done you will get up much refreshed. Use it when you have vegetables to prepare.

ATTRACTIVE FOOD.

It is not always realized that the way food is served has a great deal to do with our appreciation of it.

Color schemes often attract the eye and stimulate the appetite for a dish ordinarily refused. One Sunday night recently a certain housewife had some friends for supper, and afterward the wife of the man who had eaten most heartily of every dish said, "Well, I have a good joke on you, John." Then, turning to her hostess, she said, "You know, he never eats codfish or beets or eggs, and he has eaten all three tonight with the greatest gusto."

"Well, they looked so pretty I couldn't help eating them," John replied.

The codfish was just plain creamed, but it was prepared in the individual ramekin dishes, and the delicately browned top was sprinkled with parsley.

The salad dish was bedded with fresh, green lettuce leaves, on which rested a ring of finely chopped beets. On the inner side of this sprays of the tender little inner stalks of celery were placed, within this a round of egg yolks, also finely chopped, and in the center the whites, dotted with a few sprigs of watercress.

AWNING STRIPES.

What a Woman May Do With This Interesting Summer Fabric.

Awning stripes are one of the vogues of the season. They are used not only in clothes, but for household furnishings as well. They are striking, and with anything striking there is danger that the vogue will not last. But they are worth immediate consideration nevertheless.

Awning striped skirts were worn with much effectiveness last summer. They are worn, naturally, for sport skirts and are really better when worn with a blouse, jacket or sweater of plain color, the color of one of the stripes. Sometimes the jacket is made of stripes and the skirt is of plain material, and this arrangement is equally effective.

There are hats covered with linen or silk in wide stripes that are decidedly striking worn with light frocks. The stripes are sometimes arranged by means of plaits to radiate from the crown; sometimes they run straight across crown and brim.

Then there are lawn parasols and tents, too, in the same gay stripes, and these give a most festive and holiday air to the surroundings of the house decked forth in awnings. Needless to say, all stripes about a house should be of the same color to give the best effect.

Awnings themselves are made for the summer cottage or house in the widest stripes imaginable. They are usually in bright shades, too, of green red or brown.

Cushions for the porch and lawn are covered with awning stripes. There are some interesting new square cushions—cubical, about eighteen inches high. These are quite hard and firm and are good to sit upon on lawn or porch.

For the girl who wears a skirt or jacket of awning stripes for tennis there are racket holders of the same material that make the sport suit more effective.

Parasols, too, for beach use and country use generally are made of awning stripes, which come in silk as well as in linen. They are especially pretty in the new shades in pongee, used in combination with the plain silk.

The stripes, too, come in some of the fabrics for summer window curtains and are quite as good as awning stripes in other fabrics for other uses.

PEANUT STRAW.

Here's a Sport Hat Built to Keep Off the Sun.

Outing hats are taking on huge circumferences. This knockabout straw is trimmed with a wreath of padded fruit and velvet foliage tinted in natural colors. This is the kind of hat we may expect to see on young ladies all this summer.

THE RAGE FOR STENCIL.

Hats, Shoes and Frocks Are Now Treated With Designs In Paint.

Hats, shoes, frocks and all the dainty accessories of milady up to the minute are stenciled or painted. Many a frock that otherwise would be uninteresting is made to become a gown of individuality. Materials that otherwise would be impossible are made most effective when treated to a design in color that draws attention to the design rather than the material. Hats are accompanied with bags of straw and both decorated with a painting or stenciled in contrasting colors.

Now comes the panama hat hand painted with a Japanese design. This hat is faced with velvet. Carried with it is a parasol of linen in the same design. There seems to be no end to the combinations of articles treated with this artistic decoration. A caution should be sounded, though, for there are many atrocities on the market, and one is wise in sticking to the same design or allowing an artist of reputation to select a design that would be suitable to material or the fair wearer's own color scheme. One thing greatly in favor of designs of this type is that surely here one can depend on the fastness of these colors and this at a time when no one's word is believed as to the permanence of any color. There is another side to this question too. Many an unusual design is created by women who otherwise would not have designed patterns for materials. This would indicate employment for the young woman who has an inclination in this direction.

Colorful Blouses.

One of the advantages of blouse buying is that the average woman can get half a dozen to suit her different needs and moods. This season they are unrolled before her like a brilliant, never ending carpet. The design and the color constantly change. They have reached a degree of variety and gayety that has not been touched in several seasons. One must really go back two decades in sartorial history to find the equal of the blouses of today, as far as color is concerned.

Here's a Spring Frock Easy to Produce

ON THE PROMENADE.

THIS is a new way to use popular stripes. Use them bayadere. The colors are navy and white taffeta combined with the plain, which is bunched at the hips to give a coat effect. The plain waist is deep girdled, the neck being finished with a bit of Roumanian embroidery. Straw flowers adorn the navy turban.

When Using Sewing Silk.

The tension of the machine should be considerably tighter when using silk than when using cotton. Thus you will prevent the snarls that usually cause the silk to break. At the same time you get a flat sitch.

For the Tight Shoe.

When a boot or shoe pinches in any particular part wring a cloth out of very hot water and lay over the place while the boot is on the foot. This will expand the leather and give immediate relief.

Process of Cremation.

The process of cremation is as follows: The casket is lowered into the incinerating room. The metal handles and name plate are removed, and it is put into the retort. The heat is so intense that after a few hours only the ashes of the bones remain, all else, including the structure of the casket, having disappeared in light ash or gaseous products. The casket screws and nails are removed by a magnet, and about four ounces of pure ash remain.—New York Times.

Inventor of Roller Skate.

The inventor of the roller skate was a Dutchman named Merlin, who visited England in 1760. Eight years later he exhibited a "pair of skates contrived to run on wheels" at a museum in London and also gave public exhibition of his prowess in skating over a smooth floor, playing a violin the while. It appears, however, that his demonstrations were on occasions rather more exciting than successful, for "he used to fall about and smash into mirrors and pictures which covered the walls of the room."

Combination of Leading Nations Could Prevent War by Force

By President A. LAWRENCE LOWELL of Harvard University

IF a combination of nations would prevent the horrors of war, can we reduce the chance of success by refusing to join it, even at some expense in maintaining an appropriate military force and at some risk to ourselves, if these be not unduly great? Both the military force and the risk would, it is believed, be decidedly less than would be entailed by a proper provision for the defense of the country if no such league existed. But that depends, of course, upon what the proposed league to enforce peace would be and what it is expected to do.

It is almost inconceivable that any nation would attack another if convinced that to do so would involve war with all the leading powers of the world. If, therefore, such a league as is proposed were formed by a sufficient NUMBER OF GREAT COUNTRIES IT IS IN THE HIGHEST DEGREE IMPROBABLE THAT THE AGREEMENT TO TAKE UP ARMS WOULD EVER NEED TO BE PUT INTO EXECUTION, for, although there may be issues on which a nation would rather perish than yield, there are none on which it would not prefer a public hearing before fighting its adversary to fighting a whole array of powerful states without such a hearing.

Most plans for the maintenance of peace among nations start with the idea of compelling the arbitration of disputes.

THIS ONE STARTS FROM A DIFFERENT STANDPOINT, THAT OF PREVENTING SUDDEN WAR BY FORCE. IT IS THE METHOD PURSUED IN THE CASE OF INDIVIDUALS WITHIN A COMMUNITY.

"WAR WIDOWS" SAVING MONEY

They Do It by "Pooling" Their Homes and Families---An Idea of Some Originality.

(By United Press)

London—"Pooling" homes is being resorted to by many women whose husbands have gone to the war front, as a means of living with some degree of comfort despite the general heavy reduction in incomes.

More and more of it is likely as fresh groups of married men are called to the colors.

A sample instance the details of which have been published illustrates the system.

The combination was affected by three sisters, all Londoners.

Of the trio, two had two children each; the third, three.

Their husbands' incomes had amounted to about $50 weekly, each.

Their war allowances were about $10 weekly to each of the mothers with with two children; a trifle more to the one with three.

On $10 weekly each, it was obvious that these three households, maintained separately, would have to give up everything but the barest necessaries of life.

Instead of doing this, they "pooled" resources, moved into the country, where living is considerably cheaper than in London and are living comfortably, though economically, the combined family being rather large on their $30 weekly.

Advocates of the "pooling" system suggest that, as in this case, combinations be formed by groups of relatives or old friends, for the purpose of reducing the possibilities of internal friction.

It is agreed that the exercise of a good deal of tact and self-control are called for, in any event, but these have been developed to a remarkable extent in England by the war.

In some groups, of which most consist of two or three families, the work has been systematically divided, one woman acting as nurse, another caring for the housekeeping and a third in a number of cases, swelling the joint income by outside work.

A good many women with large houses, which they could not keep up alone in the breadwinner's absence, are taking in the wives and children of other soldiers.

The "pool" affected in this way preserves at least one establishment and saves several other families from the dreariness of cheap hotels or boarding houses.

The experiment is proving so great an economy that some authorities on domestic science believe it will continue to a considerable extent, in a more or less modified form, even after the war.

YOUTHFUL ELOPERS FOUND IN SYRACUSE

Guy M. Pooler, sixteen, and Jennie McCullough, twelve, of Rodman, N. Y., in the custody of their parents, passed through Oswego to-day, on their way back to their respective parental roofs.

The youthful pair fled from their home town Thursday night and drove all night through the rain to Pulaski, a distance of about thirty miles. From Pulaski they took the train to Oswego, thence to Syracuse.

By the time they arrived in the Salt City the authorities had been notified and a reception committee of one member, Detective Pasquale Bennett, awaited them at the New York Central depot. Bennett escorted his charges to the Juvenile Detention home, where two tickets to Buffalo, which the youth had in his pockets were extracted. They were held there until the arrival of friends and relatives from their native town and to-day they started homeward.

PLEASE DON'T USE WIRE ON PARCEL POST PACKAGES

Washington—The post office department has issued a ruling that all parcels for mailing in parcel post will be rejected in the future if the address tag is attached by wire.

The wire, the department says cuts the hands of the clerks and carriers and also injures other packages with which they come in contact. All address and name tags must be fastened with string.

CHANGE OF TIME.

The New York, Ontario & Western Railway Summer Schedule becomes effective Sunday, June 25th. Important changes.—Adv.

NO FAR WESTERN SHELL AT POUGHKEEPSIE TODAY

Poughkeepsie—The shadow of no far western shell rests upon the historic Highland course here to-day as the Penn, Cornell, Syracuse and Columbia eights make ready the battle of oars in the famous Poughkeepsie regatta.

These eastern eights breathe more easily with the knowledge that Leland Stanford, the hooted at and derided that last year so nearly captured the victory, cannot be here.

They certainly were scared of little old L—S, the crew that had to travel miles and miles overland to get to water to train. They laughed at Stanford last year—before the race. They called the crew a bunch of dubs; said they splashed and sozzled pitifully; that they didn't have a chance.

Maybe Stanford did splash and sozzle; perhaps the dub indictment was true; and maybe all the other unkind things the easterners said were so, but lawsymy-laws, how that Stanford bunch could PULL!

True, Leland was nosed out at the finish and the oarsmen had to sell their shell to get back to the Golden west, but just the same, the easterners do not overly regret their absence this year. The Californians lost the race to Cornell by only 20 feet.

The strenuous training of the last two weeks has not resulted in any rash predictions as to the outcome of the varsity four mile race which the great crowd of marine fans here is patiently awaiting.

If the favorites are to be picked by their past performances this season it would appear that they are Cornell and Syracuse. Then too, important changes have been made in both boats and also those of Columbia and Penn, and must be figured accordingly.

The Syracuse varsity has not been beaten this season. Members of the crew are highly optimistic. Syracuse has not won the intercollegiate title here since 1913 and since 1900 has been victorious only three times, while in the same period Cornell carried off the honors eleven times.

Cornell's complicated history this season does not give the dopesters any ironclad reason to pick the Ithacans a winner, but shows that they can be expected to stage a spectacular and eventful race.

The Cornell crew threw a jolt into Princeton several weeks ago on Lake Cayuga when it defeated the Tigers who earlier in the season won from Harvard. This race, in which Yale rowed too, upset all the dope by reason of the fact Cornell, before the race with Princeton, was beaten by Harvard.

Columbia is an unknown quantity. Since Princeton defeated the New Yorkers at Philadelphia, Coach Rice has made wholesale changes during the stiff training here. The Penn crew also has been put through the pace. Coach Wright toiled tirelessly to whip the often defeated Quakers into shape to avoid criticism of his methods.

The two-mile races between the four junior-varsity and freshman eights is also being awaited. In both events fur is expected to fly with the critics more or less silent as to the results. Last year Cornell won the junior varsity race and Syracuse the freshman.

SOCIALISTS AND THE PLATFORM

(By United Press)

Chicago—An anti-militarism plank was drafted into the platform of the Socialist party at the meeting of the national executive committee here today. The meeting was attended by members of both the old and recently elected committees.

Practically the same platform was adopted in 1912, with the anti-militarism plank added, was adopted by the committee. It will be submitted at once to the 6,000 local branches of the party for a referendum vote.

In submitting the anti-militarism plank James H. Maurer, of Reading, Pa., said:

"The Socialist party of America reaffirms its unalterable position against war. More than a year ago this position was taken.

"In the present crisis it sees no reason for doing anything that might plunge our country into the ruin which is only too evident in the European nations.

"Had President Wilson warned Americans to keep off vessels of belligerents as Sweden had done and as England had done during the Japanese-Russo war the crisis in our international relations would never have arisen."

Messages were received from Allen Louis Benson, of Yonkers, N. Y., the party's candidate for president and from the vice presidential nominee, George R. Kirpatrick, of Newark, N. J. They were nominated by a referendum vote the later part of March. Both endorsed an anti-militarism platform.

Among those who attended the meeting today were: Victor L. Berger, of Milwaukee; Morris Hillquit, of New York; Walter Lanferiek, Adolph Germer, Mount Olive, Ill.; G. H. Goebel, of Newark, N. J.; Emil Seidel, of Milkaukee; Arthur Le Seuer, of Fort Scott, Kansas, and James M. Maurer.

EXCURSION SEASON OPEN ON GREAT LAKES

All indications point to a banner year for pleasure and tourist travel on the Great Lakes. Even now the travel is unprecedented, and the C. & B. Line has taken quick action to care for the increased patronage by placing the Great Ship "Seeandbee" on the route between Cleveland and Buffalo much earlier than in previous years.

The Great Ship "Seeandbee" is the largest and most costly passenger steamer on inland waters of the world and, with her sister ships, the "City of Erie" and "City of Buffalo," provides daily service that is high classed in all features. Steamers leave either city every evening at 9:00 and arrive at destination 7:30 the next morning (all Eastern time).

Railroad tickets reading between Cleveland and Buffalo are accepted for transportation on all C. & B. line steamers, thus giving the traveler opportunity to break the monotony of his rail journey by a refreshing night's trip across Lake Erie on a veritable floating hotel.

The fares for this lake trip are considerably less than by rail.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

Thomas Edison is not to be numbered with those who believe that where women vote "things are just the same as where men alone do the voting."

One of the social events of the recent Biennial was a reception given the delegates by Mrs. Edison at which her famous husband made a speech. In it he declared that votes for women was the next reform in sight and that evidence from equal suffrage states proved that with the vote women got more justice under the law; that working women got more protection; and that moral reform got a substantial boost.

* * *

It was a girl who stood at the head of the thousand students graduated in May at the University of California. The San Francisco Call was moved to comment: "How many years ago was it that it was considered rather disgraceful for a woman to know how to read and write?"

* * *

Speaking of the Biennial, Alice Stone Blackwell fails not to note in the editorial column of the Woman's Journal that the loss in membership which was predicted, when two years ago the Federation endorsed woman suffrage, has proved to be instead a gain of over a million and a half.

Homemade Goods on Display Today

The Chamber of Commerce "Made in Fulton Display Week," started off with enthusiasm to-day, and in practically ever window in the business district, "Made in Fulton" goods are on display.

One of the most striking exhibits is that of the American Woolen Co., which occupies both windows of the McKinstry store. The exhibit describes the progress of wool in manufacture from the time it is clipped from the sheep to the woven cloth, which is manufactured in the large mills of the company here. John W. Stevenson, Fulton agent of the company, was busy early this morning with a force of the company employes, arranging the display.

The complete list of displays follows: The first named that of the merchant, and the second, the manufacturer: A. M. Druse, Hunter Arms; People's Hardware, Dutcher Machine Works; Victor Lewis, Boland Brothers cigars; Endicott Johnson, Foster-Chatillon Knife Works; Beckwith Shoe Store, C. M. Allen Co.; The Burritt Store, John Bort; M. Katz Co., Victoria Paper Co.; W. A. Butts, Dilts Machine Works; Kellar and Wilson, E. A. Black; Setz-McCormick, Aluminum Works display; D. L. Home Week Draws More Attention

The reception committee for Old Home Week met at the office of the Chamber of Commerce, this morning. Mayor Victor C. Lewis presided and every member of the committee was present. Definite plans for the reception and welcome of the visitors who will come here during the celebration were made, and in all respects the meeting was a most enthusiastic and productive one. It is evident now that there will be sincere co-operation on the part of every business man and citizen in making this event an extraordinary success.

The concession committee will meet today and bids for the various concessions will be received and the concession privileges awarded. Representatives of several carnival companies will be present to submit propositions to the committee, and there are many Fultonians who intend to operate concessions during the celebration.

The official program of the celebration will be in charge of Edmond J. LaPorte, and the souvenir booklet now being compiled will not only contain the complete program of Old Home Week, but also a section devoted to photographs and short sketches of prominent business men, pictures of the city, and a list of visitors who will come to this city for the celebration.

CELEBRATION MAY OPEN WITH SYMPHONY CONCERT

In response to a great public demand for a concert during the Old Home Week celebration, the business committee of the Fulton Symphony orchestra is now considering plans for a concert to be held Sunday afternoon, July 2, either at the Quirk Theatre or Fulton Tabernacle.

After the committee made announcement last week of a concert during the celebration, it was found that several members of the organization who also play in the Elks' band would have no time for other activities, and the committee decided that no concert would be held.

Fulton music-lovers were not satisfied with this decision, however, and the committee was besieged by interested people who wanted a concert some time during the celebration. The band, it is understood, has not yet accepted any engagement for Sunday, July 2, and the committee is now endeavoring to arrange a concert for that date. The program will probably consist of a number of sacred selections and solos by local artists.

Berlin Admits Gains By Russian Offensive

(By United Press)

Berlin, by way of London—Admission that the Russians in their offensive opposite the railroad center of Kovil are making progress is made in the official statement at the War Office to-day. The statement declares that General Linsingen's forces defending this portion of the line have only partly repulsed the Russian attack.

EL PASO ANTICIPATES EARLY MEXICAN ATTACK

(By United Press)

El Paso, Texas—The border scented war to-day, and preparations were taken to repel an attack on El Paso in the event war is declared between Mexico and the United States.

A Carranza move to cut off the retreat of part of the American expeditionary forces was reported. Every available motor truck is in service along 280 miles of the American line south of Columbus, N. M., rushing rifles, amunition and food supplies to Gen. Pershing's army of 15,000 well-seasoned men.

TAKES CLOWN CROWN FROM ALTROCK AND SCHAFFER

(By United Press)

New York—Nick Altrock and Germany Schaffer, comedy kingpins of the coaching box, have kissed their crowns good bye.

Carl Sawyer, a young man from Des Moines, Iowa, now warming the Senators bench and waiting for a chance to horn in at second base, has copped their glory.

Sawyer rambled onto the third base line in the opening game at the Polo Grounds and in a minute was the new pet of 20,000 fans.

He literally held up the game for a time because Caldwell, the big Yankee pitcher could not work from laughing at his antics.

And when Tom Connolly, umpire, told him to cut it out, he turned his back and told Tom more things by wiggling his shoulders than Jawn Evers could say in a week.

Sawyer performs somersaults that presage a broken neck but always comes up smiling.

He sends his head back and forth as if his neck were rubber.

He can imitate a horse to perfection and when he attaches long slips of paper to his ear and turns his horse to a mule the game stops.

Sawyer will stick whether he plays second or not.

13th First State Regiment Under Officers' Orders

(By United Press)

Albany—The men of the 13th Regiment of the National Guard of the state are under orders to assemble at once at the local armory, the preliminary step of mobilizing the state militia.

The orders were issued early today following the receipt by Governor Whitman of President Wilson's call for the National Guard. While it was said at the official headquarters of the National guard that the Federal call was for only nine regiments the orders issued by the State officials is for thirteen regiments, embracing all of the National Guard except the coast artillery.

It was said that the men will remain at their local armories for several days. The reason for this was said to be for two objects: first, the adjustment of the business affairs of the militiamen and the stimulation of enlistment, which will follow the assembling of the companies at the armories.

New York—The Railroads of the country are ready for the greatest preparedness test in history of moving the militia of the country to the Mexican border. Railroad officials united in declaring this morning that as fast as the Administration orders state troops moved they will be ready to transport them.

San Antonia, Texas—General Funston stated this afternoon that the National Guard being mobilized in its respective states will be sent to the border only when he calls for the various state detachments. He adds that it will probably be some time before the troops will reach the border.

GUARDS CAN'T BE SENT ON FOREIGN DUTY NOW

Washington—Secretary of War Baker took steps to-day to make the National Guard of the states available for military duty in Mexico. The secretary through Gen. Prowder sent a copy of the special resolution to Chairman Hay of the House Committee on Military Affairs, which if acted favorably upon by Congress would make effective at once that section of the National Guard law which gives the War Department authority to order the militia into foreign territory.

New York—The veil of absolute censorship has been drawn tightly over the mobilization of the National guard. This was in accordance with the Major General O'Ryan's edict to-day.

FUNSTON TO DIRECT ALL MOVEMENTS OF MILITIA

Washington—What state troops will be the first to move south had not been decided early this afternoon. Secretary Baker said such movements will be announced as soon as they are determined upon. This question is being left solely to General Funston and General Mills of the militia division.

New York Sun:

The new president of China, Li Yuan-Hung, who was yesterday installed in office, accepts the burdens of years of misgovernment. None of the serious problems which this great weight imposes upon the chief executive of the republic were solved by his predecessor; thier solution was merely deferred.

Li Yuan-Hung stands in good favor with the revolutionary party of the South, and the new administration starts with a fair prospect of ending the revolt. But composing this difficulty does not remove all China's troubles. A stable government must be established to secure peace and quietude within the country and respect from foreign nations, and an army and navy must be maintained and equipped. To obtain funds for these reforms an exhausted treasury must be replenished.

There seems no doubt of Li Yuan-Hung's patriotism or honesty. But there may be of his capacity. While he is said to be an opponent of monarchy, it is also true that his early identification with the revolutionary party was largely the result of a mutiny among troops that he commanded. His selection as vice president was, too, largely an accident. The favor in which he is held in the South was not of his choosing, for when he was named by the revolutionaries as their choice for president he found himself seriously embarrassed and hastened to make disavowals. He has had little or no experience with the western world or foreign nations. His life has been spent more in the army than in civil affairs. His one civil position was the vice presidency, and the vice president in China has had less to do than a vice president in this country.

The United States is keenly alive to conditions in China and will follow Li Yuan-Hung's course with much interest. In spite of his handicaps he may prove the right man. Reforming China is a man's job, a job for a big man.

Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press:

These days father mines for gold in his spare moments. The scene of operations is the back yard; his tools are hoe and shovel instead of dredge or blasting powder. The gold he seeks is neither the fool's gold, nor yet that of Midas, though there be those who, like George H. Maxwell of California, claim that per invested dollar gardening will pay larger dividends than any other sort of non-professional occupation.

Father delves for the gold of health, and if there was nothing chronically wrong with his interior when he began digging surely he will find that for which he searches, the clods. Never yet did Mother Earth disappoint in that regard those who woo her with lover-like zeal. So it is a safe assumption that in direct proportion to the time father spends in the garden will his arteries soften, his blood pressure reduce, his head clear, his muscles harden, his indigestion retreat and the bronze of the outdoor worker replace the ivory complexion of the desk man. In rare cases, too, although this cannot be guaranteed, fuzz will reappear upon his bald spot.

In finding health, however, father will create certain by-products economic and aesthetic. One is beauty, the beauty of a curbed and restrained nature showing itself in shrub and flower and tree and grass, to say nothing of such rows of edibles as respond to his coaxing. As he must stand sponsor for this eye-filling arrangement, which has an unmistakable social value since it delights all who pass that way, father searches his soul before, during and after its accomplishment. For him there is the pleasure of anticipation, which the philosophers say exceeds that of realization, as he pores over seed catalogs and home-beautiful magazine departments through the long and dreary winter. Then there are the rites of seedtime and harvest, of pruning and transplanting and watering, which truly exalt him who brings to their doing an observant eye and willing hand. Who will dispute that one who loves his garden may not feel the same divine afflatus upon picking an unusually choice tomato of his own product that the poet experiences when he turns a noble phrase or the artist when he draws a line of abiding strength. Then, of course, there are the vegetables, fresh for the pot or salad, and the fruits with the dew still on them at breakfast.

Father, if you questioned him closely, would admit that gardening was not all a lark. Indeed he frequently tells mother long narratives of his day-in and day-out battles with cut-worms, Colorado beetles, and all manner of scales, blights and pestilences. Mother is well aware that this opposition from the lower orders of the animal kingdom is an essential part of gardening without which the game would lose its lure; but, being a wise woman and fond both of father and fresh vegetables, she sympathizes with him and tells him what a wonderful hand he is with plants, anyway.

Being a father, father may delegate part of the responsibility for the garden, particularly for its freedom from weeds, to the younger generation a little later on, when the younger generation is not in school and the sun is too hot for comfort. Keeping the younger generation employed is part of the philosophy of all home gardeners, whether the children like it or no. Usually they do not; however, that is all the same to father who knows ever so much more about life and living than the younger generation, although no one about the house gives him credit for that except mother who privately holds to the conclusion that his judgment is below par but publicly declares it second only to her own.

Farm and Fireside:

In many parts of the county, particularly in the vicinity of towns and cities, the stray-cat pest has come to be a serious menace to the bird population. In one locality in North Dakota, birds of 107 species have been found killed by cats. The birds killed in greatest numbers by cats were robins, song sparrows, bobwhites, ruffled grouse, cat birds, and English sparrows.

Stray cats, and even well-fed house cats, often get so expert in stalking the parent birds and finding the nests of young birds that one house cat has been known to kill and bring to the house an average of over a bird daily during the entire nesting season. From this it is easy to understand why the bird population is so small in neighborhoods where scores of cats are killing the parent birds and raiding the nests constantly throughout the breeding season. There seems to be good reason to believe that it will become necessary to have all cats licensed and constantly wear collar and tag the same as dogs, and require untagged cats to be destroyed. This may be the only way to save the birds.

Watertown Times:

Judge John W. Wescott, of New Jersey, who placed the name of Woodrow Wilson before the democratic national convention last night, must have been selected as one tried and true in the cause, who would attribute everything, sunshine, personal peace of mind and rich mines, all at the door of democracy. It must have been interesting to some of the far western delegates to hear him say: "Now bursting granaries, teeming factories, crowded railways, and overladen ships distribute wealth and comfort to uncounted millions the world over. Production outruns the means of distribution." He proceeds to declare that this prosperity is not the result of the war, but the "product of statesmanship and financial genius."

As a mater of fact, which Judge Westcott could hardly have been expected to state, the prosperity is due more to Emperor William than to Woodrow Wilson. If the German troops had not invaded Belgium and started the Great War the trade conditions in the east would be as discouraging as in many sections of the great west where there are no munition factories. Travelers returning from the west and northwest report that trade there is at a low ebb, that the prosperity of munition-making sections of the east is reflected there but little, and they want a change.

It may be true as Judge Wescott says, that the actual amount of munitions shipped would probably represent a small part of the actual trade totals, but it must be borne in mind that millions and millions have been spent in the east in erecting munition factories that have not started yet. It is also a fact that one line of manufacture stimulates many others, and that the man who makes a good day's wage in a munition factory buys articles which stimulate other factories and other lines of trade.

The democrats will not be able to force home the argument that they are responsible for the prosperity. The voters know well whence it comes.

Ithaca Journal:

A correspondent of the New York Sun who signs himself a "Reformed Censor" writes that in the Juvenile Motion Picture News published for the convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs there appeared a comment like this: "Alice in Wonderland for children, eliminate from reel one where Alice steals the tarts." And he queries in a heartfelt way, "Can you beat it?"

Maybe not, but we can equal it. There is, for instance, the protest once voiced by a super-earnest club woman of Detroit against "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" on the ground that the play idealized shiftlessness and was demoralizing.

Again about a year ago, a magazine put out a pretty front cover whose subject was a chubby youngster with partly bare legs. Next month that magazine published a protest from a subscriber, who denounced the picture as indecent and wanted to know how she could teach her child modesty with such things staring him in the face.

Here are two examples that in a small way seem to merit a niche in the hall of asininity along with the one offered by the New York writer.

Persons like those whose spirits agonize over the wickedness of Alice in stealing tarts and sought to have her iniquity hidden for fear of its effect on the rising generation, are individuals with a neurotic excess of ethical sensibility, and are interesting as pathological specimens. They are to be pitied, not censured nor scolded.

Days You'll Never Forget

WAITING FOR THE "ROLLERS" FROM THE RIVER BOAT.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

Over a score of women were elected delegates to the Democratic National Convention. Kansas, California and Washington each sent four; Wyoming and Arizona each sent one.

Helene Berg, a suffrage leader who helped get the vote for the women of Denmark, and Andrea Brockmann, a leader in the movement to organize the women tailors, have been nominated for the Danish Parliament on the Social Democrat ticket.

It is one of the items of interest that the suffragists were more successful at Chicago in getting the Republican platform to say "Votes for Women" than they were with a parrot that they tried to teach the words in order that it might add zest to the suffrage parade.

The bird learned to say "votes" but could get no further and had to be returned to the dealer. In justice to the parrot it must be remembered that the suffragists had worked sixty years with the Republicans and they probably did not carry on the education of the parrot for as many hours.

Literature Cannot Be Produced Amid the City's Turmoil

By JOHN BURROUGHS, Author and Naturalist

LIVING in the city is a discordant thing, an unnatural thing. The city is a place to which one goes to do business. It is a place where men overreach each other in the fight for money. But it is not a place in which one can live.

JOHN BURROUGHS.

Sometimes I am worried by the thought of the effect that life in the city will have on coming generations. All this grind and rush and roar of the subway and the surface cars must have some effect on the children of New Yorkers. And that effect cannot be good.

And what effect can it have on our literature? It might produce, I suppose, in the writer's mind, a sense of the necessity of haste, a passionate desire to get his effect as quickly as possible. But can it give him sharpness of intellect and keenness of aesthetic perception? I'd like to think so, but I can't.

LITERATURE MUST HAVE REPOSE, AND THERE IS NO REPOSE IN NEW YORK SO FAR AS I CAN SEE.

Use of Violence In Self Defense Is Never Justifiable

By Rev. JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, Noted Unitarian Minister

I AM a nonresistant myself, and I do not think the use of violence or of dangerous weapons in self defense is ever justifiable.

Self defense is merely the expression of brute instinct. It is a man's highest duty to think first of others instead of himself, AND HE SHOULD CHOOSE TO SUFFER INJURY HIMSELF RATHER THAN TO INFLICT IT UPON OTHERS.

The fact that a man fears he may be in danger is not an excuse for violence. If the man would control first his own fear he would control the situation. History is rich in examples of big men who have met trying situations simply by the power of the spirit. The man who is master of himself is master of all circumstances.

A man should always be willing to die for his principles. Nonresistance is not, as some have charged, a form of cowardice, but the highest form of courage. A man should die rather than hurt another.

ON THE CONTRARY, HIS HIGHEST DUTY IS TO DIE FOR A PRINCIPLE AND TO DIE FOR OTHERS.

Here and Now.

Nowhere is the sky so blue, the grass so green, the sunshine so bright, the shade so welcome, as right here, now, today. No other blue sky nor bright sunshine nor welcome shade exists for you. Other skies are bright to other men. They have been bright in the past, and so they will be again, but yours are here and now.—David Starr Jordan.

Seabury Looks Better Daily to Bull Moosers

Syracuse—Predictions that the Radical wing of the leaderless Progressive party would swing to the support of Justice Samuel M. Seabury, Democrat, if he enters the race for the gubernatorial nomination this fall is looming up as a reality when announcement was sent to Central New York leaders that the New York Progressive county committee had endorsed the judge.

Some time ago it was predicted that in case Governor Whitman was successful in his support of Justice Hughes that Progressives in the state would oppose him with all their strength. Resentment over Whitman's attitude was heard everywhere and that resentment was expressed in the vote of the New York committee.

The action of the New York committee may have a strong effect in Central New York. Horace S. Wilkinson, of Syracuse, leader of the up-state Democrats says that he will do nothing to disturb the plans of the Republican organization this year and so far as he personally is concerned it is doubtful if he will have any connection with the Seabury movement.

If expressions from various Progressives can be taken as conclusive this early in the battle, it looks as if the Moose voters will line up with Seabury against Whitman.

Political observers think, in view of Wilkinson's statement that an endorsement of the Democratic candidate for governor and lieutenant governor is possible although different action may be taken on county battles and purely local fights.

That the Progressives all over the country are badly upset and do not know which way to turn is shown by statements from different party members. There is little enthusiasm over Hughes' candidacy and still less over Wilson's. There is a feeling of resentment, however, that Roosevelt was not nominated at the G. O. P. convention and this will probably show itself in a scattering vote for the president as a rebuke to the Republicans.

The Progressives wanted Roosevelt and they find nothing to inspire them in the present situation.

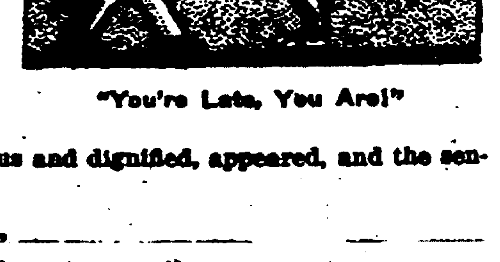
JOLTED HIS DIGNITY

HE was a "rookie" on his first sentry duty at one of the government reservations. The corporal of the guard had told him what to do when the officer of the day appeared, which by rule ought to be at about half past 9 that night. Sentry was to notify corporal when the officer had passed. At 10 o'clock no report from the sentry. The corporal wanted to know why. Much perturbed, the sentry said he was sorry. He had not seen the officer.



"You're Late, You Are!"

"Keep me posted," said the corporal sharply. "He is mighty late."

Fifteen minutes later the officer, pompous and dignified, appeared, and the sentry challenged:

"Who goes there?"

"Officer of the day."

Replied the "rookie" most earnestly:

"You're late, you are. You'll get blazes when the corporal of the guard sees you."

SUMMARY OF THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

The Republican platform promises "protection to every American citizen at home and abroad by land and sea."

"A straight and honest neutrality between all the belligerents. Insistence upon all our rights as neutrals without fear or favor."

"Aid to Mexico in restoring order. Promise to American citizens in or near Mexico adequate and absolute protection."

"Self government to the Philippines under the protection of the United States."

"A treaty with Russia forbidding discrimination against any class of American citizens, Jew or Christian."

"Thorough and complete national defense, ready for any emergency. A navy so strong and always so ready and prepared that no enemy can gain command of the sea or effect a landing on our coasts."

"Repeal of the Democratic tariff act. Adequate protection to American industry and labor. Undue exactions of monopolies or trusts to be prevented. A tariff commission of experts to ascertain the facts."

"An effective system of rural credits."

"Encouragement of shipping interests, creation of a merchant marine by payment of subsidies for actual services in carrying mails."

"Federal regulation of railroads by national authority exclusively by an amendment to the constitution if necessary."

"Regulation of great industrial corporations. Individual punishment of wrongdoers. Prosecution of offenders, but not persecution of business success."

"A national budget to secure economy."

"Extension of civil service reform."

"Vocational education, laws forbidding child labor; enactment of a generous workingmen's compensation law."

"Women's suffrage advocated 'as a measure of justice to one-half the adult people of this country.'"

The Wilson administration is denounced for destroying "our influence abroad and humiliating us in our own eyes," for mischievous and ineffectual interference in Mexico, "for the attempt to abandon the Philippines," for the Underwood tariff, which has increased imports and deprived American producers and wage earners of protection; for government ownership of a merchant marine that will "leave us more than ever in the grip of foreign syndicates" and for extravagance in creating 30,000 new offices, costing $44,000,000 annually.

The Wizard.

"It's a remarkable thing," said old Brightboy at tea time, "but I can push my saucer through the handle of my cup."

The others glanced at the small handle and gave the speaker a withering look.

"I can," persisted Brightboy.

"Do it, then," they challenged.

Calmly taking up his spoon, Brightboy passed it through the handle of the cup and then pushed the saucer with it.

"SALLY ON CAR," SALONIKI.

Tommies Adopt Various Methods to Keep Home Folks Posted.

The Rev. F. H. Gillingham, the Essex cricketer, who has been censoring soldiers' letters at the front, has been telling some of his experiences. The main object of most Tommies seems to be to let their relatives know where they are, and all sorts of schemes have been discovered. A common one at the start of the war was to place dots under certain letters which, when read together, gave information as to the writer's whereabouts, but parents soon began to receive letters with a confused jumbling of dots placed under other letters by the censor.

The story goes, however, that a censor was not wide awake enough to see through one little sentence in a letter from a member of the Mediterranean expeditionary force. It was in the form of a postscript and read, "I met Sally on the car." Whether one sees it or not depends on how he pronounces Saloniki.

HAS NEW CHINESE ALPHABET

Dr. Lam Hopes to Revolutionize His Country's Written Language.

Dr. T. F. Lam, a distinguished Chinese scholar, left San Francisco for China, where he will offer his fellow countrymen an alphabet which if adopted, he said, would revolutionize the written language of China.

After laboring for six years while occupying the chair of associate professor of oriental languages and literature in the University of London Dr. Lam has completed an alphabet of fifty-six characters. In addition to the new alphabet, Dr. Lam has devised a telegraphic code of dots and dashes to be used in connection therewith. His system, he said, had been proved practical in a test given in the Chinese schools. He was led to devise the alphabet, he said, because China's present written language was so cumbersome that it proved a handicap in a fast moving world.

The Victor.

With joyous shouts, high in the air
Our hats for him who wins are tossed,
But what of him, of honors bare,
Who strove as honestly—and lost?

E'en though his eyes with tears are dim,
All thought of him will quickly fade
Except when men refer to him
For the poor showing that he made.

And yet we sometimes must confess,
As we see men to honor rise,
Some are less worthy of success
Than he who failed to win the prize.

Because he was unfairly used
By those we thought should him befriend
And that his good name was abused
By some who to such tricks descend.

The world in this seems to delight
Nor of the means employed complains,
No matter if by wrong or right
Of one who victory attains.

But we in this may solace find,
View it from any point we choose—
It seems as if it was designed
For some to win and some to lose.

Where Ulysses Ruled.

Cephalonia, originally Cephallenia, was under the sway of Ulysses, who took his royal title, however, from the smaller island of Ithaca, which lies opposite and above it to the northeast, and under his leadership the Cephallenians went to the Trojan war. It is by far the more fertile of the two islands and has for centuries been noted for its wine and oil. Being divided into four districts, it was sometimes called Tetrapolis, while it sometimes borrowed the name of its chief city and was known as Same or Samos, being occasionally confounded (to the pain of the student, as some of us can recall) with the little island of the same name in the Aegean sea.

ABOUT THE TOWN

Mike Constantino and Pete Venezuelo, or names to that effect, two bootblacks who operate rival establishments directly opposite each other on Cayuga street clashed like the Grecian gladiators of old, Friday night, and as a result Mike now possesses what is technically termed a "shiner," while Pete owns two of the same variety. Long standing differences and ill feeling occasioned by alleged "cut-throat" competition precipitated the battle, which was witnessed by some fifty pedestrians. They say it was full of action while it lasted.

Some one has been kidding the writer of the following article. We did congratulate Mr. Bulger after his speech, but had no conversation with him before the exercises, as this article would lead a reader to think.

From the Oswego Times:

"A local attorney is telling a good one on himself as the result of the Flag Day celebration in Fulton. He was invited to speak there and was so anxious not to be late that he made a mistake and arrived an hour or so ahead of time, something unusual for him. He reached the Elks' Home, and instead of seeing an enthusiastic audience found a vast expanse of empty camp stools. He blew in and discovered two men in the building, the custodian and a person he took to be a reporter. He nailed the reporter and asked him when the speaking was to be, and found he was away ahead of time. Thinking to kid the newsgatherer a little, he asked him for a detailed account of the program. He was accommodated, the reporter telling of all the men who were going to speak and finally ending up with, "and there'll be a fellow up here from Oswego to shoot off a lot of hot air, or at least Claude Guile says he will spring a stock speech whichhe has been using for forty years, so we will not have to pay attention to him.." The Oswego speaker thanked the young man very kindly without disclosing his identity. He delivered his speech but not the stock one, and about thirteen seconds after he left the platform he was met by the reporter with profuse apologies and the request that Claude Guile never be told of the break made."

TO FULTON CITIZENS:

The Official Program of the Old Home Week Celebration is now being compiled. This souvenir booklet, bearing the endorsement of the Chamber of Commerce, will contain about 60 pages, a history of the city to date, photographs of points of interest and of prominent citizens, and a complete program of the Old Home Week activities, with names of all who participate, entry lists, etc.

YOU CAN DO YOUR PART. It is the earnest desire of the publisher to have a section devoted to the visitors who come to this city during the celebration. You may expect some friends and relatives, or know of some former resident who intends to come back. IN EITHER CASE, WRITE DOWN THE NAMES NOW, AND SEND THEM TO ME EITHER AT THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OFFICE OR AT THE FULTON EVENING TIMES. These names will be classified by cities and states, and will be printed in the booklet free of charge. Remember, send the names in now!

MOTT'S CHANCES SAID TO BE GOOD

Picked to Have An Easy Time This Fall---Other Representatives' Chances Not So Good.

Official Washington is already beginning to speculate upon the make up of the New York delegation to the Sixty-fifth Congress. Dispatches from the capital are to the effect that the Central New York men have so constructed their political fences that they will stand up under attacks at the next election without much trouble.

According to the comment Representative Luther W. Mott will have the easiest time of all in getting back. One dispatch speaking of Mr. Mott says: "Mr. Mott has served in three Congresses, first taking the oath of office March 4, 1911. He has never served in Congress, however, when his party has been in the majority. Despite this fact he has risen to one of the most powerful committees in the House, that on foreign affairs. And should the Republicans win the House in this fall's election, Mr. Mott will undoubtedly become chairman of the committee on expenditures in the War Department. He is now ranking Republican member on this committee."

The same dispatch says that representative Bertrand H. Snell, of Potsdam, will be renominated and re-elected from the Thirty-first district in northern New York. Representative Homer P. Snyder, of Little Falls expects a renomination and relection unless there is a third ticket in the field. George W. Fairchild, dean of the New York state delegation is not so sure of coming back. State Senator S. A. Jones, of Norwich, who was legislated out of office by the redistricting is after the seat from the Thirty-fourth district and will conduct a warm fight with good chances of success.

In the Thirty-fifth district Walter W. Magee, of Syracuse, will no doubt be renominated. While in the thirty-sixth Norman J. Gould, of Seneca Falls is expected to make a second race for the seat formally held by Sereno E. Payne.

The Washington experts after figuring out gains and losses throughout the state come to the conclusion that the count in the next Congress along party lines will be about the same as in the present Congress. That is they expect about 24 Republicans, 18 Democrats, and one Socialist. There will be few strange faces among the New York State men next year they predict, as compared to last year when twenty new members took their seats.

LATTER DAY SAINTS BAPTIZE IN LAKE

Unmindful of the chill breezes that swept the waters during the ceremony, three persons were baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ, Latter Day Saints, at Lake Neatawanta yesterday afternoon, while a crowd of 100 people lined the shores and looked on. A. B. Phillips, ranking Elder for this section of New York State, performed the immersion ceremonies.

The candidates and several members of the church who were present joined in the singing of several hymns before the ceremony, and then the company proceeded to the shallow waters near the south bank of the Fair grounds, where the Elder and the three candidates waded into the chilly waters.

Class of 300 Were Confirmed by Bishop

Right Rev. John J. Grimes, D. D., Bishop of the Syracuse Diocese, was the central figure in the confirmation ceremonies at the Church of the Immaculate Conception yesterday afternoon, when a class of 300, including several adults and converts, received the sacrament.

The Right Reverend Bishop was attended by his Chancellor, Rev. James McGraw, S. T. D., Rev. John McGraw, S. T. D., of Baldwinsville, Father Martin, O. M. C., of Syracuse; who sang the vesper service; Dr. Mullaney, of the Church of St. John the Baptist, Syracuse; Rev. John McLaughlin and Rev. William Liddy, of Syracuse; Rev. Edward Quade, of St. Mary's, Oswego, and Rev. Simon Pnick, of St. Stephen's, Oswego. Rev. John L. Lindsman, pastor of the Immaculate Conception church was master of ceremonies.

The bishop's throne was placed at the left of the altar in the sanctuary.

The ceremonies began with a procession of the children and adults who were to be confirmed from the basement of the church to the seats in the center aisles of the edifice which were reserved for them. The little girls presented a beautiful appearance, gowned in white and wearing long veils, while the boys wore dark suits and white carnations.

While the procession moved through the church, the choir sang, "Come Holy Ghost," under the direction of Fred Kenyon, organist.

Father Martin then intoned the vespers, which were sung by the entire choir. The boys' class was the first to be confirmed, and Peter F. Conley and Joseph T. Conners, as sponsors, took their places at the episcopal chair, which was moved to the altar. The boys marched up in a double file, and they were followed by sixty men, including several converts, who also received the sacrament.

The girls and women followed, sponsored by Mrs. William Hartnett and Mrs. Joseph T. Conners, and after the ceremony Bishop Grimes doffed his robes and addressed the congregation from the sanctuary rail. The church was crowded with people and many were obliged to stand in the vestibules, so great was the throng.

The Bishop's sermon was in the nature of a heart-to-heart talk with the children, and his kindly advice and gentle dignity made a profound impression upon all present.

The Bishop's Sermon

The Bishop's sermon in part follows:

"Dear children, of this parish, you have just received the sacrament of Confirmation. The work of your teachers, the good Sisters, and your pastor has prepared you for this great event in your lives. They have taught you to obey the laws that God has laid down for you, and this sacrament will be of great aid to you.

"The Redeemer said, 'Go, therefor, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. He that believeth what I have taught you and is baptized shall be saved.' To teach—that is the mission of your pastor and the Sisters among you, and I think they have done their work well.

"Now, dear children, the sacrament you have just received was instituted by our Lord for a special purpose. We read in the Acts of the Apostles that this sacrament was administered in the Church from the beginning, that St. Paul for example, confirmed many in the faith.

"Christ said, 'Behold I am with all day even to the consummation of the world.' We know the Apostles were mortal men, they had to die. They all passed away, martyrs to their faith, even St. John, miraculously saved from death, finally was a victim of persecution.

"But Christ did not found his Church for a short time, for just the period covering the life of the Apostles. No. His Church was to last forever, and He promised to that Church his support. No obstacles, no persecution, no opposition should impede its progress.

"Christ instituted the sacraments in order to effect the continuance of His Church. He instituted seven sacraments, each with a special object in mind—seven, in order to satisfy the seven spiritual needs of man, as He created other things to satisfy his temporal needs.

Needs of Society.

"There are seven needs of society; a man must be born, he must grow, he must be nursed in order to grow, he must have a physician to care for his bodily ills, he must have laws, his race must be propagated, and he must die. Christ instituted His sacraments to correspond with these seven needs of man.

"When we are born, we have baptism, that great sacrament that washes away original sin, and makes us children of God and heirs of Heaven. The sacrament of Confirmation helps us to grow, to grow strong in face of opposition, to have fortitude for our faith, and to become valiant Christians. The sacrament of the Holy Eucharist nourishes us, it strengthens our soul, it is the greatest source of grace that God has given us. And when our souls are sick, when we have become enemies of God by mortal sin, we have the sacrament of Penance, by which we obtain forgiveness of our sins, after due confession and sincere contrition.

"By the sacrament of Holy Orders, by which the priests, bishops and other clergy of the Church are ordained and receive the power and zeal to perform their sacred duties, the government of the Church is organized. The laws of faith and of doctrine are laid down, and this corresponds to our civic government and the laws of society, without which everything would be chaos.

"And in order that a man and woman may live together in grace and bring forth children into the world, we have that great sacrament of Matrimony. Without the grace obtained through that sacrament it is almost impossible for a man to live with a woman in peace, and it is only by that grace and the solemnity accorded the act, that the frequent disagreements and petty strife can be checked in the hearts of the man and his wife. And woe unto the people who would put an impediment in the way of those who should enjoy the grace that comes from the administration of that sacrament.

"And last of all, Christ instituted the sacrament of Extreme Unction, by which with prayer and anointing of the body, the Church prepares Her members for death, and by the great grace of this sacrament, the dying man is consoled and strengthened, resigned to the will of God.

Purpose of the Sacrament.

"So, my children, you know that this sacrament has been instituted for a special purpose and it will have its result on your soul. Whereas yesterday, we might say, you were babes, gifts from God to be cherished carefully, to-day you have become soldiers in the army of Christ, and you must bear your share of the battle, the same as any other soldier in the ranks.

"But Christ gives you an armor, to assist you in the battle of life. And what is that armor? It is increased grace to resist temptation, and the seven gifts of the Holy Ghost, wisdom, counsel, understanding, knowledge, fortitude, piety and fear of the Lord. Four of these are to strengthen our minds.

"Wisdom, the first, is given us that we may look into our souls, see what is the right path, and act in spiritual matters accordingly. Understanding is given us that we may understand the world, that we may understand that all earthly things will pass and that our goal is an eternity of happiness. Counsel, that we may weigh matters carefully, matters of the soul. Knowledge, that we may know our faith and realize what it means to us, realize the great gift that God has bestowed upon us.

"Fortitude, is given us that we may be ready to withstand any persecutions, even death itself, if necessary for our faith. Our forefathers were rich in fortitude and they gave up their lives willingly rather than renounce their holy faith. By fortitude I do not mean so much the physical brute courage that is eager for battle, I mean the spirit that enables us to undergo all adversity, whilst our souls are filled with love for those who persecute us.

"We are given piety and love, not only for God, but for our parents. Never let your little hearts grow cold children, toward your parents. Little girls, never turn from your mothers in anger, for she is the only friend you have and when all others have gone she will remain by your side. And, boys, while your fathers are of sterner mold, and do not demand the affection that your mothers do, obey them.

"Never lie, learn to hate the liar, cultivate honesty for even though the slogan in this age seems to be 'get what you can no matter how you get it,' be assured that such principles are of God. Let it be said that whatever you get, you get it honestly.

"For your character now, for as you are to-day so shall you be later on in life. And if you are aware now that you are contracting any bad habits, fight them fiercely, for you may be satisfied that they will ship-wreck you later on in life if you do not."

FATHER LINDSMAN TO HAVE NEW ASSISTANT

As a result of the coming of four more priests into the Diocese of Syracuse, Fulton will receive an additional priest as an assistant to the Rev. John Lindsmann. The change occurs July 1, but Father Lindsmann does not know the name of the appointee.

Several changes will be made at Syracuse, one in Utica while the Rev. Charles McEvoy, Syracuse, will be relieved of his duties at St. Anthony, of Padua and devote all of his time to the office of superintendent of schools of the diocese.

The three new priests, Father Gerald F. Dunn; Father Clement F. O'Shaughnessey and Father John Powers, have just been ordained at St. Bernard's, Rochester, while the Rev. Francis Brennan was ordained at St. Bonaventure's, Buffalo.

HEAVY ASSESSMENT LEVIED ON RAILROAD

(By United Press)

Minneapolis, Minn.—Negotiations between the opposing factions to-day may bring adoption of the proposed arrangement for re-organizing and refinancing the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railway company by placing a $20 assessment on each share of stock.

It is understood that if the other scheme to avoid the levy fails the opposition then will agree to the original arrangement. Although five meetings were held, some time ago, the organization scheme was not put to a final vote, despite reports that proponents of the arrangement controlled seventy-five per cent. of the proxies.

At the final meeting B. F. Spellman, of New York, representing the opposition, said he had a new reorganization proposition which would eliminate the assessement feature of the original one. He added that the $350,000 underwriters' fees could be saved, and that the company would go direct to its stockholders for the money needed."

After the meeting counsel for the railroad issued a statement saying that "the adjournment was to see if Mr. Spellman's clients can formulate a plan for raising the necessary $4,500,000 for reorganizing and refinancing the railroad which will be mutually satisfactory to all parties concerned.

To Address the President.

The address of the president is simply "The President of the United States." In the First congress there was debate over a title, and it was proposed by several members that he be addressed as "His Excellency" and by others as "His Highness," but a committee reported that it is not proper to annex any style or letter other than that given in the constitution.

In the constitutional convention the first report fixed the term of office at seven years without eligibility to re-election. In debate various periods from [illegible] to twenty year were [illegible]. The result of four year was [illegible] and ratified by the constitution.

MAYO COMMANDS ATLANTIC FLEET

(By United Press)

Washington—When Vice Admiral H. T. Mayo succeeds Admiral Frank F. Fletcher in command of the Atlantic Fleet to-day, he will be advanced to the rank of Admiral.

Rear Admiral De Witt Coffman, commanding the sixth division fleet, will be advanced to the grade of Vice Admiral, succeeding Admiral Mayo.

Admiral Fletcher will automatically become a Rear Admiral. He will receive an important shore detail.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels announced these changes after a conference with President Wilson. The Secretary also conferred personally this week with Admirals Fletcher and Mayo.

"When relieved of the command to-day," said Secretary Daniels, "Admiral Fletcher will have served a little longer than fleet commanders usually serve. He is a splendid officer, and has accomplished much with the fleet. He has completed his tour of duty as commanding officer of the fleet, and there is no other reason for the change.

"Admiral Mayo is an officer of great ability, and has rendered splendid service," said Mr. Daniels. "He has the confidence of the officers and men in the entire fleet."

Admiral Mayo is the man who precipitated the trouble with Huerta which resulted in the occupation of Vera Cruz by American forces. The Admiral insisted that Huerta salute the American flag because of the arrest of American marines at Tampico when they went ashore to get mail. Later marines were landed at Vera Cruz, and Admiral Fletcher was in command of that movement.

In service circles unanimous praise was given today to Mr. Daniel's selection of Vice Admiral Mayo for the most coveted of posts. There is a particular feeling of satisfaction at the appointment because of the fear that Vice Admiral Mayo's part in the Tampico affair during the critical days of the struggle with Huerta had placed the officer's star under a cloud.

But Admiral Fletcher proved a strong friend of Vice Admiral Mayo, and when the Atlantic Fleet was organized, with Admiral Fletcher in command, Rear Admiral Mayo received command of the battleship squadron of the first division, with the rank of vice admiral.

Vice Admiral Mayo comes to fleet command at the age of fifty-six, retiring in December, 1918. His recent duties have been as commandant of the Mare Island Navy Yard, aid for personnel, and division commander in the Atlantic fleet.

EMPIRE UNITED'S NEW STOCK ISSUE

Reorganization This Week on Better Basis, It is Claimed, Than Existing Arrangement.

Syracuse—Important developments are due this week in the re-organization plans of the Empire United Railways, Inc., now under way by Ford, Bacon and Davis, of New York.

In a general way it is known that the reorganization calls for a reorganization on a two for one basis. This means that the new issue of first mortgage bonds is only to be large enough to require interest to one-half the amount of the earnings of the road. In addition there will be two classes of preferred stock issued on the same basis, and common stock.

Interest in the Ford, Bacon and Davis scheme centers around the amount of money this firm or the Philadelphia bankers they have interested will put into the road. This figure has not been made public.

The bondholders' protective committee for the Rochester, Syracuse and Eastern, and the Syracuse, Lake Shore and Northern bondholders are anxious to get an amount that will nearly equal their holdings. The readjustment committee is interested in protecting the junior security holders, holders of Empire United bonds, the guarantors of Empire United notes and the other creditors. If the readjustment committee is satisfied with the scheme it will then go before the two protective committees. If they are not satisfied conferences will be held in New York city with the Ford, Bacon and Davis people.

MINISTERS DIVIDED OVER SUNDAY PICTURE SHOWS

Syracuse—A merry row is developing among the Syracuse clergymen of all denominations over the question of closing motion picture shows on the Sabbath.

This is a question that has caused no end of trouble and litigation in Auburn, Oswego, Fulton, Geneva, and many other Central New York towns with varied success.

The Syracuse ministers are about evenly divided on the question. Several leading pastors have come out strongly in favor of shutting them up tight, while others equally prominent ones favor a "hands off" policy. Among the latter is the Rev. Frederick W. Betts, pastor of a large church and chairman of the Moral Survey Committee, which two years ago cleaned up the "red light" district.

Advocates of a closed up Sunday appealed to the Central New York Civic League in an effort to enlist its aid in the movement, but so far nothing has come of it.

The whole matter is to be threshed out at the Ministerial Association meeting tomorrow and a lively session is expected.

MERRY POLITICAL ROW IN MINNESOTA TO-DAY

(By United Press)

St. Paul, Minn.—Minnesota's state primary today concluded a lively fight. It was a state affair, with congressional seats in the offing.

Governor J. A. A. Burnquist, who is filling out the unexpired term of W. S. Hammond, deceased, is the Republican candidate for renomination who probably will get his name on the ballot at the election.

S. G. Iverson, former state auditor, is opposing Burnquist

F. B. Kellogg, who gained national fame as a trust buster; Senator M. E. Clapp, A. C. Eberhart, former governor and Congressman C. A. Lindbergh are after Clapp's toga. Their fight has been a merry one, not entirely free from mud. Linberg got a lot of Scandinavian and Progressive votes to-day.

In the democratic gubernatorial fray, a three cornered fight has aroused much interest.

S. D. Works, C. M. King and T. P. Dwyer were the candidates. Works has been identified with the reactionary democrats in the state legislature. Dwyer, a Minneapolis boiler maker, polled a large labor vote. King is a good roads advocate.

Dan Lawler, democratic candidate for United States Senator, was the only Fred Lynch faction democrat in the field. He was opposed by A. J. Davis of Minneapolis.

Socialists and prohibition tickets were not filed.

BOLD CAR THIEVES

Tricks of the Clever Crooks That Steal Automobiles.

DARING IN THEIR METHODS.

One of Their Pet Schemes Is to Disguise Themselves as Repairers and Openly Tow the Car Away—Ordinary Safeguards Are a Joke to Them.

The man who steals an automobile is one of the cleverest mechanicians in the country. He knows every make of car from the steering wheel to the tires, and there is scarcely any precaution taken by the owner of the car to safeguard his property that the automobile thief cannot beat.

Some car owners fondly imagine that when they chain the wheel of their car with a fairly thick steel chain they have made it impossible for any crook to move the auto from its anchorage. The simplicity of this safeguard must cause hilarity among the motorcar crooks, for the ordinary steel chain can be cut in a second with the appliances that the motor thieves carry in their outfit.

But most car owners consider they have made the car immovable by merely locking the switch box. It will interest them to know that the car thieves can beat this precaution very easily. The clever mechanician who makes a business of stealing cars can cross wires so as to cause ignition and move the engine without bothering with the switch box at all. A method that is kindergarten to the car thief is to connect wires from the dry cell battery direct to the ignition coil, thus starting the motor without difficulty.

Some cars have devices by which the gasoline supply can be locked, and this is regarded by some owners as placing a hopeless barrier in the way of the thief who would run off with the standing car. For how can a car be moved when the supply of gasoline is shut off? Nothing easier. The motorcar thief carries with him his own supply of gasoline in a flask. With this gasoline the automobile thief can negotiate a good run with the car by connecting his flask of gasoline direct to the carburetor. Feeding the gasoline to the carburetor through a rubber hose, the automobile thief can send the car sufficiently far to enable him to put the gasoline tank and the car in regular commission and speed where he will to safety and a sale.

But the commonest and therefore the safest trick of the automobile thief requires no expert mechanical knowledge. It simply requires nerve, which these thieves possess to an unusual degree. This trick is the old one of driving up in an auto that looks like a garage repair wagon, hitching a rope to the car that is to be stolen and towing it away. The thieves dress for the part in oil soaked overalls. When they have selected the car to be stolen, picking one that is in a side street and not likely to be under the eye of a policeman who may have been tipped to watch the car, the thieves come up to the scene in their old car, looking like the ordinary crew sent for from the garage to repair a car that is in trouble or isn't working as well as its fastidious owner would wish.

They alight from their own car and make a great pretense of examining the car that they intend to spirit away. They remove the hood and scrutinize the motor. They get out a kit of tools and tinker for awhile with some part of the machinery. If any one should happen to be watching them or looking on from a neighboring window all the men do has the appearance of natural work by honest workmen from the repair shop. Presently the men hold a consultation, pointing to some part of the motor machinery, and apparently come to the conclusion that the car cannot be started with the tools at their command. Then they hitch a rope to the car and tow it away at the end of their own car. Could anything be more simple?

How can you beat such a game as this? Carrying away part of the machinery does not prevent the thieves from towing the car away. One sure way to prevent robbery is to have the car watched. The policeman on that patrol will keep an eye on it if you are only going to make a visit to some office building and coming back in a short time. But if you keep your car in the street the entire day no one can watch it. You are simply taking a chance with the car thieves.

There are other ways of making the path of the motorcar crook as steep and difficult as possible. One motorist believes he has solved the thief problem by having a slot cut in the clutch pedal shaft. Through this he places a bar which he locks. So far his car has not been stolen. Another way is to remove the rotor. This makes it very difficult for any thief to steal the car, for he would have to carry a number of rotors to be sure of having one that would fit that particular motor. — Philadelphia North American.

Dry and Moist Air.

A cubic foot of dry air weighs more than a cubic foot of moist air at the same temperature and pressure. The addition of vapor to a cubic foot of dry air enlarges the volume of the mixture if the air is free to expand, as in the atmosphere, and as the vapor has only about two-thirds the density of dry air at the same temperature and pressure the density of the mixture is less than that of dry air.

AUCTIONING OFF A WIFE.

Last Case of a Once Rather Common Custom In England.

It was long a popular belief among the ignorant in England that if a man sold his wife at public auction such a sale had all the legality of a regular divorce. The latest case of the kind on record occurred in 1832.

John Thompson, a farmer, had been married for three years, and he and his wife agreed to separate. Thompson brought his wife into the town of Carlisle, and by the bellman announced he was about to sell her.

At midday Thompson placed his wife on a large oak chair with a rope or halter of straw about her neck. He then made this announcement: "Gentlemen, I have to offer to your notice my wife, Mary Anne Thompson, otherwise Williams, whom I mean to sell to the highest and fairest bidder. It is her wish as well as mine to part forever.

"She has been to me only a born serpent. I took her for my comfort, the good of my home. But she became my tormentor, a domestic curse, a night invasion and a daily devil.

"I speak truth from my heart when I say: 'May God deliver us from troublesome wives and frolicsome women! Avoid them as you would a mad dog, a roaring lion, a loaded pistol, cholera morbus, Mount Etna or any other pestilential thing in nature.'

"Now, I have shown you of her dark faults and failings. I will introduce the bright and sunny side of her and explain her qualifications and goodness. She can read novels and milk cows. She can laugh and weep with the same ease that you could take a glass of ale when thirsty. Indeed, gentlemen, she reminds me of what the poet says of women in general:

"Heaven gave to woman the peculiar grace
To laugh, to weep, to cheat the human race.

"She can make butter and scold the maid. She can sing Moore's melodies and plait her folds and caps. She can not make rum, gin or whisky, but she is a good judge of the quality of each from long experience in tasting them. I therefore offer her, with all her perfections and imperfections, for the sum of 50 shillings."

The woman was finally sold to one Henry Mears for the sum of 20 shillings and a Newfoundland dog. Man and wife parted in perfect good temper, Mears and the woman going one way, Thompson and the dog another.—Boston Transcript.

Most Original Club In America.

There exists in one of our great western cities a unique secret club—called by the members the "Get Out and Get On" club. It was organized years ago by ten ambitious men who looked upon themselves as not yet having won success. Membership for twelve years has been limited to fifty. The rules are what make this club different. No member may call himself a success until the club votes him one, and when the club votes any member a success, he is expelled and his place is filled by another. But before a success is expelled a dinner is given in his honor and to welcome the new member. At this dinner the success must read a paper explaining to his fellows how and why he won. These papers are preserved.—American Magazine.

Rare Violins.

The rarest violins in the world are those which were made by Guarnerius del Gesu, only about forty of them being known to exist. One of these instruments was purchased by Ysaye for $30,000. Two famous Stradivarius instruments which were used by Sarasate during his great concert tours were sold. One of these, the Boissier, is in a museum at Madrid. It is valued at $50,000. The other is in a museum in Paris. There are only twenty-nine Stradivarius 'cellos in the world. Of the 300 Stradivarius violins that were made more than 200 have been bought and sold by one dealer.—Argonaut.

Imitation Gold.

By combining ninety-four parts of copper with six parts of antimony and adding a small quantity of magnesium carbonate to increase the weight, a substitute for gold is produced. This alloy, it is said, can be drawn, worked and soldered much the same as gold, and it also takes and retains a gold polish. It can be made for about 25 cents a pound when its constituents can be bought at normal prices.—Houston Post.

Orchids.

Many plants have the power to shift their quarters. The orchid can move one step every year, and, although it takes a long time to cross the meadow, if the orchid goes on long enough it would move one step forward toward finishing that long walk every year.

Wig Wearing Very Old.

The ancient Egyptians all wore wigs, and the early Christians from A. D. 427 to A. D. 917 considered a false head covering a badge of distinction—this, too, in direct opposition to Tertullian, who in vain declared them devices and inventions of the devil.

Little Words.

Out of the 267 words in Abraham Lincoln's immortal Gettysburg speech 196 are words of only one syllable. It isn't the big words that count.—New York Herald.

The Strange Case of a Buried Soldier

By F. A. MITCHEL

Antoine Blanc, a French soldier fighting at the siege of Verdun, while engaged in a counterattack upon the Germans fell to the ground and lay motionless. The counterattack succeeded, and the French held the ground on which the fight occurred. Blanc's friend, Louis Devaure, serving in the same company, saw him fall and when the fight ceased went to him and took him up. To all appearances Blanc was dead, but Devaure could find no wound. Surgeons to whom the case was referred surmised that the man had been killed by the air pressure of a missile or, having a weak heart, had succumbed from that cause under excitement.

Devaure secured a coffin, or, rather, a box, and buried his friend near a ravine that ran through the battlefield.

That night a severe rain set in, swelling a tiny stream that ran through the ravine and overflowing its banks. In the morning Devaure visited his friend's grave and found that the flood had widened the ravine and the end of the box containing the body was exposed. Moreover, the end had been removed. This removal astonished Devaure, who, looking into the box, found it empty.

He was as much surprised at this as he had been to discover that his friend had been killed in battle without any sign of having been hit. After studying the possible causes of the absence of the body he arrived at the conclusion that the water as it receded took the body with it. But this did not account for the removal of the end of the box.

During the day several attempts were made by the Germans to recover the ground through which the ravine ran. They made a lodgment, but were not able to hold it. During the fighting Devaure was slowly retreating in the ravine, where he and his comrades were less exposed to the German fire, and while giving way before the enemy he passed the protruding end of the box from which his friend had disappeared.

What was Devaure's astonishment to see the soles of a pair of boots in the place where his dead comrade's boots should be had he remained buried!

At evening the ground contended for remained in possession of the Germans. Devaure told some of his comrades of his having failed to find Blanc's body and of his having afterward seen the soles of boots in the box during the retreat. He was laughed at for his story.

However, the contention for Blanc's burial place was not yet over. At daylight the next morning the French made another effort to possess themselves of it. In this fight Devaure was not in the ravine, but one of his friends, Pierre Larrabee, passed right under the box in question. The French were again dispossessed, and Larrabee reported that he had stood where he could see into the box, the sun lighting its interior, and it was empty.

Devaure was forced to the conclusion that his first view was correct and that in his second he must have been mistaken, though he had been as sure of seeing a pair of soles as he was of seeing the box that contained them.

A wood bordered this much fought over region, and when night fell the Germans, after shelling the wood, advanced to take it. Devaure's company was among the forces used in repelling this attack. Amid the flashing of guns, the glare of searchlights, the roaring and the shouting, the two opposing forces contended for the wood. While Devaure's company were pressing forward he saw a man rise out of the ground and turn for a moment to look at the French as if to satisfy himself whether they were friends or enemies. Then, evidently assured, he turned toward the Germans and began to fire at them with his rifle.

What was Devaure's astonishment to see in the white, haggard face of this man his friend Blanc!

Devaure was more nearly paralyzed with terror at this ghostly being than at the frightful scene about him. The ghost fell back into the ranks of the French. Devaure seized his arm, and the ghost turned.

"Louis!"

"Antoine!"

These words were spoken, though not heard by either for the din. But Devaure was assured that his friend stood with him in the flesh.

When day came and the fighting ceased Blanc recounted his remarkable adventures to his chum.

He had come to consciousness with a sense of suffocation and chilled feet, which were resting against some obstacle. With a spasmodic effort he forced this object away and felt rushing water, which soon engulfed him. Feeling that he was inclosed except at his feet, he pulled himself in that direction and struck water at or about its surface. Finding a bank, he scrambled up it and, realizing that he might be among enemies, lay still till there was light enough to see the road. Then he went there and hid.

During the next day, seeing Germans coming, he ran to the ravine and had just time to crawl again into his coffin when a fight began. Not knowing which side was near him, he remained till quiet was restored, then got back to the wood, where he dug himself in. Having possessed himself of the rifle and ammunition of a dead soldier by the way, he did some fighting from his hole on his own account.

Devaure's story was vindicated.

Little Cock and Hen Prove Too Smart For the Wily Beast With a Bushy Tail—Things of Interest to Little Folks—A Maid and Her Pet Dog.

Now, kiddies, said Uncle Ben, I'm going to tell you a story about

SLY FOX AND HIS DEFEAT.

Once upon a time Master Red Fox was walking along, searching for a dinner, for he had eaten a very scant breakfast.

Soon he spied a cock and hen scratching around in a field.

"The very thing I need," said he to himself. "They will make a fine meal for me."

So he stole along very quietly until he had almost reached the two birds.

"There's many a slip 'twixt cup and lip," says the old proverb, and just as Red Fox had put forth a paw to grasp the cock the hen chanced to see him, and, with a loud "cluck, cluck," to warn the cock, up she flew into a tree near by, closely followed by the cock.

The fox was a cunning fellow, however, and began to converse with them in very friendly terms.

"I hope you are not afraid of me, my dear?" he called up. "I feel so very friendly. I was just coming to ask you to take a walk with me; it is such a beautiful, fine day."

"You are very kind," answered the hen, and the fox was sure he heard her chuckling to herself, "but we prefer flying to walking. We have so much more of an outlook."

For a long time they sat thus until the hen became very anxious to go home, but was afraid to venture for fear of being pounced upon by the fox.

"My dear," she exclaimed at last to the cock, "please look over there by the roadside and see if that is not our master with his gun and his dogs."

"It is, indeed, my dear," answered the cock, "and they are coming straight toward us."

"Oh, indeed," said Master Red Fox. "Then must I go. It is getting late, and if I wait until the dogs come I fear I will be detained too long. They are so very agreeable."

And away trotted the fox and never stopped until he reached his den.

The cock and hen then flew down and soon sought their home in the barn.

But the fox, weary and hungry and angry, lay in his den, thinking hard.

"I wonder if the master and the hounds were coming?" he said to himself. "It would be like those saucy birds to deceive me. Never will I trust them again."

What Am I?

That I'm the center of gravity I'm sure you'll allow;
Invaluable, being first in victory, all will avow.
A capital position in Vienna I hold;
Always in voice, though out of tune, behold!
Invisible, though in the midst of a river seen.
Oh, there are three in love with me, I ween,
Although I've three associates in vice, you say.
It is vain to seek me, for let me tell you pray,
That I've been in heaven since ages have gone by,
And embalmed in the grave even now I lie.

WINE JELLY.

Directions How to Make This Delicacy For Your Dinner Dessert.

Half pint of lemon juice, one-fourth pint of sherry, one and one-fourth pints of water, one-half pound of cube sugar, one and one-half ounces of gelatin (unless in warm weather; then two ounces), whites and shells of two eggs. Peel the rind of the lemons very thin and put them in a clean saucepan which has been rinsed out with boiled water and not dried. Put in the sugar, gelatin and two-thirds of the liquid and stir gently until all are dissolved. Take the whites and shells of the eggs, the shells slightly crushed, add the rest of the liquid and whip until there is a froth on top. Then mix in with the gelatin and continue whipping until the whole froths well, but be sure to stop beating before it comes to a boil. Let it continue boiling gently for about five minutes, then leave to settle before straining. If you have not got a regular jelly bag strain through a double fold of cheesecloth, but whatever you use be sure to scald it well by pouring boiling water through before putting in the hot jelly. Empty the bowl under the jelly bag, drain well, but do not clog. Ladle the jelly into the cloth very gently, and do not do the straining in a cool place or in a draft, as it must be kept hot. If it is not quite clear at the first straining let it run through a second time.

Get Plenty of Sleep.

There is nothing so fatal to beauty as sleepless nights. Give up tea and coffee entirely. If possible, all mental work must be laid aside for a few hours before going to bed. Do not have any amusement that will excite the nerves. The things that you can do to induce sleep are many. Take plenty of brisk exercise in the open air. Before retiring take a hot foot bath. This will draw the blood away from the brain, which is a necessary condition for sleep. A cold douche on the spine is another method you can give with a bath spray. General baths should be warm. Sleeping rooms should be well ventilated and cool. Do not eat immediately before retiring. A glass of warm milk will overcome insomnia after other suggestions have failed.

Plain Loaf Sponge Cake.

Break the five eggs into a bowl; add one cupful of sugar and a pinch of salt and beat for fifteen minutes. Sift the flour and add to the eggs and sugar, folding in very lightly; do not beat after adding the flour. Line a pan nine inches square, or a brick pan, with paper, pour in the mixture and bake for forty minutes. Flavor to taste.

Delight Cake.

One cupful of sugar, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, sifted together; one tablespoonful of butter in cup, melt. Break egg in butter, fill up with milk. Flavor. Beat all well. This cake calls for only one egg. Bake in moderate oven.

SUMMER PORCHES

The Luxury of Living Outdoors In Hot Weather.

WHAT PAINT WILL DO.

Get Out Your Old Chairs, Buy Two New Wickers, Give Them a Green Coat and Then Dress Them Up In Gay Chintzes.

It seems a pity that all country homes are not built with roomy, spacious piazzas. After all, the principal reason that any one has for living in the suburbs and going through all the trouble of commuting is because he wants to live in the country. Of course six months in the year it is too cold to sit out of doors, but when spring comes the suburbanite wants to enjoy the country to the utmost. He cannot do this by sitting indoors, certainly. He wants to read his paper and smoke his pipe where he can see nature's beauties spread all out before his eyes—namely, on the porch.

Modern architects are realizing more and more the need for big porches, no matter how small the house. Of course the suburbanite who owns his own home can always add to the porches if he wishes. But the others must make the most of what they have and do the best they can to make their piazza cosy and comfortable, no matter how small it may be.

You women who live in the country will find that a can or two of paint and a bolt of pretty chintz will do much to transform your porch furniture. If you have no comfortable chairs for piazza use do buy one or two. They need not be expensive pieces, but be sure they are comfortable and have pretty lines.

The wicker or reed furniture is really the most attractive for verandas, and it is not at all expensive.

You need not worry if you have two or three pieces of one kind and a couple of pieces of another variety. After you have given them all a coat of the same paint and made chintz cushioned seats and backs for them they will look enough alike to fool any casual eye. Besides, no one expects rigid formality in porch decorations.

If your house is white or gray you will find that green porch furniture will look best. Give all the chairs, tables and settees a coat of green paint and one of green enamel paint. The chintz for green furniture should contrast with it, and a figure with a good deal of red in it will be found most effective.

It may be wisest to have a cheap upholsterer make the seat cushions and backs if you are afraid to tackle so tricky a job. Have them made with some white goods as a cover. Then you can yourself make slip covers of the chintz for them. The reason why it is better not to have the chintz put right on as the first cover of the cushions is because it may soil very quickly, being where the street dust can easily reach it. If the chintz is made into slip covers they can be removed and washed when soiled.

If your house is any other color except white or gray brown porch furniture is prettiest. So you can paint your furnishings brown and use almost any gayly colored, pretty bright chintz for cushions.

Shrimps St. Jacques.

Two cans shrimp, cut in small pieces after looking over carefully and rinsing. Fry in a tablespoonful butter with an onion chopped fine. Add a cupful milk, salt, pepper and yolk of an egg. Stir, but do not let boil. Pour into buttered dish or ramekins or shells, cover with breadcrumbs and bake until brown. Set ramekins or shells in pan with a little water. Serve with slices of lemon.

CURIOUS CORDOBA.

This Spanish Town Is So Compact It Looks Like One Building.

Cordoba is scheduled on the European itinerary as a half day stand. Those who go from Seville to Granada and those who go from Granada to Seville take Cordoba on their way. Fifteen minutes for the cathedral, five for the alcazar, an hour for luncheon and on to further discoveries—that is the Cordoba program. The hotels of Cordoba are, in consequence, unpalatial, a circumstance in itself which endears the little town to the judicious. I do not believe there is a lift in all Cordoba, and if your wife wishes for any reason to buy a new hat she must go out of the hotel for it, and then it will be three years old.

At night all the tourists are gone to Seville or Granada, and you and the Cordobans and the stars share the amenities of Cordoba's one boulevard, of which everybody is very proud, because it is much superior to anything that Paris or even Madrid can show. It was a lucky chance which caused them to build Cordoba so handily between Seville and Granada. It has provided a still little backwater for the traveler's repose, a spot where he may forget that American bars exist, eat his meals untroubled by the squeaking of a tango band and adventure himself among the mysteries of a bill of fare jelly printed in blue and illegible Spanish.

You could put your hat over Cordoba, and very little would protrude. It is the compactest little town. From the tower of the cathedral it all looks like one building. You can hardly perceive the streets, so closely do they wriggle among the houses. The roofs are yellow, brown, gray, red; the walls and their shadows every color in the world. Among the buildings the green of palms, orange trees, lemon trees, chestnuts, soothe the glare struck eye. The Guadalquivir snakes through its rich plains from the faraway flat hills (red, gray brown, yellow), and over all are the great sky of the south and the huge sun of the south, which imposes silence on the world till night shall set the guitars a-buzzing.—William Caine in Century.

CAUSE OF RHEUMATISM.

Cavities Holding Pus, It Is Claimed, Breed the Dread Ailment.

In the American Magazine is an article on rheumatism by Dr. Arthur R. Reynolds, who says:

"The cause of rheumatism is pus formed and imprisoned in some part of the body. It gets into the circulation and is carried by it to the region affected. These pus places may be in spots more or less closed up, so they are not easily drained. They may be located about the teeth, at the end of the roots of dead or diseased teeth, in the crypts of the tonsils, in some of the sequestered places in the nostrils, in the bony sinuses of the head. They may be in the bladder, the kidney, the gall ducts or other places. The pus producing spot may be as small or smaller than a pea or it may be larger. Its existence is frequently unknown to the patient, especially if it be hidden in soft tissue like the tonsil. It may even exist in the bony socket of a tooth without giving pain.

"Several different organisms produce pus, and any or all may produce rheumatism when transferred to the joints or the heart.

"The physician today seeks for the pus cavity when he meets a patient with rheumatism, and he endeavors to clean it up. Rheumatic pains have been stopped with magical promptness by simply extracting the offending tooth. It is not always easy to find the pus places in the hidden parts of the body. The X ray shadowgraph is essential in locating the trouble. It shows definitely and accurately all trouble about the roots of the teeth, and its use is therefore of the first importance in ferreting out the pus in the deep structures."

Duncan Smoked In Church.

Sir Walter Scott in his "Heart of Midlothian" refers to one Duncan of Knockdunder, an important personage, who smoked during the whole of the sermon from an iron pipe tobacco borrowed from other worshipers. We are told that at the end of the discourse he knocked the ashes out of his pipe, replaced it in his sporran, returned the tobacco pouch to its owner and joined in the prayer with decency and attention.

Domestic Strategy.

Husband—I am not ready to go out yet. Wife—But I am, and we must go immediately. Husband—But, my dear, your hat is not on straight. Wife—Dear me! Isn't it? Wait a minute till I go to my room and put it right.

Exit wife for half an hour, and her shrewd husband completes his work.

Argentina.

If the country has the same average potentiality for producing food as land similarly situated in North America or Europe, it would seem that Argentina can support 100,000,000 people easily, as only small parts of it lie outside the temperate zone.

The Point of View.

"The darkest cloud has a silver lining," remarked the optimist.

"But it is a dark cloud, just the same," insisted the pessimist.—Exchange.

Industrial Welfare Demands Machinery to End Railway Disputes

By J. T. HOLDSWORTH, Ph. D., University of Pittsburgh

OF all the industrial disputes and wage controversies in the history of this country the threatened strike of the "big four" trainmen's labor organizations stands out as the most sinister.

And yet the public, which in the event of such a strike must needs suffer untold privation and loss, seems comparatively unconcerned, certainly undismayed, at this impending industrial tragedy.

This attitude of indifference toward industrial disputes on the part of the public has been responsible for the almost total lack of machinery for the proper and prompt adjudication of such disputes, even of disputes in which the public interest is paramount. The result is that when we are confronted with the threat of a strike on such a colossal scale as is involved in the trainmen's demands WE FIND OURSELVES WHOLLY UNPREPARED TO COPE WITH THE SITUATION.

Loquacious France.

The Frenchman feels compelled to express his thoughts, to make it objective, to communicate it. Thought means little to a Frenchman unless he writes it or speaks it. We are a people who, when we have something to say, insist upon saying it. Sometimes we are accused of not even waiting until we have something to say! We are often called loquacious. Possibly we are. But I am not sure that we should resent the criticism. Athens was loquacious. But compare her winged words with the heavy laconics of Sparta and ask yourself to which of the two the world is most indebted.—Anatole Le Braz in Outlook.

Batting Averages by High School Boys Pleasing to Coach and Friends of the Players.

Rain prevented the Fulton High School-Cazenovia Academy game which was to have closed the season for the local ball tossers Saturday afternoon. Regent's examinations during this week will prevent any further contests and the season is now completed.

Averages compiled by the official high school scorer, Professor William Merrill indicate that most of the high school lads have been playing a stellar variety of ball this season. Bray leads in the batting with the colossal average of .512, which signifies that "Mike" did a little better than get a hit every other time he went to bat. A few members of the team hit just a little beter than their collar sizes, but on the whole, the work of the aggregation during the season just closed was exceptionally good.

Kraus, the local first-sacker, hung up a fielding average of .988, which is indeed a remarkable performance considering that this lad played high school ball for the first time last season, and did not win a regular position until this year. He also made a creditable showing at the bat, hitting for .300.

The averages follow:

Fielding averages: Kraus, 988; Bray, 983; O'Brien, 931; Barnes, 900; Reynolds, 875; Lewis, 823; Green, 750; Dingle, 744; Rowlee, 744; Hunter, 408; Barker (1 game), 500; Martin (2 games), 625. Team average, 882.

CYCLIST DOWNED BY SPEEDY AUTO

Rosario Pronino was riding his bicycle across the lower bridge yesterday afternoon when he heard the horn of an automobile behind him. According to his story, as he looked around a voice yelled, "Get out of the way, there," and before he could guide his wheel to a place of safety, an automobile owned and driven by George Levi, a former resident of this city, who now lives in Canastota, ran him down. Pronino was hurled headlong to the pavement almost in the path of the car, and his bicycle was swept under the wheels.

Instead of stopping to ascertain the injuries of the man, Levi, it is alleged, put on more speed and made good his escape. Pronino got the number of the car, but several witnesses recognized the driver and his name was furnished to the police, who sent word to Canastota at once to arrest Levi. It is a direct and serious violation of the law to attempt to escape detection after an accident, and unless Levi can furnish a very good excuse it is likely that he will be dealt with severely, as Pronino has engaged an attorney to press the case.

Pronino was taken to the office of Dr. A. L. Hall where his bruises were dressed and he was then removed to the hospital. The bike was a wreck.

ADOPTS TOM JOHNSON AND NEWTON D. BAKER

(By United Press)

Cleveland, Ohio—After years of search and patient waiting, Mrs. M. J. Prendergast, forty-seven, herself a twin, and mother of six children, has adopted her heart's desire, twin baby boys. The babies were orphaned by the death of their mother, a West Virginia cousin of Mrs. Prendergast.

Years ago Mrs. Prendergast began her search. There were three pairs of twins in her father's family, her grandmother had twins, and there are several other pairs on other branches of Mrs. Prendergast's family tree.

The plump youngsters have been christened Tom L. Johnson Prendergast and the smaller one, Newton D. Baker Prendergast, after Cleveland's most celebrated sons.

THIS ARGUMENT ENDED ABRUPTLY

Mr. and Mrs. Annie Lockwood, who live in Beach street, had a slight disagreement over family matters Saturday night, and as a result they will cease to be citizens of Fulton after to-day.

When Mr. Lockwood returned home Saturday night he found his wife in a jovial mood, the police say, and an argument started. It was brought out at the trial this morning that both were under the influence of liquor, and when shrill yells and screams for help brought in the neighbors and Officer Allnutt, Lockwood and his spouse were at it, hammer and tongs, with Mrs. Lockwood getting slightly the worst of the battle. Allnutt bundled them into a taxi and they were driven to headquarters, where Mrs. Lockwood exhibited two badly discolored eyes as proof of the fact that it was only a friendly argument.

Lockwood was nonchalant in court this morning, but when Judge Wilson imposed a sentence of six months in the County Jail upon both combatants, his smile faded. They were given the alternative of leaving town at once, never to return, and they promised to move to-day.

Mr. O'Hare, who was a resident of Fulton for many years, was formerly connected with the J. C. O'Brien store and has many friends in this city.

YOUNG WIDOWS, HERE IS A CHANCE FOR YOU

Cleveland Man Would Wed One and Will Provide Change For Ice Cream Sodas and the Movies.

Paterson, N. J.—"Young widows only need apply; old maids can save their postage stamps," wrote Gustave Jannell of 1427 East Thirty-second street, Cleveland, O., in a letter which John C. Bush, acting mayor of this city, recently received.

"Any young widow who wants a good home, a lively companion and a gay time, with lots of change for ice cream sodas and the movies, will find me the right husband," the letter stated. "Young widows are sweet and jolly, and I understand there are a lot of them in Paterson. Old maids give me a pain. There are too many of them in Cleveland now.

"You will do any pretty young widow a big favor by handing to her my name and address and telling her to write and send photo. I own a good home and want a wife right away."

War Aviators Have 1 Chance in 4 to Live

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, June 10 (by mail)—Now that the married men of England are drafted to the front, the cry has arisen from English homes:

"Who'll keep our life insurance paid up, while we're at the front?" The government is expected to set aside a sum to keep up the payments for married men.

* * *

London, June 10 (by mail)—Life insurance in wartime is a difficult problem for the man who wants to be insured. Also for the insurance company.

Soldiers cannot get life insurance. No company will take the risk. But the life insurance companies of England are so game that the man carrying life insurance at the time he went to the front is assured that his widow and family will receive his insurance money no matter how he may be killed.

All life insurance policies issued in the United Kingdom have always borne a clause that the companies would not pay for death caused by war. Nobody expected war; therefore nobody objected to the clause. But when the war began and the men of England marched off to the front from their desks and their offices, the directors of life insurance companies met and decided that in spite of the war clause they would pay for deaths in war on all outstanding policies, but would issue no new policies on the lives of men going to the front.

* * *

The life insurance companies have paid out for the deaths of men killed in battle a tremendous sum.

"Isn't it possible for a rich man, going to the front, to secure life insurance, if he is willing to pay enough for it?" an insurance man was asked.

"No. We've had all kinds of fancy offers, but we cannot make rates of any kind. The man who wished battlefield insurance would have to pay us much more money in premiums than we could pay his beneficiaries.

"An even bet we couldn't afford to take. He'd be betting us $100,000, say, that he would be killed and we would be betting the same amount that he would not. All the odds would be in his favor."

"Are there any special classes of soldiers whose lives are worth less than others?"

"Yes. Flying men. We figure the odds are four to one against them."

"But if a flying man was carrying life insurance before the war, would you pay for his death?"

"Yes, just as if he were an ordinary soldier. We've paid on the death of more than one man who was killed in the air."

* * *

The insurance companies, early in the war, made an attempt to prepare a policy for soldiers and officers. At first, the policy holder was asked to pay premium of $16 on every $100. The rate then went up to $18 and when the companies faced the choice of making a twenty per cent rate or stopping soldier insurance, they chose the latter course.

The insurance of civilians against war risks, however, is being developed by London insurance companies, whose actuaries are working out such questions as:

"What are the odds that any certain person will not be killed by Zeppelin bombs?

What are the odds that Germany will not succeed in sending a great flock of Zeppelins over London and killing thousands?

One company, whose experts studied the air question at great length, now bets you $5,000 against $10 that you will not be killed by any missle that falls from the sky, whether if by an enemy bomb or a piece of British bomb fired at enemy aircraft.

This same company is also willing to bet 500 to 1 that you will not be killed by an enemy invasion.

NEW AID TO POLICE

Wireless Outfit Installed at New York Headquarters.

HAS A RADIUS OF 250 MILES.

Will Supplant Old System of Wig-wagging—Special Motor Cycle Squad to Be Organized Shortly So That Messages May Be Rushed When Urgent.

New York.—A complete wireless outfit has just been installed at police headquarters. Announcement of it was recently made by H. C. Case, secretary to Police Commissioner Arthur Woods. The station has a sending radius of more than 250 miles. It was installed as an aid to the efforts Commissioner Woods is making along the lines of police preparedness.

The station has sent and received messages from Sandy Hook and from incoming and outgoing vessels and could, if necessary, communicate with the government station at Arlington, Va., near Washington.

Nearly 100 private wireless outfits scattered throughout the city have been listed by the police, and headquarters can get into communication with them at any hour of the day or night. A special motorcycle squad will be organized shortly so that in time of need messages could be borne swiftly from these private stations to any point in the city.

Sixteen men on the force, all of them formerly telegraphers, are working now under the direction of Sergeant Charles E. Pearce, himself the holder of a first grade commercial license as operator. When they receive their licenses in the wireless service they will then be used at headquarters and be ready also to go to any station where they may be wanted.

The wireless will supplant the old system of wigwagging, which was the only system of communication the police had to fall back on if the telephone and telegraph failed. By using tall buildings messages could thus be relayed in a comparatively short time to any part of the city.

Along with the preparation within the force itself the Citizens' Home Defense league has been recruited now to a strength of nearly 20,000 men. The members are organized in twenty companies of about a hundred men each and are drilled by their own officers under the direct supervision of the precinct captain. Their names are on cards kept by the captain, and they may be called out by him at any time. It is expected that they will supplement the regular police force in patrolling the city in times of danger.

Some trouble has been found to obtain suitable drill grounds for the league, vacant lots and public schools now being utilized.

NAIL IN MAN'S HEAD 50 YEARS

Works Out Through Roof of Mouth When Doctors Fail.

Dawson, Pa.—A fourpenny nail, after being nearly fifty years in the head of Fred Siebert, Jr., came out through the roof of his mouth recently. Mr. Seibert has suffered since he was seventeen years of age with constant headaches and, despite medical skill, nothing could be done for him. His headache ceased when the bit of iron emerged through the roof of his mouth.

When seventeen years old a piece of lumber fell on Seibert's head and caused an ugly wound. Later the wound healed and the head pains became frequent.

COW CHARGES ON BABY.

Philadelphia.—Mrs. Barbara Stoney went to Packingtown with her two small children. The baby was covered with a red blanket and was asleep in the carriage when an enraged cow, bellowing madly, charged.

Mrs. Stoney ran, and the cow pursued her. The mother succeeded in getting the baby out of the carriage, but was knocked against the fence and badly bruised before a crowd of men came and drove the cow away.

SPELLING IS EASY.

New York Official Dispels Idea Words Cannot Be Mastered.

URGES ORTHOGRAPHY STUDY.

Assistant Education Commissioner Says Three Months of Real Work Are All That Is Needed to Make Any Person of Ordinary Intelligence a Fairly Good Speller.

Albany, N. Y.—"Can we learn to spell?" the state department of education asks, and an essay on the subject by Charles F. Wheelock, assistant commissioner of education, is issued by the department showing that spelling may be easily learned. The state is to have a big spelling bee Sept. 12 on the state fair grounds at Syracuse.

"In almost every community there is found a considerable number of persons who are poor spellers and who are thoroughly convinced it is impossible for them ever to learn to spell," Mr. Wheelock says.

"The fact is that, while there may be now and then a person who cannot spell because of some mental defect, in the great majority of such cases persons holding the belief that they can never learn to spell are mistaken regarding their own powers. As in every other field of endeavor, the one who starts out feeling to a certainty that he is going to fail is in a fair way to have his expectations realized.

"It seems to the writer that it is time for some one to come to the defense of the poor old English language which, while it is not perfect by any means, is still not so perfectly awful and terrifying as many writers would have us believe. It is possible to paint a fearful picture by simply referring to the words supersede, exceed, etc.

"How is it possible ever to master the spelling of a language where such things are printed? When, however, we become aware of the fact that it is necessary to learn as individuals only four of these seed words, namely, supersede, exceed, proceed, succeed, and that all the others end in cede, the whole group is mastered without serious difficulty.

"Another group that is often referred to as being beyond the capacity of the ordinary intellect is that containing ie or ei, but the backbone of the difficulty in this group is easily broken by the old rhyme (or rime if you prefer):

Write I before E except after C,
Or when sounded as A,
As in neighbor and weigh.

"The boy or girl who will thoroughly master this rime and who will then learn as an individual the words that seem to have neither rime nor reason—either, seize, counterfeit, forfeit, surfeit, sleight, weir, leisure, height, heifer—will have no further trouble with the combination ie or ei. Certainly it does not require massive intellect or extraordinary effort to master this group, which is so often used as an insuperable difficulty of English spelling.

"A large proportion of the errors of the ordinary high school pupil is made up of failure to drop the final e, of failure to double the final consonant in derivatives, and of failure to note that the adjective termination is ful not full, all of which are matters that require for their mastery no special gift of intellect, but are easily within the reach of the ordinary fourteen-year-old pupil.

"The reason for the spelling of refer, referring, reference, once thoroughly understood, will make it impossible to misspell these words thereafter. It requires only ordinary intelligence to appreciate the difference between hoping and hopping. The student who has been fortunate enough to have been well taught in Latin will find real delight in accounting for the difference between such words as emigrant and immigrant, in explaining why there are only one s and two c's in desiccate, in the reason for the double letters in biennial, centennial, Mediterranean, innocent, innocuous and in accounting for special features of hundreds of other words. It is possible for a spelling lesson treated in this way to become almost as interesting as a story by Sherlock Holmes. The detective instinct finds here abundant opportunity for exercise.

"Of course it must be understood that after all the classification of words and the disposal of difficulties by groups there will still remain till and until, separate, syzygy, phthisis, catarrh, hemorrhage and many other like disagreeable complaints, which fortunately are for the most part infrequent and are to be dealt with only when necessary. A list of 200 or 300 of these terrors would include all that one would need to consider, and certainly it is not beyond the capacity of the fourteen-year-old pupil to master 200 or 300 hard words. Five words a day would make 100 words a month, so two or three months at this rate would clear them all up.

"If you have acquired the notion that the difficulties of spelling are insuperable get the notion out of your head at once. If you have been led to believe that you lack the particular brain cells in which are stored the proper arrangement of letters in words get rid of that notion too. You should enter at once on the job of convincing yourself that you can do it, and remember always that there is no royal road to knowledge. Persistent hard work is the only sure way to success in any field, and about three months of real work are all that is needed to make any person of ordinary intelligence a fairly good speller of English."

CITY'S MANUFACTURERS MAKE GREATEST DISPLAY IN HISTORY—FIRST OF ITS KIND

The purpose of the Made-In-Fulton display week exhibit by the local merchants is to acquaint the residents of this city with the products of Fulton industries, and if the large crowds who walked about the business section last night to view the various window displays is an indication of what may be expected for the rest of the week, the exhibit will certainly have accomplished its purpose. Every display in the business section was the center of interest for crowds of people last night, and naturally, while the crowds paid particular attention to the unusual industrial displays, the merchandise shown by the business houses also came in for more than ordinary attention.

Fortunately, the Chamber of Commerce will award no prizes for the displays, for it would take a discerning judge indeed to select any one window which excelled. There are a few windows, however, which occasioned unusual comments and therefore deserve special mention.

The display of Foster Bros. cutlery in the south window of the Endicott-Johnson store is one of the best displays of cutlery of the kind seen in this section of the state. A sample of almost every product of the company, from a small knife to a large cleaver, which might well serve as an executioner's axe, is shown, and several of the knives are mounted on an attractive display board.

The McKinstry store displays in both windows the product of the American Woolen Co. In the north window the raw wool, direct from the backs of the sheep, is placed at the base of the display, and above it in order, is displayed the combed wool, the yarn, bobbins of woolen thread and small bobbins from which the cloth is woven. In the south window the finished cloth is displayed and the store is offering special values in suits of Fulton made cloth. An effectual touch is added by the display of the new uniforms of the Elks' band,

City's Water Supply Endangers Health

Startling disclosures by Dr. A. L. Hall, city health officer, of unsanitary conditions in the neighborhood of springs from which the city water supply is derived, added a lot of interest to the regular meeting of the Board of Public Works at City hall last night, and as a result of the doctor's report, the Mayor, Board of Works and Health department will get into communication with the State Health Department with a view to having existing conditions remedied immediately.

Dr. Hall appeared before the Board with a list of complaints, some of them received from residents of the city, others in relation to conditions which the Health Officer deems unsanitary.

In bringing up the subject of spring contamination Dr. Hall reminded the members of the Board that similar conditions three years ago resulted in a serious epidemic here, and asked that the matter receive the serious consideration of the Board in order that the city water supply might not be subject to contamination now. According to Dr. Hall, the conditions in the neighborhood of Springs 1 and 2, are anything but sanitary, due directly to the fact that the state drainage ditch in that locality is inadequate to remove the surface water.

He suggested that the city buy the land on which Springs 3 and 4 are located and remedy certain unsanitary conditions which menace the water supply there.

Repeated requests to the State Department have had little effect, the doctor said, and some concerted and determined action on the part of the administration is necessary if the purity of the city water supply is not to be endangered.

Flooded lands and a cellar in Pratt street caused by improper drainage, were also called to the attention of the Board. Dr. Hall reported that the property owners affected stated that a drainage sewer had always carried off the surface water on the street until the erection of the new Oswego Falls company plant, and they are of the opinion that the sewer was cut during the construction of the new buildings.

Two depressions in the paving in Cayuga street, between First and Second streets, which collect refuse matter and mud were dis-

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES EXPECT TO PARADE

The committee in charge of the grand parade that will mark the opening of the Old Home Week fete in this city met yesterday and final plans for the event were discussed. Members of the committee reported that practically every fraternal organization in this city will be represented and that there will be four or five bands in line. Most of the fraternal orders have appointed special committees to arrange the marching order, and it is quite likely that something out of the ordinary will be attempted by some of the Fulton lodges.

The historical parade committee met at the office of the Chamber of Commerce this morning and the plans for the historical pageant were gone over at length. Ideas of the various members of the committee were advanced and the main features decided upon.

MINNESOTA MAY ADOPT MILITIA CONSCRIPTION

St. Paul, Minn.—Conscription may be forced upon Minnesota men capable of bearing arms, to recruit the Minnesota National guard to full war strength.

The Minnesota military code provides for enrollment of eligible arms bearers, with the taking of each census.

High military authorities today said they considered this clause sufficient ground for forcing Minnesota men to enlistment. The matter may be brought before the state supreme court for a test.

Activity in recruiting is due to the disbanding of four national guard companies and threatened disbanding of several others, due, it is said, to inefficiency and the fact that the guard is below peace strength.

Note to Carranza Refuses Demands

(By United Press)

Washington—The American government to-day threatened General Carranza with the greatest conflict of his life if he insists upon carrying out his threat. This was contained in a long note replying to his last withdrawal demands. The note is full of short arm diplomatic language, and the President positively declines to take the American forces out of Mexico. The note excoriates Carranza for his failure to co-operate with the United States and resents his brusqueness and his indication of bad faith. The defacto government is pleased to ignore this application and (to protest American rights and chases bandits), said the note, and to believe that in case of a refusal to retire their troops there is no further recourse than to defend its territory by an appeal to arms.

Bluntly the note told Carranza his government cannot recede from a settled determination to maintain the national rights and to prevent further raids across the border.

The high lights of the note were a resentment of Carranza's disagreeable tone and temper contained in his last note; charges of having gone unhampered and unpunished in attacks on Americans; repetitions of scores of instances of banditry; charges that the Carranza regime has been indifferent to atrocities and even encouraged and aided some of the leaders in the outrages; charges that Carranza did not take the proper steps to apprehend Villa and others.

TURKISH SQUADRON ATTACKS RUSSIANS

London—Four units of the Turkish fleet attacked a Russian war ship in the Black Sea off Sulina, Roumania, while the Russian ship was conveying lighters to Odessa, says the Times' Bucharest correspondent. A lively battle followed, but the combatants eventually parted without a decisive result being reached.

BETTER BABIES WEEK BEGINS IN CLEVELAND

Funston Calls for 65,000 Militiamen

(By United Press)

San Antonio—General Funston to-day wired the War Department for a number of militia regiments to report to the border at once. He declined to state the exact number required, but it is believed here to be 65,000.

The General announced today that the Quartermaster's Department at Fort Sam Houston has been ordered by the War Department to purchase 50,000 horses and mules for the National Guard regiments. The request for men was in response to the War Department's message asking General Funston how many troops he desired at once.

Troops will be dispatched from east Texas gulf ports to California. No indications were given as to what militia regiments will be called first, but it was believed that the New York and Illinois regiments would receive the initial orders.

Syracuse—No orders have been received here as to a movement of troops immediately, but the units in this city are ready to entrain at a moment's notice.

80,000 Retreating Austrians Trapped

(By United Press)

Petrograd—80,000 Austrian troops retreating from the region of Cernowitz have been cornered in Bukowina by the lightning drive of the Russian left wing. The Russians are pressing the pursuit with the utmost vigor. A large part of the Austrian forces in all probability will be cut off and surrounded. The others take the alternative of retreating through the Carpathian passes, abandoning their guns or crossing into Roumania. General Pflanzer, commanding the Austrians around Cernowitz is retreating southward in the direction of the Serech, with his beaten forces. How many Austrians escaped westward in the direction of Kuty, planning later to join Bothner's army, is not yet known.

SINALOAS GOVERNOR DECLARES WAR ON U. S.

San Diego—The governor of the state of Sinaloa has declared war on the United States, according to a radiogram to-day from Commander Arthur Kavanagh of the gunboat Annapolis now at Mazatlan. No further details of the alleged declaration of hostilities was given in the message, whicvh was directed to Admiral Winslow of the Pacific Coast fleed here.

1,200 ORGANIBATIONS OF JEWS TO ATTEND

Addresses will be delivered by Judge Hugo Pan, of the Appellate Court of Illinois; Rabbi Stephen Wise, Charles B. Strecker, Assistant United States Treasurer, of Boston; Julius I. Peyeser, of Washington; Rabbi Bernard Drachman and other prominent Jews. Nathan Straus will preside.

8he American Jewish Congress reports that its plans are nearing completion. Already committees have been organized in ninety cities and twenty-eight states. In greater New York 1,200 societies have applied for representation. Everything indicates that this will be one of the biggest Jewish meetings ever held in New York.

AUSTRIANS BROUGHT FROM ITALIAN FRONT

London—Among the Austrian prisoners captured in Galicia were many who recently had been fighting on the Italian front, says a Reuter despatch from Kieff. They were weary and ragged.

A portion of the Austrian forces from Czernowitz has retired westward toward Kolomea and Kuty and the remainder southward in the direction of Dornavatra, telegraphs Reuter's Petrograd correspondent. General Pflanzer's army is now isolated, he adds and must depend upon its own resources.

Kansas City Star:

A visitor in a fashionable New York hotel the other day was impressed with the types of faces she saw there. Men and women there were in large numbers who had been highly successful in ambition to obtain large wealth having attained the goal they were still dissatisfied, as the faces of many indicated.

It is a commonplace that the mere pursuit of money fails to bring happiness. But this observer began to wonder whether there was not some connection between the rather hard and dehumanized faces she saw, and the great tragedy of this modern age, the European war. Were they not both the outcome of a civilization that had gone off on the wrong road? That had made material success the measure of the world?

The war is the growth of the conflict of commercial ambitions. The desire for trade expansion or for territorial growth in order to promote trade was behind the call to arms. Fundamentally the national ambitions that caused the war are akin to the private, individual ambitions of men in this industrial civilization.

These ambitions too often have failed to take into account the finer side of life. They are all part of the machine aspect of affairs. They do not include the love, the play, the worship of men. Useful, they are, and necessary to human progress. But from the beginning man has not lived by bread alone.

"A community which makes wealth its object," writes a wise Englishman, Prof. L. P. Jacks, "is living under conditions that satisfy nobody and against which all men are, by the higher human nature born rebels. The greater the accumulation of wealth the more does the fundamental servitude on which its production is based tend to irritate and exasperate the souls of men."

It does not profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his soul. The comforts and conveniences of life do not make it worth while, nor the spirit that makes material success the chief end of existence. That spirit has its logical outcome in the clashes of industrial revolution and in world wars.

Boston Transcript:

Unitarians, at their May meeting this year, were "galvanized" again quite earnestly by some of their chosen pulpit leaders. The idea goes forth periodically that the Unitarian denomination consists of an aggregation of dry bones, which is in need of some Lazarus miracle to make it walk forth and assert itself. This year the denomination is under the stimulating and excellent influence of a form of evangelization which has, indeed, imparted new zeal to certain pastors and congregations; and in the addresses delivered at the anniversary meetings by Rev. Samuel R. Maxwell, Rev. William J. Sullivan and others, we see the influence of the idea that Unitarianism is in need of a certain emotional stimulus. We fancy, however, that in the minds of most Unitarians the purpose of the denomination is not now, and has not been, to stimulate religious or mystic emotions, but to assert by perfectly individual co-operation, based on intellectual and moral conviction, the "fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man," and to maintain in voluntary union the higher affirmations of Christianity.

There is indeed nothing at war with esoteric emotion in the Unitarian system, if we rightly estimate it. That emotion may rise to as high a level as earth or heaven can afford or suggest. And there has been a certain evangelistic or missionary ring in some of the recent denominational utterances. The great International Council in this city, on May 25, 1900, declared its intention to "open communications with those in all lands who are striving to unite pure religion and perfect liberty, and to increase fellowship and co-operation among them." To the average Unitarian, there is nothing suggestive of "dry bones" in such an earnest maintenance by preachers and congregations of a practical religion of love toward God and man. But the tradition and practice of the denomination reject an emotional basis for this thought and this potential action, and adhere quite consistently to the idea that all concurrence for a religious purpose must be based on individual conviction, calmly reached.

In fact, the Unitarian denomination is supposed to have emerged long ago from the condition in which it was in any way dependent upon a periodical shaking up of dry bones. If it does not increase on the basis which its members accept as that of "pure religion and perfect liberty," it will doubtless be entirely willing to accept diminution, remaining content at least with its own method of establishing truth, righteousness and love in the world. But as a matter of fact it does not decrease, and its influence upon the general religious thought of the time, exercised from the nucleus of its international organization, richly justifies from its point of view, the maintenance of its traditional polcy.

Rochester (N. Y.) Times:

The visit of Major Robert R. Morton, who succeeds Booker T. Washington as the head of Tuskegee Institute, to Rochester in the interests of Hampton Institute, will attract the attention of many of our citizens who are interessted in these institutions and the work they are doing among the colored people of the South. The underlying idea is to teach the young among the colored people the value of doing things in a practical way. They need to comprehend the meaning of industry, stability and reliability.

Booker T. Wishington used to say that the most eloquent speech he ever heard was delivered at a farmers' institute by and old negro who could neither read nor write. Holding up a stalk of cotton with two bolls on it, the old negro said that was the way he used to farm. But "this is the way I farm today," he added, holding up another stalk bearing 14 bolls. And it is easy to understand why Dr. Washington commended the address for its eloquence.

It is accomplishing a big thing to teach the negro to multiply his crop 700 fold. He is transformed from a shiftless, dependent and improvident being into one who can do for himself and experience the satisfaction of feeling that he is his own master and the molder of his own fortune. Happily the whites of the South have come to take this view of the colored problem, which renders its solution in the fullness of time much more probable.

New York Herald:

For the American troops now on Mexican soil there is "nowhere to go but out," and a short seven days is given for their going. This is the dictum of Venustiano Carranza, by grace of the support of the American government First Chief of the de facto government of Mexico. By way ow answer to his ultimatum, or as a result of knowledge that it is on the way, the President of the United States has issued a call for the immediate mobilization of the militia of all the States for service in strengthening the defence on the border.

Short of the act that means the beginning of war the situation seems about as bad as it could well be. And yet the American people do not want war with Mexico, nor do the Mexican people want war with the United States.

At Washington the popular pastime just now is hurling recrimination at the First Chief's head, to charge him with ingratitude and give vent to expressions of surprise at what is termed his double dealing. What excuse can there be for surprise? Every person familiar with conditions in Mexico has expected nothing else than that which has come. Some of his apologists in administration circles have sought to excuse his truculent attitude by explaining that he has no real power, that he is not a free agent. Is this not an admission that the recognition of Carranza was a mistake?

The plain truth is that the present crisis is the inevitable consequence of the misunderstanding of Mexico which has dictated American policy since March 4, 1913. This does not excuse Carranza, however. In forcing a breach with the United States he is committing a crime against Mexico. War will mean more suffering for a people long harried and preyed upon by bandits of one stripe or another, some wearing the mask of constitutionalism, the less hypocritical wearing no mask at all. And Carranza has nothing to gain. Once this country is compelled to put its shoulder to the Mexico wheel there will be a "clean up" in all directions, and one sure result will be the elimination for all time of Venustiano Carranza.

$1,500,000 COLLECTION OF DRAWINGS ARRIVE IN NEW YORK FROM PARIS

(By United Press)

New York—The famous art collection of the late M. Chabrieres Arles, of Paris and Lyons, was now the property of Duveen Brothers, who have brought it to New York and will display it in their galleries here.

The collection comprises about 250 pieces, and has a value approximating $1,500,000.

"Exercising the refined knowledge and taste of a true connoisseur", Mr. Duveen said, "this well-known collector of Lyons, who died a few years ago, gathered a unique assemblage of important French and Italian Renaissance works of the sixteenth century.

"M. Chabrieres-Arles took the greatest pride in his art possessions, and always welcomed visits af amateurs and artists to what was a veritable museum of these rare and choice objects, so that his collection became celebrated."

Many famous French artists figured in the production of the articles comprised in the collection. The Meubles and wood carvings of the sixteenth century were embellished with bas-reliefs, displaying all the purity of design of the fine period of the Renaissance.

It is in thse meubles that the collection is especially rich. They are after designs by such celebrated artists as Goujon and Ducerceau.

A feature of the Chabrieres-Arles collection is a number of tables, mostly in walnut of fawn colored patine, one of which, exhibited at the Petit Palais, has sarving of admirable workmanship.

The sculpture of walnut tables was one of the triumps of the Burgundian school. Three of them in particular are regarded as the finest specimens existing of tables executed in the style of the compositions of Du Cerceau.

Of equal importance are some cabinets and cassones, with the fawn-colored and red patins so characteristic of the period; some so brown by time as to resemble bronze. All are monuments of exquisite carving in various detail.

The collection includes a few pictures of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries; also arms in which there are some beautifully engraved swords. In addition there are interesting clocks and watches, some bronzes, and a small series of Italian faience of the sixteenth century, with some Hispanai-Mauresque dishes.

Among the smaller objects are ecclesiastical gold work, reliquaries, ivories, medals, and brass work.

Mr. Duveen said negotiations for sale of the collection had covered a rather prolonged period, owing to the circumstance that five of the seven Chabrieres-Arles heirs were in the trenches on the battle front.

Dogs and Fleas.

If your dogs are troubled with fleas a very simple way to get rid of the pests is to provide beds of fresh cedar shavings or, better, cedar excelsior in the kennels or wherever the dogs sleep. The scent is not at all unpleasant to the dogs, but is abhorrent to the fleas. When a dog's coat gets thoroughly scented not only do the fleas leave him while asleep, but they will not jump upon him when he is out during the day.

Cranberry Apple Sauce.

A French Canadian guide came into camp greatly excited. He had a handful of wild cranberries, which he exhibited with pride.

"You know the li'l' cranberrie?" he asked the assembled party. "Well, you take the li'l' cranberrie an' you put him on the fire with plenty of de sug—oh, big lot of de sug—an' you let him cook long time. Then you take him off an' let him cool. An' voila! You have a more better apple sauce than you can make out of de prune!"—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

GIVES $1,000,000 TO WAR VICTIMS

Rockefeller Foundation Sets Aside Huge Sum.

FOOD FOR THE POPULATION

Neutral Commission to Be Organized and Fund Spent in Relieving Sufferers in Poland, Servia, Montenegro and Albania—Allies and Teutons to Aid.

The Rockefeller foundation has announced that it has appropriated $1,000,000 for war relief work in Poland, Servia, Montenegro and Albania.

This gift is made, according to the announcement, as an effort to hasten an agreement between the allies and the central powers whereby adequate provision can be made for feeding the millions of noncombatants of the countries which it is intended that this donation shall aid.

In a statement which accompanies the announcement of the gift the Rockefeller foundation tells of its efforts to relieve the situation in Poland. After stating that its original scheme, whereby it agreed to guarantee the administration expenses of a neutral commission for the distribution of foodstuffs to the extent of $120,000, fell through because of the impracticability of importing the food the foundation says:

A few months ago the German government invited one of the members of the war relief commission of the Rockefeller foundation, Frederic C. Walcott, to go to Poland with a representative of the commission for relief in Belgium in order that fresh and accurate information might be obtained as to conditions of destitution and that new measures of relief might be devised. The result of this trip was that a scheme was again drawn up containing certain arrangements and guarantees whereby food might be imported into Germany from abroad, transported to Poland and distributed among the civil population under the protection, supervision and active management of a neutral commission directed by Herbert C. Hoover.

Terms of Scheme.

The terms of this scheme may be summarized as follows:

A neutral commission to be organized under the direction of Herbert C. Hoover, the head of the commission for relief in Belgium, and to carry on its operations according to the methods now obtaining in Belgium and northern France.

Germany to contribute 15,000,000 marks a month for the purchase and importation of food supplies.

Suitable guarantees to be furnished regarding the inviolability of food supplies while in transit through Germany into Poland, where the distribution is to be made through the Polish local committees under the supervision of the American representatives.

Importations of food by the neutral commission to be confined to the populations of Warsaw, Lodz, Schensochow, Vilna, Kovno, Biala and Ettap (from 3,500,000 to 4,000,000 persons in and about these cities); Germany to provide a partial ration for these populations, as well as to supply the needs of all other parts of the occupied territory.

Railroad transportation from Danzig, the port of importation, to the German-Polish frontier at half rate and thence without charge to the points of destination in Poland.

Ocean transportation of supplies to be provided by German ships flying a neutral flag and manned and controlled by neutrals.

With this tentative agreement in his possession Mr. Walcott proceeded to London and made every effort, through the good offices of Ambassador Page and in co-operation with Mr. Hoover, to commend the plan to the favorable consideration of the British government and its allies. As a result of these efforts the British government delivered to the American ambassador on May 11 a memorandum setting forth the terms and conditions upon which the blockade of German ports would be relaxed to the extent of permitting imports of relief supplies through a German port.

This memorandum stated that the consent of the British government to the proposed scheme of relief would be given only upon certain additional conditions, among which the most significant were the following:

The system of relief in Poland to be applied to the occupied territory as a whole. Any surplus of local food products in southern Poland to be employed exclusively for the provisioning of northern Poland.

The constabulary in the occupied territory not to be permitted to requisition or purchase food imported by the commission.

No food supplies to be exported from Poland unless in the case of an excess of potatoes over and above the needs of the entire occupied territory, as certified by the neutral commission.

The German and Austro-Hungarian governments to undertake as part of the present arrangement to supply and care for the populations of Servia, Albania and Montenegro.

The next step to be taken was to ascertain whether the central powers would agree to the additional conditions imposed by Great Britain on behalf of the allied governments, and negotiations to this end are now going on.

The appropriation of a million dollars by the Rockefeller foundation is made at this time in order that prompt advantage may be taken of a favorable termination of the negotiations, so that the stream of food may begin to pour into Poland with the least possible delay. At the same time under the terms proposed the effective relief of Servia and Montenegro and Albania would become possible.

HOSTESSES ROBBED AS SHE FIXES HAIR

Young Girl Is Credited With New Way of Gathering Jewels In New York.

Mount Vernon, N. Y.—A young woman who has a new method of robbery is being sought by the police of this city, New Rochelle, White Plains and Yonkers. She is a very pretty girl, about twenty years old and expensively attired.

Her method of obtaining jewels, hand bags, purses and anything else of value, which has been the same in all places, is explained by Mrs. Edgar B. Davis of 134 Eleventh avenue, Mount Vernon.

While the Davis family was at luncheon the girl called at their home and introduced herself as a friend of Fred Goodell, a cousin of Mrs. Davis, who lives in Bridgeport, and said that Goodell had sent her to Mrs. Davis to wait there until he called with an automobile and they would go for a ride.

She declined an invitation to partake of the luncheon, but asked if she could go to a bedroom to dress her hair. Mrs. Davis sent her to her own room and returned to her meal. Half an hour later it was discovered the girl had fled and that Mrs. Davis had lost $250 in jewels from her bedroom.

In each place the girl represents that she is to wait for some relative of the family who is to call for her.

HORSE IS SOLE HEIR TO $42,707 LEGACY

No Other Pets Found to Enjoy Comforts Ordered In New York Woman's Will.

New York.—The appraisal of the estate of Mrs. Edith Rogers Gellatly, who died on July 17, 1913, at 34 West Fifty-seventh street, and who was the wife of John Gellatly, an insurance broker, shows that while she left the income from stocks valued at $42,707 for the care of her horses and dogs, the only animal she owned at the time of her death was a horse at White Plains, appraised at $700.

In making the bequest Mrs. Gellatly directed that upon the death of her pets the principal of the fund and the unused income should be used by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in finding homes for animals and in preventing cruelty.

Mrs. Gellatly, who was the daughter of Columbus Rogers, disposed of an individual estate of $380,704 net, and a trust fund of $702,201, set aside for her in her father's will. She gave $1,166,271 to her husband and $80,926 to her sister, Ella A. Rogers.

HELD UP BY BEAR.

Cub Refused to Move Until Auto Went at Top Speed.

Ogdensburg, N. Y.—David Barber, a traveling salesman, was held up recently by a cub bear near Loon lake while driving from Malone to Saranac Lake. Barber thought the bear was a dog. The animal sat in the middle of the road and refused to move out of the path of the automobile.

Mr. Barber alighted from his car to see what was the matter with the animal. He approached close enough to see that it was a bear and then reversed his direction. He hastily jumped into his car and speeded up the engine, the noise of which so disturbed the bear that it ambled off into the bushes. "I wasn't afraid of the bear, but I didn't want any extended interviews with Mother Bear," said Barber.

MONEY MACHINE FAILS.

It Would Not Work After $5,000 Had Been Paid For It.

Peoria, Ill.—Isaac Deutsch and Myer Katz of West Frankfort, Ill., near here, are facing trial on a charge of operating a confidence game brought by Anton Sorchych of Depue, Ill., who claims Deutsch and Katz sold him a machine to make $20 bills, he paying them $5,000 for the outfit.

According to Sorchych, the machine was to be operated by placing a $20 bill in an aperture and turning a crank. Scores of duplicate certificates came forth. Three thousand were "made" in two weeks. Armed with a shotgun, he is said to have guarded his machine for three days after the men left. He then discovered the device would not work without more bills and brought suit.

The bees attacked her and before she could escape she was stung fatally on the face, neck and hands.

Concentration of Wealth In the Hands of Few a Menace to the Nation

By JOHN SKELTON WILLIAMS, Comptroller of the Currency

CONCENTRATION of America's growing wealth in the hands of comparatively few men is the greatest danger threatening the nation.

Bankers and financial leaders should try strenuously to help small local industries and farmers to develop their businesses.

Such a policy would increase the aggregate wealth of the nation and would promote contentment and patriotism among the people. The rapid increase in wealth of the United States is producing AN OSTENTATIOUS LEISURE CLASS WHICH IS A DANGER EVEN MORE THAN ANGERED POVERTY.

In almost exact ratio when wealth and capital increase the bitterness against wealth and capital also increases. Not Socialism, but united action among financial forces to distribute their working capital, can prevent growth of this discontent.

THE BUILDING UP OF SMALL LOCAL INDUSTRIES UNDERTAKEN BY CAPABLE AND WILLING HANDS, THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE GREAT FUNDAMENTAL AGRICULTURAL INDUSTRY, HELPING OF THE LITTLE BUSINESS MAN WHO HAS CHARACTER, ABILITY AND AMBITION, OFFERS TREMENDOUS OPPORTUNITIES NOT ONLY FOR THE INCREASE OF AN AGGREGATE WEALTH AND POWER, BUT FOR DISTRIBUTION OF THEM, SO THAT NO WORTHY MAN MAY BE HOPELESS.

Severance of Diplomatic Relations Does Not Abrogate Treaties

By FREDERIC R. COUDERT, Expert on International Law

THERE appears to be much confusion regarding the legal consequences of a severance of diplomatic relations. This is probably due to the fact that it has so often proved a prelude to war. The fact that alone it does not necessarily imply or comport hostilities is overlooked. The rupture of diplomatic relations in itself is a method by which a nation expresses its complete and absolute disapproval of the conduct of some other nation and indicates its belief that for the time being the conduct of such nation has put it outside the family of nations. TREATIES ARE NOT THEREBY ABROGATED, NOR DOES COMMERCIAL INTERCOURSE NECESSARILY CEASE.

In the early days of the republic diplomatic relations were upon two occasions suspended with France. At later times diplomatic relations have been suspended between Brazil and the United States as well as between Mexico and the United States. In none of these cases did war follow. Each situation is peculiar to itself.

When diplomatic relations are severed a nation must face the strong probability of war. National feelings are strongly aroused, animosity is engendered, the usual conduits of international intercourse cease to function, and thus there is great probability of armed conflict.

MERE SUSPENSION OF DIPLOMATIC INTERCOURSE DOES NOT SUSPEND THE FUNCTIONS OF CONSULS OR COMMERCIAL RELATIONS, WHICH, IN THEORY AT LEAST, MIGHT CONTINUE AS THERETOFORE. THE EFFECT IS PRIMARILY MORAL.

Blow of a Whale's Tail.

Ask ten persons what is the strongest animal force in the world and nine will reply that it is the blow of a lion's paw. The tenth man may express the belief, based on experience, that it is the kick of a Missouri mule.

As a matter of fact, the blow of a whale's tail is incomparably the strongest animal force. A blow delivered by a full grown whale placed at just the right distance would smash in the side of a wooden ship as though it were an eggshell.

The second strongest force is the kick of a giraffe, and this terrible kick is adequate protection to these otherwise helpless animals. The stroke of the lion's paw comes third on the list.

Proposed regulations for the protection of migratory birds, in effect Aug 16 or whenever thereafter they are approved by the president, have been issued by Secretary Houston. Hearings will be held on any complaints filed after the public has examined the regulations.

Two zones with different closed seasons are established for protection, one a breeding zone and the other a wintering zone. All states north of Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, Tennessee, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California are declared in the breeding zone and the states named and those south of them in the wintering zone.

The closed season for waterfowl, including brant, wild ducks, geese and swans, is set as Dec. 21 to Sept. 6, inclusive, in the breeding zone and Feb 1 to Oct. 14, inclusive, in the wintering zone, with exceptions in certain states.

Cousins and Economy.

"Should cousins marry?" was the subject of an animated discussion at a ladies' debating club the other night.

After a great many speakers had vigorously taken the negative side a prepossessing young lady, who was known to have crowds of cousins herself, spoke up boldly in the affirmative and threw fresh life into the discussion by declaring that she always did her best to encourage her own cousins to marry one another, as such unions were very economical.

"Economical! How, dear?" her clubmates cried in chorus.

"Well, you see," said the speaker demurely, "one wedding present does for both then."—Exchange.

How Tortoise Shell Is Worked.

The soldering of two pieces of tortoise shell together is effected by means of hot pinchers, which, while they compress, soften the opposed edge of each piece and amalgamate them into one. Even the raspings and powder produced by the file, mixed with small fragments, are put into molds and subjected to the action of boiling water and thus made into plates of the desired thickness or into various articles which appear to have been cut out of a solid block.

Jacob's Cure — When Memory Returns

UP to the age of twenty-two years, when he got married and took his wife to live on a little farm, Jacob Shaw was called a hustling young fellow. He might have gone right along hustling had not his wife spoiled him. When Jacob found that she was quite willing to get up in the morning and build the fire he permitted her to do so. When breakfast was over and she went out to milk the two cows he raised no objections.

The time came when Jacob extended her field of usefulness—that is, he permitted her to hoe in the garden, trim up the fruit trees, grease the farm wagon and even to work in the cornfield. They had told Jacob that farm work was slavery, but he had not found it so. He had plenty of time to sit around and smoke and go fishing.

Then one morning Jacob's wife astonished him by remaining in bed until 11 o'clock. The breakfast was a scant one. The cows had gone unmilked and the pigs squealing. Jacob was surprised and alarmed by her attitude, but when she finished her breakfast and sat down to read a book he thought the end of the world was near at hand. With many a grunt and sigh he did the milking and the feeding, and when dinner time came and his wife was still reading on he had to be content with bread and butter. The crisis had come.

"Molly," he finally said, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing at all, except that I will do the housework after this and you will do the outdoor work. The change would have come a year ago, but I wanted to see how long you would keep it up."

Jacob was dazed and alarmed. His pleasant vacation had come to an end. He sulked and thought during the evening and arose next morning with a bright plan in his mind.

She Took Jacob by the Ear.

"Molly," he said across the breakfast table, "I don't want to alarm you, but I feel it my duty to inform you that I am losing my memory. There have been times lately when I could not remember our names. I could not remember how many hogs we have in the pen."

"Well, it is a sad state of affairs," replied Molly, "but it need not interfere with your work. Even a man who has lost his memory can plow and plant and reap. If you are in the cornfield today and forget that you live here in this house I'll come out and lead you to it."

When he started for the fields after breakfast Jacob was trying his best to look dazed and puzzled. On reaching the corn he slipped through it and made a long half circuit and struck the highway half a mile below his house and disappeared for three weeks.

Mrs. Shaw did not spread an alarm. She attended to everything needed as if she had been a widow without a hired man. She finally read in the county paper that a stranger had entered the village of Devon and had excited a great deal of sympathy because of his affliction. He had lost his memory and could not even tell his name. Mrs. Shaw smiled grimly as she read the item, and next day she took a train for the town mentioned. She carried with her the family horsewhip.

Mr. Shaw was seated on the tavern veranda, and there were half a dozen men trying to solve the mystery of his loss of memory. It was all in vain. His whole past life was a blank to the stranger. He was shaking his head when his little woman came up the steps and began lashing him with the whip. Of course her action created great surprise, but she took Jacob by the ear and gave him three or four more cuts and explained to the men:

"He is my husband, you know. He has these spells quite often, but I hope to cure him after a time. Come, Jacob."

He walked down to the depot beside her without speaking, and while they waited for the train she said: "My name is Abical Catchhim, and we are going to a farm called Hustle. There is no loss of memory on that farm. Your name is Playedout, and this horsewhip will hereafter hang on the kitchen door."

On the train going home Jacob's memory returned to him so strongly that he could remember everything back to his babyhood, including that he had a summer's work before him, and he never lost it again.

OSWEGO COMPENSATION CASE IN DOCTORS' HANDS

Pending an examination and report by physicians Deputy Compensation Commissioner Richards will hold up his decision in the unique case of John McCarthy, of Oswego, a former employe of the National Starch Company of that city.

At a hearing before Mr. Richards in Syracuse yesterday it was brought out that while McCarthy was carrying a pile of boxes one of them fell and struck him on the head. He was interned in a hospital for three months. Later he was found on the street unconscious and since that time has had spells. For the past month he hass been in the St. Lawrence State Hospital.

McCarthy, who appeared to be all right at yesterday's hearing told the commissioner and Dr. W. F. Law, the examining physician, that he had been subject to recurring spells of unconsciousness. He said he struck his head on a post and was unconscious two hours, and again was hit by a baseball and lost consciousness for an hour. Physicians will decide whether he has been mentally disabled by being struck with the box.

MUSIC TEACHERS MEET IN SYRACUSE TODAY

Syracuse—The annual convention of the New York State Music Teacher's Association was opened in this city this morning at Crouse College with an attendance of several hundred.

The delegates were welcomed by Mayor Stone and Frederick Schlieder, president of the Association and Dean Parker of the college of Fine Arts for the University. A conference will be held at Crouse college and at four o'clock this afternoon Prof. Charles M. Courboin played at a recital.

MR. BUSINESS MAN

Will you be represented in the Old Home Week souvenir booklet and program? Practically every prominent business house in the city has engaged space in the book, and many will run photographs of their business places. A short sketch of each firm will appear in the section devoted to business men, and you should be represented.

A sollicitor will call on you this week. All advertising, cuts, etc., must be in printers' hands by Saturday night.

ABOUT THE TOWN

Charles Nettles, section foreman of the Ontario and Western R. R. Company landed a ten pound wall eyed pike from the Oswego river this morning. This is the largest pike, according to local fishing authorities, ever captured in these parts.

* * *

Alderman Robert McKay startled the Board of Public Works last night with the question, "Where can that $2,400 refunded to the city from the State Highway Maintenance Fund be used? Can it be used on any of the city streets?

None of the members of the Board were certain as to the laws governing the expenditure of the money, which has just been placed to the credit of the city, but newspaper men present volunteered the information that it could only be used in maintaining state highways within the city limits. City Attorney Hillick will be asked to give an opinion on the matter, and his decision will be made known at the next meeting.

It is evident that Alderman McKay is on the job, for he doubtless had in mind the expenditure of some of the money in improving several streets in his ward which are at present in wretched condition.

* * *

Local photographers should do a land office business during the next few days, for there are many local business men who have not posed for their photographs in years who intend to contribute their satisfied with Fulton smiles to the Old Home Week program which is now being compiled.

* * *

Secretary D. S. Hollenge announced to-day that upwards of two dozen committee meetings on the Old Home Week celebration will be held before tomorrow night. Everyone is showing enthusiasm in the project now, and although an earlier start might have been more desirable, the spirit shown by all of the committee members in the meetings thus far this week has convinced those in charge that the event will be a success worthy of the city.

* * *

A special train will bring a delegation from Philadelphia to the Old Home Week celebration here. More than 100 acceptances from former residents in the vicinity of the Quaker City have been received, and the arrangements for the special, which will effect quite a saving in expenses, are now being made. Employes of the Remington Company plant in Chester, Pa., will constitute a large portion of the delegation.

* * *

All members of St. Joseph's Council, K. of C., of this city, will meet at the Oneida street lodge rooms to-morrow morning at 8:30 o'clock. They will march in a body to the Church of the Immaculate Conception to attend the funeral services of the late John Martin, a member of the order. Every member of the council is urgently requested to be present.

COLLEGES ASK HIGHER FEES

This year's graduates of Oswego county high schools when they go to enter college this fall will discover that the high cost of living has now hit college educations, and the cost of tuition has gone up about twenty percent. in the past year. This claim is made in the annual report of the Carnegie Foundation which has just been made public.

"The tendency to increase was active about four years ago," says the report, but it was checked by the general financial disturbance of 1907. Since that time it has advanced steadily, so that the last four years represent more than half the advance of the decade."

Following the recent examples at Yale and Columbia the fee at Princeton has been raised from $160 to $175 and Harvard will go from $150 to $200. The medium tuition fee of other smaller institutions has gone up from $80 to $100 during the decade.

Restrained.

"What is a temporary injunction, pa?" asked little Richard, looking up from the newspaper he was reading.

"I'll give you a concrete example of it, my son," replied his father. "Your mother told me this evening that she didn't want me to go to the club. That is a temporary injunction."

"I see, but supposin' you go anyhow, what would that be?"

"When you have been married as long as I have, my son, you won't ask such foolish questions," said father sadly.—Pittsburgh Press.

TIME SHORT FOR MAKING RETURNS

Internal revenue officials throughout this district are working over time these days checking up payments of income taxes and other sums due the government before the last day of this month.

So far the returns in this district from the income tax, corporation tax and personal tax show an increase over last year according to reports from the main office at Syracuse. A federal rule prohibits the officials from giving out the amounts received from any special town or county.

Next week, the last one, will be a hard one for the internal revenue men all over the district as it is believed they will be swamped with payments. The checks have come in this year better than before, but with the increased number of people and corporations paying the tax this year it is believed the rush in the last few days will be as bad as ever before.

To Clean Paint Brushes.

No matter how hard a paint brush has become, it can be made as soft and clean as new, says R. A. Galliher in Farm and Home, by simply boiling in water into which has been put a little lye. A little washing powder or soap will do, but it will take longer.

The brush should be placed on end. and the boiling water should be no deeper than the length of the bristles, as the boiling suds will injure the handle. Turpentine will clean paint brushes, but not after they have become real hard.

Cow Adopts Colt.

Greenville, Pa.—J. S. Brown, a farmer near Conneaut lake, says a short time ago a mare owned by him died after giving birth to a fine colt. The colt was fed on a bottle for a time, and when it was strong enough it was turned out with a herd of cows for exercise. One of the cows had lost a calf, and the animal immediately adopted the colt. Bossy and the colt are now inseparable.

Frock For A White Summer

Since Dame Fashion favors white frock, it is possible for the woman with a small dress allowance to be well gowned. This frock of white organdy is inexpensive and exceedingly dainty.

Dame Fashion has decreed a white summer, which means that the woman who wishes to dress well on small allowance will be better able to realize her wish than if colors which are only found in expensive materials were to lead the modes.

Charmingly simple is this frock of white organdy. The waist has a flare collar and gathered vest to emphasize the chic lines of the shoulder yoke. Tucks and a deep hem ornament the one-piece gathered skirt, which is attached to the waist under a girdle of white satin. In medium size the dress requires 7¼ yards 36-inch material, with ⅛ yard 36-inch lawn for waist lining and 1 yard 7-inch satin ribbon for the belt.

The cutting guide shows just what sections of the pattern are laid on an open width of material and what ones are placed on a fold of the goods. To cut the piecing of the skirt to best advantage place it over a lengthwise thread of an open width of organdy. The sleeve, front and front yoke are laid to the right of the skirt piecing. Although the material is open, there are two layers of it so that the various sections are cut in duplicate.

The skirt is laid on a lengthwise fold, with the back of the waist, back yoke, vest and collar to the right, in the order named. All of these sections are on a lengthwise fold of the material. The cuff is laid on a lengthwise thread.

If preferred the skirt may be cut with a yoke, by cutting off the upper part along small "o" perforations. If desired made of flouncing, cut off hem and place pattern on material with lower edge along the bordered edge of material.

Embroidery flouncings are so fashionable this summer that one cannot afford to be without at least one frock of this description.

To Cheer the Sad Sea Waves

Bathing costume of green salt-water satin with surplice front and open neck. It is trimmed with black silk braid.

This season the brightest spots along the eahore are bathing suits. They are noted for their brevity, albeit they are not too daring to be essayed by women of conservative taste. The model shown here is fashioned of green salt water satin trimmed with silk braid. The waist fastens at one side and there are twin belts of self material. The suit may be carried out less expensively in serge, alpaca or poplin. In medium size, 5½ yards 36-inch material are required.

Today's dressmaking lesson shows the inexperienced seamstress the proper way to cut the suit. The use of the cutting guide helps to simplify matters for by referring to it, the student can see exactly what is intended. Take two open breadth of material and lay them on the cutting table, reverse or right sides together. This makes it possible to cut both sides at once. Place the sleeve in position first, as illustrated in the cutting guide, then a little above it, to the right, place the front of the waist. Next comes the section for the bloomers. All of these pieces are laid on a lengthwise thread of material.

Now, fold the remaining goods and lay the skirt section on a lengthwise fold, the piecing to the right of it. Next in order comes the stay, collar and back of the waist. This completes the arrangement of the bathing suit proper, and it is ready to be cut.

For the underwaist ⅞ yard of lining material 36 inches wide is needed. This is folded in half, the back being laid on a lengthwise fold of the lining and the front on a lengthwise thread, to the left of the back.

Bathing caps are in countless colors and style to suit all sorts of faces. The Dutch style is becoming to some faces; others are suited by a closer cap without the frill and side-rosettes of the Dutch model. Caps of striped silk and satin are effective and especially coquettish.

The beach costume must be accompanied by a correct complement of hosiery and footgear. If possible add a parasol and reticule for the vanity kit.

GLOBES IN NATURE

Why Raindrops and the Planets and Suns Are Round.

THE FORCES OF ATTRACTION.

As a Crowd Gathers In a Circle Around an Object of Interest, So Molecular and Gravitational Impulses In Matter Act Toward a Center.

Falling rain forms into spherical drops for the same reason that the earth has become a globe—namely, because that is the shape in which the internal forces of attraction attain a balance. In the case of a very large and massive body like the earth it is the attraction of gravitation that controls the form, but in that of a small body like a raindrop it is the molecular attraction of the infinitesimal particles.

The intensity of molecular attraction, which is the force that holds the components of bodies together, is far greater than that of the attraction of gravitation, but it is exercised over a comparatively insignificant distance. In each case, however, the resultant of all the attractions between the individual particles is a force directed toward the center of mass.

But by the principle of inertia time is always required for any force or combination of forces to set matter in motion. The larger the volume of matter concerned the longer will be the time needed for the internal forces to group all the particles symmetrically around their common center of mass.

It is upon this principle that the old fashioned shot towers are operated. Molten lead is dropped from a great elevation after passing through a sieve to facilitate its separation into small masses, and during their downward flight these masses are rounded into little spheres by the mutual attraction of their molecules, which group themselves around a common center.

With very large bodies not broken up into small portions the gravitational force plays the principal part in shaping them, because gravitation is effective at great distances and throughout vast masses, while cohesion, or molecular attraction, is extremely limited with regard to the space over which it acts.

Each molecule attracts a little group of other molecules close around it, and these in turn attract their immediate neighbors. Within the space occupied by a raindrop the molecular attraction is the master force and quickly shapes the mass into a sphere.

And just as a spoonful of water thrown from a high tower will descend in the form of one or more round drops owing to the resultant pull of all its molecules toward a common center so the entire ocean if it were flung out into open space would become a gigantic ball of water rounded into that shape by the gravitational attraction acting throughout its whole mass.

It is by no accident that all the planets are spherical. They have taken that shape as inevitably as a loose stone rolls down a steep hill. Their forms are not perfect spheres, because they have been subjected to outside disturbing forces, such as the centrifugal effects of their rotation on their axes and the deformations produced by the attraction of other planets and of the sun. Even the heads of comets are spheroidal, although they are believed to consist of swarms of small bodies like meteors.

This tendency of masses, whose component parts or particles are free to move among one another, to assume a globular outline, is curiously illustrated even by crowds or swarms of sentient beings. Thus a swarm of bees when it gathers close becomes spherical or spheroidal, since that form is best suited to inclose the greatest number of individuals.

A human crowd certainly would take a spherical form if its members were able to choose their positions as freely in up and down as in horizontal space. Being confined to one level, they arrange themselves in a circle, which is the section of a sphere.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

Political Chances.

"I see when a man runs for office he has to put himself in the hands of his friends."

"Yes, my dear."

"If a woman ran would she have to put herself in the hands of her woman friends?"

"I suppose so."

"Well, I do not imagine many women will run. Think of taking such chances!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Not a Bad Error.

She (with newspaper)—Here's a funny mistake in the report of that affair last night. It says that Mrs. Swellman appeared in a handsome "ampere" gown, instead of "empire."

He—Well, "ampere" isn't very far off; her gown was a bit shocking.—Boston Transcript.

A Pleasure.

"I put through a big financial deal last week," remarked Mr. Dustin Stax.

"I thought you said you were going on a pleasure trip."

"Could there be any pleasure greater than putting through a big financial deal?"—Washington Star.

Obliging.

"Waiter, the steak is so tough I can't cut it with this knife."

"Very good, sir—I'll bring you another knife, sir."—Columbia Jester.

SHADOW EMBROIDERY.

How to Make This Fascinating Work on Blouse Fronts.

Not for many years has shadow embroidery been in favor, but this season one sees it here and there on many organdie and voile frocks. When the work is done in colors it is most effective.

As the name indicates, the work is done on the wrong side of the material, and in order for its shadow to be visible on the right side the material must necessarily be thin and sheer. A practical idea if you intend to do the work in colors is to hold different shades of the color or colors you intend to use beneath your material. You can then tell how the finished work will look.

The work done on the wrong side of the material is nothing more than the herringbone stitch. Learn how to do this. Practice on a sample of material before actually doing the work. To make the directions clear just imagine you are working on a long, narrow leaf. To make the herringbone stitch put the needle through at the left hand end of the lower line, slant the silk obliquely upward across the space to the upper line and take a short stitch from right to left on the upper line. With the same slant cross the silk to the lower line and take a second short stitch from right to left. Proceed in this manner across the space, keeping the slant true and the length of the stitch even.

Now, there is just one difference in the herringbone stitch and the stitch used for the shadow embroidery. That is that the stitches are placed closer together, so that a solid effect is gained on the right side. Aim to let the work on the right side show lines of little forward stitches of uniform size and exactly on the lines of the design.

If you desire to insert veins in the leaves these should be worked before the petal is covered on the wrong side. For the veins use the back stitch.

French knots placed within the leaves and petals of a flower add materially to the effect of the shadow work.

Individuality In Dress.

The "magpie" effect, as it has come to be called, does not by any means imply a harsh and emphatic contrast of dead black and white, though this contrast is often used very effectively in tailored effects and in sport wear. There are any number of soft gradations of tone produced by veiling white with black lace or net, weaving white and black threads together, and the like. A well known French actress adheres rigidly to a particular color scheme in dress, and she wears nothing but black, white, blue and green, yet it is amazing how much variety there is in her wardrobe. Pearl, jet, silver, airy black tulle, rich black velvet, scintillating weaves of green and silver, white flowers with black or silver leaves—all these give her frocks and wraps a variety of color that is so entrancing that one never misses the pinks, yellows and lavenders worn by other women.

When Baking Cake.

The richer a cake the more easily it is spoiled if the oven is too hot. As soon as the cake has risen and become a light brown color the heat should be lessened by shutting off the drafts a little or opening a cold air draft. Then continue to bake the cake until a pointed skewer or broom straw can be stuck into the middle and withdrawn without uncooked paste sticking to it.

BOOTH AS HAMLET.

His Stage Business Was Used by Both Fechter and Mounet-Sully.

Like all men before the public, Edwin Booth was frequently the victim of malicious detraction. He was accused of imitating other actors, at first his father, then the tragedian Fechter and others.

Fechter was at that time very popular in England and in this country. He once called on the younger actor and said with brutal frankness, "I hear them say you imitate my business, and I am going to watch you like a hawk." It must have been rather trying to play to this rival glaring conspicuously from a stage box, but at the conclusion of the performance Fechter came back to say that the charge was quite unfounded.

Shortly after this experience Booth took a night off and went to see Fechter, and he was astonished to see the German actor following the ghost in "Hamlet" with the handle of his sword uplifted as a cross. Booth remarked dryly that Fechter had evidently approved that part of his business and had adopted it. Shortly after this the critic of a New York paper made the interesting discovery that Booth had purloined this bit of business from the foreign actor.

Booth smiled at the extravagant praise bestowed upon Mounet-Sully for his wonderful business in "Hamlet" in swearing by the shadow of the cross made on the stage by his sword. Booth's comment was that he had done that years before Mounet-Sully ever played the part of Hamlet. Both pieces of business were the results of accidents. On one occasion his sword stuck into the stage so that he could not pull it out, and he noticed the shadow cast by it and realized its significance as he pointed to it. On another night, as he was struggling with Marcellus and Horatio—"Unhand me, gentlemen, or, by heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets me"—he lost his hold on the sword; it flew up into the air, and as he caught it he noticed that the hilt made the sign of the cross; he caught the eloquence of its meaning, and it became a permanent part of his performance.—Edwin Milton Royle in Harper's Magazine.

CANINE SWIFTNESS.

Eskimo and Siberian Dogs Are Fast but the Greyhound Excels.

Few people realize of what remarkable speed dogs are capable. Some statistics in regard to this have been gathered by M. Dusolier, a French scientist. After pointing out the marvelous endurance shown by little fox terriers who followed their masters patiently for hours while they were riding on bicycles or in carriages he says that even greater endurance is shown by certain wild animals that are akin to dogs. Thus the wolf can run between fifty and sixty miles in one night, and an arctic fox can do quite as well, if not better.

Eskimo and Siberian dogs can travel forty-five miles on the ice in five hours, and there is a case on record in which a team of Eskimo dogs traveled six and one-half miles in twenty-eight minutes.

According to M. Dusolier, the speed of the shepherd dogs and those used on hunting ranges is from ten to fifteen yards a second. English setters and pointers run at the rate of eighteen to nineteen miles an hour, and they can maintain this speed for at least two hours. Fox hounds are extraordinarily swift, as is proved by the fact that a dog of this breed once beat a thoroughbred horse, covering four miles in six and a half minutes, which was at the rate of nearly eighteen yards a second.

Greyhounds are the swiftest of all four footed creatures, and their speed is equal to that of carrier pigeons. English greyhounds, which are used for coursing, are able to cover at full gallop a space between eighteen and twenty yards every second.—Our Dumb Animals.

Held Bible and Rudder.

Some years ago Japan was neither so free nor so friendly with other nations as she is today. In those old days when a foreign ship entered the Japanese ports the captain was obliged to place his Bible and rudder in charge of the chief officer of the port and leave them there until he was ready to sail. Of course he wouldn't sail without either, and the Japs could easily keep tabs on the movements of all ships in their harbors.

YOUNG FOLKS' CORNER

A Soap Bubble Party.

You can amuse any number of your child friends with soap bubbles, indoors or out, if mother will allow you to use an old blanket spread over a table to make a soft pad. Around this table invite your guests to sit. Each child should have a little bowl of Dutch ware and design and each also should have a penny clay pipe.

If you want to be very grand you can tie the bowls and wind the stems of the pipes with baby ribbon.

The bowls should be filled with a mixture made from boiling shaved castile soap in water. To every pint of this a tablespoonful of glycerin should be added. The pipes should have a rim of soap around the inside of the bowls, this making the bubbles grow to an enormous size.

You may offer little prizes for the bubble lasting longest, that which is most full of color and for the largest one blown.

Grown people have often enjoyed bubble parties, and there is no reason why you youngsters shouldn't make such an affair a great success.

Names of Animals.

The porcupine gets his name from two Latin words—porcus, from which we get the word pork, and spine, a thorn, so his name really means a pig with thorns.

The word lion is Latin also, from the word leo, and leopard is from the same word and from pardus, spotted, so that a leopard really means a spotted lion.

The word hippopotamus means river horse, and rhinoceros comes from two words meaning nose and horn.

The badger's Latin name is bladarius, from the word blada, corn (he was so called because he used to steal the corn from the fields).

The words elephant, camel and giraffe are from eastern languages, giraffe coming from two words meaning long and neck. It is easy to see how he got that name.

Most of the names of one syllable are all from Anglo-Saxon. Mouse comes from mys, so that is why we have mice in the Anglo-Saxon.

Pebble Chase.

In this more modern amusement of the Greek children the leader stands among the players, holding a pebble between the palms of his hands. Each player extends his hands, palm to palm, and the leader puts his hands between the palms of each player, ostensibly to drop in the pebble he is holding. The player who receives the pebble is chased by the others and may be saved only by returning to the leader and giving the pebble to him. The chase may begin as soon as the players suspect who has the pebble, so each player should carefully watch the hands and faces of the others to see who gets it and, as soon as he suspects one, start to chase him. Leaders and players must exercise ingenuity to keep the secret of the whereabouts of the pebble, but not after the last pair of hands has been passed.

"Kick the Marbles."

Two boys and two marbles are required. The first boy says to the second, "Kick this marble north, south, east or west," pointing to one of the marbles. Only one kick is allowed. If he succeeds he wins; if he fails the other wins. If he puts it north, as ordered, he may kick again to hit the other marble, in which case he wins again. If he hits the marble and goes north, as ordered, at one kick he wins double. Each boy tries to leave the marbles in as difficult a position as possible for his successor, and here comes in a peculiarity which makes this game unique among all games. If the position in which the marbles are left is too difficult for the other boy to play he may refuse to kick and the first boy is obliged to play his own difficult game.

An Egg Trick.

Hold a raw egg on end and spin it on a plate or other smooth surface. Quickly place the hand upon it for an instant, stopping the motion momentarily. When the hand is removed the egg will resume its spinning. This is because the liquid contents in the shell continued to whirl rapidly when your hand stopped the shell, and if it is quickly released the whirling contents will again set the shell to spinning.—The American Boy.

Riddles.

What two animals follow you everywhere? Your calves.

What always weighs the same, whether larger or smaller? A hole.

Why is the letter B like fire? Because it makes oil boil.

Which member of congress wears the largest hat? The one who has the largest head.

What relation is that child to its own father who is not its own father's own son? His daughter.

What city of Cuba can you smoke? Havana.

If We Forget.

Suppose the flowers all were black—
How sad the butterflies would be!
Suppose the south wind ceased to blow,
Who'd wake the pussy willow buds?
Suppose the raindrops wouldn't fall,
What would the thirsty flowers do?
Suppose the sun forgot to rise,
Who'd wake the sleepy little birds?
And just suppose a tiny boy
Should not remember to be good,
How very drear the world would be!
How sad the ones who love him so!
Each one must do the very best
To make things cheerful, bright and gay.
Upon each flower, bird and child
The world depends for love and joy.
Upon the wind, the sun, the rain
The flowers look for strength to live,
And dreams of wondrous things to be
Are wakened by the butterfly.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

If you like Madeira embroidery you will be pleased with the way it is used to trim this frock of China blue handkerchief linen. The skirt consists of two deep flounces attached to a deep yoke gathered at the waistline under a girdle of blue satin. A deep band of embroidery encircles the waist, while the sleeves end in billowy ruffles of embroidered linen. Little blue satin bows at the front and a lace edged turn-down collar supply the remaining details. Five yards 40inch embroidery make the dress.

The Cool Cucumber.

BAKED CUCUMBERS.—Cut the cucumbers in half lengthwise and remove all the pulp possible, leaving a firm case inside the skin. Chop the pulp fine, mix with an equal amount of fine breadcrumbs, butter, pepper and salt. Pack the filling back into the shells, dot with butter and bake until well done and brown.

Another way to bake cucumbers is to cut them in two crosswise. Cut off each end enough to make the halves stand firm. Make a forcemeat of fine breadcrumbs, chopped meat and the inside of the cucumber, which should be scooped out with a spoon. Drop the shells into boiling water and boil for four minutes. Drain, fill with the forcemeat and put a little melted butter on top of each. Stand in a pan and bake until tender and brown on top.

Fritters.—Cucumbers are delicious in the form of fritters. Peel them, cut them in half lengthwise, scoop out seeds and soft part, mix with buttered and seasoned crumbs, refill and dip each half in fritter batter. Fry brown in deep fat.

Cucumbers on Toast.—The taste for cooked cucumbers may be cultivated. If it is, cucumbers on toast is a dish which goes a long way in cultivating it. To prepare this dish peel the cucumbers and let them stand in salt water (a teaspoonful of salt to a quart of water) for two hours. Then drain and slice in lengthwise strips and wipe each slice dry on a fresh piece of cheesecloth. Have ready some flour mixed with salt and pepper and dredge each slice in this. Fry the slices until brown. Have ready long, narrow pieces of hot, well buttered toast and slip a slice of cucumber on each.

Cucumber Sauce For Fish.—Grate two large cucumbers and boil until tender. Add one teaspoonfull tarragon vinegar and one cupful stock. Thicken with one tablespoonful flour and one of butter rubbed together.

WHITE PAPER IS STILL SHORT

Government Officials See No Relief In Spite of Energetic Work for Economy.

The shortage of white paper, which recently caused the American Newspaper Publishers' Association to urge upon its members the strictest economy, even to the cutting down of margins and the discontinuance of useless extra editions, is now so serious that the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce, has just issued a pamphlet with definite instructions as to what kind of materials should be saved, and how it should be assorted. These instructions are printed in the form of a manual for the guidance of small households, apartment houses, small stores, hotels, department stores, office buildings, large printing establishments, and other users of paper, and the material from which it is manufactured.

It may not occur to the young man writing to his sweetheart that the stationery he uses was made of his thread bare shirt. His sweetheart may little think that the paper in which she wraps a present for him was manufactured from her discarded stockings, but this is true nevertheless.

The public is instructed to save, among other things, clean cotton and linen rags, whether small or large, soiled white rags, soiled and dirty colored rags, black rags, woolen rags, for all of which there are specific uses in the trade. Use is also found for white clippings and shavings from paper of the better grades, as well as printers' waste, white and colored writing papers, clean wrapping paper, old books, magazines, periodicals and account books, clean folded newspapers, all grades of cardboards, strawboard, corrugated boxboard, soiled wrapping papers, newspapers, etc., and burlap bagging and manila rope.

In small households where small amounts of old rags and paper may be disposed of to the dealer in junk and rags, it is suggested that the following grading be made: Separate old rags from old papers, separate folded newspapers from all other waste; provide bags for keeping all rags separate from other waste material; tie magazines and books into bundles for convenience in handling; keep all other waste papers in bags, barrels, bundles, or bales; and keep all collected waste material dry.

In case of apartment houses, small stores, and hotels this grading is suggested: Clean cotton and linen rags; soiled cotton and line rags, including old canvas, awnings, etc.; woolen rags and old woolen clothing; burlap bagging, books and magazines; clean folded newspapers; clean wrapping paper, and mixed papers, consisting of soiled newspapers, wrapping paper, cardboard, boxboard, etc.

Department stores and large hotels, office buildings, and business houses are advised that they will find it profitable to own their own baling press, and for them this classification of waste material is offered: Bags of all kinds, mixed; burlap bagging; white and colored waste papers from office waste baskets, not including newspaperse, wrapping paper, and cardboard; clean folded newspapers; clean wrapping paper, and mixed papers consisting of soiled newspapers, wrapping paper, cardboard, boxboard, etc.

A final classification is made for the benefit of large printing and other establishments using large quantities of paper; No. 1 hard white shavings or clippings, free from ink, from bonds, ledgers, and fine writing papers. No. 2, soft white shavings or clippings, free from ink, from book papers; colored shavings, free from ink, from bonds, ledgers, and writing papers; printed white and colored papers known as printing waste, not dirty, but more or less smudged with ink; clean kraft papers and rope-manila papers; old wood manila wrapping; old book papers and magazine papers; clean newspapers; mill and bogus wrappers used in wrapping bundles, frames, rolls, boxboard, binder, cardboard, and strawboard.

Waste paper and rags may be disposed of by requesting some charitable society to call and receive them or by writing a waste paper and junk dealer to call and receive them weekly or monthly, or by collecting large amounts and then securing prices from the junk and rag dealers, or by obtaining the co-operation of one or more large collectors and buyers of this material.

Of the large amount of rags and old papers used in the manufacture of papers in this country fifty per cent. of the amount used yearly is imports, according to the Department of Commerce. Imports have decreased so largely in the last few months, owing to conditions in Europe, that for some time there has been almost a famine in paper making raw materials.

"The effect of this increase in cost of all paper-making materials has been to make corresponding increases in the cost of all kinds and grades of paper," says the Department of Commerce. "It is wise to save waste paper, rags, etc., for they are valuable. There is at present an increased demand for paper, cardboard, etc., in the United States. The present daily production of paper of all kinds is more than 5,000 tons. Competent authority states that rags form 7.8 per cent. of the fibres we use in paper making; waste papers, books, magazines, etc., 21.4 per cent. About 123,000 tons of rags and 380,000 tons of waste papers, etc., were imported in 1913.

It is further pointed out that the saving of waste paper and old rags ultimately means a conservation of forests, and the co-operation of every man, woman and child is essential if the collection of waste materials is to be made a success.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it, and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

FOOD IN GERMANY

SEVEN MONTHS' OLD GERMAN BABIES EAT CARROTS

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rotterdam, Holland, May 25 (by mail)—Babies seven months to a year old are eating carrots, apples and spinach in Germany.

Other folks besides babies are having food troubles. These food stories we'll tell about them all.

If you watch the consulates here and keep your eyes on the incoming trains you can meet, every day, a scant few persons who have just come from Germany and who will gladly tell you what experiences they have had in their kitchens, dining rooms and stomachs since the food stringency in Germany became nöticeable.

These travelers feel themselves heroes, as, indeed, you come to regard them, in a manner of speaking, when you see them abandon themselves to a full, man's sized meal here.

Travelers to Berlin, especially the American writing kind, live at the best hotels. They return with stories of plentiful and excellent food.

Berlin is the wartime show place of Germany and the hotels where writers go are the wartime show places of Berlin. What the American writers have said of the plentifulness and the excellence of the food, is not necessarily true.

Here in Rotterdam you get the truth, straight from the dining rooms and kitchens of civilians in every part of Germany. It indicates that life in Germany is uncomfortable, highly so, for a civilian who is keeping house.

Here's a Swedish mechanic from Germany, running around Rotterdam filling his arms with packages of bacon, bottles of olive oil and rice. Perhaps the Hollanders will refuse him permission to take these things across the border, but, "I'm going to make a try of it," he says.

Here's a pretty American girl dining alone in a Rotterdam restaurant. She's studying music in Berlin. "I've just run over to Holland to spend a week eating," she says.

Here's a Spanish woman with three little children. "I brought the baby down to get him some milk." He is tired of carrots, spinach and apples. No wonder; he is only seven months."

And here are Germans—rich, elderly, retired Germans—who haunt the doorways of the hotel restaurants, waiting for the American plan dinner bell to ring and who seem to be always eating, even at the hated English tea hour. They are here a week. Then they go back to Germany.

Germany, civilian Germany is hungry. Not hungry for victuals, becaus vituals are anything a human being can eat and digest, but for decent food like meat and wheat and milk and animal and vegetable fats. (How and why tiny, toothless German babies eat apples, carrots, spinach and oatmeal, instead of gurgling milk, will be the subject of Shepherd's next German food story.)

War Taxation Invented.

War taxation, like everything else, had to be invented. The king who first thought of it in England was Henry II. Instead of asking his barons to accompany him to French battlefields at their own charge, he compounded with them, accepted "scutage" or shield money, and from the burgesses he collected "gifts," "aids" or "tallages." Henry could then hire his own men, and if need be turn them against the bold, bad barons themselves, as the army was under his own control.—London Tit-Bits.

LARGEST PLATE WORKS IN WORLD

(By United Press)

McKeesport, Pa.—Already possessing the largest tube works in the world, McKeesport's prestige as a big mill center will be materially increassed before the end of June when more new tinplate mills that have been under construction for months, are completed, giving McKeesport by far the largest tinplate works in the world.

The combined plants will then consist of 44 mills. The next largest tinplate works consists of 32 mills. It is also located in Western Pennsylvania.

The cost of the new mills and a power plant will be $2,200,000, making the cost of the whole plant about $5,000,000. The plants now employ 1,600 men and women. When the new mills are all in operation the working force will be about 3,000.

The capacity of the works will be 4,000,000 boxes of tin a year, which is over half of the tinplate production of the country and valued at $18,000,000 to $520,000,000. The payroll will be $3,000,000 a year.

Tinplate business is fine. The local mill and other plants are working at capacity, but cannot supply the demand. Big concerns are more anxious about shipments and delivery than they are about prices.

From a small plant of ten mills placed in operation in 1905, the plant of the McKeesport company has in less than a dozen years grown to be the greatest works of the kind in the world. McKeesporters take particular pleasure in the thought that the men who established it are McKeesporters and are still at the head of it.

Improvements for the welfare of men and women employed in some departments of the works have already been made.

Some time after the new mills have been working smoothly and everything is in ship shape, a day for inspection is to be set, when men prominent in the manufacturing world are to be entertained for a day.

HUNTING RATTLESNAKES PROVIDES A LIVELIHOOD

(By United Press)

Winona, Minn.—Hunting rattlesnakes is becoming a popular sport in and near Winona.

Several men are following the hunt of the deadly serpent as a profession and are making a living at it.

The snakes are numerous. A live snake on the Winona market to-day is quoted at 90 cents per pound.

The bounty for the hisser is 50 cents, and rattle snake oil is used for medicine.

The average snake weighs five pounds, making $5 the average wage. Some catchers get several snakes a day.

DRINKING IN ENGLAND AS YET UNCURBED

(By United Press)

London—High prices and drastic restrictions have done little if anything to curb drinking in England. Some authorities say there has been an increase.

There has been much controversy over this question. Advocates of rigid regulation or of total prohibition maintained the new rules has made the country more sober. Their opponents denied it.

The United Kingdom Alliance, a neutral organization devoted to the compilation of all sorts of social statistics which the country supposedly ought to know, has finally submitted definite figures.

Before the war the "pubs" (saloons) were open nineteen and a half hours daily, from 5 a. m. until 12:30 a. m. To-day they are open five hours and a half daily.

No intoxicants may be sold before noon; none between 2:30 and 6:30 p. m.; none after 9:30 p. m.

Treating also has been strictly prohibited.

These regulations are enforced energetically.

The United Kingdom Alliance's records show that drinking was decreased, in 1915, by 8 per cent. compared with 1914, and by 10 per cent. compared with the last full peace year, 1913.

It is pointed out, however, that this reduction is offset, or more than offset, by the fact that from 750,000 to 1,000,000 men—the soldiers—were out of the country.

The increased percentage of reduction is attributed to the increased number of men sent abroad.

Expenditures for drink have increased, owing to higher prices.

In 1914 the total was something over 164,000,000 pounds (about $820,000,000.

In 1915 it was 182,000,000 pounds (about $910,000,000).

City's Water Supply Endangers Health

cussed and ordered improved by the Superintendent, who will remove the bricks at the points in question and raise the paving.

The Board was notified that L. B. Rider, of Oak street, who recently constructed a private sewer from his premises to the Fourth street main, had refused to allow an Italian who lives next door to connect his house to the main unless he paid $40 for the privilege. In the opinions of the members of the Board, this price was exorbitant, and the question as to the rights of Mr. Rider to charge that amount was raised. Some of the members were almost certain that a sewer main laid by a private party in the public street became the property of the city. As W. S. Hillick, city attorney was not present, the matter was referred to him, and no action was taken.

William Ross appeared before the Board and asked that the sprinkling of State street between Park and Fourth streets be discontinued, as the water ran into his premises. The Board passed a resolution granting his request.

The Board of Trustees of the State Street M. E. Church petitioned the Board for permission to move the sidewalk adjoining the church, from its present location to the curb line of the street. This request was granted, the church to pay all expenses of the operation. Permission was also given Charles Dockstader to move his sidewalk to the curb line.

Isadore Alderman requested the Board to take some action to improve the condition of Schuyler street, which is almost impassable at present. Superintendent Rumsey was authorized to look over the street and make a recommendation for the improvement.

Alderman Robert McKay asked the Board to change the course of the stream called "Academy Street Creek" by residents of his ward. A natural water course in the district follows the sidewalk from Fifth to Sixth street, and as there is no walk on the other side of the roadway, pedestrians are obliged to wade through the water. During the heavy rains of the past few weeks conditions have steadily grown worse, and the Alderman asked immediate action. The Board promised to make a survey of the situation and improve the condition.

Mr. Rumsey reported that work on the Fremont street sewer was progressing rapidly and that the sewer would be completed this week, if fair weather prevailed.

WEATHER FORECAST

Probably fair to-night and Wednesday; light to moderate winds.

THE QUIRK TO-DAY.

Dismissed from college and disowned by his millionaire father, Algy Dupont light-hearted sets forth in his high powered racing car to "See America." He kidnaps Petekins, the family butler.

After many days of arduous going, the auto pioneers find themselves in Red Gulch, Mont.

Algy meets Mildred Demarest and through her he accepts a job on the ranch of her father, Big Bill Demarest.

Buck, foreman at the ranch, is in love with Mildred.

He becomes jealous of Algy with good reason, and determines to finish him by fair means or foul.

His opportunity soon arrives.

Algy and Buck are sent with $25,000 on a horse buying expedition and Buck connives with a "stick up" man to steal the gold.

Petekins, the butler, who has followed his young master with an extra blanket overhears the plan, but before he can warn Algy he is forced to take refuge in an old ice house, where a treacherous door swings shut and he is imprisoned.

Charlie, the bandit, holds up Algy in Buck's absence and makes him leave a note confessing the crime, after which he breaks for the Mexican border, taking Algy and the money.

Buck follows them, quarrels with Charlie over the loot and the two thieves kill each other.

Algy takes the money and starts back for the ranch.

His confession has meanwhile been found and a posse is after him. They catch him as he is returning to the ranch.

His story is laughed to scorn and it is only through the combined efforts of Mildred, the distressed Petekins, and the faithful racing car, that young Mr. Dupont is rescued from the attentions of a necktie party.

London's White Tower.

The White tower is the very heart of the ancient Tower of London, being indeed the citadel, or keep, dominating all the other buildings, which were really intended for its defense. By reason of its color and size the White tower is the most conspicuous part of the grim old structure, but in some ways its appearance is singularly deceptive. It looks a complete square, yet there is a difference of eleven feet in the length of north and south sides, and its height is not above ninety to ninety-two feet, although it looks considerably higher. Even Pugin, the architect, was deceived and laid—and lost—a wager that the White tower was over 150 feet high.—London Mail.

He Wasn't Afraid.

When Bishop Phillips Brooks was "commanded," as the phrase goes, to speak before the queen some one asked if he was afraid. "No," he replied, smiling; "I have preached before my mother."

120,000 Germans Rush Eastward

(By United Press)

London—The Sixth German Division of 120,000 men have been hurried eastward to intercept the Russian offensive bearing down upon Lemburg, a Geneva dispatch reports today.

Two German divisions are enroute to the Lutzk-Kozel front of the Austrians. A fresh supply of German troops are counter-attacking with great vigor the northern front of General Brusiloff's armies, and it appears to have checked at least the Russian advance.

* * *

Paris—Following the explosion of two mines the Germans last night attacked the French trenches on Hill 108, south of Berry-au-Baz, in the region of the Rheims.

The War Office today announced the action was accompanied by terrific firing on both banks of the Meuse. The artillery was active during the night, but there was no infantry fighting around Verdun.

Directors Inspect Window Displays

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce, accompanied by newspapermen, made the rounds of the business section this morning for the purpose of viewing the exhibits of the manufacturers in the store windows during this week, which has been designated as "Made in Fulton Week."

Commencing at City Hall, where a cannon made by the Dilts Machine Works is on display, the delegation viewed in order the following displays, all of which have been described at length in previous issues of this paper:

Victoria Paper Company, Fort Stanwix Canning Company, Foster Bros' Cutlery, Nestle's Food, Gravely Horse-Radish, Morrill Press, Boland Bros., Black's Bread, George T. Carher, Peter's and Nestle's Chocolate, E—Z Opener Bag Company, Simplex Wrapping Machine Company, Dilts Machine Works, Massaro Bread, John Clark Carpet Company, Spanswick Knitting Company, North End Paper Company, John MacGregor Company, Hunter Arms Company, Volney Paper Company, Dutcher Machine Works, Eureka Paper Company, R. Erhard, skates; Gage-Elwell Mills, Charles M. Allen, Inc., American Woolen Company, Massaro Macaroni Company, Qswego Falls Pulp and Paper Company and the Aluminum Container Corporation.

SENATOR BROWN OPPOSES ATTACK

Syracuse—Senator Elon R. Brown has been designated by attorney general, Egbert E. Woodbury, to assist deputy Merton E. Lewis in opposing the Democratic attack on the re-apportionment of the state made by the last legislature.

Besides being the Republican leader in the senate which adopted the reapportionment plan, Senator Brown has had a wide experience in such matters. In 1906 he carried to a successful issue the attack which upset that apportionment and in 1911 successfully defended the work of the legislature in laying out new senate and assembly districts.

It is apparent that the main Democratic objection is to the re-apportionment as it applies to Kings, New York and Westchester counties. The attack is based on contentions that there should be but fifty senate districts instead of fifty-one as at present and that that constitutional requirement for compactness in districts has been violated by the re-arrangement, that the required contiguity of blocks has not been carried out, that there is not the proper equaliiy in the population of the new Senate districts and that the ration of equality in the assembly districts has been violated. These in the main are the technical objections from a Republican point of view and the main argument undoubtedly will be confined to the legal number of senators.

300 UNDERTAKERS IN MEETING IN SYRACUSE

Syracuse—Lester W. Hill of Brooklyn, president of the New York State Undertakers' Association is presiding at the annual convention of that organization which is holding its convention here. About 300 delegates from all parts of the state are in attendance.

The convention delegates were welcomed by city officials and then listened to an address by James J. McLearney.

Vegetable Growers Favor Four Dealers

At a meeting of twenty-five members of the Fulton Vegetable Growers' Association last night in Grange Hall, four New York commission houses were designated to handle the supply of Fulton lettuce this year, as follows: Meany and Saiseelin, T. J. Roberts and Company, Covert Brothers and Stout & Frost. This selection was made by a vote of the members after a discussion that covered two hours, in the course of which almost every member of the Association took the floor to make known his sentiments regarding the various houses under consideration.

The firm of Covert Brothers is the only new house to be selected and this firm will take the place of one of the four firms which received shipments last year. The commission firm of Peter MacLease, also under consideration last night, was not selected, although a represesntative of the company who attended the meeting made a strong plea for the association's business.

Meany and Saiseelin, T. J. Roberts and Company and Stout & Frost have handled Fulton lettuce in the past and most of the members of the Association stated that they had received uniformly fair treatment and good prices from these three firms.

Before the selection of the commission houses took place, the members listened to a report of the recent conference with the officials of the Lackawanna Railroad and Adams' Express Company by O. T. Day, chairman of the committee which represented the growers. Mr. Day stated that the conference had been a most thorough one, covering two hours, and that the officials, while giving no definite decision, had nevertheless left the impression with the representatives of the association that their requests would be granted.

New Cars Are Promised

Among the more important matters discussed at the conference was the question of suitabl cars for Fulton shipments this year, since some of the cars used on the Lackawanna freight service last summer had not given as satisfactory service as the cars furnished by competing roads. The railroad officials promised to use new cars this year, according to Mr. Day's report, which will be diverted to this city from Binghamton, at which point they were now being used in carrying other produce. Mr. Day explained that the association men had taken up the matter of prompt shipments to New York and Philadelphia by freight with a view to ascertaining just what service they could expect from the railroad company in this regard, and the officials seemed inclined to give this matter their favorable consideration.

The Adams' company representative told the growers' delegation that new express cars which hold twice as much as the cars formerly used, will probably be placed in service here this summer for fast shipment of lettuce to the markets.

The association men also took up the matter of a switch at the intersection of the Lackawanna track and the Bowens' Corners road, which would greatly facilitate shipments from members in that dis-

Funston Gets Six New Regiments

NEW TROOPS WITHHELD FROM BORDER TODAY

(By United Press)

Washington—In view of the incomplete mobilization of the militia the war department has indicated it probably would not issue orders sending new forces to the Mexican border today.

The time of issuing this order, however, is in doubt, but the officials say they would wait until sufficient mobilization has been accomplished before taking the step.

Secretary of War Baker said his messages of the past twenty-four hours show no change.

PREMIUMS AND CONTESTS

We have on display in our south window a large number of sets of SANITOS COOKING UTENSILS that we will sell at 70 cents the set. The object of this is to dispose of this ware at a sacrifice.

It was purchased by the former publishers to use as a premium on subscriptions, but we wish to state that we have nothing to give away with subscriptions. We are here to gain readers on merit and merit alone. This is not a prize-package paper. You can buy your automobiles, your ear rings, your pop corn, and other things from those who deal in them, for you will get none with a subscription from this paper. We contend that one man who takes a paper because he wants it is of more value to an advertiser than a hundred who get the paper because they wish to aid some friend to win a prize. We are going to get quality circulation and plenty of it.

SELECTED EDITORIALS

New York World:

To show that the prediction of higher meat prices in July is a matter of grave concern, only a brief reference to past figures is needed.

From retail prices in forty cities the Statistical Abstract shows sirloin and round steak, rib roast, pork chops, bacon, ham and lard to have risen in price nearly forty per cent. between 1907 and 1914. Hard times and less demand for a few months kept prices stable, but they rose again toward the end of 1915. Now figures for New York show for the same list a further rise which would make the 10 year increase 64.6 per cent. The completed year may show an even greater increment.

As housewives know, pot fowls have not risen quite in the same proportion. Even here the 10-year increase, on data incomplete for 1916, is 56 per cent. Of other foods, prices have been much more erratic, rising and falling sharply, so that for meat substitutes the outlook is less dark. What appals in the meat price movement is that it has been a steady rise, every year of the decade showing its advance.

We may be a long way from eatcards yet, but unless means are found to check the increase the meat diet of millions of Americans will be scantier than in the past.

Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer:

It is hard for our people to comprehend the meanderings of the minds of the people of Mexico, for that country is a land of imagination. Things which the common sense, hard headed Americans would recognize as the veriest nonsense are accepted by great numbers of those people south of the Rio Grande as being the absolute truth.

Some time ago there was one of that class of nonsensical things published, that Mexican troops were advancing north through Texas, and that President Wilson and his family were fleeing to Canada for safety. That was in the fierce joke class, and now there comes along another of just a similar class, this being given circulation by a Mexican paper, El Democrata, a constitutionalist organ, published at Chihuahua.

That paper has just carried the story that there was a new "war of secession" in the United States, that Texas, Colorado, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah and California would soon declare their independence of the United States with a view of annexing themselves to the republic of Mexico. A General Vergara of San Diego, Texas, is put down as the leading spirit of the "plot," it being said that he is gaining wealth and influence, that he is to give his subchiefs all the money they want for the propaganda, and that he has shown check books on various American banks.

This kind of nonsense catches the Mexicans, while in America it would be recognized that "General" Vergara was after working the people out of all money possible, that he was a faker. But in Mexico they bite at the absurd. Hence it is that it is easy to arouse the peon class with a declaration that Carranza has sold Mexico to the United States, it being only necessary to point to the United States troops in Mexico as proof. It is because of such things as this that our people must be lenient in their views of Carranza and the Mexicans, largely a lot of grown up children sadly in need of some one in charge who can lead them in the right way.

Watertown Times:

It is not surprising that not only the leaders of the progressive party, but all the rank and file in this state should have been reunited to the republican party under the banner of Charles E. Hughes. That which created the progressive party in this state was not so much national issues as state issues. They wanted to break the dictatorship of the New York republican machine and they broke loose in the hope of doing that. They had a great many sympathizers among those who remained in the republican party, but who insisted that the same amount of effort within the party would accomplish the reform better than by a separate party. The man who first broke the power of the machine was Governor Charles E. Hughes and it has remained broken and with the election of Governor Whitman the new order has come into republican politics of this state. He has followed the policies of Governor Hughes and completed the work Governor Hughes started. It is small wonder then that the progressives of New York state, when Mr. Hughes has been nominated for the presidency, are back of him, heart and soul. He is their natural leader, as he is the natural leader of all other republicans who stayed within the party line to accomplish the same thing. Governor Hughes stayed and Governor Whitman stayed, and now Governor Hughes is the republican candidate for the presidency, with a pretty sure prospect of election, and Governor Whitman is certain of a renomination and re-election for governor, both showing the triumph of moral ideas in state government, leaving no room for dissatisfaction. The thing which made the break and created the progressive party in New York state and made other republicans restive has been accomplished. There is no reason whatever why all republicans and progressives should not be united. The objects and aims of both have been accomplished in this state; there is nothing more to fight about. The old time bossism has gone and real leadership has taken its place.

Woman's Work Must Stand Same Test of Quality as That of Man

By MARY E. WOOLLEY, President of Mount Holyoke College

IT is a grave mistake to overemphasize sex, the overemphasis, instead of making for physical health, social soundness and intellectual sanity, working against all three.

The crisis through which we are passing puts a great responsibility upon America, which is but another way of saying upon us all. "America first" is a slogan worthy of us only when it is interpreted America first in service to the world. THAT WOMEN ARE READY TO ENTER INTO THEIR HUMAN HERITAGE IS UNDOUBTED.

Out of great tragedy often comes great inspiration. Out of the world tragedy must come a new inspiration for service, service in scholarship as well as service in other more practical lines. And in the call for service, in the time of its supreme need, the world does not stop to ask whether the response comes from man or woman.

Truth to the fact of life gives no excuse for the theory that there should be one intellectual standard for the man and another for the woman.

WE HAVE PASSED BEYOND DR. JOHNSON'S POINT OF VIEW. WOMAN'S WORK TODAY MUST STAND THE SAME TEST OF QUALITY THAT IS APPLIED TO THE WORK OF MAN.

Efficiency and vision, usefulness and beauty, dogged determination without sacrifice of the finenesses, the refinements of life, conviction without dogmatism, confidence with humility, the will to succeed with courtesy and consideration, strictness for oneself and liberality toward others, stress upon the intellectual without losing sight of the spiritual—this is the kind of character and service for which we as college women must aim.

Prevention of Tuberculosis Should Be Made a National Problem

By HOMER FOLKS, Secretary of the New York State Charities Aid Association

IN the United States tuberculosis has been mainly a local problem, in small degree a state problem and hardly at all as yet a national problem. The time has come when the federal authorities should assume that degree of EFFICIENT LEADERSHIP WHICH THEY ARE EXERCISING IN THE PROBLEMS OF AGRICULTURE AND OTHER ECONOMIC INTERESTS.

Statistics collected by the National Tuberculosis association show an expenditure for the care and prevention of tuberculosis in the United States last year of $22,500,000. This is almost wholly a local or state expenditure. By means of a division of tuberculosis in the United States public health service, with a trifling expenditure as compared with this $22,000,000, the federal authorities could by wise leadership tremendously increase the effectiveness of this enormous local expenditure.

Only through the United States public health service can any degree of uniformity of method and efficiency in the tuberculosis campaign in forty-eight different states be secured. The standardization of hospitals, sanitariums, dispensaries, nursing service and home supervision and all the other elements in the tuberculosis movement can only be secured through federal action. Just as the state helps to co-ordinate the work of the localities within the state, so the federal authorities should help to co-ordinate the work in the various states.

ONLY IN THIS WAY CAN THE VITAL NATIONAL INTEREST IN THE SUPERVISION OF TUBERCULOSIS BE MADE EFFECTIVE.

TALKS ON THRIFT

THRIFT CAMPAIGN SERIES

No. 14.—THRIFT OF TIME

One of the most important lessons any individual, young or old, can learn is the value of time; for time is not only money but can be turned into money, if the habit of thrift attends its use. Those who employ labor quickly realize the importance of the time element in all business transactions, for the labor cost, which is so vital an element in the cost of everything, depends upon the thriftiness of the worker, in the use of his time. The minute that does not produce something is not only a wasted minute but a costly minute to somebody. Many a man fails because he cannot get results from labor.

Children should be taught to regard the time they are not in school as an opportunity to earn money. It should not be idle time, or merely play time, for the child does not need recreation so much as a change of occupation. Most of us play too much; and the child that is taught to turn the out of school hours into recreation that brings returns has learned one of life's most helpful lessons.

The young man or woman starting out in a business career needs to learn the same lesson,—that the time out of business is merely for play, but for self improvement. It is not what you do between eight and six that brings business success, but what you do from six to eight. Visit any of the Young Men's Christian Associations that run study classes, or the nigh schools, and you will find a body of young men and women who properly value the spare time business allows and are using it for self improvement. These are marked men. They are bound to win. They will get somewhere because they are willing to pay the price in self denial. They figure that three or four nights a week for a year or two will add materially to their power to do, and power to do commands its compensation. We pay trained men, and nowhere is training so easily to be had as in the spare hours.

A young man applied to a bank recently, saying that he worked nights and had a few hours a day to give to other work and wanted to help the family by these added efforts. He has the right stuff in him. In the daily papers comes the story of a man who was in a like position, and, seeing an advertisement for a man who could give a little extra time to the work in mind, answered it and added ten dollars a week to his salary for eleven years with no injustice to other demands. He was the only applicant.

The world is full of disgruntled and dissatisfied individuals who would be happier and far beter off if they would stop whining and complaining, and look around for opportunities to earn extra money, or spend the spare hours in preparation for the greater opportunities that open to the trained man and woman. The correspondence schools have done wonders in training students for better things, and merit the thanks of all who are interested in the improvement of the race.

Thrift of time will make a man rich beyond his fondest dreams, and waste of it will make him poor, however rich he may be, and the best lesson you can teach your child—yea, the best lesson you can learn yourself, is to use the time you are not working for your boss, or sleeping, or resting, in such a way that it will put dollars in your pocket or brains in your head. It is likely to do both.

Stiff Neck Quickly Cured.

A stiff neck is usually caused by rheumatism in the muscles of the neck. It comes on suddenly and is often mistaken for a sprain. It is quickly cured by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. Mrs. Conrad Oliver, of Little Falls, N. Y., writes: "About three years ago my husband sprained his neck. We had a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment in the house and applied it. It afforded quick relief, and after using it a few times all of the lameness and stiffness in his neck and shoulders had entirely disappeared."

The Dwarf Palm of Algeria.

The dwarf palm, which furnishes considerable quantities of fiber, grows in great profusion in Algeria and is one of the principal obstacles to the clearing of the land, so thickly does it grow and so difficult is it to pull up. Its roots, in shape resembling carrots, penetrate into the ground to the depth of a yard or more, and when its stem only is cut it sprouts out again almost immediately. As its name indicates, this palm is very small and can only attain a certain height when protected, as in the Arab cemeteries, for example.

SPECIAL EXTRA U. S. A. SUNRISE EDITION

FAIR WARNING.

THERE will be a little bee or gathering or convention on Pawnee square Saturday evening.

Most of our prominent citizens will be there. Several of them will be supplied with ropes.

There will be committees appointed to wait on various disagreeable individuals in this town and ask them how long they intend to remain.

If longer than two hours the committee will bring them to the bee.

A CALAMITY.

There was a conflagration in the Pawnee saloon the other day, and as no water was handy the flames were dashed out with four kegs of beer.

The financial loss can be made up in time, but what of the hundred people who went thirsty for a week? Hitherto, whatever happened to the rest of the town, the saloons have always been spared.

NOT OUR FAULT.

A stranger from Utah named McRoberts was told by some of the boys the other day that we were putting on a heap of style over being elected mayor for the fourth time, and he loaded up his gun and called at the office to take us down a peg or two.

Mr. McRoberts now lies in the town hospital.

We carry no chip on our shoulder, but our wheels are always greased for business.

EASY AND PLEASANT.

TO have a personal interview with the editor of the Kicker you walk into the front door, give your name to the gentleman on duty there, and, if you have less than four guns buckled around you, he passes you into the editor's room.

He sits there smoking a fifty cent cigar and with two guns on the table before him.

He smiles you a welcome, and unless you reach behind you for a handkerchief you will get through that interview without any extra holes in your body.

NO SPACE WASTED.

The weather bureau continues to send us weather reports to publish, but we don't publish them. We use the space to publish murders and elopements instead.

There is no space wasted in this journal of progress.

A GOOD RUNNER.

Our esteemed contemporary is out with the story that an attempt was made to assassinate him last Sunday night.

He says he was fired on five times by some one concealed in Dead Man's ravine. Not being armed, he ran away.

Of course he ran away. We have no love for him, and yet we would not speak of him harshly.

He was born that way and can't help himself, and he hasn't the sand to go out and hang himself and let his wife run the concern and make a living out of it.

THE PASTOR WHO HAS DONE THINGS

In That Way the Rev. Dr. Gesner Manifested His Opinion of Mr. Peters.

Last night the new Parish House of the All Saints' Episcopal church was opened to the public for the first time with a musicale by the Newton Concert Company, and several Fulton soloists. A large audience filled the hall, and the vocal and instrumental selections were given hearty applause.

Miss Vera Bovard sang "Somewhere a Voice is Calling," and was obliged to respond with an encore. Mrs. L. Fowler Joy rendered two vocal solos, and Miss Marion Lake sang "Tell Me, Pretty Nightingale," in a very acceptable manner.

The work of the orchestra, which has recently been organized was the occasion for favorable comment from all present, and it is certain that the company will be well supported in the event of a concert here, which is now being planned.

Rev. Minor J. Peters, rector, opened the exercises with prayer, and after the orchestra had played several selections, Rev. R. H. Gesner, of Oswego made an address.

Mr. Gesner complimented the people for their co-operation with their pastor in the work of building a new parish house and church, and said while others in charge of the parish had always worked with the construction of a new building in view, Mr. Peters was the first to bring the people together in the real work.

He enlivened his speech with several witty anecdotes, and in conclusion he expressed his best wishes for the success of the plan for the new church, and said the work of the people would receive the blessing of God and the appreciation of the community.

After the musical program, dancing continued until midnight, and all the young people present and many of the older members of the parish thronged the spacious floor. The basement of the church was decorated with flowers and plants to resemble a Japanese tea garden, and refreshments were served there during the dancing.

A full line of hand-embroidered articles suitable for graduation gifts and June brides; also stamped goods, for sale by Mrs. F. H. Ure, 721 Cayuga street. Phone 1502.—Adv. tf

MR. BUSINESS MAN

Will you be represented in the Old Home Week souvenir booklet and program? Practically every prominent business house in the city has engaged space in the book, and many will run photographs of their business places. A short sketch of each firm will appear in the section devoted to business men, and you should be represented.

A sollicitor will call on you this week. All advertising, cuts, etc., must be in printers' hands by Saturday night.

EDMOND J. LAPORTE,
Publisher.

ABOUT THE TOWN

The suggestion has been made by a prominent local merchant that the Made In Fulton display now in progress here be continued throughout Old Home Week. At present, theF ulton made goods are being displayed in the windows of the down-town merchants, and to keep them there for two weeks longer is out of the question. The merchant suggested that a vacant store in the down town section be rented for Old Home Week, and the various exhibits be moved to this store at the end of this week. The interior of the store should be decorated and throughout Old Home Week a man familiar with the various articles exhibited should be placed in charge, who would be able to explain the construction and uses of each exhibitor's display.

There are a number of suitable locations in the business district which could be engaged for the purpose, and if no ground floor space could be found, the exhibition could be staged in one of the many loft buildings. There is no question but that it would be very interesting for the many visitors who will come here during Old Home Week, and the advertising benefit derived would be a material one. The scheme has been tried out with great success in other cities of the state, and the results were uniformly satisfactory.

"Fulton," Secretary Hollenga's blue-blooded bull terrier, was enjoying a ride to the Chamber of Commerce office this morning in his master's car, when the machine jolted over a depression in the pavement on South First street, and the dog fell from his perch on the folded top, bumped down over the fender and landed on his nose on the hard bricks. "Fulton" turned about eight complete revolutions before he finally reached his feet, but he never uttered a sound, even though blood was trickling from a cut on his tender nose. His master did not notice the loss of his pet until he had proceeded down the street a few yards, and then "Fulton" was rescued, taken into the office, and given first aid. In a few minutes he was able to evince his usual lively interest in proceedings once more.

A bevy of pretty girls sold postal cards upon which were printed bricks of the new church at the opening of the All Saints' Parish House last night. Anything from ten cents up bought one of the "bricks" and several purchasers paid five an ten dollars for the cards. The "brick salesforce" netted a large sum.

If you want to fight, go to Mexico. Here's a chance for all young Fultonians who wish to enter the service of their country and engage in some active work on the Mexican border! First Lieutenant G. S. Martin, of Company D, National Guard, of Oswego, is in town today recruiting for the Oswego company, which is now mobilized in the Oswego Armory. The company expects a call to the front before Sunday, and while they may be ordered to Beekman, Lieutenant Martin said to-day the officers anticipate a quick trip to the front, without a stop at the concentration camp.

The National Guard of the State has been called out by Governor Whitman, and the strength of the Oswego company must be recruited to 150 men. Ninety members of the company are now mobilized in the Armory, sleeping and eating their meals in the building and ready for instant action. While large numbers of Oswego men have answered the call for recruits, 50 per cent. have been rejected by the examining physician, Captain H. S. Albertson, because of poor eyesight.

The officers of the company anticipate little difficulty in recruiting the company to its full strength in Oswego, but feel that Fulton should be given a chance to furnish some young men for the ranks.

All Fultonians between the ages of 18 and 45, who are in good health and have good eyesight are requested to meet Lieutenant Martin tonight at the Chamber of Commerce Headquarters at 7:30 o'clock. All those who enlist will go to Oswego at once for examination, and in the event that they are accepted they will immediately become members of the company and receive their uniforms and outfits for service.

Some time ago there was talk of organizing a militia company in this city, and the movement met with a ready response from several young men, many of whom now expect to enter the Oswego National Guard Company.

THE QUIRK TO-DAY.

"Defense or Tribute?" a drama of historical and spectacular grandeur. A story of anguish, hate, revenge, hope, love and chivalry—told in language so vivid, so thrilling, so logical, that from its opening "They paid the tribute in bondage," to the climax of patriotic splendor—it not only appeals—it convinces.

Through all there is a haunting melodic beauty and a triumphant rhythm that remind one of the tramp of many feet marching to the sweet music of physical, intellectual, and spiritual preparedness.

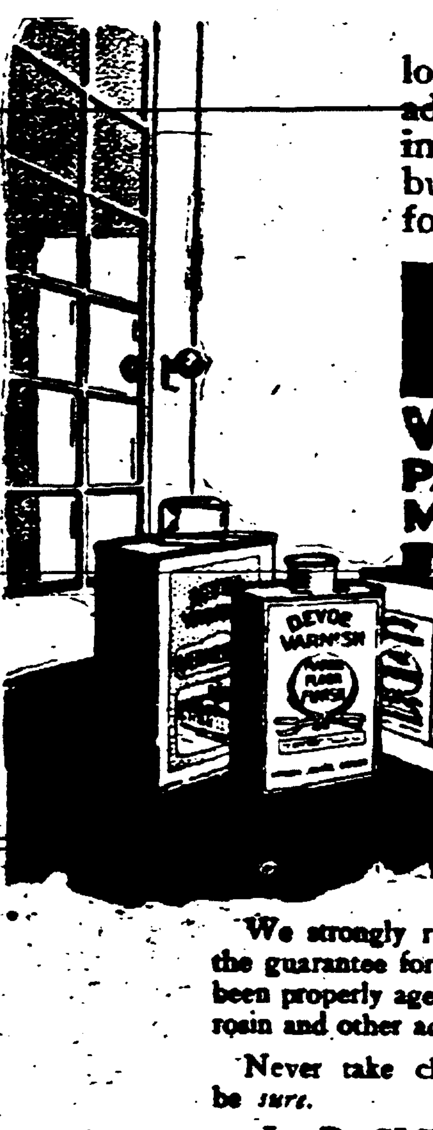
The exact formula on every can



Even an expert cannot tell by looking at varnish whether it is adulterated. That is why it is so important that you should always buy varnish with a guarantee formula.

DEVOE
THE GUARANTEED
VERNOSITE THE LONG LIFE SPAR VARNISH
PALE INTERIOR VARNISH
MARBLE FLOOR FINISH

For outside work and all surfaces exposed to water, use Vernosite. It will not turn white from rain or sleet and the sun will not blister it.

For inside woodwork where extremely transparent varnish is required, use Pale Interior. It preserves the natural beauty of the wood, is hard to mar and won't scratch white.

For all floors use Marble Floor Finish. It waterproofs the wood, and enables it to withstand the severest wear and tear without marring.

We strongly recommend these three varnishes, because the guarantee formulas on the cans prove that they have been properly aged and that they are absolutely free from rosin and other adulterants.

Never take chances with varnish. Get Devoe and be sure.

"A Herald of Progress"

John Atwater's Little Sister

How She Entertained His Guest During His Absence.

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Miss Susan Atwater kept house for a brother much older than herself. John Atwater was thirty-eight years old; Susan was nineteen. John was a lawyer who dabbled in politics—not for office, but because the game interested him.

While John and his sister were quite chummy, he never talked to her about his professional work or his interest in this or that political deal.

One day John Atwater told his sister that he must go to attend court in another city and would be gone probably [illegible] days. She was to open his letters while he was gone, attend to anything needing attention so far as she was able and communicate any matter of which he should be advised. This was asking a good deal, considering that he kept his affairs so rigidly to himself. He had not been long away before a letter came for him bearing the official mark of the governor of the state. Susan opened it and read:

Dear John—I'm going to run down to see you tomorrow. My purpose is to get away from under the harrow for a brief season. I shall eschew all affairs of state except the canal matter, on which I wish to confer with you; but, that off my mind, I propose to take a rest. Yours,

JAMES R. MARTINDALE.

P. S.—Something of importance may come up to keep me here, but I hope not.

Miss Atwater was quite upset by this letter. The governor of the state was altogether too big a man for her to entertain during her father's absence. What should she do? Telegraph, of course, that her brother would be out of town. Why not telephone? The state capital was not far distant, and the expense would be about the same. It was 11 o'clock in the morning, and the governor would doubtless be in his office. Going to the telephone booth, she consulted the subscribers' names and, finding the governor's number, took down the receiver and called for him. He was sitting at his desk at the time and answered the call at once.

"Yes, I'm Martindale."

"I am John Atwater's sister. My brother is away and before leaving asked me to open any letters that might come for him. One came from you stating that you were coming to see him. I thought it advisable to telephone you that he is absent."

"Thank you very much. When do you expect your brother home?"

"He said that he would probably be away several days."

"U'm!" The governor seemed to be considering.

"You are Miss Susan Atwater, are you not?"

"I am."

"I've heard your brother speak of you."

Susie wondered what John could have had to say to the governor of the state about her. Surely she could have nothing to do with the momentous political questions that were discussed between them.

"Well," continued the governor, after a brief silence, "I presume I'll have to defer my visit. I'm sorry. Very much obliged to you for your information. Goodby."

Of all the months in the year the month of June is the most delicious, and the morning after Susie Atwater had headed off the governor was one of the brightest mornings of that bright month. Susie Atwater, having finished her morning duties, was sitting on the porch with some embroidery work when she saw a man approaching, dressed in a white flannel suit and a straw hat. He looked to be about thirty-five years old, and there was something altogether very attractive in his appearance. He stopped at the foot of the steps and asked:

"Does John Atwater live here?"

"He does."

"Is he at home?"

"No; he went away yesterday, to be gone several days."

"That's too bad," said the stranger in a disappointed tone.

"Won't you come up on to the porch?"

The stranger availed himself of the invitation and seated himself in a wicker chair. Everything about him was very lovely. A climbing rose vine was in bloom. A field opposite was full of daisies; a pretty girl was beside him.

"Are you related to John?" he asked of Susie.

"I'm his sister."

"John and I were classmates in college. John entered at twenty, I at sixteen, but that didn't prevent our being chums. Having some time on my hands, I thought I would run down to see him. It's a long while since we met."

"I dare say he will be greatly disappointed to miss your visit."

"Not more than I."

The gentleman took out his watch and a railroad time table at the same time and examined both.

"There's no train back till 3 o'clock," he said.

"I shall be happy to do what I can to relieve the tedium of your stay till then and can give you a bite of luncheon."

"Thank you very much."

An hour was spent very pleasantly, then Susie went inside to give some orders about the luncheon. When she returned the two spend another hour, during which the stranger made himself so entertaining that Susie began to lay plans for keeping him till her brother returned. There was an apology for a chaperon [illegible] very old, in the house, whose presence would render his stay proper. After luncheon Susie said to her brother's friend:

"If you choose to wait [illegible]"

"I've been thinking that I might wait a day or two, but I would not think of intruding upon you. I'm stopping at the inn, and I can as well keep my room there. By the bye, where has John gone? I have a mind to communicate with him and learn when he'll be back."

"He's at Waterford at the Somers House."

"Where is your phone? I'll see if I can get him."

Being shown to the booth, the gentleman called up John Atwater and caught him at his hotel at the noon meal. After a brief conversation the guest told Susie that her brother wished to speak a few words with her, and on taking the receiver she was instructed to send to the inn for the gentleman's baggage and if possible keep him till he (John) returned.

"Who is he?" asked Susie.

"A college classmate of mine."

With this there was a click, and Susie was shut off from any further information. Without a word to the visitor she sent for his baggage, and it arrived in time for him to dress for dinner. Notwithstanding he had reached middle age he seemed very boyish. He talked a great deal about the escapades he and John were concerned in while in college, though he said that John was rather old for that sort of thing. Susie wondered how John's friend could have had time for escapades, for a Phi Beta Kappa key hung to his fob, and Susie knew that that meant a high stand in his class. However, he gave her the impression of being very bright, and it might be that he had been one of those students who can maintain a good standing with no great amount of study.

Susie Atwater was desirous of obtaining the guest's name, but hesitated to ask him point blank. Finally she mustered up courage to do so.

"I have a proposition to make," he replied. "When your brother returns he and I will be John and Bob to each other. You and he will be John and Sue. That leaves you and me out in the cold for Miss and Mister. What do you say to our being Bob and Susie till John comes home?"

There was something forceful about the man that prevented her insisting on a more satisfactory reply to her question. She assented to his proposition, though whenever it came to addressing him as Bob she evaded doing so by not calling him by any name at all. She was passing a very delightful season and began to wish her brother would not hurry back, because when he came he would doubtless appropriate much of the visitor's company, to her loss.

When John went away the "several days" she was to spend without him seemed long. His stay really seemed very short. He returned one morning to find his sister and the visitor sitting in the drawing room on the same sofa. With presence of mind, the latter jumped up and advanced to meet him.

"Hello, John!"

"Hello, Bob!"

"Your sister has been good enough to keep me over."

"So I see."

John grasped his friend's hand; then, turning to his sister, he said:

"Sue, this is my college friend, Bob Martindale, better known to the public today as James Robert Martindale, governor of this state. I'm glad you succeeded in keeping him until my return."

"A big job, considering how hard I've tried to get away," replied the governor ironically.

This introduction struck Miss Atwater dumb. She did not try to speak, for she was too much astonished to utter a sound. A dozen considerations rushed upon her in a heap. This young man, full of college pranks, a governor! And he had come knowing her brother was away and after leading her to suppose he would defer his visit.

"Miss Atwater," said the governor, "having heard no end of chatter from John about his interesting little sister, I long desired to see her. When you telephoned me of John's absence it occurred to me to make your acquaintance incog. You have given me the change and rest much better than he could have done it. Thanks, awfully. My brief recess is ended. I must go back to work this afternoon."

But Governor Martindale, having broken the ice by this first visit to his friend John Atwater, made many others. Whenever the cares of state became too much for him or when he wished to consult his friend about some important political move he would step away from the capital for the purpose. But when he arrived he seemed more inclined to dawdle with Miss Atwater than to talk politics with her brother.

Then his visits began to be preceded by a gift of flowers, and every one knows what that means when a man becomes attentive to one of the opposite sex.

When Sue Atwater received a proposal of marriage from the governor of the state she could not realize that a girl scarcely out of her teens had received such an honor. She did not toy with it, but accepted it at once.

Six months from that time John's little sister became the presiding lady at the executive mansion at the state capital.

Jimmy the Window Lifter

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

Tom Robbins became a burglar from reading stories of highwaymen of the Robin Hood order. He would go into a house at midnight, take away such valuables as he could carry and leave a card on which was written "Compliments of Jimmy the window lifter." Sometimes beneath a portrait of a pretty girl he would leave a few lines of so called poetry tacked under it.

One night Robbins entered the house of Albert Ferguson. Mrs. Ferguson was asleep in the front second story bedroom with a light turned low. The servants were at the rear of the house, leaving the center rooms unoccupied. Mr. Ferguson was attending a meeting of a whist club of which he was a member. Robbins, not caring to make a sound by the use of a jimmy, took out a pane of glass, unlocked a sash, lifted it up and entered the dining room.

During his wanderings in the house he came upon Mr. Ferguson's room. Finding it unoccupied, he made himself at home. In a closet he found a dress suit about his own size and concluded that he would like to play the gentleman in it. Finding linen to match in a bureau drawer, he dressed himself, leaving his own plebeian suit on the floor of the bedroom.

It would not do for a swell to carry a bag of silver or any bulky article, so Mr. Robbins helped himself to what jewelry he could find and preparatory to leaving the premises flashed a lamp on his reflection in a mirror. Noticing that his felt hat did not correspond with the rest of his costume, he returned to the closet, where he found several silk head coverings, and, selecting the best, put it on.

A capper being put on his respectability, he went downstairs and, disdaining to go out the way he came in, was about to make an exit by the front door when he heard a key scraping in the lock. Mr. Ferguson entered and by the light burning in the hall saw a man descending the staircase. On seeing Mr. Ferguson Mr. Robbins stood still and for a moment lost his equanimity. Then, assuming a puzzled air, he said:

"My friend, haven't you made a mistake?"

"Haven't you made the mistake, sir? What are you doing in my house?"

"Your house?"

"Certainly."

"Can it be possible that I am in another man's premises?"

"You are on my premises, sir, and I shall require an explanation for your being here before you will be permitted to leave."

"Come to think of it," replied Robbins, "my key failed to unlock the door. Thinking that the lock was out of order, I was obliged to find another means of entry. If I have got into your house, sir, by mistake I ask a thousand pardons."

Mr. Robbins looked so mortified at the position in which he was placed that the owner of the premises was deceived. Ferguson was a high liver and a good fellow. He not only pardoned the intruder but invited him into the dining room and, leading the way to the sideboard, produced a bottle.

"I don't think I should take anything," said Robbins. "A man who spends an evening at his club and then breaks into another man's house by mistake surely has had all he can stand up under."

"You don't show it."

"My respectful respects," said Mr. Ferguson when Mr. Robbins decided to take just one glass with his newly made friend.

"My regardless regards," responded the burglar.

"If you had not been in evening dress," remarked Ferguson, "do you know I would never have believed your story."

"Lucky dog am I."

"By the bye, how did you effect an entrance?"

Robbins pointed to the sash from which he had removed a pane of glass. Ferguson went to the window and examined the sash.

"Neat job," he observed.

"I flatter myself it's a very neat job—that is, for a man who has spent an evening convivially."

"I don't see how you did it without breaking the glass."

"Fact is," replied the burglar, helping himself to another glass, "on several occasions I've had to do this sort of a job because, not being sober, I used the wrong key or put it in upside down or something like that. A dead give away, you see, and my wife has got on to my condition at such times. I've not only learned how to do the job without making a noise, but to do it neatly."

At this point Mrs. Ferguson was heard calling her husband.

"I am keeping you," said his guest, making a move to depart. "Really, I am very much obliged for your hospitality and especially so for your consideration as to my lamentable mistake."

"We're all liable that way on returning home after an evening out."

Mr. Ferguson showed the gentleman to the door, pressed his hand warmly at parting, then went upstairs. Having kissed his wife good night he went to his room.

There lay a heap of cast off clothing on the floor. The secret was out.

Mr. Robbins in due time went the way of all crooks. He died in prison.

TWO BIRD GIRLS.

Aviation Is Said to Be Woman's Coming Profession.

"IT'S SUCH FUN TO FLY."

Already Two Women Are Making Exhibition Flights, and One Family, Two of Them Girls, Has Founded a School of Aviation In Texas.

Dressed in riding breeches and a natty Norfolk jacket and armed with (harmless) bombs, which she dropped over Manhattan, Miss Vera Pearce, accompanied by P. C. Millman, recently flew from Mineola, N. Y., over New York and around Battery park in a biplane.

Miss Pearce has a rival in this new field of enterprise for young women, Miss Katherine Stinson.

MISS VERA PEARCE.

old and weighing only 104 pounds, recently made two long, loose circles of the speedway. On the third time around, when she was about 2,000 feet above the imitation fort they were building for the flying exhibition, she made a swallow's smooth downward curve, then sheered up and back over her own path, her head and the upper part of her machine downward toward the ground. For a moment the engine stopped; then the tune of it began again. Katherine Stinson for the several hundredth time had looped the loop, and three minutes later she landed without even a jolt. She had been up less than ten minutes.

Miss Stinson wears no elaborate aviation wardrobe.

Ofter she doesn't even tuck her curls under her close fitting hood. She wears a short khaki skirt, high heeled boots and the two warmest coats she can find. Sometimes she wears riding breeches, but she doesn't in the least object to a skirt. She never allows wind or clouds to interfere with her flights. "But I don't like rain," she confessed. "It hurts. It feels exactly like sleet when you fly in it."

Besides looping the loop, she has carried United States mail, dropped bombs, made night flights, flown with her plane upside down and performed a number of other "stunts." "They always want some fancy thing thrown in at the exhibitions," she admitted carelessly.

"My sister Marjorie is only eighteen, and she's a flier. My brother Edwin is twenty-three, and he flies. In San Antonio, Tex., we three are running the Stinson school of aviation. I have another brother fifteen years old, but he wants to go to West Point. My people on both sides fought in the civil war.

"And if America went to war tomorrow I'd be an army scout," Miss Stinson added stoutly. "I tried my best to make Pershing and Funston let me go to Mexico. But they wouldn't."

For the Creeping Baby.

Here is an interesting suggestion for the young mother with the active, creeping baby: Get a good sized gray blanket, preferably woolen. Cut out the pictures from a cloth nursery picture book and sew them to the blanket. The bright pictures will attract baby's attention, and he will pat and pick at them by the hour and keep perfectly contented on his soft, warm, creeping rug. This idea may also be used in connection with the baby fence, for baby may be left inside the fence with his pictorial floor covering and run no risks of falling on sharp playthings.

WILL SLOAN'S LINIMENT RELIEVE PAIN?

Try it and see—one application will prove more than a column of claims. James S. Ferguson, Phila., Pa., writes: "I have had wonderful relief since I used Sloan's Liniment on my knees. To think after all these years of pain one application gave me relief. Many thanks for what your remedy has done for me." Don't keep on suffering, apply Sloan's Liniment where your pain is and notice how quick you get relief. Penetrates without rubbing. Buy it at any Drug Store. 25c.

TRAPPED BY HIS BLIND RAGE.

For Stupid Obstinacy a Himalayan Bear Takes the Prize.

"Most wild animals are stupid as well as greedy, but for sheer brainless obstinacy in the face of opposition," writes Prince Sarath Ghosh in his book, "The Wonders of the Jungle," "there is no animal like the Himalayan bear. If he finds a thing in his way he will always push it aside, if he can, even though it would be ... the obstacle.

"The wily natives of India have observed that trait in his character and from it have contrived a trap to catch him. They select a tree with a suitable horizontal bough. At a point on the bough about ten or twelve feet from the fork they fasten a bait likely to attract the bear—honey, for example, or goat's flesh. Then from another bough above that one they suspend a heavy block of stone. The rope is so attached to the upper bough that the stone hangs between the bait and the fork of the tree.

"The bear scents the bait from a distance, comes to the tree, sees the food on the bough and climbs up the trunk of the tree. Reaching the bough, he walks along it to get at the bait. But suddenly he notices the obstacle in the way and pushes it aside with his paw. The stone swings out of the way for a second, then it swings back and hits the bear on the paw. With a growl of irritation the bear pushes it aside more violently. The stone swings away again; then it returns with greater force and hits the bear on the chest.

"With a snarl of rage the bear gives the stone a tremendous thrust and sends it up into the air in a wide curve. Then down comes the stone in a similar curve and hits the bear a thumping whack on the ribs.

"Most animals would desist after that third blow; not so the bear. He is now in a perfectly mad rage, and a bear is a good boxer. He hits out with his paws right and left and sends the stone hurtling forward in a still wider curve. Then after a few seconds the stone comes back and hits the bear a terrific 'uppercut' on the jaw.

"The bear is roused to white hot fury. He thinks an enemy is hiding behind the stone—as an enemy might do in the jungle—and he is determined to reach that enemy.

"But, alas, the bear never went to school and learned the law of gravity! Every blow he hits the stone is returned tenfold. And as the stone has no brains to be knocked out it is the bear that gets knocked out at last. He will never, never give in until he is knocked out—of the tree.

"Then the wily natives hiding below rush in with a net and throw it quickly over him.

Why Not a Garden Pool?

As to the garden pool—why not have one? It may be ever so simply done, and often the more simple it is the more charming. Or it may be very elaborate and artificial, like those in the tiny toy gardens of those masters of artifice, the Japanese. No other garden feature offers greater possibilities for diversity of form or for originality than the pool. I know a city garden with high walls about it, rather a cramped garden because of the nearness of other dwellings. But under a small tree in that garden is a bit of a basin with water that is always fresh, set there in the sod to invite the birds for a daily bath. And where birds are there is the spirit of the woodland and mountains, no matter how high skyscrapers tower roundabout.—Bertha H. Smith in Countryside Magazine.

Thoroughly Disinfected.

In the days when the Manchu dynasty was tottering two students cut off some of their fingers as a protest to the government's delay in granting a parliament. Such forms of protest are to the Chinese what writing a letter to the paper is to the Englishman. When these students were taken to the Union Medical college the doctors remonstrated with them for misusing their bodies and running the danger of infection as well.

"Oh, you needn't fear on that point," said these students. "We boiled the knife first."—World Outlook.

Monster Coins.

It is understood that the largest gold coin in circulation is the gold "loof" of Anam, the French colony in eastern Asia. It is a flat round piece worth 25s English money. The next size to this unwieldy coin is the Japanese "obang," which weighs more than two and a half ounces and is about equal to ten English sovereigns.—London Opinion.

The Seven Seas.

"The seven seas" is a poetic name for the oceans of the earth. The "waters embraced" in the term include, therefore, all the great waters of the earth. Specifically the seven seas are divided as the north and south Atlantic, north and south Pacific, Arctic, Antarctic and Indian oceans.

Distinctly Personal In Style

A blue linen that has the distinction of possessing personal style. It is trimmed with a bertha and undercuffs of soft white batiste.

Every woman should aim to have personal style. That is something more than the material of a frock and the way it is cut can accomplish. To have style one must have accessories, these are the details that count. In the frock illustrated the bertha of soft batiste and undercuffs gathered to straight self-bands are the details that have the most telling influence upon the frock of old blue linen. The waist is cut in blouse style and held in with a girdle of blue suede clasped with a cameo buckle. In medium size the dress requires 7¼ yards 36-inch material.

Special attention will be paid to the cutting of the waist because it is decidedly new and looks well in other materials for independent wear. Some sections of the pattern are laid on a fold of material to be cut, while others are placed on an open width of the linen.

The piecing for the peplum and front are laid first on the open width of material, which is double, right sides facing, to be cut in duplicate. In the upper row are the cuff, inserted sleeve section and the sleeve, all placed on a lengthwise thread of material. Although made of batiste, the inserted sleeve is cut in the same way as illustrated.

The peplum, collar and back of the waist are placed on a lengthwise fold of linen. If desired, the peplum may be made of flouncing, many beautiful linens being shown embroidered in eyelet design this season. If this variation is adopted, cut off lower edge of peplum on small 'o' perforations and place pattern on material with lower edge along bordered edge of material.

The design is an especially dainty one for all-over embroidery or one of the fashionable bordered materials.

A TALE OF TURKEY.

Queer Things That Happened In the Name of the Constitution.

The ignorance of the Turkish masses concerning political questions, says Sir Edwin Pears in "Forty Years In Constantinople," is shown by certain incidents of the revolution of 1908. The hamals, or porters, in the towns, like the peasants in the country, when they heard that his majesty had sworn to be faithful to the constitution, inquired what it was. Was it a person? Was it a new caliph? And very few could give any clear explanation. The words "liberty" and "equality" meant something good, although they could not have said what. To some they signified general license.

Two English friends of mine were motoring outside Smyrna when a number of Turkish boys set upon them and flung stones at them. The Englishmen gave chase and caught the principal offenders. The eldest was asked why he had thrown stones.

"Hurriet var," was the reply. "There's liberty. We can do what we like now."

The Englishman replied, "Hurriet var, and I am at liberty to give you a good thrashing, am I not?"

One of the boys said yes, he supposed that would be so, but he hoped the liberty would not be used. The Englishman replied that it would not be used that time, but if the offense were repeated he would use it to the fullest extent.

The workmen on a newspaper during that time asked for a large increase of wages.

"But why?" asked the owner.

"Because there is a constitution."

The tramway men struck for higher wages, and the only justification that they put forward was that there was now a constitution. Yet men of all classes cheered in the lustiest manner for the constitution. Throughout the month of August smuggled tobacco was openly sold in the streets at a very cheap rate, buyers and sellers alike considering that the constitution allowed men to set aside the law that had made the sale of tobacco a government monopoly.

HOSPITALITY IN SYRIA.

A Custom That May Have a Bearing on a Passage In Scripture.

Approaching his hoped for guest, a Syrian engages him in something like the following dialogue, characterized by a glow of feeling which the translation can only faintly reveal:

"Ennoble us by your presence."

"I would be ennobled, but I cannot accept."

"That cannot be."

"Yea, yea, it must be."

"No, I swear against you by our friendship and by the life of God. I love just to acquaint you with my bread and salt."

"I swear also that I find it impossible to accept. Your bread and salt are known to all."

"Yea, do it just for our own good. By coming to us you come to your own home. Let us repay your bounty to us."

"Astaghfero Allah (by the mercy of God) I have not bestowed any bounty upon you worth mentioning."

Here the host seizes his guest by the arm and with an emphatic, "I will not let you go," pulls at him and would drag him bodily into his house. Then the guest, happy in being vanquished "with honor," consents to the invitation.

Do you now understand fully the meaning of the passage in the fourteenth chapter of Luke's gospel? "A certain man made a great supper, and bade many, * * * and they all with one consent began to make excuse, * * * And the Lord said unto the servant, 'Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled.'"—Abraham Mitrie Rihbany in Atlantic Monthly.

Alexander the Great's active military career began when he was only eighteen years old and ended at thirty-three; Hannibal's lasted from thirteen to forty-seven; Caesar's from forty to fifty-five; Gustavus' from sixteen to thirty-eight; Frederick's from twenty-eight to fifty-one, and Napoleon's from twenty-seven to forty-six. When thirty-five years old Napoleon said of himself: "One has only a certain time for war. I shall be good for it but six years more; then even I shall stop." His downward career began when he was forty.—New York Sun.

Havana, or San Cristobal de la Habana, as it was originally named, was the last of seven cities founded in Cuba by the island's conqueror, the Adelantado Diego Velasquez, the date being July 25, 1515. Since that was twenty-three years after the well known Columbus date there can't be many new world cities older than Havana, assuming that most of the other six in Cuba have since disappeared.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

If she has not she seeks, and if she has she desires it not, seems to be the spirit actuating the youthful wearer of this season's frocks with the distended hips. Upon slender figures the wing pockets are very graceful and a slender figure easily can stand the accordion plaited frills added to the pockets. The waist is shaped away at the waistline and worn over a guimpe of crepe. In medium size the frock requires 5 yards 36-inch taffeta and 2 yards crepe.

The Casserole.

MUTTON EN CASSEROLE.—Use the best end of neck of mutton boned and with all fat trimmed off. Stuff it with veal stuffing. Tie it into shape. Place in a deep casserole some fat bacon, sliced carrot, turnip and onion and the meat and fry until the meat is colored; then add a pint of stock. Cover and cook for an hour and a half to two hours in a fairly hot oven. Remove the fat from the liquor. Before serving take the liquor and vegetables and sieve them, brown and color the sauce. Replace the bacon, cut the meat into portions, pour the sauce over and make very hot. If liked add mushrooms or some cooked sausage cut into small pieces, and for a change add some tomato sauce or a little mushroom ketchup. Serve in the casserole.

Beef en Casserole.—If steak is too dear use shin of beef. Cut into neat pieces. Season with salt and pepper and dredge a little flour over. Chop and fry an onion with the meat. Add some shred bacon or skinned sliced sausage, a pinch of sugar and of mixed herbs, some cooked butter beans and sliced boiled carrot. Cover with stock, cook very gently until the meat is done. Brown and thicken the sauce or merely add a little glaze or a spoonful of marmite to it and serve very hot. Macaroni can be added or haricot beans, and, of course, rabbit or chicken is excellent cooked en casserole with bacon and onion added.

Butter Beans en Casserole.—Wash and then soak the beans for twelve hours and then cook them in enough water to cover well. Bring to boiling point, and then simmer most gently until soft and the water absorbed. Slice about half the quantity of boiled carrot and a quarter the quantity of raw onion. Fry the onion in a casserole, add the carrot and butter beans, stir about and add salt and pepper and a little margarine. Serve with meat.

Vegetable Growers Favor Four Dealers

trict, and Mr. Day said Mr. Duke, traffic manager of the company, had made an exhaustive inquiry regarding the acreage in that section and the probable shipments, and had followed these inquiries with a request for further information from the Fulton representative of the railroad, indicating that the company was seriously considering the matter.

In conclusion, Mr. Day announced that no decision from either company had yet been received by any of the members of the company.

Small Shipments Permitted

G. C. Gardner, of Syracuse, representing the New York Central Railroad, was asked to explain to the members the new scheme of shipments which will be put into effect by the company this year. Mr. Gardner said new arrangements have been made whereby shipments of less than 10,000 pounds, would be handled at the regular carload rate plus 5 cents, per 100 pounds for refrigeration, making a total of 41.8 cents per hundred, including the ice. This figure approximates less than 10 cents a crate. Mr. Gardner's figures showed the approximate cost of getting a carload of lettuce to New York or Philadelphia was $50. The new scheme will permit of smaller shipments by small growers and if a carload lot is to consist of several different shipments a separate bill of lading will be furnished each shipper. In the event of re-icing, which is seldom necessary, the extra cost will be divided pro-rata. Mr. Gardner stated that the lettuce shipments to New York leaving here at noon pass the re-icing station, Frankford, at 4 a. m. the next morning, and those to Philadelphia pass Newbury Junction, the re-icing station, at 4 o'clock the next afternoon. He added that most of the cars which will be used this year hold 7,500 pounds of ice and many carry five tons.

In calling to the attention of the members the selection of the commission houses, President Head urged prompt action, and said it was the wish of most of the members to arrive at a decision at once.

O. T. Day was accorded the floor, and in a short address to the members, he asked frankness on the part of all present, in order that each man might learn of the treatment of his fellow members at the hands of the commission houses, and thereby make his personal decision with the best interests of the association in mind.

Would Have More Freedom

One of the members of the association was of the opinion that restriction of the shipments to four houses would have tendency to overload these houses, with the result that the association members would get low prices for their produce.

John Churchill made a strong plea for the retention of one of the smaller houses and said one of the small houses in question had given some of the members better prices last year than the large commission mrchants. The larger merchants, according to Mr. Churchill, did not give as careful attention to small shipments as did the smaller houses.

Mr. Day remarked that one of the large houses last year which handled sixty per cent of the Fulton lettuce had given a betteruniform price throughout the entire season than any of the other three houses which received shipments.

One of the members said he had made an agreement for personal reasons with an outside commission house, which would receive his lettuce this year, regardless of the selections of the association.

Mr. Day urged the members to stand by the selection of the majority, and he was supported in this plea by several other members, who stated that some of the commission men were anxious to see the local association disrupted and were only too eager for a chance to create dissension.

An early vote of the members showed the majority were in favor of restricting the shipments to four houses, and on a second ballot, the four were selected.

The association will meet again as son as a definite answer from the transportation companies is received. It was also suggested that the association meet every two weeks during the summer for the purpose of hearing reports from the members of the treatment accorded them by the commission houses with a view to discontinuing shipments to any one or all houses which were not giving fair praices.

SUNDAY HOLDS UP INVITATION

Syracuse—Billy Sunday has not as yet decided whether he will conduct a second campaign in this city. However, he will in all probability accept the invitation of the Billy Sunday Business Men's Club of this city to spend a few days as its guest in August if it is possible to do so. It all depends on the illness of Paul Sunday, who was taken ill at the close of the Kansas City campaign.

The Kansas City campaign ended with a total of trail hitters of 20,600. The free will offering reached $32,000.

It also has been announced that Billy's campaign in New York has been indefinitely postponed. Billy says that he is convinced that the New Yorkers would be unable to get ready for him by January 1, 1917. This means another re-arrangement of his schedule lasting one week in Ocean Grove, N. J., from August 26 to September 3rd. He will open September 10 in Detroit for seven or eight weeks. He will then go to Boston. He is now considering an invitation from Grand Rapids, Mich., and Rochester, which will probably be fitted in somewhere to take the place of New York city.

TRUST CO. PREPARES TO FORECLOSE BRANCH ROAD

The trust company will at the request of the bondholders protective committee ask for forcloseure proceedings following the default of the bonds May 1. Sixty days being necessary to elapse before these proceedings can be brought after default the latter will come to issue on that day.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only way way to cure catarhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

TOYS HIS FIRST GIFTS TO GIRL HE COURTED

Bride, Twenty-three Years Old, Marries Father's Friend, Thirty-nine Years Her Senior.

New York.—A romance that had its beginning in the close friendship between the bride's father and the elderly bridegroom resulted recently in the marriage of Miss Mabel Evelyn Cristadoro of Flushing, N. Y., to Harrison Hodges, purchasing agent for the Long Island railroad. Mr. Hodges, whose home is at 58 West Fifty-seventh street, is sixty-two years old, while his bride is twenty-three.

Mr. Hodges has passed practically his whole life in the railroad business and is very widely known. Many years ago Miss Cristadoro's father, Charles Cristadoro, also was engaged in the railroad business. A close friendship sprang up between the men, and almost from the day of her birth Mr. Hodges evinced a deep interest in the daughter of his friend and companion.

At first, the bride said laughingly, Mr. Hodges' gifts to her were toys and the other "goodies" usually so acceptable to children. In recent years, however, friends of Miss Cristadoro became convinced that there was something more than casual friendship for the young woman in the attentions bestowed upon her by Mr. Hodges. They were not surprised recently when it became generally known that they were to be married, although Mr. Hodges had been looked upon as a confirmed bachelor.

FOOT IN FROG; NOW DEAD.

Directed Work of Rescue After Twenty-four Cars Mangled Him.

Altoona, Pa.—After preparing to make a coupling in the Pennsylvania yards here, Brakeman H. Ward Hall slipped from his car, and the next instant his right foot was caught in a switch frog. He struggled to free himself, but could not.

Then he tried frantically to save himself by signaling the engineer, who was pushing a draft of twenty-four cars toward him, but the man on the locomotive could not see him.

When members of his crew found him later his right arm and right leg had been severed and he was pinned under a big steel car, but still conscious. Every car had run over him.

He directed the work of the men who were rescuing him and was rushed to the hospital, where he died four hours later.

CHAINS HIS PRISONER.

Sheriff Takes No Chances as He Moves a Man.

Kansas City, Mo.—M. F. Moore, sheriff of Yates Center, Kan., doesn't take chances with prisoners. He dropped in at police headquarters the other morning on the way home from Colusa, Ill., leading Amos Wilkins at the end of a chain ten feet long.

"I want to leave this chap here while I see the town," said the sheriff.

"All right, but you'll have to pay for his meals," said a booking clerk.

"Let him have what he wants; I'll pay," said Sheriff Moore.

As soon as the sheriff turned his back the prisoner ordered ham and eggs, apple pie, coffee and other food.

Wilkins said he was going to plead guilty to forging a twenty-five dollar check when he got back to Yates Center.

HIS TROUSERS A BARREL.

Flames Burn Motorman's Clothing as He Tries to Fix Car.

Harrison, N. J.—When his trolley, after coming to a sudden stop at Harrison avenue and Fourth street, refused to stir another inch, John Lynch, the motorman, put his passengers aboard a relief car and proceeded to investigate.

He diagnosed the symptoms as a disorder in the control box and proceeded to supply a cure. An inserted monkey wrench brought forth a blast of flame which licked up Lynch's trousers. Assuming a "September Morn" pose—for it was an open car—he shouted for help. This came in the form of a barrel, and Lynch walked to another pair of trousers.

Council Downs Sign of Welcome Wanted by Chamber of Commerce

A special meeting ofthe Common Council was called for last evening, principally for the purpose of receiving bids for two blocks of bonds which the city will sell August 1. In addition to the Aldermen, Mayor, City Attorney and representatives of New York brokerage firms present, Secretary Hollenga of the Chamber of Commerce appeared before the board for the purpose of making several requests and suggestions relative to the Old Home Week celebration.

Mr. Hollenga first requested the council to purchase decorations for the City Hall during the celebration, including an electric sign reading "Fulton Bids You Welcome" which would cost approximately $75. The sign would be illuminated at night during the celebration, and the Secretary explained that it would be a permanent purchase, which could be used in the future during other events of the kind and for conventions which come to the city.

He further requested that the council order Rochester street, between First and Second streets, closed during Old Home Wek, in order that this street might be used as a midway for the concessions which will be staged during the celebration. In addition, he asked that the council suspend the city's prerogative in collecting license fees for the concessions and that funds so collected be contributed to the Chamber of Commerce to be used in defraying expenses of the celebration. In this connection he stated that the committee in charge

He was the first prisoner to escape from the death house since 1893. He killed John Rizzo, a fellow gangster and two policemen who tried to arrest him in New York.

Students Win Encomiums of Experts Skilled in the Finer Products of Handwork

The second annual exhibit of the Arts and Crafts Department of the [illegible]. Miss Cook, the instructor, assisted by members of the class received the visitors and explained the various steps in the construction of the articles on exhibit.

At once, when one enters the room, an impression is received that work has been accomplished, the scope of which is greater than the school room measures. Here and there can be seen a bright-faced girl bending with thoughtful eyes above the particular piece of craftsmanship she has wrought. Each line in the article, whether it be of brass, copper, silver, leather, reed, or textile, means something. Here are expressed materially in the many beautiful objects, truth, honesty and usefulness.

Under the capable direction of a master hand, each student has wrought out his problem. Here these students learned to strike the true keynote of life, wherein it is found that when one labors happily the result expresses perfection, so beautifully, so sincerely, that even the untrained eye cannot fail to take note. Truth and honesty are always beautiful and satisfying, whether they find expression in the voice of a friend, a carved box, an embossed leather-bound book, wrought copper, silver, or brass articles—it is always the same, with its quiet dignity and utter simplicity.

In the building of our city there can be no doubt that the Arts and Crafts Department is building and molding in the character of Fulton's citizens of tomorrow, qualities that will not only enable them to form ideals—but also to execute them.

In the book binding work on exhibition especial credit is given to these students: The Misses Mildred and Marion Brown, Ruth Wilcox, Edna Wolcott, Agnes Atwood, Elizabeth Royce, Mildred Hart and Ruth Beals. Many of these books have covers of richly embossed leather, the whole perfectly executed.

HOW THE NEWSPAPER SERVES

The local editor can clean up anything by simply printing the facts over and over again. It has long been a puzzle to business men that a master of the incisive phrase should devote his chief energies to business management. The answer lies, perhaps, in the fact, that, while he would make a prominent editor, he would prefer to attain to a high distinction as a publisher and assume a task appealing to his taste and stimulating to his desire.

The daily newspaper may clean up anything by simply printing the facts over and over again, illuminating these facts through editorial comment.

In fact, every day is "clean up day" with a newspaper. For every day brings to the fore some question, some problem involving civic betterment, for the classification, for the solution of which, the light—and nothing but the light—will serve. Who suffers, what interest is hurt, must always be disregarded—if the public welfare demands the light.

Simply printing the facts over and over again is a constructive performance—not merely a destructive one. The advertiser realizes the value of the policy. The newspaper serves him by affording him the opportunity to print the facts about his business, about his commodity, over and over again and to inform the people of Fulton and surrounding country what he has to offer in a business way. Thus the law of the light operates to build up that which is worthy of public confidence and favor. For the light does more than to cure abuses. It gives life and vitality to every good thing, whether that thing happens to be a public policy or a business enterprise. The Fulton Evening Times under the present management will support and stand back of everything that is GOOD and for the best interests of Fulton.

New York Herald:

The decline in ocean freight rates during the last week has been very sharp—grain down one-third and cotton down one-half from $2.50 to $1.25.

Shipping men say the reaction is seasonal, that the lowest figures probably have been reached and that later in the summer—assuming that the war is to continue—rates will advance to new high levels.

The truth appears to be that the extraordinary rise in the charges for ocean transportation curtailed foreign purchases in this country—aside from munitions that went out under contract—and the resulting shrinkage in the volume of commodities pressing for shipment has caused shippers to compete for the business.

It is the automatic working of the economic law of supply and demand.

The Woman's Journal:

The endorsement of equal suffrage by the National Republican Convention means more than appears on the surface. Many of the delegates are sincerely in favor of votes for women. But it may well be doubted whether these in themselves were a majority. The suffrage plank was carried because to those who believed in it out of personal conviction were added those who recognized it as a measure of practical expediency. There was a deeper significance in the fact that men who did not believe in suffrage felt obliged to vote for it than in the votes of those who supported it with good will.

Political sagacity has been defined as the power to tell a band wagon from a hearse. A large part of the Republican leaders have come to see that the suffrage movement is the band wagon and the opposition the hearse. The convention's action will serve notice upon the smaller Republican political leaders all over the country that their national leaders have arrived at this conclusion. It will carry a like notice to the Democrats.

The action of the National Republican Convention is especially encouraging, coming as it did just on the heels of the Iowa defeat. There had been a general belief that if Iowa carried, the Republicans would adopt a suffrage plank, but that if Iowa failed, the suffrage plank would be turned down. The endorsement shows that the National Republican Convention recognized the outcome in Iowa for what it is—a mere local and temporary check, a passing eddy in the current of the great river that is sweeping majestically toward the ocean of full and equal rights for women. It clearly had not enough weight with the convention to offset the solid fact that millions of women already have the right to vote, in twelve States of the Union. The Republicans want these women's votes, and the votes of their husbands, brothers and sons.

New York World:

Under the decision of the Appellate Division very little is left to the indictment against Thomas Mott Osborne, former warden of Sing Sing. It is reduced to a simple charge of neglect of duty whatever that means.

The attack on Mr. Osborne's personal character contained in the indictment the court denounces "as legally meaningless in the prosecution of a criminal action, but oppressively injurious by suggestion." The obvious effect of this pointed language is to bring under suspicion both the motives and methods of the Westchester Grand Jury and its legal adviser in reflecting on the ex-warden's morality.

This decision of the Appellate Division should mean the end of the whole legal campaign against Mr. Osborne. As warden of Sing Sing, he was answerable to State Superintendent of Prisons Riley. Mr. Riley himself has been forced out by the governor for his part in the Sing Sing affair. It is clearer than ever that prison ring politics has been at the bottom of the whole business.

New York Mail:

An important discovery for which city dwellers are indebted to Dr. Charles E. North is that fine barns do not make clean milk, because the milkman and not the cow is guilty in every case where the bacteria count runs up.

Dr. North's experiments in reducing the bacteria count from 5,000,000 to 800 by merely changing the milkman have thrown out of consideration a whole school of dairy inspection.

The milk from the $10,000 barn is now no longer able to win its way as "certified" while the milkman continues to pollute it by unsanitary methods until it is much more dangerous to health than the milk from the humblest cowshed that is produced under trained auspices.

In order to give the city dweller a full advantage of this newly discovered situation milk distributers are marketing as grade A milk the product that comes to the milk station with a lower bacteria count than 200,000. They are paying the producer a premium for grade A milk, but the producer, to win recognition, must bring his bacteria count under 10,000. The consumer who wants the protection of cleanly produced milk must stand for a bacteria count twenty times as great as that for which the farmer is paid on the score of purity.

Apparently the milkmen are on the right track, but they have still some distance farther to go before creating ideal conditions. It would seem only fair that the consumer should pay extra for approximately the same standard of milk as that for which the producer receives extra pay.

Under the present conditions, with a bacteria count of 200,000 for the consumer, and 10,000 for the producer if he is to win an extra premium, over 20 per cent. of all the bottled milk business of the city is in grade A milk. And this new business has sprung up almost within a year. Since it is known that bacteria certainly indicate filth, and clean milking can produce bacteria counts as low as 800, couldn't the health department impose a more rigid standard for grade A quality—say a standard of 100,000 for the immediate future, this standard to be still further strengthened as clean milking becomes the rule?

Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press:

Has the church a soul? This question, printed three times on the first page of a Chicago paper, is asked by a church layman who protests publicly against the action of certain church members in discharging their pastor of fifteen years' service because he is guilty of having grown old. All sorts of nice things are said of his present work and past record except that he has passed the ministerial dead line of fifty years.

On its face a proposal, at bottom the question of the aged minister's place has a practical side.

The church has been charged with being behind the times. One of its answers is the marked tendency to put young men into the pulpit. Youth understands youth. In fishing for men the churches must use the bait that will catch the fish. Hence, it is said, we must have men of youth, able to endure the physical strain of modern parish work, apt to voice in terse phrases the gospel which will attract the worldly, indifferent and careless masses of the day.

Pathetic, indeed, if not merciless is the condition, reflecting the tenseness of these times, which puts 200 old ministers of one denomination alone in the city of Los Angeles out of service to the cause which they were, as they believed, "divinely called" to support.

But the church must also consider its own efficiency. No institution can last which habitually exiles those of its leaders who have had the benefit of experience. Perhaps the older pastor who is not so gifted with the aggressive spirit of the age as his young competitor is really the man needed for many a situation. Modern emphasis on physical culture has set the line of efficiency far ahead of what it has been in former years for many men. At Plainwell, Mich., only a few days ago a church celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the single pastorate of one man, who at eighty-four years of age is as alert and modern-minded as the neighborhood seems to desire. Youth is not always a matter of years but of spirit.

Both Wilson and Marshall Began Careers as Lawyers

President, However, Took Up College Work—Renomination Comes During Administration Marked by European War.

Vice President First Became Prominent as Governor of Indiana, Only Other Office Held — Wife Aided In Election.

HISTORY will make note that the Democratic convention at St. Louis was a ratification gathering. It assembled to nominate for president and vice president respectively Woodrow Wilson and Thomas R. Marshall.

When the story of Woodrow Wilson shall come to be written historians no doubt will divide his life into four periods—forty-six years of study of government and preparation; eight years of experience as executive head of a university, fitting him for action; three years in the practical field of politics in winning the governorship of New Jersey and conducting the affairs of that office, and finally the administration of the presidency of the United States. The key to Woodrow Wilson's career is found in that major division of forty-six years devoted to preparation. To understand him he must be thought of as a man who has gone through such a training and is an indefatigable worker.

WOODROW WILSON.

Born In Virginia.

Woodrow Wilson was born in Staunton, Va., on Dec. 28, 1856, the son of Joseph R. and Jessie Woodrow Wilson. The stock is Scotch-Irish. The early years of his life were spent in South Carolina and Georgia, where his father, a minister of the Presbyterian church, had charges, and at seventeen he was sent to Davidson college. Two years later he went north to enter Princeton and was graduated in 1879. At college he was a prime favorite with his fellows—not overstudious, as one may judge from his rank of forty-first in a class of 122.

From Princeton Wilson went to the University of Virginia. There he studied law for one year. From Virginia Wilson went to Atlanta and there sought to eke out a living by selling his knowledge of law to clients. The clients did not come—not altogether to Wilson's dismay, for he was not interested in the practice of law, but in its principles—and a year later found him at Johns Hopkins university. In 1885 he published his book, "Congressional Government—A Study of Government by Committee." This is now largely used as a textbook in colleges and graduate schools in this country.

His Two Marriages.

In the summer of 1885, just before taking up his work as professor at Bryn Mawr, he married Miss Ellen Louise Axson of Savannah. Mrs. Wilson died at the White House Aug. 6, 1914, and the president married Dec. 18, 1915, Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt of Washington. The president has three daughters — Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, wife of the secretary of the treasury.

Wilson entered the faculty of Princeton university in 1890 and was made professor of political economy and jurisprudence, later of jurisprudence and politics. In 1902, upon the death of the Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, he was elected president of Princeton university. He was the first man not a clergyman to hold that office.

For eight years he served that university as its head and was constantly voted the most popular man on the faculty, while his courses were voted both difficult and popular.

From the presidency of Princeton he became the nominee for governor of New Jersey, being elected Nov. 8, 1910. The state had consistently been carried by the Republicans for sixteen consecutive years before that election. He advocated important reform legislation, and it was embodied in the state laws. Wilson carried to the people his fight on Senator James Smith, Jr., the Democratic boss who aspired to the senatorship, and defeated him.

Addressed Congress Personally.

In 1912, at the Democratic convention in Baltimore, on the forty-sixth ballot he was nominated by a vote of 990 to Champ Clark's 84. Then followed the election of Wilson, with a total vote of 6,291,776, over Theodore Roosevelt, with 4,106,247, and William H. Taft, with 3,481,119. He was the first Democratic president to hold office since Grover Cleveland left the White House in 1897.

On March 4, 1913, Mr. Wilson was inaugurated, and thirty-five days after he took the oath as president of the United States he appeared in the house of representatives and addressed congress, assembled in joint session, thus reverting to the practice of early presidents.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL.

Administration Full of Worries.

Since reaching the White House President Wilson has had no end of trouble. The Mexican affair has caused him more than one worried day. The Vera Cruz and Huerta incidents and finally the bandit raid which resulted in the sending of our troops over the border have all been part of the president's worries.

It is the terrible conflict abroad, however, which began in his second year in office, that has caused, and still causes, more worries to Mr. Wilson than any president since Lincoln's time has had to contend with.

Uses a Typewriter.

Wilson is the only president of the United States and the only actual head of any nation or government in the world who uses a typewriter and shorthand notes together. He is the only head of a government to use a typewriter at all. His usual method in preparing a speech, diplomatic paper or anything of that sort is to write it all out in shorthand first; then, sitting down to his typewriter with the shorthand notes before him, he transcribes the notes into as good English as any man can write.

Like his predecessor as Democratic president he really has more than two names. The late Grover Cleveland's full name was Stephen Grover Cleveland. Mr. Wilson's full name is Thomas Woodrow Wilson. Each dropped the first name early in life.

Likes Golf and Walking.

The president's love of plain fun and good stories is in itself a refutation of the idea that he is a reserved, austere scholar with aristocratic leanings. Whether it was aboard a train, in the smoking room of the steamer bound for Bermuda, in the quiet of his study at Princeton or at the White House, Mr. Wilson has revealed himself as a very approachable individual.

He stands five feet ten inches in his socks, and his weight of 177 pounds is well placed. "He can run half a mile at a good clip without losing his wind," an admirer of his said recently. Golf and walking are his favorite exercises.

The Vice President.

Thomas Riley Marshall, renominated for the vice presidency by the Democrats, won his success in politics by reforms. It might be added, too, that he won by virtue of a good stock of native ability and resourcefulness.

Mr. Marshall was born in Manchester, Ind., March 14, 1854, and is two and a half years older than Woodrow Wilson. He had a common school education before entering Wabash college, from which he was graduated in 1873. On his twenty-first birthday he was admitted to the practice of law in Columbia City, Ind., and remained there until his election as governor of the state.

At the bar he was known chiefly for his wit and resourcefulness as a trial lawyer and his habit of careful and thorough preparation. One of his brother lawyers remarked about him that "to spring a surprise on Tom Marshall you needn't get up early in the morning. You have to sit up all night."

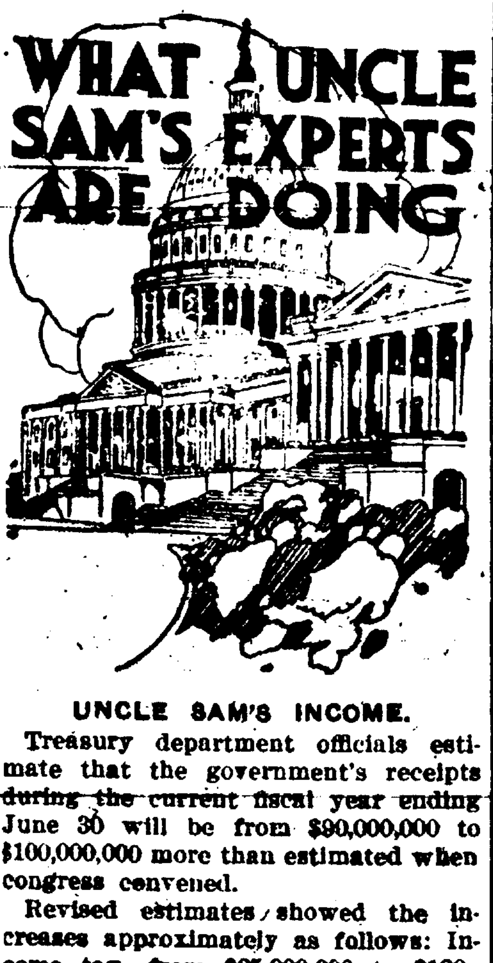
Marshall Likes New Things.

In his campaign for the governorship of Indiana, the only office held by Mr. Marshall besides the vice presidency, he introduced a new style of stumping the state, a leisurely, homely way. He and Mrs. Marshall traveled about the state without much plan or purpose mapped out, and wherever they went he told the people what he thought about politics and state affairs. He held no conferences with local leaders, but continued his amiable way. Practical politicians laughed at him. There was not even any handshaking or cigar giving in his plan. But on election day "Little Tom" Marshall was elected.

In his first term of office Marshall was opposed by the state senate, which was Republican. In the election of 1910, however, the people gave him a legislature wholly Democratic. Then Marshall had on his hands the fight against Thomas Taggart, now senator. He won, electing Kern to the senate over Taggart's opposition.

At the Baltimore convention in 1912 he had little opposition for the vice presidential nomination.

Among the laws which he favored and signed in the second term of his administration as governor were those providing for a corrupt practices and publicity of campaign contributions act, for employers' liability on liberal lines, for the strengthening of the railroad commission's powers and for greater safety of industrial workers.



UNCLE SAM'S INCOME.

Treasury department officials estimate that the government's receipts during the current fiscal year ending June 30 will be from $90,000,000 to $100,000,000 more than estimated when congress convened.

Revised estimates showed the increases approximately as follows: Income tax, from $85,000,000 to $120,000,000, an increase of $35,000,000 over the original estimate; ordinary internal revenue receipts from $272,000,000 to $305,000,000, an increase of $33,000,000; customs receipts, from $190,000,000 to $215,000,000, an increase of $25,000,000. With these three principal sources of revenue showing an indicated increase of $93,000,000 over the original estimates, officials believe minor sources will help bring the total increase close to $100,000,000.

Customs receipts show that the government already has collected duties aggregating $185,446,412, only $1,000 less than the sum collected this time last year and within $5,500,000 of the sum originally estimated for the entire year.

Customs receipts have been steadily rising since last December and now have passed $20,000,000 a month. Continuance of present conditions for another year, officials believe, would result in the customs receipts nearly reaching the level attained before the war.

DR. PRATT'S ADDRESS.

Dr. Edward Ewing Pratt, chief of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, in a recent lecture discussed the problems that the American lumber industry faces. Here are some of his statements:

"Great instability has prevailed in the lumber industry—an instability that has made losses and not profits the order of the day.

"You are seeking a purely legal remedy for a problem which is purely economic.

"The lumber industry must find more efficient marketing methods and larger markets for its products.

"Foreign trade is one of the things vitally necessary if the lumber industry is to be put on its feet.

"Probably most lumber manufacturers have never exported a stick of lumber.

"Our lumber has sold in Europe, but it has sold itself.

"Foreign trade is conducted through exactly the same fundamental business principles as domestic trade.

"The yellow pine industry should take up the matter of measurements in the South American trade.

"Why not have in every important center of South America an agency of this association which would keep its eyes open for opportunities?

"Why not have a score of offices to demonstrate to South America how to use wood to the best advantage?"

NEW COMMERCIAL ATTACHE FOR LONDON.

Pierce C. Williams of New York has been appointed American commercial attache at London to succeed Albertus H. Baldwin, who has held the post since the commercial attache service was inaugurated, nearly two years ago, by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, department of commerce.

At the time of his appointment by Secretary Redfield, Mr. Williams was connected with W. R. Grace & Co. of New York, having charge of their foreign trade in ores. He had previously been employed with the Crucible Steel Company of America, for which concern he traveled extensively in South America and Europe. Further experience in foreign trade promotion was acquired as an official of the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce.

Mr. Williams is only thirty years of age and is the youngest member of the commercial attache staff. He leaves at once for his new post.

EXPORT OF CALIFORNIA TOBACCO.

A firm in San Francisco reports to Commercial Agent E. G. Babbitt, in charge of the district office of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce in that city, that it has made a shipment, equivalent to a carload, of "Turkish" tobacco grown in California to Australia. It is stated that if this shipment is satisfactory to the consignees it will probably lead to further Australian purchases of this product in California.

It is understood that this is the first export of tobacco grown in California.

USE MORE RETROLEUM.

The United States geological survey reports that there was a marked increase in the use of petroleum as a locomotive fuel by the railroads of the United States in 1915. The quantity of oil fuel so consumed last year was 36,648,466 barrels, an increase of 5,555,200 barrels, or 18 per cent over the similar consumption in 1914.

TO ERADICATE YELLOW FEVER IN SOUTH AMERICA

General Gorgas Heads Commission Sent by Rockefeller Foundation.

The international health board of the Rockefeller foundation has constituted a yellow fever commission consisting of the following: General William C. Gorgas, U. S. A., chairman; Dr. Henry R. Carter, clinician (of United States public health service); Dr. Juan Guiteras, clinician and general adviser (head of public health service of Cuba and authority on yellow fever); Dr. C. C. Lyster, clinician; Dr. Eugene R. Whitmore, pathologist; Dr. William D. Wrightson, sanitary engineer; Harry H. Wakefield, secretary.

To undertake this work General Gorgas has obtained leave of absence from the United States army for four months.

The commission sailed recently on the steamer Almirante for a trip to various points in South America where yellow fever is still supposed to exist. Its purpose will be to gather information and report upon the feasibility of a campaign for the complete eradication of the disease wherever it is still to be found.

The commission will go first to Caracas, Venezuela, and then to Colon, Panama. Crossing the isthmus, it will sail down the west coast of South America, stopping at various points, especially Guayaquil, Ecuador, one of the chief points where yellow fever is still prevalent.

The commission will sail around the south coast of South America and then stop at various points in Brazil. Particular investigation will be made of conditions in Manaos, Pernambuco and Bahia, in Brazil.

The opening of the canal has wrought radical changes in trade relations. Countries and ports between which there has been little or no exchange are to be brought into close relation.

Pestholes of infection that have been relatively harmless because of their isolation are going to be on or near the world's highway of commerce and travel.

It is recognized by sanitarians that if the infection should once be introduced into the orient, with its dense population of nonimmunes, the ill resulting from it would be incalculable.

The opening of the Panama canal thus calls for a new sanitary map of a large region affected by the canal and for a new sanitary program to meet the changed conditions.

General Gorgas, who was called by the international health board into consultation on this subject, was asked what he regarded as the more urgent of the sanitary needs arising out of the Panama canal and what, if anything, might be undertaken with promise of definite and lasting results. He replied without hesitation, "The control of yellow fever."

Prior to the work of Reed and the army commission in Havana yellow fever was regarded as one of the great plagues. The discovery of Reed made the control of the infection possible. So far as our own country is concerned the fangs of yellow fever have been drawn. Its eradication from Havana removed the chief source of our danger.

In the countries south of us, however, it is still the source of constant anxiety. The coast of Brazil, the Amazon valley, the Caribbean region and the west coast of South America from Peru to Mazatlan, Mexico, are subject to invasion at all seasons.

ABOUT THE TOWN

M. E. (Dad) Mead, local trucking contractor, suffered a badly crushed knee at the Knights of Columbus Home on South First street, Tuesday evening, when a heavy staging, on which several radiators were being moved into the building, broke, dropping two of the radiators on Mr. Mead. His helper escaped serious injury, but Mr. Mead was pinned under the wreckage and his left knee was badly bruised and crushed.

He was given medical attention at once and is able to be about on crutches today, although he will not be able to resume work for at least two weeks.

A Greek linen peddler when informed by Mayor Lewis yesterday that he would be compelled to pay a daily license fee of $3 if he wished to sell his goods here, pleaded for a small reduction, but the Mayor was obdurate, and the man finally consented to pay. The Mayor is empowered by law to charge from $1 to $10 a day for license fees, and before the Common Council last night, he stated that in the future all itinerant peddlers will pay dearly for the privilege of competing with Fulton merchants.

* * *

In urging the council to refuse to purchase an electric sign for City Hall in compliance to a request made by Secrtary Hollenga of the Chamber of Commerce, Mayor Lewis gave as one of the main reasons for his attitude the fact that the council and administration would be criticized by residents of the city who are not in accord with the Old Home Week plans.

It behooves the administration of any city to hear and consider objections to any project which calls for an expenditure of the city's funds, no matter from what quarter they may come, but in this instance, many persons are of the opinion that it would be good business policy for the city to expend the few dollars for the sign even if it meant retrenchment in other quarters, and it is an easily established fact that such retrenchment can be made.

Fultonians, who are familiar with celebrations of the Old Home Week variety will recall few instances when an electric sign of welcome did not greet the visitors. Unless the council reconsiders its action of last evening, however, visitors to Fulton during Old Home Week will be obliged to content themselves with the assumption that they are welcome here, for there will be no visible announcement to that effect.

FRANK E. WOOLEY GETS IMPORTANT APPOINTMENT

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wooley, of West Second street, are in receipt of pleasing news from their son, Frank E., who has been appointed by the Westinghouse Company of Pittsburgh, Pa., as a motor tester.

The young man will be assigned to the Newark, N. J., plant of the company and there have a splendid opportunity of demonstrating the result of his training, which was received first at the Fulton High School and later at the Newark, N. J., Tech. schools.

Mr. Wooley has a large circle of friends in this city, where he expects to spend his vacation this summer, who will be delighted to learn of his promotion.

GERMAN LUTHERANS WILL MEET IN CHICAGO IN 1917

The Rev. Reinhold Kessler, of Oswego, opened the German Conference of the Evangelical Luthern Synod of New York, at Syracuse yesterday after which the Rev. H. G. KIMBALL CASE COMPROMISED

Romaine Kimball, charged by the Commissioner of Charities, James R. Somers, with abandoning his five children in this city so that they became charity charges, was arraigned in City Court yesterday afternoon for trial, but succeeded in effecting a compromise through his attorney, Hubert L. Gilman, whereby he will be permitted to get a position and pay a certain sum from his salary for the maintenance of his children until he is able to provide a home for them. According to Mr. Gilman, Kimball expects to go to work for the American Woolen Company in a few days and will soon be in a position to take his children out of an Oswego Orphan Asylum where they were placed by the Charities Commissioner, and support them in this city. Kimball also promised to repay the Commissioner the money expended thus far for the children's support.

By an agreement between Mr. Somers and Mr. Gilman, the man' trial was postponed until July 22, and if he has not completed some arrangements for the support of his children by that time, the Commissioner will press the charge.

RACE WAR ENDS IN CITY COURT

Hostilities Began Over Alleged Misdemeanor by Boys---Fines Imposed by Judge Wilson.

After a trial that covered two hours in the morning and was continued after an adjournment at noon, Judge Wilson imposed a fine of $15 or a sentence of fifteen days in jail on Miss Charina Viscome, who with four other members of her family was charged with assault in the second degree by Mrs. Alex Beguick, of West Third Street. Johnario Viscome, Augstino Viscome, Rosario Viscome and Terese Viscome, also charged with assault, were discharged. The fine imposed upon his daughter was paid by Augustino Viscome.

Lond-standing differences and ill feeling between the families brought about a clash on June 6, when Mrs. Beguick whose husband owns a small store adjoining the Viscome house, accused one of the Viscome boys of stealing grape vines from her back yard. An argument between Mrs. Viscome and Mrs. Beguick followed, but as one talks Italian and the other Polish, the war of words was without result. When Charina came home from work that evening, however, she went to the Beguick store and reopened hostilities. She admitted in court that she had vehementl y denied that her brother had stolen the vines, but swore that Mrs. Beguick was the first to strike a blow. Following the first blow by Mrs. Beguick, Charina, said they both struck each other and pulled each others hair. She said they were parted by her two uncles and her father who came home about that time, and swore that none of the men struck the Polish woman.

Mrs. Beguick, on the other hand, said the argument began when she chased the Viscome boy from her store, and that Charina immediately attacked her when she reached home and learned of the trouble. Mrs. Beguick further testified that not only both uncles and the father had participated in giving her a beating, but that the younger sister had also inflicted severe blows on her body. The woman was examined by Dr. Joy shortly after the fight, and the physician reported that her body was badly bruised and that finger marks in her neck were mute testimony that some one had attempted to throttle her. In corroboration of her testimony, Mrs. Bequick produced two handfuls of hair in the court, which she said were pulled from her head by Charina, and she showed marks in her scalp as further proof.

Under cross examination by Frederick G. Spencer, who appeared for the complainant, Charina was soon involved in many contradictory statements, and the testimony of all concerned seemed to show that she was the chief trouble maker. In spite of the efforts of her attorney, Floyd Spangle, she was adjudged guilty and Judge Wilson imposed the fine.

The trial was attended by a large number of Italian and Polish people and from the bitter looks that were passed between the two contingents, it would not have taken much to start a race war. Michael Cuba acted as court interpreter while the Poles were giving their testimony.

THIRD MAY LEAVE NEXT MONDAY

Colonel Jennings Completes Arrangements for Entertainment Enroute for State Camp.

Syracuse—The Third Regiment, of which the Oswego National Guard company is a part, will move to Beekman early next week, probably Monday or Tuesday, according to a statement from Colonel E. S. Jennings.

Colonel Jennings held a conference in Rochester with all the line officers of the regiment. Plans for the movement were discussed and Colonel Jennings impressed on the officers the necessity of arrangements for a speedy movement. A supply train will probably leave Monday carrying the equipment of the regiment. On the following day three special trains will pick up the twelve companies and carry them to Beekman. What will happen after the arrival at Beekman, Col. Jennings said he could not forecast. He issued this statement:

"I do not know what is in store for us after we arrive at Beekman camp, so cannot tell you when we will go to Mexico. We have no orders except to mobilize for Beekman and when the regiment arrives there no doubt we will then receive further orders. It is certain the regiment will mobilize for Beekman the first or second day of next week. The regiment will unload at Poughkeepsie and march into camp about eighteen miles.

"We will take between 1,800 and 2,000 officers and men and that will place the regiment on a full war footing. From reports from the various companies all of them are rescruiting splendidly and all the companies will be at war strength. I have had a talk with Captain Bernard Haggerty and the newly organized machine gun compnay will go into camp with us as a unit and will be mustered into the federal service in camp. Train service has been provided for by the company.

"The first section to move will be the supply and baggage train. That will include about 200 animals necessary for the regiment, the baggage wagons and all other necessities for camp life. This will move a day ahead so as to have camp prepared by the time the men arrive.

"The supply train will leave Rochester and pick up at Syracuse and Auburn. The following day three train sections will move, two over the New York Central and one over the Erie. One train section will take up the Niagara Falls, Medina, and the three Rochester companies. Another train section over the Erie will take Olean, Hornell and Elmira. The third section over the New York Central will pick up Auburn, Oswego and Syracuse companies."

The quartermaster for the regiment is securing about 200 horses for the use of officers. About 20 of these are being secured in Cayuga county.

Five Men Join Colors and More Will Follow

Twenty Fultonians, anxious to see active service in the United States Army, met Lieutenants C. S. Martin and Exra Barnes at the Chamber of Commerce Headquarters last night for the purpose of taking the preliminary examinations for enlistment in Company D, New York State National Guard, of Oswego.

Lieutenant Martin addressed the volunteers and described benefits to be derived from the service, and urged the men to show their patriotism by offering themselves in defense of their country. Although several of the applicants were rejected in the preliminary examination because of their inability to comply with the physical requirement, nine of the men were accepted and taken to Oswego at once for the regular medical examination. In the event that they pass the eye tests and are considered physically fit they will immediately be enrolled in the company.

Officers of the company anticipate a call to the front before Sunday, and all of the members of the company are now living in the Oswego Armory. The nine Fultonians who will have made application to join the company are Cecil Hill, Christopher Countryman, Ira Stevens, Walter Biddle, Tom F. Kennedy, John V. Doyle, Harry Francis, Harold Norton and Cornelius Sedner.

Other men present who were deterred from making an immediate decision for family reasons will go to Oswego today to take the medical examination, and it is expected that fifteen Fultonians will enlist before the end of the week.

ARTS AND CRAFTS EXHIBIT IS OPEN

In the leather work exclusively a music roll done by Miss Helen Waugh is deserving of note, as is also a portfolio and a manicure set case by Miss Harvia Wilson. Miss Mildred Shattuck and Miss Florence Barnes designed round table mats. Miss Frances Reynolds worked out in a perfect craftsmanlike way an oblong table cover. Miss Mildred Paige and Miss Margaret Byrne each designed book ends.

In the copper department are various designs of desk sets. Miss Elizabeth Howe designed an unusually attractive beaten copper candle stick.

In the jewelry department silver was most used with stone settings. Miss Margaret Howe has a scarf pin and bar pin of good design. Miss Helen Cusack a carved ring of good workmanship. Aven Chesbro, two watch fobs and a carved ring. Miss Marion Lake, chain, ring in silver; and desk set in copper. Clarence Sykes designed a mahogany box with brass hinges in an able way, and Miss Cora Holly a ring and watch fob of good design.

In the textile department the work of each consisted in stenciling a cushion cover and table runner, embroidering in cross stitch a lunch set, a fudge apron and a laundry bag. A serving tray of wicker, with wood blocked center.

In the landscaping and gardening department the pupils landscaped the high school lawn. An amount of $85 was expended in the work, and this was raised by the pupils in a moving picture benefit, and also by sale of bird houses of their own construction.

This city is to be congratulated upon possessing such a department in its schools, and too in having the services of such an efficient instructor as Miss Cook has proved herself to be.

The exhibit will be open the remainder of this week and no one should fail to visit this very modern department of our schools and see the work of Fulton's young craftsmen.

"A Herald of Progress"

The 1000 Islands

THE

Garden of the Great Spirit

GLANCING at the map, you will notice a slight widening of the River at a point shortly after it leaves Lake Ontario on its way to the sea. Here is that enchanting archipelago, The Thousand Islands, a world of beauty and splendor, emerald isles of every form and size, shady pools and day-long stretches of open water, pure and limpid as a mountain stream. The Islands, the grand old River, the gorgeous sunsets, pure and delightful breezes and varied pleasures, all combine to make this region the peerless pleasure ground of America.

The islands scattered in picturesque profusion over the azure waters of this mighty river, almost without number, emerald gems in a field of blue, are, in fact, pinnacles of granite rock planted on a sunken plane of the same igneous formation, their sides and bases the same as in the "beginning," while they are capped by plats of grass, native flowers, stately pines, sturdy oaks and graceful birches. Many of the islands have been made the sites of summer homes where the ingenuity of man, aided by fabulous wealth, have made them as pages from a fairy tale, so wondrous is their beauty. On others is the no less picturesque little cottage of the real devotee of this resort.

As one sails through the winding channels amidst these bowers of beauty, a thrill of delight is felt at every turn, and he yearns to sail on and on without thought of time. New scenes are presented every moment. Here he sweeps past some rugged shore with the palace of its owner snuggled amid a bower of trees and beautifully laid out grounds, then he comes face to face with a broad expanse of sparkling water, again his craft breasts a current as swift as a mill race, and emerges into some land-locked and lily-strewn bay. What memories and pleasing mind pictures can be taken home from this, the Garden of the Gods!

In the time of the Red Man, this region was known as Manatoana or the Garden of the Great Spirit, gaining its name from the barbaric picturesque splendor of the islands covered with its ancient forest of monarch pines and oaks and hemlocks, ideal haunts for the wild deer; and the little bays and inlets fairly teeming with water-fowl and fish, a paradise for the Indian hunter and fisher.

These natural attractions have not vanished with the passing of time, for many of the islands are bristling with firs and pines, while some are but arid rocks as bold and picturesque as those seen among the Faroe Islands.

There is scarcely an island that dots the mirrored surface of the river

"As quiet as spots of sky
Among the evening clouds," that doesn't have its traditions, mellowed by the passing years, of love, war, heroism and intrigue, plot and sacrifice.

This was the "Border Land" between the two great Indian Nations, the Algonquins and the Iroquois, and amid these scenes Hiawatha built his magic canoe and counselled the League of the Five Nations. The closing events in Cooper's fascinating story "The Pathfinder," took place on one of these islands and here Tom Moore wrote his Canadian Boat Song.

At Alexandria Bay the tourist is in the midst of many places of historical interest. With a motor boat he may visit the old Jesuit Mission of La Presentation or its nearer outpost on Chimney Island where the remains of the old blockhouse may be seen. He may spend a day in the forts at Kingston which has been since the days of Frontenac one of Canada's strongholds, or he may inspect the old military works on Carleton Island. He may sail his boat through the "Lost Channel" which gains its name from an incident in the French and Indian War, where a small boat and its crew from Lord Amherst's Fleet disappeared never to be seen again. He will surely want to visit the "Devil's Oven" where the brave Kate Johnston brought food and cheer to her outlaw father while he was in hiding after taking part in the burning of the British ship, "Sir Robert Peel."

The Wonderful Rift.

This beautiful channel, winding amid jutting craigs, placid nooks and a maze of whirling eddies, where the touring steamers and smaller craft "drift through the rift," is on the boundary line between Canada and the United States, and is so narrow that a pebble can be readily thrown from one country to the other. Leaving the Rift and threading tortuous channels among wild Canadian islands, the narrow and winding waterway "Out of Sight" is entered. So narrow and difficult of navigation is this channel that at times one passes almost under the verandas of beautiful homes. Twisting and turning, you at last emerge into open water only to enter the "Needle's Eye" where the space between the vessel and the shore is so narrow that one could easily jump to the land from either side.

FISHING AT ALEXANDRIA BAY.

This region was the scene of well laid stratagems and strongly contested battles in the French and Indian War, in the War of the Revolution and in the War of 1812 with England.

Riding upon a steamer in the vicinity of Alexandria Bay, a noted Italian visitor exclaimed, "Why, this is even beyond Venice," but, it remained for the famous Canadian writer, Cremazie, to give the most vivid description of these beautiful islands: "When Eve plucked death from the tree of life and brought tears and sorrows upon the earth, Adam was driven out into the world to mourn with her and taste the bitter spring that we drink today. Then the angels on their wings bore the silent Eden to the eternal spheres on high and placed it in the heavens, but in passing through space they dropped along the way to mark their course some flowers from the garden divine. These flowers of changing hues, falling into the great river, became the Thousand Islands, the paradise of the St. Lawrence."

The Thousand Islands are now easily accessible to the motorist over the best of New York state's improved highways, and the beauty and charm of this region is attracting thousands of tourists yearly, and it is fast becoming the favorite of America's summer playgrounds.

In the very center of all this splendor is Alexandria Bay, aptly called the "Hub of the Thousand Islands," and it certainly is the center from which radiates the social life of the summer colony. It is well supplied with many excellent hotels, and is a prosperous, thriving little village that prides itself on the excellent entertainment it supplies its summer visitors.

A WILD WEST EPISODE

By ELINOR MARSH

About 1867 Miss Martha Hildred, a young lady who had recently been graduated from a normal school in the east, received an offer to go to Denver to fill the position of teacher. At that time the Union Pacific railroad was building, and trains were running as far as Laramie. From Laramie the only public conveyance to Denver was by stagecoach.

The train lumbered over long stretches of alkali fields, a good deal of the way beside the Platte river, which, not having any trees on its banks, reminded her of a man with no hair or beard.

Miss Hildred reached Laramie in the evening, and, since the daily coach did not leave till the next morning, she took a room in a tavern and went to bed. The town had sprung up like a mushroom in the night, comprising that kind of population which can only be understood by a view of it. Miss Hildred was tired and would have slept soundly had it not been for revelry in a dance hall close by. "One lady more for this set!" "Alamand left!" "Swing your partner!" "Keno!" were mingled in confusion.

This introduction to western life at that time was not encouraging, but a more vivid experience was reserved for the next day. After a sleepless night the young schoolma'am breakfasted and went out to board the coach for Denver. A man stood at the door, only permitting certain persons to enter. On seeing Miss Hildred he stopped her and was about to turn her back when a man standing near spoke to him, evidently referring to the young lady.

"Are you in it?" asked the man regulating the entrances.

Miss Hildred, supposing that he wished to know if she was going to Denver, gave an affirmative nod of her head. She got into the coach, the door was shut and the vehicle rolled away.

"I thort," said a woman, with a very coarse voice, "that there was to be six of us. I see there's seven."

"That's not countin' the kid," said a man in a white cravat which was supposed to designate him as a clergyman, at the same time casting a glance at Martha.

Three of the passengers were men and three were women, the latter all being strapping creatures apparently, as strong as the men. Miss Hildred was on the back seat sandwiched between a man and a woman.

"Can you use another weepon, kiddy?" said the woman beside her. I got one more'n I need."

Miss Hildred looked at her blankly, not understanding what she meant.

"Oh, I see! Mum's the word," said the other and made no further advances.

"There are no outsiders today," said one of the men, who wore the sombrero, woolen shirt and trousers tucked in his boots of the typical westerner of the period.

"No," replied a quiet little man, the only delicate looking person in the coach. "The agent concluded to manage it with only insiders. He was afraid that too many would scare 'em off."

All this was Greek to Miss Hildred, but she was thinking about what she would find in her new field of labor and was not paying any attention to it.

Suddenly a shot rang out ahead. The coach came to a stop, the door was thrown open, and two men stood facing it with short guns pointing into the coach.

"Step out, ladies and gentlemen," said the man nearest the door.

No one made a move to do so, but one of the women, apparently much frightened, cried out, "Don't shoot me!" and with her arm raised the muzzle of the gun held by the man standing nearest her. Another one of the passengers at the same time shook a Derringer pistol out of his sleeve and quick as a flash of lightning put a bullet into the brain of the man whose gun had been knocked up. The quiet little man cowering in a corner suddenly seemed to explode, and the other road agent, for that is what the men without were, fell dead.

Miss Hildred at this point fainted dead away. When she came to herself she was stretched out beside the road, while six men stood about her. The first idea that popped into her head was as to where were the three women passengers. One of the men pulled out a flask and tried to induce her to take a drink, but she refused. Raising herself on her elbow in an effort to get up, she saw two dead men and fainted again. On coming to herself a second time one of the men exclaimed:

"How in thunder did you get into this gang?"

When later the coach rolled into Denver there was a first class story to be told. The express company, in order to entrap a couple of road agents who had infested the road, permitted it to leak out that it would send a treasure by that particular coach. Instead it sent six armed men, half of them in women clothes. Since all were disguised it was not easy for the person who admitted them to the coach to tell who belonged to the gang; hence the mistake in admitting the only real woman in the party.

The company made her a handsome present to atone for the mistake. The story remained attached to her, and as long as she stayed in Denver she was known as "the kid." The men in the coach supposed her to be a young fellow in woman's clothes.

THE LITTLE LACEMAKER

By SADIE OLCOTT

"I wish my son would marry and settle down."

These words were spoken by Mrs. Mainwaring of Baltimore to Mrs. Stetson of Providence while the two ladies were listening to the orchestra at the Casino at Luzerne, Switzerland.

"My Alice," replied Mrs. Stetson. "will be out of school within a few days, and I shall have the matrimonial problem for her on my hands."

"How I wish," rejoined Mrs. Mainwaring, "that I could get her for Dick."

"I should be very happy at the alliance, I assure you; but, from what you say, your son will not marry."

"He will fall in love with some innocent country girl, unsophisticated and uncultivated."

The result of this dialogue when concluded was a scheme to throw together Alice Stetson as a Swiss lacemaker and Dick Mainwaring. When Miss Alice returned from school the plan was proposed to her not as one to make a match for her, but as a lark. She was by no means averse to it. Dick was on the way from Italy to join his mother, and when he arrived he found domesticated with her a very pretty girl dressed in the attractive costume of the country, filling an order for lace. Alice, who took the name of Gretchen and was supposed to speak only German—the language of eastern Switzerland—sat in a chair before a board on which she worked the threads. A real lacemaker had taught her to do the simplest kind of work, which was all that was needed.

Upon his arrival, seeing the little lacemaker at work in his mother's boudoir, he went up behind her and watched her work. Believing her to be unconscious of his presence, he said:

"Fraulein, your delicate fingers are well adapted to such fine work."

Gretchen turned and, seeing a young man bending over her, appeared to be very much disconcerted and made no reply, proceeding with her work. Mainwaring, thinking that the girl did not understand English, repeated what he had said in German.

"Ach, herr," she replied, "you flatter me."

Dick heard his mother approaching and, not caring to be caught chatting with her employee, walked away. But Gretchen was always there—that is, when Dick was there—and it was as impossible for him to keep away from her as for a bee to ignore a flower. Alice may have just left school, but she had a woman's natural spiderly instinct in catching a fly. She waited till Dick began to say tender things to her, then mildly reproved him for talking thus to one so far beneath him. The next stage was that she listened to him, but reminded him that if his mother came to suspect that he was saying them she would discharge her employee at once. Here forbidden fruit came in to make it all the more interesting for the young Lothario, and it was not long before he endeavored to steal a kiss.

The lacemaker put him away with a look so reproachful that it made him feel as if he had been stealing pennies from a Salvation Army children's fresh air fund. He stammered an apology, but she told him that if he respected himself and wished her to respect him he must not speak to her again unless in the presence of his mother. However, on his promise not to try to steal any more kisses he might occasionally say a very few words.

It must be admitted that Dick was at a disadvantage. Miss Stetson was a lady, quite a beauty, with a very soft voice and softer eyes, and to crown all she was dressed in one of the prettiest national costumes in the world. Within three days she began to interfere with Dick's day dreams, and as for his night dreams he was unable to sleep. He tossed about in bed, lamenting the fact that the lacemaker was only a poor Swiss girl with whom an alliance would be impossible. Now and again he would resolve to throw common sense to the winds; then would bring himself up with a round turn, wondering if he had become insane.

One morning he entered his mother's boudoir, expecting to find the lacemaker, but instead found the room vacant. It seemed as if some one had turned off a thousand candle power electric light. Mrs. Mainwaring came into the room, and Dick asked:

"M-m-mother, what's become of your little lacemaker?"

"Oh, she finished the work I gave her to do and has gone home!"

Dick said nothing further, but his mother watched his woebegone expression with satisfaction.

The next evening at the Casino Mrs. Mainwaring introduced her son to her friend, Miss Stetson. Miss Stetson in propria persona was chatting with a handsome American gentleman. When Dick was introduced she bowed graciously. Dick was dumfounded. As soon as he could speak to his mother without being overhead he asked what it all meant. He was told that Miss Stetson was a girl of the new woman order and had learned to support herself by making lace. When she took a job she adopted the position and costume of an operative and preferred not to be recognized as a lady.

HEALTH FOR THE HAIR.

How to Keep Your Tresses Bright and Beautiful.

Fresh air is as necessary to the health of the hair as it is to the health of the lungs. The woman who is not guided by this truth has hair which, as a rule, is matted down and of an unattractive shade. The outdoor girl, whose coiffure is blown about by the wind, usually has a head of hair that is full of life and vigor, and its coloring is fine.

Fresh air and plenty of brushing, with the shampoo and gentle massaging of the scalp, will often make sickly hair healthy.

Brush the hair for five minutes every night and massage the scalp briefly with the tips of the fingers. Then let the hair hang down unplaited until ready to get into bed.

In the morning while preparing to dress again let the hair fall loosely. On balmy days stand at an open window so that the breeze may blow the hair about and the sunshine warm it. In cold weather stand in the sunshine for a short sun bath.

When motoring or playing golf you should dress the hair loosely that it may have the benefit of the airing. Let the hair hang loosely in the sun for a few minutes each day if possible. This treatment naturally bleaches the hair slightly. The wholesome effect upon it of the sun more than compensates for the bleach. For a blond this treatment is especially effective; it maintains the fairness of the hair as nothing else will.

Close fitting hats and extra puffs and braids cause the hair to perspire and do not allow the air to circulate through it to the roots. Lack of air is responsible for so much poor hair among city women. There is no hair tonic that equals nature's.

Latest Fad of Brides.

For blankets the latest brides take pleasure in embroidering in silk immense monograms the color of the satin ribbon with which the blankets are bound. The same monogram may be used for sheets or toweling, and a pair of handsome blankets so bound and embroidered will be welcomed by any bride. For a cover for baby's crib or couch there is a charming fancy in blue or pink linen with a wide white border, the whole quilted as though made of silk. On the colored centers are appliqued fascinating white "bunnies" with long ears, cut out of white linen with embroidered black eyes.

Homemade Rag Rugs.

Take wool rags of medium weight one and one-quarter inches wide strips, no bias; turn in and baste to prevent raw edges, so wrong side will be smooth too. Braid a strand forty-eight inches long, double and sew, always carrying braid to left; hold full as you sew around ends; shade colors, growing darker as you proceed. Braid only one round at a time, so there will be equal number as you braid as regards colors. Use No. 12 cotton thread for sewing.

STRAWBERRY PRESERVES.

STRAWBERRY JAM. — Measure out the sugar and berries in proportion of one part of fruit to three-quarters of a part of sugar—three parts of sugar to four of fruit. Wash and stem the berries and crush them. Put them in a granite or porcelain kettle over the fire and boil for twenty minutes, stirring occasionally. Then add half the sugar, let come to a boil and add the rest of the sugar. Boil slowly until it is of the consistency of jam and pack into small jars.

Strawberry Sirup.—To make strawberry sirup for punches, water ices or sherbet, crush the berries, after washing and hulling them, and press them through a sieve. Measure the juice and allow a pint of sugar for a pint of juice. Boil the sugar with half as much water without stirring until it spins a thread and then add the strawberry juice. Simmer, without boiling, for fifteen minutes. Then put into sterilized bottles or jars and seal.

Strawberry Jelly.—In making strawberry jelly it is necessary to add some other fruit juice to make a substantial jelly. Currant juice is as delicious combined with strawberries as with raspberries. If currants are not forthcoming in stawberry season, and they seldom are, can the strawberry juice in sterilized jars without sugar until currants come along. Then add an equal amount of currant juice and three-fourths as much sugar as the measure of both kinds of juice. Make jelly in the usual way.

Canned Berries, No. 1.—Make a sirup of sugar and water in the proportion of a cupful of water to four and one-half of sugar. When it is cool pour it over washed and hulled strawberries packed in cans. The amount of sirup mentioned requires four pounds of strawberries. Place the tops on the cans lightly and put them in a boiler or canner, on wood or straw, surrounded with water. Bring slowly to the boiling point, boil twenty minutes, screw on tops.

Canned Berries, No. 2.—A sure and easy way to can strawberries is to mash them, a few at a time, with a silver fork, and to each cupful of mashed berries add one cupful sugar. Mix thoroughly and be sure that each berry is perfectly mashed. Fill clean, dry jars to overflowing; use new rubbers, seal, turn upside down in a paper bag and keep in a cool place.

Goat's Time Honored Calling.

In the Farm and Fireside is an essay on the goat, which says among other things:

"The goat is a great aid in keeping tin cans, brickbats, scrap iron and other rubbish from accumulating around the farm, as he eats all of these things as fast as they appear, and he would be a greater success in this way if he wasn't so ambitious. But the goat is ambitious, and he keeps branching out and increasing his capacity and diet until he takes in the harness and buggy cushions and machinery and carpets and the knobs off doors. He can strip a long line of clothes faster than the best laundryman in the business."

Falsehoods.

Falsehoods not only disagree with truths, but they usually quarrel among themselves.—Webster.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Flounces follow in the wake of fashion and should be selected when in doubt as to how to make a dress. Old rose voile trimmed with ruchings of taffeta in the same shade and a belt of silk that crosses at the front, is used for this dressy model. Six yards 40-inch voile and 1 yard silk are sufficient to resproduce the model as illustrated.

Made Dumas Retract.

The elder Dumas was once sued for stating in one of his novels, "La Route de Varennes," that the capture of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette at Varennes by the revolutionaries was due to the action of the Chevalier de Prefontaine in shutting the door of his house on the fugitives.

A grandson of the chevalier considered this an aspersion on his ancestor's chivalry and proved in court that the statement was untrue.

An order was issued compelling Dumas' publisher to call in all copies of the novel and to issue within one month a fresh edition with a note that De Prefontaine placed his house at the disposal of the royal fugitives.

FIGHT AGAINST MOVIES FAILS

Syracuse—Despite vigorous protests on the part of Syracuse ministers, the city officials have steadfastly refused to close up motion picture theatres on Sunday. It is flatly stated that no orders will be issued by the Department of Public Safety to close the theatres on Sunday. Officers of the department decline to comment on the resolution passed by the clergymen denouncing Sunday theatres other than to say that nothing would be done.

Deputy Commissioner Frederick, who is in charge of the department, is a firm believer in Sunday movies, for he thinks they are harmless and that the people might better be attending them than doing some other things.

"As far as this department is concerned no action will be taken," he says. He did not hesitate to say that he thought the clergymen were going too far in demanding that Sunday movies be closed.

The result of the ministers' fight is being watched with considerable interest in those cities of the state where similar fights have been staged. Oswego, Binghamton, Auburn and other cities have waged similar contests.

WORKERS GET MILLIONS IN INCREASED WAGES

(By United Press)

Cleveland—Wage increases affecting 100,000 workers here and totalling $18,000,000 annually have been or will be granted before July 1, according to figures compiled by John Owens, Cleveland federation of Labor Secretary.

Owens estimates that half the men and women working here, numbering 200,000, will benefit in wage boosts at an average of not less than fifty cents a day each.

Common labor, which has advanced from $2 to $2.50, is scarce at the latter figure. A quarry strike at a nearby town affected 500 men who asked that their pay be raised to $2.50. Before the quarry could settle it, Clevelanders had hired all the strikers at their own prices.

Many thousands of workers here have already been granted more pay, including 10,000 steel workers. Agreements have been signed affecting over 20,000 other employes and granting wage boosts of from twenty cents to $1.20 per day per man.

Machinists and building laborers numbering 16,000 have made demands or plan to make them for increases ranging from thirty to fifty cents a day.

In practically every industry in the Cleveland district, workers have begun to share or intend to share in the prosperity of the mills and factories.

FULTON ASTONISHED BY SIMPLE MIXTURE

Fulton people are astonished at the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. ONE SPOONFUL removes such surprising foul matter it relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour stomach or gas. Because Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel, a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists. adv.

STRAY DOG KEEPS VIGIL OVER MAN'S GRAVE

Fultonham, O.—In the cemetery here a homeless cur mourns on the grave of George Baker. They call her The Graveyard Dog.

Five years ago the dog came to the cemetery following the funeral procession of Baker, an aged farmer who died at his home near here.

Every night the dog keeps a close vigil over the grave. It sleeps for hours at a stretch during the day on the little mound that marks Baker's resting place.

Villagers long ago gave up hope of coaxing the dog away from there. She leave the cemetery only long enough each day to search for food.

Friends of Baker say he never owned the dog. Cemetery trustees refuse to drive it away and she seems likely to spend the rest of her life in this strange manner.

NO SIGN OF WELCOME BY VIRTUE OF COUNCIL will face a deficit at the conclusion of the celebration, and that any help the city might give would be appreciated and acknowledged.

Mayor Lewis came out against the electric sign in a decisive manner, and said he did not feel that the city should expend money for such purposes, particularly at this time. He argued that many people in the city were opposed to the Old Home Week celebration anyway, even though they were in the minority, and said he was of the opinion that their wishes should be respected to some extent.

Mr. Hillick advised the council that it had no legal right to give the license fees for the concessions to the Chamber of Commerce. No action, therefore, was taken on these two questions.

The council agreed to close Rochester street, provided residents of the block in question did not enter objections to the project. The council also agreed to decorate the City Hall.

Savings Bank Awarded Bonds

William J. Lovejoy, for the Fulton Savings Bank, was the high bidder for the block of sewer bonds amounting to $67,500 which will fall due August 1, and these bonds were sold to the Fulton bank for $68,165.00. This bid was more than $400 in excess of any other offer for the bonds.

George B. Gibbons & Company, a New York brokerage house, bid $67,756.50; Farson, Son & Company bid, $67,559.00, and H. A. Kahler & Company bid, $67,575.00. The bid of Harris, Forbes & Company, of New York, was rejected as it did not conform to the legal requirements.

The bonds will be redeemed in serial form by the new plan, and will bear interest at 4 1-2 per cent. They will be taken over by the Fulton Savings Bank, August 1.

W. S. Hillick, city attorney, reported that his New York counsel had advised against the sale of the $15,000 block of deficit bonds for the reason that the advertisement for bids did not conform to the stipulations of the act of the Legislature which makes the issue of such bonds possible. By the plans advertised, the bonds were to be redeemed in serial form, two bonds of $100 each to be redeemed every year, beginning January 1, 1918. This would leave an odd bond, while the act of the Legislature specifically stated that the bonds are to be redeemed serially in equal installments, within ten years, and that the first redemption is to be made within one year from date of sale.

Accordingly the council accepted no bids for this block of bonds, but passed another resolution, by which the advertisement will read that the bonds are to be redeemed in serial form, one $1,500 bond to be redeemed before August 1, 1917, and one $1,500 bond each year thereafter until the entire block is redeemed. The council will meet July 12 to receive bids for this block of bonds.

Attorney's Bill Ordered Paid

The balance of a bill for services tendered by Claude E. Guile, who acted as special attorney to the city in the case of William Moon, et al. against the City of Fulton, Board of PublicWorks, et. al. to determine the validity of a contract for light and power awarded the Fulton Light Heat and Power Company in 1914, was ordered paid by the council. Mr. Guile's total bill for his services amounted to $509.13, of which only $100 has been paid. City Comptroller Adkins reported that the general city fund of 1915 contained enough money with which to pay the account.

Mr. Hillick advised the council to at once order the Ontario and Western R. R. Company to station a flagman at the Rochester street grade crossing, and in this connection Secretary Hollenga stated that the Chambehr of Commerce had written the company, informing them that the matter would be referred to the Public Service Commission unless the flagman was engaged.

City Clerk Allen reported that the city dog catcher had not been in evidence for a week, and that the man had $25.00 of the license fees in his possession.

Mayor Lewis called the attention of the Council to the condition of the ceilings in the hall way of City Hall, and urged immediate action in order that the building may be in first class condition for Old Home Week, when there will be many visitors in the city. The matter was referred to the proper committee with power to take action as they saw fit.

Mr. Allen asked that the partition which separates his office from that of Mr. Adkins be removed, and said such action would not only afford him more light, but would also work for more efficiency in handling the business of the city. This matter was also taken under consideration by the committee in charge, as was a suggestion that the office of the Water Department be moved to the present office of the city clerk and comptroller, these two officials to jointly occupy the present water department office.

The council adjourned to meet again Tuesday afternoon next at one o'clock, at which time several other important matters in connection with the Old Home Week celebration will be discussed.

Scene From "Man and His Angel," AT THE QIRK THEATRE TODAY

NEW HAVEN MAN SECURES HIS DIVORCE

Syracuse—Mrs. Bessie Burdick, of New Haven, Oswego County, has been divorced from her husband upon the testimony of her brother, Elias Van Schaick, of Fulton, and her sister, Mrs. Eva Rulapaugh, of this city, unsupported by any other evidence.

The Fulton man testified that he tried to point out to his sister where she was doing wrong, but she would not listen to him.

Learning that their sister has been weaned away from her husband by another man the witnesses tried to reconcile her to her home. Their remonstrances were in vain and they returned to their homes discouraged. Failing to get her to go back to her husband they turned against her and helped her husband get a divorce.

The decree was granted by Justice Hubbs. The record shows the couple were married June 15, 1902. Burdick is now thirty-four and his former wife thirty-two.

VanSchaick testified to a visit with his sister in New Haven and finding her with A. B. Willmarth, whom he said had been divorced by his wife.

The interlocutory decree granted in the case was filed with the evidence.

DECKER GIVEN EASY SENTENCE

James Decker, of this city, who formerly conducted a saloon in the basement of the Waldhorn block, pleaded guilty yesterday to a violation of the Excise Law in selling liquor to a man whose name appeared on the Fulton blacklist. He was given a suspended sentence of $200 fine in the County Court, Judge Coville presiding.

Vincenzo Alfano, of North Fourth street, this city, also a violator of the liquor tax law, was fined $200, a day in jail for each day the fine remains unpaid and thirty days additional in the event that the fine is not paid. Alfano will pay the fine in installments and was released yesterday. He was caught selling liquor at retail with a government wholesale license when the police raided his store about two months ago.

Vincenzo Redino, better known as John Ray, of this city, was fined $75 for carrying concealed weapons. When the police raided the Alfano store, Redino was one of those caught in the drag net and when he was searched a loaded automatic was found on him. Judge Coville decided to make an example of the man and imposed the heavy fine, which will probably be paid by Redino's friends. Redino claims that some other Italian, an enemy, put the gun in his pocket in order to get him into trouble, but the police do not credit his story.

MR. AND MRS. SMITH HONORED JUNE BRIDE

One of June's brides is in Fulton enjoying her honeymoon. Y. The table decorations were pink and white carnations and right in the center of the table Mrs. Smith had placed a huge wedding cake. The guests last evening were confined to immediate relatives and friends of the bride.

THINKS METEOR MESSAGE FROM THEIR DEAD SON

Linwood, N J.—A meteor in the form of a human hand fell from the sky and buried itself in the ground near Henry Pranti's farmhouse within forty-eight hours after the death of his eighteen year old son.

Mrs. Pranti today declined to surrender the meteor to any of the meterologists who came here after it, saying she believes it is a message from her boy.

Mrs. Pranti is superstitious and has talked a great deal with spiritualists since the meteor dropped from the clouds.

The object is light in weight and color, has no odor and is unlike meteoric compositions usually found in this part of the world. The resemblance to a human right hand is striking, almost uncanny. The thumb and little finger are unusually long. The nails show distinctly. The first, middle and ring fingers are drawn together and curve slightly inward. The wrist stump is charred, as though it had been burned off. The Prantis will encase the hand in glass and keep it.

William Earl's Life Crushed Out by Fast Train Last Night

Within three hours after bidding good bye to his son Frank, who is a member of Company C, National Guard, of Watertown, William Earl, forty-three years old, a papermaker employed by the Granby company, was ground to death under the wheels of the north bound fast freight which passed through this city about one o'clock this morning. The accident occurred near the E—Z Opener Bag factory on North Second street. The mangled remains of the dead man were first discovered by Clarence LaRock, who came to his home in this city on the last car from Hinmanville, where he is employed by the Stewart Construction Company. LaRock was walking along the tracks to his home, when he stumbled over a human leg, severed at the hip. Horrified, he ran back to the E—Z Opener factory where he found Arthur Calkins, watchman of the switching engine, and George Dell, watchman of the bag factory, and he told them he thought he had found the body of a man on the tracks.

Dell called Patrolman Aleck Pare, who was on the night desk at headquarters at the time, and Pare called Coronor Cusack. Dell, LaRock and Calkins ran to the scene of the accident and the coroner and the policeman soon joined them.

Earl's body was mangled beyond recognition, and receipts in his pocket, one from Whitaker and Bogardus, established his identity, which was corroborated by a ring on his hand which bore his initial, and a scarf pin, also engraved. The head was severed from the torso

Men Who Make City Famous Relax at Citizens Club

Practically every manufacturing industry in the city of Fulton was represented last night at the first annual dinner of Fulton manufacturers, held at the Citizens' Club under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce.

The affair was primarily to celebrate the success of the "Made in Fulton" display week now in progress here, but it is safe to say that it will not be the last gathering of its kind, for the seed of a closer fellowship between the manufacturers of the city was sown at the dinner.

The affair was arranged by Secretary D. S. Hollenga of the Chamber of Commerce, and although the genial secretary has done greater things since taking charge of the active work of that body, he has never accomplished a more pronounced success.

The guests were promised some surprises and they received the first when they took their seats at the table. Laid at each plate were the following Fulton made products, Massaro Macaroni, Peters' Chocolate, Victoria Paper Co. toilet paper, Carner's Family Ointment, Monarch wash cloths, Aluminum Container Corp. collapsible drinking cups, Wonder Oil, a large Oak Kraft bag, made from Volney paper by the E—X Opener Bag Co., which was used as a receptacle for the various manufactured products, and literature from the Ft. A MAN'S REPUTATION

Nearly every man is known for some little peculiarity. In fact, his reputation among those who know [illegible], is generally based upon some insignificant characteristic, or some eccentricity, or upon an incident in his life he did not think much of himself.

The great authors are usually remembered on account of some one thing they wrote, and generally it is that which they themselves did not consider as their chief work in life. Gray is remembered only for his "Elegy," although he was a voluminous writer. "The Raven" is about all any of us can think of when the name of Edgar Allen Poe is mentioned and "The Pathfinder" comes quickly to mind as a product of J. Fenimore Cooper. And so on with a long list of them.

Here is a man who is a power in the business world. His influence is felt commercially in a dozen states. He meets men of affairs and deals with the captains of industry of the world. But in his home town he is known for a single eccentricity, and when his name is mentioned, the eccentricity is mentioned always.

Or, take the case of our old time friend Henry Watterson, the ablest editor now living—and the last of the really great editors who made American journalism what it is. He used to imbibe in intoxi-made American journalism what it is. He has a reputation at home and abroad of carrying out the "Southern Gentleman" eccentricity.

It is not always that a man's reputation is as it should be. That is, the reputation is not always just. It frequently happens that a man gets a reputation in his earlier days and that his later life controverts that reputation. But he cannot shake it off. No MAN tries to shake it off. The bigger a man is, the more he is endowed with a pure spirit of Love and Life, the less he cares about the petty misrepresentations that follow him. He KNOWS, within himself and in his own heart the kind of a man he is; he is satisfied with the results achieved and has no time to circulate malicious thoughts or talk about his fellow man. So he goes about his way, allowing those who will to hang onto him whatsoever they will in the way of reputation. But if all men would be jealous to keep their own reputations clean, to extend the charity that they need extended to them personally, to think of their own past before attempting to criticize others, their usefulness would be far greater and their influence over others much better.

The Youth's Companion:

The boys and girls of a generation ago were more generally given to bicycling than those of to-day. They got out of the sport so much pleasure and recreation that it seems hard to understand why there should have been a temporary decline in its popularity.

Of recent years there has been a considerable revival of interest, but the bicycle tours and picnics that those who are now approaching middle age remember as pleasures of their youth are no longer familiar diversions.

One reason, no doubt, is that the automobile has made bicycling seem less agreeable than it used to be. But even if bicycle clubs and parties cannot not now make a day of it in the country with the same freedom from care and dust as in the ante-motor time, the individual bicyclist can find full opportunity to get exercise and pleasure from the use of his wheel. The best time of all for bicycling is in the early morning, when the lazy automobilist is not yet abroad. To pedal quietly along city streets or country roads before the activities of the day have begun is to get the best possible start for the day's work. Bicycling is a tranquil sort of exercise if it is pursued in the early morning hours. Those who can form the habit have the advantage over their unenterprising fellows of seeing the countryside and even the city streets at their best, of hearing the birds at their happiest, and of smelling the fresh fragrances of the morning.

One of the most distinguished of living Americans, a man now more than fourscore years of age, still goes with his wife for a bicycle ride before breakfast whenever the weather permits. The practice may have helped to keep him young—for that he is still young is illustrated by an episode that he delights to tell. One morning when he and his wife were wheeling up to their door in the gratifyingly noiseless fashion of the bicyclist, they overheard the cook say to the waitress, "Isn't it about time the children were getting back for breakfast?".

It may have been the informality of the bicycle that kept alive in those elderly persons the qualities that caused their cook to regard them with such indulgent concern. Certainly to the bicycle may be ascribed in some measure the vigor that this eminent educator still displays.

If you are interested in saving the daylight, a bicycle will help you to do it with the greatest profit to yourself, and you may be grateful to the automobile for the better highways.

The Country Gentleman:

At this writing a Rural Credits Bill has been passed by each house of Congress, and the differences between the two measures are being threshed out in conference. There appears to be a real desire in both houses to put the legislation into force, and, such being the case, there seems to be no difference between the two bills that ought not to be speedily adjusted. If such proves to be the case a Federal Rural Credits Law is certain to be passed and to be signed by the President.

The most basic difference between the two houses lies in the fact that the Senate bill provides for loans only to the extent of fifty per cent. of the appraised value of the land, while the House measure authorizes loans to the extent of sixty per cent of the land value, plus twenty per cent. of the insured improvements.

To allow the loans to be too large is to endanger the security of the system. Something can safely be allowed for permanent insured improvements, but when it is considered that in many parts of the country land values are already very high, and that the loans are to run for a long term of years, great care should be exercised that the deterioration of improvements and any possible fall in land values sall not endanger the safety of the investments twenty years hence.

The gradual reduction of the debt by amortization is of course a partial safeguard. Locality has much to do with this matter; and this phase of the subject presents the greatest problem of the future Federal Land Bank. Federal laws establishing the same ironclad rule for Iowa and North Carolina are sure to be hard to adjust. The Federal Land Bank will have hard work cut out for it.

The Senate bill provides that farmers may, if they wish, join in cooperative loan associations with unlimited liability. The House bill leaves this option out, and it is predicted that the Senate will yield. In view of the fact that one of the features of the European land banwks that has in large measure accounted for their success has been unlimited liability, American farmers should at least be allowed to try the plan if they desire. The House has probably gathered the facts and discovered that the unlimited-liability idea does not agree with the American farmer's ideas of independence and democracy.

The Watertown Times:

The attempt to compel Mr. Hughes to attack hyphenated Americans will fail because he never has and does not recognize any hyphenated Americans, neither British, German, Italian, nor any other kind of hyphenated people. He regards them all as American citizens and has faith that they will stand by American institutions. American citizens of whatever birth or descent will vote as American citizens, according to the political parties with which they have been affiliated. Some citizens of German birth and descent will vote for the Republican candidate and some for the Democratic candidate, according to their individual choice, just as they have always done. They will vote as Americans and for an American. Mr. Hughes is an undiluted American and nothing but an American. He will not cater to anything but an American vote; he will not recognize or cater to any vote that is not cast as an American vote, regardless of the kaiser's interests. We take it that these voters will resent any attempts to marshal them or dictate to them by agents from abroad.

Democracy Establishes the Equal Right of Every Person to Development

By LOUIS D. BRANDEIS, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court

STRONG nationalities assume their own superiority and come to believe that they possess the divine right to subject other peoples to their sway. Soon the belief in the existence of such a right becomes converted into a conviction that a duty exists to enforce it. Wars of aggrandizement follow as a natural result of this belief.

This attitude of certain nationalities is the exact correlative of the position which was generally assumed by the strong in respect to other individuals before democracy became a common possession.

The struggles of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries both in peace and in war were devoted largely to overcoming that position as to individuals. In establishing the equal right of every person to development it became clear that equal opportunity for all involves this necessary limitation.

EACH MAN MAY DEVELOP HIMSELF SO FAR, BUT ONLY SO FAR, AS HIS DOING SO WILL NOT INTERFERE WITH THE EXERCISE OF A LIKE RIGHT BY ALL OTHERS.

Thus liberty came to mean the right to enjoy life, to acquire property, to pursue happiness in such manner and to such extent as the exercise of the right in each is consistent with the exercise of a like right by every other of our fellow citizens.

Liberty thus defined underlies twentieth century democracy. Liberty thus defined exists in a large part of the western world. Democracy rejected the proposal of the superman who should rise through sacrifice of the many. It insists that the full development of each individual is not only a right, but a duty to society, AND THAT OUR BEST HOPE FOR CIVILIZATION LIES NOT IN UNIFORMITY, BUT IN A WIDE DIFFERENTIATION.

Days You'll Never Forget

NEBRASKA HARVESTING A BUMPER WHEAT CROP

Lincoln, Neb.—Nebraska's greatest annual wheat crop harvest has begun. The largest wheat crop in the state's history is being gathered—such a crop as the state did not even dream of ten years ago.

Between 71,000,000 and 74,000,000 bushels of winter wheat is the estimate of the state's labor bureau, which also estimated that 7,000 extra farm hands were needed for the harvest.

Besides this, some spring wheat is raised in the northern section of the state, but this amount is relatively small and its harvest will begin in two or three weeks.

The Hessian fly did some damage this year as usual, but the pest was only in certain sections and there only in small spots. Less damage by the Hessian fly was done this year than last.

Hail also did slight damage, some fields being completely devastated, but this loss, too, was relatively small.

The wheat crop of Nebraska this year, it is estimated, will exceed that of last year by about 10,000,000 bushels.

Ideal Organization of the Navy Must Be Based on Government Policy

By FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Assistant Secretary of the Navy

THE ideal organization of a navy, broadly speaking from a military standpoint, is as follows: A body of the ablest and most experienced naval officers, freed from all routine duty, whose business it is to decide military policy. They must, first of all, by close contact with the state department, ascertain the policy of the government in its foreign relations. To know what kind of navy is needed it is necessary to know what a navy is required to do.

F. D. ROOSEVELT

TO KNOW WHAT THE NAVY IS REQUIRED TO DO IT IS NECESSARY TO KNOW THE POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT.

Having this information, it should be this body's duty to determine just what the navy will have to do to carry out the policy of the government under all possible contingencies. Having determined all this, it is then in a position to DETERMINE WHAT NUMBER OF SHIPS AND WHAT KIND OF SHIPS ARE NECESSARY TO DO THE WORK.

Women's Clubs Have Supplanted Social Caste In This Country

By Rev. Dr. PERCY STICKNEY GRANT, Church of the Ascension, New York

IN face of your great organization, General Federation of Women's Clubs, I see no place left in American life for the society leader or the woman of only social influence. YOUR LEADERSHIP IS OF THE BRAIN AND THE HEART UNITED FOR HUMANE AND PATRIOTIC PURPOSES.

The woman's club is the instrument and symbol of woman's new place. The club is the co-operation school of social service in which all topics that seem to women to pertain to the welfare of the state are taught and discussed.

In her new place woman has two things to do. She must face the problems of home cleaning and of house enlargement.

Shakespearean Drama Should Be Given to People at Low Price

By E. H. SOTHERN, Famous Actor

IN America I see a new day dawning for the higher drama. In the light of my own experience I have advocated for years the municipal theater. The great power of the theater should no longer be left to chance. ITS INFLUENCE SHOULD IN EACH COMMUNITY BE DIRECTED AND HELPED BY THAT COMMUNITY.

My wish is that we may soon see the plays of Shakespeare being presented to the plain people at a nominal price. As we have free libraries and free music, so we may have the best plays by the best actors at a nominal fee. It can be done, and it can be made to pay.

No actor in the present condition of the theater can afford to produce these plays. No manager can be expected to pilot a Shakespearean hopeful through inevitable failure to success. But people, poor people, common people, your people, want these plays. They love them.

THEY UNDERSTAND THEM IN SPITE OF THE CRITICS AND THE WISE MEN. DO THIS THING AND THE MILLENIUM IS AT HAND.

FLUFF, THE NEW PETTICOAT

Flimsiness Goes to Make Up the Crispy Early Summer Petticoat.

By Margaret Mason
(Written for the United Press)

Her pretty puffy petticoat,
First seems to make Priscilla float,
But in a crowd such breadth to tote
Now seems to make her "soar" you'll note.

New York—Petticoats are now making up with a vengeance for any past discrepancies. The poor, scant transparent things that last season passed for such wouldn't serve as one ruffle on the fluffy, ruffly hooped, puffed, flounced, ruched and scolloped creations that now hide their lightness not under a bushel but under a barrel skirt.

Taffeta for its crispness makes most acceptable pettis and when adequately corded and of sufficient fullness needs no wiring to give it that desired hoopy effect.

Two lovely ones that seem just to have been plucked blooming in the garden are a pink one which is a mass of petal shaped scollops, tier on tier, like an inverted rose; and one in yellow points like a daffodil. All shades of lavendar, violet, purple, mauve and orchid, corded within an inch of their life and their entire surface, are edged in silken fringe, pinked ruchings or picot edged frills and quillings.

Indeed you can just turn your fancies loose on your petticoat and let them run riot, provided they run around.

Petticoats of net and ribbon are most entrancing. Some are of multitudinous net ruffles run through at their headings with narrow picot ribbons of pale blue, orchid, pink and maize, while others are made of puffings of net run on fine wire alternating with wide bands of gorgeously embroidered ribbons.

Some petticoats show an Evelike penchant for first fruits and boast a lavish display of tiny silken apples tucked thither and yon in a smother of frills. A bright purple petticoat is particularly delectable with clusters of bobbing silken cherries growing in a Burbankish manner near the limbs of a peach.

Chaste white petticoats as frothy with lace as a foaming stein gleam with the sheen of wash satin between their laciness and blossom occasionally with a tiny ribbon or beaded rose or French garland.

Frivolous truly are the petticoats made of narrow ribbons sewed together lengthwise over the hips and then allowed to fall in a loose fringe effect over a wide flounce of chiffon and lace.

Even the petticoat hasn't escaped the mad passion for handpainted adornment and many of the chiffon and delicate tinted taffeta ones for evening wear bloom in water color flora. All of the petticoats aren't as black as they are painted but the really black ones are as ebonesque as black net, chiffon, lace and jet beads can fashion them.

Some of the newest petticoats are heud in such suspense that they are perilously near to pants. For like pants they are hung from fair shoulders by honest to goodness regular suspenders. The suspenders, except that they are made of the same silk as the petticoat proper (or improper it depends how you look at it), are replicas of those worn by our petticoatless peers.

Truly with divers pettis clinging pant like to suspenders, while others are puffy as can be, it's no wonder the most of them take our breath away.

A Doubtful Compliment.

The popularity of Tolstoy often brought him into comical situations which he himself would tell about afterward. One incident, noted in P. A. Sergeyenko's "How Tolstoy Lives and Works," will bear repetition.

One day in Moscow he was walking along a narrow sidewalk when an intoxicated man crawled, staggering along, to meet him. When the stranger caught sight of Leo Nikolaevitch he came to anchor, as it were, and with twisting tongue inquired:

"Count Tolstoy—y-yes?"

"Yes."

"I am your adorer and imitator," said the fellow, with feeling, and respectfully made way for his exemplar.

The Pelican.

No one would be likely to imagine that so heavy and, in fact, apparently ungainly a bird as a pelican is a king among soaring birds. After much flopping when these great birds have acquired headway the broad wings are spread, and in majestic circles they mount skyward, with only an occasional flap of the wing, often passing beyond the range of one's vision.

Baby Carriages.

The first thing every newly married couple ought to invest in is a baby carriage. They come in one, two and three passenger sizes and should be replaced every two or three years.

As a substitute for a motorcar the baby carriage has no equal, although it contains the possibility for more accidents. Baby carriages, as a rule, are propelled either by proud fathers wearing silk hats or by total strangers. Each baby carriage is provided with a brake, which prevents it during its lifetime from exceeding the speed limit. This early example of rectitude, however, does not always have its effect upon the occupant in after life.—Life.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?", you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day, become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

VOLUNTEERS IN MEXICO MAY VOTE

Special Law Provides for Men in Two Arms of Service Right of Franchise.

(Special to Evening Times.)

Washington—Neither Woodrow Wilson nor Charles E. Hughes will gain any advantage in the matter of votes because of the calling out of the state militia, because in case the guardsmen are on the border or across the border in Mexico at the time of the next presidential election in November, the law has provided that they shall be able to vote.

The election law provides in a special article for the votes of both sailors and soldiers. Generally speaking the qualification, restrictions, penalties and general procedure for war balloting are not in a great measure different than for citizens in times of peace. The big difference lies in the fact that special war ballots are printed and instead of civilian election officers the officers in charge of the commands shall be the general supervisors of the election, though the voters elect their own inspectors.

The clause granting sailors and soldiers the right to vote reads: "Whenever in time of war any qualified voter of this state shall be in the actual military service of this state or of the United States in the army or navy thereof and by reason thereof absent himself from his election district, such absent voter shall be entitled to vote as full as if he were present at his place of residence in the manner hereinafter provided."

The law then defines how such an election shall be carried out. It becomes the duty of the secretary of state to prepare the lists of the names of the absent voters and these after being verified are sent to the commanding officer.

Another provision outlines the official war ballots as they are designated. These are to be six inches wide and the state law takes care of only the state elections; though it being a presidential year the men will have a chance to vote for the chief executive.

Polling places are to be the headquarters of captains or commanding officers, whoever he may be. If it is impossible to hold the election on the regular election day, the officer may resignate any secular day within twenty days next prior, but it is not to be held after the regular election day.

The law further declares that the polls shall not be opened less than three hours and as much longer as neccessary for all the men entitled to vote.

The voters themselves select four inspectors from their own number and these inspectors shall in turn elect a chairman.

"No mere informality in the manner of carrying out or executing the provisions of this article," reads the section, "shall invalidate the election," and the article provides that the section may be "liberally construed." These elections can be contested, the law provides the same way as other elections.

MRS. IDE'S PUPILS GAVE AUDIENCE GOOD MUSIC

The recital at the Library last night by the pupils of Mrs. Anna Colton Ide, of Syracuse, was a pronounced success from an artistic standpoint, although it is to be regretted that more were not in attendance, not only because of the excellent program rendered, but also for the reason that the proceeds of the affair were donated to the Baby Welfare Association of this city. However, those present contributed liberally, and a goodly sum was realized, which will be used in the baby welfare work in this city during the summer months.

Miss Genevieve McCormick, Miss Margarite McGovern and Laurence Ranger, of this city were among the soloists, and all reflected great credit upon Mrs. Ide's teaching by their efforts. David B. Carroll, was the only Fulton pianist to appear, and was obliged to respond with an encore to his rendition of Chopin's Fantasie in F Minor. Mr. Carroll played "Hark, Hark, The Lark!" by Schubert-Liszt as an encore.

Several of Mrs. Ide's Syracuse pupils appeared and a number of Syracuse people were in attendance at the affair.

and cut in half just below the ears. The torso was ground to a pulp, and the largest part of the man's body picked up was a section of his leg and foot, encased in a shoe. Undertaker E. S. Brown and William Branche, his assistant, were called and the man's body placed in a casket. It was then removed to Mr. Brown's morgue, and arrangements for the funeral will be made today.

Mr. Earl's friends and survivors are unable to account for the accident, except on the grounds that he was a trifle hard of hearing, and did not notice the approach of the train until it was too late. His son was with him until almost ten o'clock, when he was obliged to leave for Watertown where he was under unders to join his company at the Armory. Neither of the watchmen standing at the E—Z Opener factory saw him pass, but both remember the passage of the freight train, which went north at high speed, particularly after it hit the down grade north of Cayuga street. When Dell picked up the dead man's watch it was still running, and the time, 1:05, coincided with the time of Dell's watch.

The dead man came to this city several years ago from Ticonderoga, and has been an employe of the Granby company for a number of years. He was a widower and lived at 260 North Sixth street with his son Frank, and daughter, Ella. He is also survived by a married daughter, Mrs. Ethel LaMay, who resides on North Sixth street, this city.

EMPIRE FACES NEW MOTION

Syracuse—It is possible that all the Empire United Railway motions, except those involving forecloseure actions now pending before Justice Andrews will be renewed under the several foreclosure actions.

Among these motions is the one instructing the receivers of the Empire United with respect to the payment of $45,000 for the physical property of the Monroe county belt line and with respect to paving in the city of Oswego and East Rochester and double tracking in Oswego.

It is contended that inasmuch as receivers have already been appointed in the foreclosure action under the R. S. and E. mortgage the Monroe County matter and the East Rochester paving matter come under that action. A motion will be presented Saturday for permission on the part of the Columbia Trust Company of New York to start a foreclosure action under the Syracuse, Lake Shore and Northern. The Oswego matter will come under that action.

Justice Andrews will be asked to name C. Loomis Allen and Hendrick S. Holden receivers under the foreclosure action begun by the Equitable Trust Company of New York under the Empire United mortgage.

EXPECT MORE LABOR TROUBLES ON CLYDE

(By Ed L. Keen, United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, June 12 (by mail)—The labor troubles on the Clyde are over—for the moment.

That there will be further strikes in this big munitions making district is not only feared, it is expected.

Opinion in England today is divided as to the real reasson why some 3,000 workmen, at the most critical period of the war, downed tools in defiance of the government and despite the patriotic appeals of their own labor union; but there are few who will dispute the assertion that the situation was sadly mishandled by the authorities.

In the first place the fact that a strike was on was concealed until the last possible moment.

Then, instead of acting with vigor under the acts of Parliament which forbid strike in munitions factories on any ground whatever, and promptly arresting the offenders, the government compromised by merely deporting the ring leaders to another district.

That these men were not given a public trial is resented as much by workmen generally as by their associates.

Such a trial would doubtless have brought out the underlying causes of the strike. The charge has been freely made that German influences, including German money, were responsible. This is hotly denied, not only by the men involved but by labor leaders generally.

It is much to the credit of organized labor in this country, however, that the strikers have been roundly denounced by the responsible heads of the labor movement.

Even those labor leaders who are avowed pacifists, like George Lansbury, have condemned them.

A Fearful Fate.

PAPER MAKERS IN THE GAME

Some healthy rivalry exists between the ball fans employed in the city's paper mills, and each Tuesday and Thursday games are played on the new West Side diamond.

Last Tuesday a tie game was played between the Volney and Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper Company teams, with the result that aside from the kicks administered by almost every player on the field on the head of the umpire, the game was a good one, resulting in a tie. Another game will be played by the same teams next Tuesday, but it is definitely announced that no bowknots will be tied in the score.

The Volney team, as if stimulated by the result of Tuesday's tie game, pitched into the players representing the Granby mill yesterday and walked from the field with a score of 11 to 7 marked on the sheet. Granby's players do not rest easy under the defeat and they will array themselves against their adversaries on the same field next Thursday aftrnoon, with Volney as opponents.

MEN WHO MAKE CITY FAMOUS AT DINNER

Machine Co., Hunter Arms Co., Morrill Press, Parks and Ferris, and a menu printed by The Fulton Evening Times on Eureka Paper Co. paper.

The Patriotic Menu

The menu was as follows:

Oxtail Soup
Plain and Stuffed Olives Radishes
Cabbage Salad with Dressing
Filet of Sole French Fried Potatoes
Sirloin Steak New Potatoes
Creamed Asparagus
Fulton-Made Spaghetti with Tomato Sauce
French Vanilla Ice Cream
Coffee Fulton Made Cigars
Fulton Made Bread

Bread was furnished by Frank Massaro, and Blacks' Bakery; Massaro Spaghetti was used, Great Bear Spring Water, and after cigars from the Boland Brothers' factory had been passed around, the company gathered in the main dining room, and Willis P. Morin, president of the Chamber of Commerce, introduced E. R. Redhead as toastmaster.

Mr. Redhead first spoke of his keen interest in the manufacturers' exhibit and of his appreciation of the interest shown by the manufacturers of the city. He admitted that he was not thoroughly familiar with the goods manufactured in this city until he had viewed the exhibits and stated that he had been agreeably surprised to learn that Fulton products were not restricted to a few large industries.

Going back to the time when he first came to this city, in 1880, Mr. Redhead described the industries of the city at that time, and compared them with the manufacturing companies of the present time. With few exceptions, none of the manufacturers of the present were located here in 1880, although several of the men engaged were members of manufacturing concerns, or employes. Mr. Redhead remarked that the total number of Fulton industries of that day was small indeed compared to the number at present.

"This city offers more opportunities for the manufacturer than any city of its size in the state, and we might say the country," said Mr. Redhead. "Invariably when you hear people speak of Fulton it is to say a good word for the town, as one of the most enterprising places in New York state. We have the natural advantages here, and we can not only make this one of the leading industrial cities of the state, but also one of the most beautiful.

"We are now here as manufacturers to celebrate the first 'Made in Fulton' display week, and I think you all deserve congratulations for the success of the affair. Although this is our first dinner, it will not be the last."

In closing, Mr. Redhead repeated the words of a slogan he had read recently, which he said might well be adopted here, "Pull, and if you can't pull, push, and if you can't push, get out of the road."

Mr. Redhead called upon J. Harry Howe of the Granby Paper Company as the next speaker. Mr. Howe said he felt an apology was in order, for the Granby company, so far as he knew, was the only manufacturing concern in the city which did not exhibit its product during the week. Mr. Howe said the company's failure to join with the rest was purely an oversight and not occasioned by any other reason. He complimented the exhibiting manufacturers on their fine displays, and said he had never before realized the diversity of Fulton products. Mr. Howe concluded by promising to enter another affair of the kind with a large display.

What Makes Fulton Famous

Secretary Hollenga was the next speaker. His remarks were in the nature of an appreciation of the efforts of the manufacturers in making the display a success. He said it was the fortune of some countries and cities to be made famous by one man, as Homer made Greece famous and Napoleon accounted for much of the glory of France. In Fulton, the secretary continued, every manufacturer is striving to make the city of Fulton famous by the quality of his product.

"It is certain that no city in this country has more claim to honor than this city of ours," the speaker said. "There is one Fulton product displayed in the windows this week which is sent all over the world. The company prints literature in ten languages. Our products are quality products and those who use goods which are manufactured here know that Fulton is the quality city; they know that Fulton goods can not be excelled.

"You manufacturers have shown that you have brains; that you have capital or can get it, and where will you find conditions more favorable to you?

"Let, therefore, men in every walk of life defend the city of Fulton. Tell them about Fulton wherever you go. This exhibition has given some people the first insight into the manufacturing industries of this city. In the past, if you asked a Fultonian what was manufactured here, he would probably answer, 'Paper and woolens.'

"The Chamber of Commerce is indebted to you manufacturers for the co-operation you have shown the past week, and to the merchants who gave so generously of their window space that the Fulton made goods might be displayed."

Frank Flanders, the next speaker, urged the manufacturers to maintain the high quality of their goods. Louis W. Emerick delivered one of the most entertaining addresses of the evening, telling witty stories to illustrate his points. Mr. Emerick expressed his gratification at the display, and remarked that he was proud to see Fulton made goods in any part of the country. In his experience he once came upon a machine in the Canadian woods, built by the Dilts company of this city. He said he hoped to attend a dinner of the manufacturers next year, and in the meantime would try to interest himself in some other manufacturing lines in order that we might have additional products to display.

H. C. Warth, the chorister of the Peacock Campaign, who came to the dinner as a guest of J. Harry Howe, was next called upon for a few remarks. Mr. Warth was taken by surprise, but rose to the occasion gamely, and thanked the toastmaster for the compliment. He said it had been his experience that New York staters were inclined to underestimate their cities, as regards population, at any rate, and compared this spirit with that of the Western towns where every small point was described at length for the edification of the visitor, and the population figures were often padded. He said he liked the

ALL SYRACUSE HONORS GUARD

Thousands Today Cheered Militiamen Leaving for Beekman—City's Employers' Liberality.

Syracuse—In the greatest patriotic demonstration this city has seen since the Civil War Syracuse paid honor to its soldier boys today.

Buildings were a mass of flags and bunting, throngs packed the streets and little girls strewed flowers in the paths of the militiamen as they paraded the streets before leaving for Camp Beekman—and probably Mexico.

Supreme Court judges adjourned their sessions and saluted the flag from the court house steps as it passed by; veterans of the Civil War stood with bared heads as "the youngsters' went the old familiar paths; the Rotary Club, Optimist Club, City Club and Citizens Club gathered in bodies along the line of march and cheered and sang as the men went by; tholsands of school children gathered at different points along the line and helped keep clear the pavements for the troops; from the steps of the city hall a lieutenant governor, several assemblymen and senators and a host of minor officials saluted the marching troops; factory whistles all over the city pealed for for thirty minutes while upwards of 100,000 people packed and jammed the pavements and made the guardsmen's parade a continuous ovation.

All the local militia organizations will move Sunday for Camp Beekman. Orders have been received for some of the companies to entrain Sunday and others Monday. By the time of departure it is believed all the companies will be recruited to full strength. New men have been added to Troop D, Company C, Battery A and the Fourth Ambulance Company until now they only lack a few. Marcus (Red) Wilkinson, Syracuse University star football man was one of yesterday's recruits in Troop D.

The demonstration today was one of the most remarkable in the history of the city. As the troops moved between the long high rows of business blocks flags appeared almost by magic from every window; whistles shrieked their greeting and whistles tooted and roared a farewell.

Syracuse manufacturers are responding nobly to the nation's call and in but few instances will the troopers be deprived of either salaries or positions. Some companies will pay salaries for a year; other indefinitely and others until the men return.

"HUH!" exclaimed Aunt Tilda, as she stood the broom in the corner after sweeping the floor of her cabin and sat down for a rest. "I declar' to gracious if dar hain't jest as much work aroun' dis here house as if dey was a fam'ly of three or fo'.

"Huh! Old Mammy Johnson dropped in yisterday to ax me if my pickled peaches was all gone. I tole her dat dey was. A good sheer of dem had gone down her own froat. She sat for awhile, and we talked about our church and what was gwine to become of it if things keep on dis way.

"Huh! I don't spect no church was eber run dis way befo', and it's a wonder dat it hasn't failed and bin auctioned off like old Baker's grocery.

"Huh! It started out wid thirty men and seben women. It was understood dat de elders and deacons shouldn't pay any pew rent nor put anything in the contribushun box. Dar was a big scramble to be an elder or a deacon. Of de thirty men, nineteen got to be elders and eleven got to be deacons, and that left us seben women to pay all de money expenses.

Such Big Feet.

"Huh! Our first preacher was Parson Blake. He was no regular parson, but he said he would hold and do de best he could. In his first sermon he struck that Bible wid his fist 250 times, kase I counted 'em. In his second sermon he didn't strike so many times, but he made up for it by tellin' us dat de Lawd helped those who helped ourselves. Dat night he decided to help hisself. Next day when de constable followed de parson's tracks home from Kurnel Lamont's smokehouse he found six smoked hams in de parson's woodshed.

"Huh! Whar de parson made his mistake was in havin' such big feet and leavin' so many tracks aroun'. Dey said it was jest as easy to follow him as it was to track an elephant. When he got dem into cou't he said he was doin' only what de Lawd intended him to do, but de jedge sent him to jail to think de matter ober.

"Huh! We hab had lots ob rows since den, and de last one was when Deacon Carter got up to gib us a sermon. He said we might as well break up de church as not, for no cull'd pusson had eber gone to heben or eber would. He defied us to find a pictur' in any book showin' a cull'd angel. Dey was all white angels. He had been a prayin' man fur thirty y'ars, but he was gwine to gib it up an' save his voice to shout at his ole mewl.

"Huh! Dat made us all mad, an' we went fur him. I was de fust one to git my fingers into his wool. If de deacon eber goes to heben, in spite of what he said, de angels will find de scars upon him left by dat row. He got away from us arter awhile, but he had to leave town and stay away fur six months, but he may have been right, arter all. I has bin lookin' frew ebery book I could git hold of an' I certainly can't find no pictur' of a cull'd angel. BE READY.

Let each day take thought for what concerns it and liquidate its own affairs, and then we shall be always ready. To know how to be ready is at the bottom to know how to die.

Cow Adopts Colt.

Greenville, Pa.—J. S. Brown, a farmer near Conneaut lake, says a short time ago a mare owned by him died after giving birth to a fine colt. The colt was fed on a bottle for a time, and when it was strong enough it was turned out with a herd of cows for exercise. One of the cows had lost a calf, and the animal immediately adopted the colt. Bossy and the colt are now inseparable.

HOW I BECAME FAMOUS

By BARBARA PHIPPS

We go through the world seldom taking note that our every condition is due to some insignificant cause. I am a literary woman whose works are universally read. I am married to a literary man whose works are a drug in the market. And yet when I met him he stood high with litterateurs, while I had not yet written a line. What was the insignificant cause of this bouleversement?

I will tell you.

One summer—I was then twenty-two years old—I got out my trunk to pack it before going to the country to spend a month at the Sacacachet inn, Glenwood. The trunk was so dilapidated that I dared not trust it in the hands of baggage smashers. I could not well afford a new one, but went out to see what I could do in the matter. I hit upon a secondhand trunk too good to be called such, and bought it for a reasonable price. On one end were the letters S. L. O. Those were not my initials, and I directed the seller to erase them and put mine there instead. When the trunk was delivered to me he had neglected to do so. I had not time to send it back, so took it away with me as it was.

In the reading room I took up a city newspaper, and my eye fell on notices of the movements of celebrities. One was as follows: "Miss Sarah Louise Olmstead is spending the month of July at the Sacacachet inn, at Glenwood." Miss Olmstead was a novelist of reputation. I congratulated myself that I would have an opportunity to meet her.

I was sitting on the hotel piazza in the evening twilight when a gentleman stepped up to me and said deferentially:

"Miss Olmstead, we scribblers, I presume, do not need an introduction. I am Sidney Hall. May I claim your acquaintance? I have enjoyed your works immensely and have felt that if my especial line and yours could be joined we could do something remarkable. I am fortunate in meeting you here, and with your permission I will explain what I have in mind."

While he was saying this a light was breaking in on my dull brain. I had been taken for the famous Miss Olmstead. At the same time a desire to see if something interesting might not come of the mistake, as well as curiosity, led me to ask Mr. Hall what had led to the discovery of my identity. He told me that my initials on the end of my trunk had been observed and a newspaper had announced my coming. It was evident that the real celebrity had not arrived or, if she had, was incognita.

I formed no plan with regard to personating Miss Olmstead; I simply drifted into doing so. She did not appear to expose me, and it would not have troubled me if she had, for I permitted Mr. Hall especially to continue in error simply for a lark. I listened to his plans for collaboration between us with interest and was reckless enough to assent to them.

He left the inn early the next morning, but, during the evening I spent with him he elaborated his scheme, and I promised to devote myself during the next few days to laying down a skeleton of the work he proposed. The truth is I was quite delighted with his proposition and eager to see if I could make any success of my part of it.

In a couple of days I sent Mr. Hall the result of my labors, and he wrote me that he was delighted with it. His reply, addressed to Miss Olmstead, was put in my box by the hotel clerk. I wrote my collaborator that I would continue my work, suggested that he proceed with his part and as soon as I returned to the city he might call on me and we would confer further.

Of course there must soon come an end to all this, and in truth my recklessness in playing the part of another soon began to wear on me and caused an earlier return to the city than I had expected. As soon as I arrived I notified Mr. Hall. He came to see me, and I confessed to him that I was not Miss Olmstead, I was not a scribbler and knew nothing about writing fiction. He looked at me, dumfounded and incredulous, for a few moments, then said:

"Whoever and whatever you are, you have laid down a scheme for a novel so original and capable of being worked to advantage that it will surely be a success. All I ask that you act with me in carrying it out."

Within a year our novel, "A Matrimonial Venture," was published and was the literary success of the year. Before its publication Mr. Hall and I perpetrated another matrimonial venture which was equally successful. My literary venture was followed up by another work independent of my husband, and from that day, while my lightweight productions continued to grow in favor, his deeper ones gradually lost caste. This I regarded as a proof of my insipidity and of his real value. Had it not been for his suggestions in our joint novel there would have been no real merit in it. It gave me the entry to the reading public.

Whether the real Miss Olmstead ever heard of the mistake in my being taken for her I have never learned. I think the notice of her going to Glenwood was a mistake or perhaps she intended to go there and changed her plans. Had I not kept my room doing my literary planning I would doubtless have been approached by some friend of hers and the error discovered.

FOR POTPOURRI.

How to Make a Rose Jar to Last All Next Winter.

Rose potpourri is undoubtedly the favorite, though it is not by any means the sweetest or only kind. To make it is simple. Collect together as many rose petals as possible—those of old fashioned roses for preference—and be sure they are free from blight or disease. A rose garden is not wanted. With a little energy one can collect a lot of rose leaves, especially by getting all one's friends to assist in the task. Dry the petals in the sun and weigh them. Say there is a quarter of a pound of rose leaves. Then mix with them these spices: Two ounces each of common salt and bay salt, one ounce powdered orris root, quarter ounce each of cloves, powdered cinnamon, powdered mace and allspice. Mix together in a jar and keep closely covered, stirring every day for a month.

The following potpourri, one of the most delightful possible, is easier still to make, since all kinds of scented flowers can be used in it—violets, roses, thyme, lemon, verbena, cowslips, lilacs, lilies, lavender, etc.: Pull the petals from large flowers and break the heads off the tiny ones and put the flowers into a jar as they are obtained. Between each layer of flowers sprinkle a little common salt, powdered mace and powdered cinnamon—a fairly thick sprinkling, varied according to the quantity of flowers. Keep the jar covered, and when it is full and the flowers all brown and dry stir all together.

The Thrill of Being Wet.

There is something rudimentary and fundamental about having water splashed down upon one and getting completely and deliciously wet—not damp, not moist, but wet, wringing wet. You yourself when a child never enjoyed anything so much as your first drenching in an unforeseen and unavoidable rainstorm—the thrill of being wet, the cool drive of the water on your nose, into your sleeves and down your neck, and the joyous shush of soaked, waterlogged boots. Even the tedium of being rubbed with alcohol, bundled up and warned you would catch your death did not diminish the event. You voted it better than the time you fell off the boat deck; it lasted longer.—Atlantic Monthly.

ABOUT SWEATERS.

The Popular and Picturesque Sport Garment Up to Date.

Many women like the two tone silk or fiber silk sweaters. They are less glaring when in high colors, and they seem to blend more satisfactorily into the tone of the skirt. There are models, also, of pure silk which have wide borders of tartan plaid. There is more difficulty in the wearing of these because, unless the skirt matches the body of the sweater, there are apt to be a clashing of blues and a displeasing ensemble.

Besides the plaided trimming, there are recent accessories to the sweater ranks which have the hem border, the color and the cuffs done in Paisley design and colorings. The charm of these lies in their comparative novelty.

The lines of the sweater have undergone several little changes. The smartest are somewhat longer than their immediate predecessors, and those that have been sent over from the other side of the Atlantic incline to raglan sleeves rather than the regulation type. In some instances, Norfolk plaits are introduced, and the majority of them are belted or sashed in continuation of a style that is feminine and becoming.

White and black effects remain highly popular. There are a certain refinement and stability about this combination that give it a permanent place season in and season out. Several of the sweaters are of white, whose knitted surface is superimposed on one of black and which has a border of solid black. Then there are varieties which reverse this arrangement of color. And for those who must have a spice of gayety the border may be of Scotch plaid, also knitted.

Sweaters of pure silk are practically worth their weight in gold—or at least in silver. For those who cannot afford the possession of such there are sweaters of silk fiber that wear very well and which may or may not stand the intense rays of the summer sun.

It is said that all the sweaters which have come from Switzerland and England within recent weeks have been dyed in the old way, but those that have been made in this country have been subjected to dyes that are in a more or less experimental stage and must be taken with the understanding that the manufacturer and the retailer are in nowise to be held responsible for the fading out or streaking of the garment.

The secret of a light omelet is to froth the egg. One egg well beaten is worth two not well beaten.

When a pudding is boiled in a basin it should fill the basin.

Roasting meat cannot be basted too much or too often.

The part which to be topmost in the dish should when boiling be downmost in the pan.

Salted and smoked meat should be put into cold water, brought slowly to the boil, then simmered.

Water boils when it gallops, fat when it is still.

Puddings made with suet should be stiffly mixed.

When ketchup is used be sparing with the salt.

Green vegetables should be boiled fast, with the saucepan lid off.

To leave bread or vegetables in stock or soup turns these eatables sour.

Root vegetables should be boiled gently, with the lid on the pan.

All vegetables, excepting old potatoes, should be put into plenty of fast boiling salted water.

The liquor used in boiling meat or roots should never be thrown away. Soups and sauces may be made of it.

Broiled meat must be turned often; put the cut side to the fire.

A handful of salt will often clear a fire from smoke for broiling.

White For Summer.

Almost every summer white proves its worth as the most popular summer color. This year, like all others, is to be a white one. There will be frocks of white taffeta, white organdie, white voile and white in every other fashionable fabric.

"Got Your Summer Furs Yet?" Is All the Question

Design by Franklin Simon & Co., New York.

The bride is apt to be most deeply concerned about her "going away" and traveling costume after the vital matter of the wedding gown has been settled. Blue seems to be a favored color for "going away" gowns this season, and a few smart models in coffee tone have been recorded. One bride of important social standing appeared in a citron colored taffeta and citron cloth topcoat to bid goodby to her assembled friends. Since hat and buttoned boots were black, the effect was very smart indeed, but citron is a shade that admits no rivals in color alongside.

Charming Little Bolero Frock

A likeable little frock of all-over embroidery with a bolero that may be opened either in the back or front. The design is suitable to development in other materials.

A wide range of materials is used in the development of children's frocks, but nothing exceeds in daintiness all-over embroidery if it is of good pattern. The machine embroideries come in alluring designs and are well within the average income. This little frock is made with a bolero and, for average size, requires 4⅝ yards 20-inch embroidery. The bolero can be closed at the back or front, the former being more desirable for embroidery and the latter for plain materials, since the edges may be scalloped and trimmed with buttonhole embroidery.

To make the dress, we begin with the underwaist, the underarm and shoulder seams of which are first closed as notched, after which the back is hemmed.

Next, close sleeve seams as notched, sew in armhole, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam.

The back seam of the skirt is next closed from large "O" perforation to lower edge, then the edges above finished for an opening. Gather upper edge of skirt between double "TT" perforations. Sew to lower edge of underwaist, center-fronts and center-backs even, small "o" perforation at under-arm seam.

To make the bolero, close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. If desired, slash front and back about ¾ inch above and below small "o" perforations and finishing for openings to pass a straight 1⅛ inch belt through.

Among the highly favored materials for children's dresses are white organdy, figured dimity, all-over embroidery, white lawn and white and colored poplin, many of the latter having facings of strongly contrasting colors; for instance, white on blue and blue on white.

Pranks of a Number.

The number 37 has this strange peculiarity: Multiplied by 3, or any multiple of 3 up to 27, it gives three figures all alike. Thus, three times 37 will be 111; twice three times (6 times) 37 will be 222; three times three times (9 times) 37 gives three threes; four times three times (12 times) 37, three fours, etc.

No Rest For Mamma.

As bedtime comes and curtains fall my irksome cares seem put to rout, as, worn and weary into bed I crawl from my household duties tired out. But, as snug between the sheets I lie, and heavy lids have ceased to wink—from baby's crib there comes a cry, "Mamma, please det me a dwink."—Indianapolis Star.

DAINTY SALAD.—For the salad materials use sliced bananas and pineapple, halved and seeded white grapes and a bit over twice their bulk of oranges. For the dressing cook three teaspoonfuls of butter with two of sugar and three beaten egg yolks until thick; then add seasoning of salt, paprika and celery salt and the juice of a lemon. Beat well and cool. When blending the dressing and salad add some cut nuts and garnish with whipped cream and cherries. Use lemon juice for salad dressing in place of vinegar and you will find that there is a vast improvement in flavor. This is true in almost any recipe that calls for vinegar.

Stuffed Tomato Salad.—Take about six smooth, medium sized tomatoes. Scald, remove the skins and cut out the hearts and all the seeds. Invert and put on ice to cool and drain; then prepare the filling as follows:

Pare an apple and dice it; then add about half a bunch of celery, a quarter cupful of pecans or any kind of nuts, and half a cupful of chopped chicken. Mix with any salad dressing that has been thinned with whipped cream until it is of the right consistency. After filling the tomatoes and placing on head lettuce, put a tablespoonful of dressing on top.

Tomato and Mushroom Salad.—Select medium sized, smooth skinned tomatoes, pour hot water over them for a moment, remove their skins and chill on ice. Chop one cup canned mushrooms small, mix with them one small, finely minced onion and one-half cupful finely chopped celery. Moisten with a good mayonnaise. Cut a small piece off the top of each tomato, carefully scoop out the seeds and fill with the mushroom mixture. Put one spoonful mayonnaise on the top of each and serve on crisp shredded lettuce leaves.

Log Cabin Salad.—Place the fronds of cooked asparagus in log cabin fashion in center of cabin with chicken, crab or lobster salad. Shape up for a roof, cover roof with mayonnaise dressing. Serve with a small ramekin of Russian dressing with this salad on the side of the dish.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

A Sleepy Time Story About Some Very Clever Squirrels.

WHAT HAPPENED IN A GROVE.

Amusing Adventures of a Pair of Intelligent Collie Dogs—Many Things of Interest and Information For Little People—Strange Story of a Waif.

Well, kiddies, said Uncle Ben to Polly Ann and little Ned, I am going to tell you an amusing story about

DOGS AND SQUIRRELS.

Laddie and Brownie are adventurous collie dogs. They live in the Kansas city of Kansas City, and their play yard is a grove of trees. Every morning they fare forth to this miniature forest, and woe betide the squirrel that loiters too long upon the ground.

With a furious barking and "woofing" and snorting, Laddie and Brownie rush back and forth among the trees, seeking whom they may devour or at least to have fun with the little wood folks.

At first the squirrels were greatly disturbed by the terrible antics of Laddie and Brownie. In the midst of nut gathering they could not spare time to scramble clear to the tops of trees every time the two dogs came along.

One day the dogs frightened a squirrel that had just found a nut. With the nut in his mouth Chatterer rushed up a tree and clung to one of the lower branches. Laddie and Brownie stood beneath and barked. In his rage Chatterer opened his mouth to hurl invectives at the dogs and the nut fell out of his mouth.

It landed right on top of Laddie's head. In the display of temper that followed, Laddie seized the nut between his teeth, crunched his jaws down and cracked it.

Presently, when the dogs were barking up another tree, Chatterer descended and ate the "goody" from the nut Laddie had so obligingly cracked.

So that's the game they play. The squirrels often drop nuts and the dogs in furious rage crush the hard shells with their teeth. Both seem to enjoy it, and it saves the squirrels a lot of work.

A Fern That Walks.

The walking fern is a native of the United States. It is found in certain localities of the eastern states and westward to Kansas, usually growing on moss covered rocks, or near the bases of cliffs. The fronds, when fully developed, are from six to twelve or fifteen inches long, their tips reaching down into the moss or crevices of the rocks, where they develop young plants of two or three tiny fronds. At a later stage, a mass of fine rootlets forms and holds the little rosettes in position. After several months the long frond to which the little plant is attached becomes withered, and the young fern sends out fronds which produce new plants. It is said that in a few years a single plant under favorable conditions will develop into a whole colony.

GIRLS RETURN FROM CAMP

Pompton Lake, N. J.—Thirty young women of New York society started home from here today after three weeks learning the ins and outs of soldiering so that in time of need they may be a help to their country. They were under the command of Miss Candace Hewitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Hewitt, and were instructed by directors supervised by General E. Z. Steever, U. S. A., retired.

The Emergency Service Corps is the official title of Captain Hewitt's girls, and in their three weeks' camp they covered a course of intensive instruction, embracing everything from messenger service to cooking and from peeling potatoes to bareback riding.

Miss Hewitt and her sister, Miss Lucy Hewitt, were the organizers of the camp. They took their idea before a committee of prominent men and women and after careful study the training course was worked out. The committee includes Miss Anne Morgan, Mrs. Edward R. Hewitt, Mrs. Everit Macy, Miss Elizabeth Lowndes, of Rosemary Hall; Miss Spence, Henry L. Stimson, General Charles Roe, U. S. A., retired; Lieutenant Colonel William F. Schauffler, Surgeon General, N. G., N. J., and Harry B. Sedgwick.

The purposes of the corps are to lead girls who have had opportunities in life to recognize their responsibilities.

The course included making camp, riding, swimming, first aid and sanitation, lectures will be given in military law so that the girls may realize fully in what relation they will stand to their own and to enemy troops in the time of war.

Miss Hewitt laid down a list of equipment with which each young woman must provide herself. This included two pairs of waterproof shoes, three pairs of thick stockings, one pair of woolen socks, one pair of sneakers, three changes of underclothing, one set of waist garters, one pair of leather puttees, three olive drab shirts, one campaign hat, one pair of service gaunties, one belt, two red ties, one uniform coat, two pairs of uniform breeches, one slicker, two pairs of pajamas, one sweater coat and one bathing suit. Skirts are taboo.

The girls learned how to wig wag with the general service code and semaphore code, and the mysteries of lighting beacon fires and making signal smokes—which last is no mean art in itself.

Among the girl rookies were the Misses Mildred Sawyer, Rozauna Bowen, Margaret Lindabury, Mildred Rives, Abby Morrison, Miss Martha S. Gay, Miss Helen Seton, Miss Alice Thorne, Miss Helen W. Green, Miss Agnes Fowler, Miss E. Rita Norrie, Miss Elizabeth Mosle and Miss Elizabeth Harrison.

BEES BREAK UP SCHOOL.

Imprison Teacher and Pupils Until Rescue Party Comes.

Oakdale, Cal.—Forty school children were held prisoners for half a day at Langworth school by a buzzing swarm of bees, which finally broke up school for the day.

The bees had hives in one corner of the roof for weeks and had been undisturbed until some of the youngsters threw clods and dislodged the hive. The bees attacked their tormentors, who took refuge in the schoolhouse.

Miss Ida Warford, the teacher, put her head out of the door to see the cause of the commotion and was stung on the nose. Hundreds of bees swarmed into the half opened door, and the children sought refuge in the next room, while the teacher and the older boys battled with wet cloths and whatever weapons they had handy.

They, too, were finally forced into the other room, and the entire school was made prisoner until some of the parents, alarmed at the absence of their children, came to the rescue.

They were forced to flee, too, but finally came back armed with sulphur, with which they routed the bees. A number of the children and the animals in near by fields were severely stung.

FORBADE HIS BURIAL.

New Yorker, by Will, Provided For Death Tests and Sarcophagus.

New York.—In the will of Robert P. Lyon, who died on May 28, filed for probate recently in the surrogates' court, an estate valued at $75,000 was bequeathed in equal shares to the testator's wife, Mrs. Grace I. Lyon, and his two sons, Robert D. Lyon and Arthur S. Lyon. The will continued:

"I desire to impress upon my wife and my executors that I have an intense dread of being buried alive. I therefore charge them and also such physicians as they may select after my apparent death to have my body subjected to thorough tests of death and to cause the radial artery at either wrist to be cut across by a competent surgeon. I understand that if the vessel is bloodless life has ceased."

The decedent also stated that he had "an intense aversion and dread" of being buried in the earth and requested that his body be placed in a receiving vault until a sarcophagus could be erected for it. Mr. Lyon left funds to pay for this vault.

JOHN D. BUYS A KISS.

Grandson Negotiates the Sale of a Smack For a Nickel.

Tarrytown, N. Y.—John D. Rockefeller was attending services recently at the Lyceum, Pocantico Hills, with his son, John D., Jr., and grandchildren. After the services Winthrop, the second grandson, beckoned to his grandfather and said he had a little matter to adjust with him. When his grandfather bent over to get the message the boy said:

"Grandpop, I've got a big kiss for you."

Mr. Rockefeller smiled, put his hand in his vest pocket, where he keeps his loose change, and, digging out a new nickel, gave it to his grandson, who already had his hand out. When the little fellow's fingers clasped the coin he put his arms around his grandfather's neck and gave him a smack, with many of the congregation looking on.

"He'll take care of himself in this world," said Mr. Rockefeller, patting the boy's head approvingly.

BUTCHERS GET GOOD SUPPORT

State Sealer Says Packers Must Mark Net Weight, Relieving Retailers of Much Blame.

Syracuse—The first echo from the meeting of the New York State Butchers' Association in this city last week is heard in the notice forwarded meat packers selling their products in this state, by John F. Farrell, state superintendent of weights and measures. Mr. Farrell declares the packers must comply with the state law requiring indication of net weight or take the consequences.

The Syracuse convention demanded that some relief from the situation under which retailers were compelled to pay for wrappings on hams and bacon at the pound price for meat. They also asked for a federal law similar in provisions to the Wicks bill which would require the packers to indicate the net weight of meat so packed.

Mr. Farrell's notice says:

"Our law places the guilt upon any person selling or offering for sale goods in containers which are not properly marked. I have been very loath to proceed against the retailers in this matter as I felt that the real fault was with the packers. As the supreme court decision thoroughly answers all the contentions that had been made why net weight markings should not be required it is now necessary to enforce the law strictly in accordance with its terms. The packers will have to protect their customers and if they do not see fit to do so they must suffer the consequences. The consumer has been forced to buy a pig and a poke too long. Wrappings on single hams and bacons often weigh well over a pound, cost less than four cents per pound and are sold at from 18 to 24 cents. There is no practical difficulty in accordance with the requirements of our laws and of the regulation which was adopted by this department after investigation in the packing industry."

SOLDIERS CAMP IN NEW YORK PARK

New York—Van Cortlandt Park has become a military encampment. The tents of the artillery and cavalry dotted the parade grounds yesterady. Friends of the soldiers, from all over the city, found everything in the encampment on a strict martial basis.

Batteries B, D, E and F, of the First Field Artillery, with Lieutenant-Colonel Merritt H. Smith, in command, occupy the western side of the parade ground. Batteries C and F, of the Second Field Artillery, are encamped nearby. Squadron A has two troops, A and B, under canvas.

More batteries will arrive to-day. The field pieces of the batteries already encamped have been set up and look ready for business. The commissary department was working smoothly yesterday. The officers said that the only serious shortage was in the supply of horses. This shortage should be relieved today when 425 horses and mules from the West will be brought from Jersey City today.

Fresh horses arrived from the West for Squadron A yesterday. The first consignment of 150 was turned over to the troopers and the machine gun detachment. Another consignment of 150 is on its way.

THE QUIRK TODAY.

"The Supreme Sacrifice" affords Robert Warwick a magnificent opportunity to display his brilliant gifts of dramatic power and characterization.

The story concerns itself with the heroic sacrifice of David Aldrich, a young author, (played by Mr. Warwick), who sacrifices himself and endures a bitter term of years in prison to save the hallowed memory of his dearest friend, an East Side clergyman, who in a moment of desperation has embezzled the charity funds placed in his care to satisfy the extortionate demands of a woman with whom he had become entangled years before.

David's heroic deed of self abnegation makes him a social Pariah.

But through the years of his dark trials the faithful love of a noble hearted woman endures and sweetens his cup of bitterness.

Up the long, dreary road that eventually leads to success and happiness for David he toils bravely and with a man's heart.

"The Supreme Sacrifice," is unquestionably one of the most noteworthy dramas in which the universally popular Robeart Warwick has appeared.

Big scenes, dramatic climaxes, swift pulsant action and a splendid story with perfect photography enhance the vital interest of this photoplay.

States Use of Vaccine Will Prevent Typhoid

Every member of the State's national guardsmen who may be sent to Mexico will go to the front fortified against typhoid fever according to health commissioner Herman M. Biggs, of the state department of health. Wednesday enough vaccine was sent out from the department to immunize 4,000 guardsmen and additional quantities are being shipped out.

In anticipation of a large demand for typhoid vaccine the division of laboratories in the state department has been working over time for several months. With the call of President Wilson Monday the demand for vaccine suddenly increased and the department found itself prepared to make prompt shipment. Enough vaccine is on hand to immunize the entire national guard, recruiting up to war strength.

Commissioner Biggs has urged a wider use of the typhoid vaccine ever since entering the state health department.

Several of the state departments have taken advantage of the opportunity of having their traveling representatives immunized against typhoid and a considerable proportion of the national guard has already been immunized.

GARRISON EVACUATES MEXICAN STRONGHOLD

(By United Press)

San Antonio, Texas—General Pershing has wired General Funston that the Mexican garrison has evacuated Casas Grandes. He made no mention of having occupied the city. General Funston was inclined to doubt the previous reports that General Pershing had declared martial law at Meuvosas Grandes, saying he believed General Pershing would have reported such action.

Greece Now Accepts Allies' Demands

Greece has yielded to all the demands of the Allies.

She has agreed to complete the demobilization of the army, dissolution of the Chamber and a general election.

This is taken to portend the return of Mr. Venizelos to power, the suppression of German propaganda in Greece and the adoption of a policy more favorable to the Allies.

According to Reuter's Athens correspondent, Mr. Zaimis, to whom the formation of a new cabinent was entrusted, went to the French Legation during a conference there of the Entente ministers on Wednesday evening and announced in the name of King Constantine that Greece had yielded fully.

An official despatch from Athens confirms the advices that Greece has agreed to the proposals of the Entente Powers, including the dissolution of the Chamber, the reconstruction of the gendarmerie and the holding of new elections.

Militia All Over Country Ready

(By United Press)

New York—By Tuesday night practically every militiaman ordered out by President Wilson will be in camp and ready to move to the border, judging from information gathered today by the United Press from all sections of the country. In several states considerable difficulty is being experienced in obtaining equipment. In one or two instances, recruits are necessary to bring skeleton companies up to full war strength and these are slow and voluntary, noticeably in Minnesota. But several of the states have a full militia in camp.

Washington—The militia of Wisconsin, Kansas and Missouri will likely move to the border either today or tomorrow. The War Department received reports that afternoon that the bodies had been recruited to a sufficient strength. In keeping with yesterday's orders it was indicated that their despatch must be not later than tomorrow.

Poland May Be Re-established as an Independent Nation

By HENRYK SIENKIEWICZ, Famous Polish Author

THERE is no doubt in our minds that this war will bring about at last, after all these long years of suffering, the self government of Poland. IT IS, INDEED, ONE OF THE MOST URGENT NEEDS OF EUROPE THAT THE POLES SHOULD BE ALLOWED TO DEVELOP ON THEIR OWN NATIONAL LINES UNDER A POLISH GOVERNMENT.

Without detracting from the claims of other smaller nationalities I hope I may be forgiven for putting the claims of the Polish people in the foreground.

The Albanians, whose number is but one-tenth as many as ours, have received the most careful attention of the great powers. Independence and autonomy were promised them.

We begrudge nothing to others whose aspirations are legitimate, but we look forward with complete satisfaction to the certainty that our own ideals are on the eve of fulfillment.

AND WE WANT TO FEEL THAT OUR NEIGHBORS IN EUROPE AND ALSO THE AMERICANS SYMPATHIZE WITH US AND REJOICE WITH US IN THE REINCARNATION OF POLAND.

Britain Today Makes Every Man a Soldier

(By Wilbur S. Forrest United Press Staff Correspondent)

London—Great Britain today became a nation of militarism.

All but a negligible quantity of male Britishers between the ages of 18 and 41 today automatically became soldiers for the duration of the war under the military compulsion act. They are the army of reserve and will become trained units as fast as the military authorities can put them through the necessary steps.

It is estimated that upwards of 600,000 are thus added to the military forces. Between 350,000 and 400,000 are youths under nineteen. The remainder is divided between married and single men who have held back mainly for family or business reasons.

Beginning today every man walking the streets or highways of Great Britain, excluding Ireland, is subject to challenge by a police constable and must produce his certificate of military exemption forthwith or face the consequences.

But few are free under the compulsion act. Total exemption is openly granted only to clergymen, exchanged prisoners of war and the medically unfit. From today onward for thirty days, hundreds of tribunals throughout the country will consider the last applications for exemptions. It has been previously announced that absolute freedom from military service cannot be granted to those pleading "serious hardship." Hence the tradesman must leave his shop, the professsional man his office, the manufacturer his plant and the husband his home despite business or domestic hardship. The conscientious objector, if his objections are proved genuine to the satisfaction of the tribunal, must serve in a noncombatant capacity. Even the government employe must prove that his services are indispensable to the nation.

British railway stations, especially those of the larger cities, took on a new aspect todaq. More women and children crowded the platforms than ever before. It was like a Sunday school picnic except tears and goodbyes took the place of laughter and joy.

Both bodies were picked up about sixty feet away and practically every bone in their bodies was broken. The automobile struck the engine midway between the cow catcher and the cab.

MEET IT HALF WAY

So far in this neck of the woods, at least, we have not been much troubled with hea t this year but July will soon be here and any day we may expect summer to assert its supremacy and treat us to some of the oldtime sultriness.

And what are you going to do then? If it comes suddenly are you going to be unprepared and "unbraced" to meet it?

One way to take the hot weather is to stew, fret, fan yourself, and force your neighbor into company with your misery by asking him "Is it hot enough for you?" Another way is to take it as an adventure. To be prepared for the heat you should eat and drink moderately, and reduce your clothing to—or, if your courage is great, below—the minimum prescribed by custom. The adventure itself is to prove yourself superior to the heat.

Man, the Master, can live in both hot and cold climates. His progress is marked by ever decreasing fear of things outside of himself, and ever increasing dominion over matter. His Being—spiritual and eternal most people call it nowadays—covers no more.

Look upon the sun and its warmth—pretty well tempered to us—as the friend, and not the tormentor of humanity. This establishment of a friendly relation with the source of the heat waves helps some. But it is not enough. There is left the necessity for calling upon your inner strength to meet the heat and prove yourself the better of the encounter.

You may not win, but you will be calmer and more self respecting, and "feel better" if you attempt the mastery than if you sink down at the first approach of heat and wait for its blows.

PSYCHOLOGY IN BUSINESS

Psychology in business, that too little understood and too little practiced science, is being impressed upon the business men of Fulton in a most practical way by the harmonious workings of the Chamber of Commerce, and upon the occasion of the First Manufacturers' Dinner apparent advancements were made along that line. A set of laws governing business will show the necessity of putting logic and other mental sciences into the every day routine.

That much talked about and seldom practiced word "service" takes on a new and larger meaning when its full significance is brought out. It is the very basis of business action. Without it there would be no business.

If the commercial world but realized more fully the psychology that students of business and the mental specialists claim and know to be a vital factor in everyday life, some of the vexing problems would be more easily solved, if not dissolved.

The present United Press Service that the Fulton Evening Times is receiving by special wire insures its readers a service at least three hours later than is distributed through any other source to Fulton readers.

The good people of Fulton are quick to realize the improved wire service we are giving them, furnished by the United Press Association, and as a result new subscribers are being rapidly added to our list.

Some people are for Fulton first. Some people are for Fulton last. Our good citizens are for Fulton all the time.

Merchants will get paying results by placing their advertisements in the Fulton Evening Times.

We are grateful for the many new unsolicited subscriptions we are receiving.

The Philadelphia Ledger:

Some men greatly enjoy putting a string of letters after their names. Now is the open season for the quest of honorary academic degrees. One man would rather be M. F. H. than P. D. Q. or C. O. D. Another can't be happy till he gets S. O. S. or R. S. V. P. as his suffix. Universities, after research in the pages of Dun or Bradstreet, discover that wealth and character are compatible, and gratify the ambition of old Gotrox to be created a Doctor of Hemiplegia or a Master of Periphrasis or a Bachelor of Arteriosclerosis or Mutiple Neuritis or anything else for which he is willing to give a completely equipped gymnasium, or a rotary heating plant, or an endowment for a professorship in phlebotony, or a bookless library. Then when Gotrox has the degree safely salted away he compromises by installing a gas meter in the porter's lodge or buying a Mexican grass hammock for the president's garden. In the meantime the president has been burning the midnight tantalum to get ready the proper phraseology about the vir inlustrissimus for whom it is intended that his fragment of the alphabet shall come high. Even a Ph. D., unfortunately may be a D. Ph.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Louisville Post:

The events of the last thirty days have served to again demonstrate, and in a strikingly impressive manner, the advantage of the afternoon newspaper in giving the news of the day.

When it comes to war news the afternoon newspaper simply has the whole field. Every development in the fighting at Verdun is given in the afternoon newspaper, and there is only left for our morning contemporaries to reprint verbatim the dispatches to the public hours before by the afternoon newspapers. The first news of the great sea battle in the North Sea appeared at midday in the afternoon newspapers. The morning papers reprinted the story, and the next day the afternoon newspaper printed the particulars of the fight as given out from London and Berlin.

The story of the tragic death of Lord Kitchener appeared in the afternoon newspapers, near twenty hours before a morning paper could be published.

When we turn to Americacn affairs the story is the same. Each day the afternoon newspaper prints the news of the political conventions at Chicago, with the complete text of the speeches made in the convention, and the authentic story of what is taking place among the delegates. The morning newspapers are forced to content themselves with reprinting the accounts given in the afternoon papers, or of trying to create a sensation by the publication of "private dispatches to the editor" from unnamed persons guessing at what may happen.

In every field of activity the story is the same. The New York Stock Exchange opens at 9 o'clock by our time and closes at 2 o'clock by our time. The first editions of the afternoon newspapers give the exact quotations as to the opening of the market; the later editions of the same papers give the record of the sales, the close of the market, and all that can be garnered in regard to market conditions. The morning papers go to press twelve hours after the Stock Exchange is closed and all that they can do is to repeat the story of a day that is dead and revamp news that is old and forgotten by those for whom it is printed.

New York Herald:

Under the Federal Reserve act any national bank having capital and surplus of a million dollars or more may be permitted to establish branches in foreign lands for the promotion of American commerce.

Able bankers long have been of opinion that strong national banks, under proper restrictions, should be permitted to operate domestic branches. The experience of other countries and of State banks that now possess this privilege demonstrates its advantages.

The bill reported from the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency amending the Federal Reserve act provides for domestic branches within the city or the county in which the parent bank is located, limiting the number of such branches to ten and prohibiting the establishment of any outside the bank's State or its federal reserve district.

In order that the question of branch banks may be considered separately the chairman of the House committee has introduced a bill on the general lines of that part of the Senate bill dealing with this subject. Some branches of large national banks are needed in the public interest, and it would be well to pass the House bill irrespective of the disposition of the fate of the more elaborate measure, which involves domestic acceptances and other matters.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS

President American Society for Thrift

Benjamin Franklin said: "The art of getting riches consists very much in thrift. All men are not equally qualified for getting money, but it is in the power of everyone alike to practice this virtue."

Many American housewives discount this statement today, yet economy in supplying the family with the proper food is quite possible. It is, however, not fashionable.

Experts in such maters have figured out that over 10 per cent. of foodstuffs is wasted by the housekeepers in this country, which means $4,000,000 since we purchase $4,000,000,000 of foodstuffs a year. With little thrift on the part of the housewife the high prices of food will be less noticeable in the family budget. While foods are likely to remain high, women must revise their household expense, to meet this condition; they must learn how to buy and how to cook more economically, what combinations of foods are essential for their families and in what quantities. There will then be little or no waste and the actual money saved will be amazing.

"He that spares when he is young may spend when he is old."

Now, if a person applies the principles of thrift to his health, one of the things which he will eschew will be over eating. Over eating is one of the commonest forms of extravagance among the people of this country. The rest of the world eats on an average, forty-nine pounds of meat per capita, a year, but Americans eat 172 pounds per capita a year. It has been estimated that if this quantity were cut in half enough money would be saved in one year to pay the national debt. It is also known that the ills due to this over-consumption of meat are too many and costly to be estimated. Wage earners, for instance, lose annually $750,000,000 a year through illness, and their lost wages and medical care consequent upon some of this illness surely is due to over indulgence in foodstuffs.

There died in New York the other day a man named Jacob Langcloth, who came to this country from Germany, penniless, only eighteen years ago. So thoroughly did he take advantage of his opportunities and so well and successfully did he practice thrift that he was able to provide most generously for his widow and over sixty employes; remember many public institutions and leave the resi[illegible] estate of over $3,000,000 to a home for invalids. That is [illegible] thrift will do for those who give it a chance.

Mr. Bowser's Garden

By M. QUAD

FOR three evenings after dinner Mr. Bowser had gone out into the back yard to smoke his cigar and stroll around. Mrs. Bowser had watched him, and the cook had watched him, and when he was seen pacing off the ground and making marks with his shoes the cook could not restrain her curiosity, but queried of Mrs. Bowser:

"Why does he mark those spots by digging his heels into the ground? They say that's the way the gravediggers mark the length of graves. If he thinks he is marking for my grave I'll show him that I won't be here to fill it."

"Don't you be afraid, Maggie," consoled Mrs. Bowser. "I'll give you my word that you'll never fill a grave in our back yard. Mr. Bowser may be going to get up posts to swing a hammock in between."

There was something to explain, but Mr. Bowser made no explanations and his actions remained a mystery for three or four days. Then he was an hour late coming home to dinner, and he brought with him a good sized parcel done up in a newspaper. During the dinner hour no mention of the parcel was made, but after the meal Mr. Bowser said:

"My dear, you may call it a silly notion on my part, but all winter long I have been thinking of mother's old fashioned flower garden. There were hollyhocks, sunflowers, pineys, roses, tulips, pinks and chrysanthemums and lots of other things. It was a joy to walk in that garden, and I always believed that she died regretting that she must leave it."

Mr. Bowser laid the parcel on the table and lifted out about a score of envelopes containing seeds. There were bulbs, roots and stalks besides, and there was a handful of dried moss. Mrs. Bowser picked up the latter and examined it critically and asked:

"What did you buy this for?"

"If you were much of a botanist you could answer that question yourself. Could a flower garden be complete without creeping Charlie as a border around the beds?"

"It is no more Creeping Charlie than it is Creeping Thomas or George, but you can call it so if you wish. By putting it in a basin of water for a week or so you may possibly nourish it back to life."

"By thunder, but you are beginning already!" shouted Mr. Bowser as the plumb color came to his face. "What in the old Harry do you mean by such talk?"

REPORTERS WILL GIVE IT A GOOD WRITEUP.

"And what sort of bulb do you call this?" asked Mrs. Bowser as she held up one.

Mr. Bowser swallowed his anger after a moment and replied that it was a tiger lily.

"It may be—it may be," mused Mrs. Bowser, "or it may be a bear lily, or a wolf lily, or some kind of a lily grown at the north pole. Most people would call it an old beet."

"Mrs. Bowser, you just let those things alone or there will be an awful row around this house," grimly replied Mr. Bowser. "You have gone out of your way to insult my intelligence."

"And what do you call these seeds, Mr. Bowser—these seeds in the envelope marked hollyhock? They are kernels from a head of rye just as sure as you live. I don't say this to discourage you, because if we can raise a crop of rye it will readily sell for cash."

There was silence for a minute—silence so deep and long and broad that a canoe could have been paddled in it. Mr. Bowser made three or four efforts to stand up, but his knees gave out every time. Mrs. Bowser picked up another envelope and said:

"Ah, this envelope is marked 'sunflower!' Out of this handful of seeds there are five or six which might be called sunflower seeds. The rest are popcorn kernels, oats, wheat and barley. This gives you a grand variety, Mr. Bowser, and I commend your choice. We can have quite a farm in our back yard. The sunflowers will look unique among the waving grain, and maybe we can raise enough popcorn to last us all next winter. Here are some roots and bulbs and seeds, and, taken all together, you can make a show place of your garden. Your dead mother can't come back to see it and revel in it, but the reporters for a dozen papers will be sure to come over and give it a good writeup."

Mr. Bowser advanced to the table, gathered up all his purchases and threw them into the empty fireplace. Then he walked down the hall and out the door, and it was 4 o'clock in the morning when he came creeping upstairs to bed, and Mrs. Bowser heard him grating his teeth and swearing in the Eskimo language as he removed his garments and threw them at the door. His back yard will be for rent this summer. He will not need it for an old fashioned garden.

Gentle Sarcasm

THOSE three famous Americans, Whitelaw Reid, Joseph Choate and Mark Twain, were once lunching together in New York. When the waiter was about to pour out some wine for Choate that gentleman stopped him.

"What, no wine, Choate?" asked Mark Twain.

"No," was the reply; "I am sixty today, and I have never yet drunk a glass of wine, smoked tobacco or gambled."

"Dear me!" exclaimed Mark Twain. "I wish I could say that!"

"Why don't you, Mark?" said Whitelaw Reid. "Choate did!"

SAN YGNACIO LONG UNEASY.

Threatened by Luis de la Rosa, the Bandit Leader, For Weeks.

San Ygnacio, where the latest raid by Mexican bandits took place, with a population of 200, is on the Texas side of the Rio Grande, about thirty-five miles south of Laredo and about forty-five miles north of Fort Ringgold, near Rio Grande city. Laredo is the nearest railroad station.

The town is a supply point for farmers and ranchmen in a remote region of Zapata county.

San Ygnacio and also Zapata, the county seat of Zapata county, had been threatened for weeks by Luis de la Rosa, the bandit leader of the states of Tamaulipas and Nuevo Leon. These towns are opposite the state of Tamaulipas. There is a ford at San Ygnacio, but the Rio Grande in that region is not fordable at this season of the year.

The last important raid on the Big Bend region at Glen Springs took place the first week in May, when a band of Mexican bandits descended upon the night encampment of a small body of United States troops. In the fight that followed four Americans were slain.

Since that raid a few minor forays have kept the guardians of American soil busy in the Big Bend country.

PLAN TO RAISE BREAD PRICE.

Bakers May Appropriate $300,000 For Publicity Campaign.

The price of bread is to be increased throughout the country. President Burns of the National Master Bakers' association told the annual convention of the bakers at Omaha. President Burns advocated the raising of a fund of $300,000 for educating the public to the necessity of increasing bread prices.

In his address to the convention President Burns said the prices must be increased because flour and everything used by bakers had increased from 30 to 90 per cent since the last increase in bread prices.

ALIVE IN ROCK'S CENTER.

Frog May Have Lived There For Centuries—Swelled Up When Freed.

Riverside, Cal.—A live frog, possibly centuries old, was found in the center of a solid granite bowlder which was blasted open at the Bly quarries, five miles west of Riverside.

The frog, still alive, was brought to the chamber of commerce and has been offered to Professor Daggett of the Los Angeles museum. When first exposed to the air and light it was shriveled to about one-third its normal size. Within a few minutes it had swollen until its skin was puffed almost to bursting.

It blinks with perfect froglike intelligence and devoured a couple of flies that were offered as though they were familiar food.

The frog closely resembles the present generation of frogs, differing only in the shape of its head and in its hind quarters. It is lighter in shade than the ordinary frog and is about two and one-half inches long and two inches across the back.

LOSES WOODEN LEG.

Commission Refuses to Give Olympia (N. Y.) Man Compensation For It.

Olympia, N. Y.—While the breaking of a leg ordinarily would be classed as a permanent partial disability under the workmen's compensation act, this is not true with a wooden leg, the industrial insurance commission recently decided.

George R. Stark, employed by a lumber company of Barneston, presented a claim for a fracture of the ankle of his wooden leg, stating it was caught in the conveyor of the mill on Aug. 9.

In the blank marked "Nature of injury," Stark's claim says, "Busted wooden leg; never will get well."

A newlywed named Jones was talking to his friend Casey the other day about his flat and was asking the other for a little advice.

"Do you know my dining room is the hottest place in the world?" began the newlywed. "Do you know of any way I might cool it off?"

"From experience I should say that a very good way to bring about a change in atmospheric conditions," remarked the older married man, "and one that is sure to bring results one way or the other is to take a friend home to dinner when your wife isn't feeling well and isn't expecting company."—Philadelphia Times.

RESTRICTING HOME STREETS

Home streets should be sacred to homes, and they should be protected from the invasion of all kinds of business. The home is the climax of urban activity, and it should never be sacrificed to commerce or industry of any character. A city wounds itself when it harms a home. And so there should be regulations and ordinances to protect the homes against business. Business can take care of itself; the home can't. A happy home, the most useful and honorable thing in a community, loses its high character if a shop of some kind is stuck up alongside of it. Yes; it is necessary for a man to make a living, but it is not right to make other people unhappy in doing it. We simply suggest that there is ample room here for a salutary regulation.—Ohio State Journal.

ABOUT THE TOWN

Several young people from Fulton attended the commencement dance at the Oswego Normal school last night, many making the trip to the affair by automobile. About 150 couples enjoyed the dancing, for which music was furnished by the Loomis banjo orchestra. The Normal gymnasium was beautifully decorated for the event.

Among those present from this city were Edward Carroll, William McGovern, Matthew Frawley, James Hapkins, Willis Penfield, Edward Sullivan and Edmond J. LaPorte.

* * *

Miss Mary Webb and Edward Carroll, two Fulton High school graduates who will graduate from Normal this year, will have important parts in the class day exercises which will be held at the school Monday. The commencement exercises will be held on the campus Tuesday, with a repetition of the pageant, "Masque of the Dawn," which was given so successfully earlier in the spring. The exercises will begin at nine o'clock Tuesday morning, and a large number from this city plan to attend. The school will close for the summer on Tuesday.

* * *

To date, the number of acceptances to invitations tendered from Fultonians to return to this city for Old Home Week number about 250, and there are doubtless several who will come without formally accepting the invitation. Indications point to a large number of visitors during the week, and although many of them will visit friends and relatives here, a large majority will stop at the local hotels. The Clark House, Hotel Lewis and Hotel Fulton have already booked reservations and the proprietors of these hotels are now making plans to care for the guests.

* * *

D. S. Hollenga, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, was one of the principal speakers at a dinner of the members of the Oswego Country Club.

* * *

Willis Morin, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and Secretary Hollenga were actively engaged yesterday in completing the solicitude of subscriptions for Old Home Week from the Fulton merchants. The merchants are meeting the demands upon them in a most generous spirit, and every business man in the city has contributed, some of them in sums seemingly far out of proportion to the size of their businesses.

* * *

Men who have not had their photographs taken in thirty years have posed during the past week for the Business Men's Section of the Old Home Week program and city booklet, which will be placed in the hands of the printer Monday. The booklet will be sold on the streets during Old Home Week, and the Chamber of Commerce will derive a percentage of the profits.

* * *

Herbert W. Adkins, city comptroller, musician and clubman, has almost completed the organization of the Fulton Elks' Bugle Corps which will make its debut during Old Home Week. Among the more prominent members of the organization are C. Zubie, C. M. Allen, William Rugg, Harry O'Brien, H. Reed, Clinton Hulett, H. C. Webb, Ernest Taft, Thomas Farrell and Merton Reynolds.

* * *

Thomas Farrell, director in charge of the voting contest for queen of the city carnival, announced yesterday in an interview with several newspaper representatives that the ballotting for the queen will begin Monday morning. Each vote will cost one cent, and as Mr. Farrell expressed it, 'One can vote as many times as one wishes, and has cents.' The contest will close about Wednesday of Old Home Week, and the winner will be crowned queen during the great parade and historical pageant on Friday. She will occupy a post of honor in William Hartnett's large Packard Six, which will be beautifully decorated for the occasion, surrounded by her maids of honor and attendants. Plans have already been completed for the decoration of the car and the decorations alone will cost nearly $100.

To date the names of several young women have been nominated by their friends as candidates, including Miss Genevieve McCormick, Miss Ruth Walsh and Miss Hazel Ingamells. Mr. Farrell expects to have the names of ten or fifteen candidates before the balloting begins.

IDEAL WEATHER FOR FIELD DAY

It Must Be the Pathfinders Fixed the Weather Man, But He Was Good to Them

Favored by ideal weather, members of the Pathfinder Boat Club enjoyed a second Field Day at the cozy club house north of the city yesterday afternoon. Most of the men of the company played baseball and quoits in the afternoon while others enjoyed sets at tennis, in which several of the young women joined.

Dinner was served at six o'clock, and shortly afterward dancing commenced. The Fulton Imperial Trio furnished music for the occasion, and the smooth floor was crowded with dancers until almost ten o'clock. Most of the guests made the trip to the Island by automobile.

Among those present were Miss Sue Henderson, of Washington; Miss Frances Wells, Miss Dorothy Gage, Miss Cassie Wells, Miss Julia Schoonmaker, of Syracuse; Miss Elizabeth Huie, Miss Laura Wells, Miss Mary Hunter, Miss Frances Forsythe, Miss Ethel Washburn, Miss Elizabeth Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Victor C. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. William Forsythe, Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Goodjon, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Foster, Miss Dorothy Allen, Charles O'Brien, Harold O'Brien, J. R. Fairgrieve, Charlton Hunter, Ted Foster, Herbert Parsons, Noel Royce, Frank Flanders and Herbert W. Adkins.

The club house committee had made plans for the first stag day of the season which was to have been held last Wednesday. The inclement weather of the past week necessitated a postponement, however, and the first stag day may now be postponed until after Old Home Week, as most of the members of the club are actively engaged in the planning of the celebration. The stag days proved very popular last year, and they will be continued throughout the summer months this season.

Black Magic.

In the discovery of the crews of the Arras and Tara, who had been carried off by the Arabs into the heart of the Libyan desert, the Arab acting as guide to the British tars led them unerringly for 115 miles across the pathless desert with "not a distinguishing mark or sign of any kind visible," so that the relieving force could only put it down as "black magic."—London Standard.

THE CITY'S GOOD BY TO SOLDIERS

Officials and Elks Accept Invitation to Attend Oswego's Demonstration In Honor of Boys of 'Steen.

Fulton will be well represented in the big parade in Oswego tonight, which will be in the nature of a farewell demonstration of the residents of that city to the soldier boys of Company D, National Guard, who expect to leave tonight for Camp Whitman at Beekman, en route to the Mexican border.

An invitation to the Fulton city officials, citizens, and fraternal organizations has been accepted thus far by the Fulton Lodge of Elks, and every city official except Mayor Lewis, who will be unable to attend. The Mayor has donated his car, however, which will be used by H. Putnam Allen and the executives of the Administration. Alderman Frank Quirk will take the aldermen of the city to Oswego in his car, and several other cars will be furnished by Fulton business men.

Secretary Edward Rugg of the Elks has telephoned the notice of the parade to every member of the organization, and it is probable that the Fulton organization will be represented by at least one hundred. The Elks' band has been engaged for the parade and one or two other musical organizations will furnish music. The Elks are requested to meet at the trolley station or the Elks' Home at 5:45 tonight and every member is requested to wear white trousers and straw hats, with purple bands. Canes and flags will be furnished at the rooms. The delegation will take the 6:06 car to Oswego, and a special trailer will be added to the regular car for the accommodation of the Fulton contingent.

The soldiers of the National Guard will appear in the parade, and more than 5,000 Oswegoians will march. The parade will begin about 7:30 o'clock.

What might have been a very serious accident occurred in this village Monday. A team owned by Frank Reed was standing in the square where several boys were playing ball. When the ball hit one of the horses the frightened team ran into a nearby barber shop, breaking one of the windows, then turned and ran down Fulton street, throwing Mrs. Reed, who was in the wagon to the ground.

After running about one and a half miles they ran into a field and were cought. Mrs. Reed was badly bruised and the wagon demolished. One of the horses was so badly hurt that a veterinary was called.

Humor in Architecture.

Up and down England are to be found hundreds of examples of the humor of ecclesiastical architects of a past age, from the snarling griffins worked into the stonework of Henry VII.'s chapel, Westminster abbey, to the dun cow and milkmaids in Durham cathedral. A cat playing a violin can be seen in the Wells cathedral, and in Hereford cathedral two cats, apparently performing a violin duet. Boston "Stump" is crowded with fantastic carvings, among which may be mentioned a wife chastising her husband, a teacher caning a pupil and an orchestra composed of bears playing an organ, a bagpipe and a drum.—Westminster Gazette.

Arctic Rock Weed.

Drifting down from Alaska comes the greatest of all sea plants, the arctic rock weed, that grows in shape like a huge ship's hawser and sometimes with branches 500 feet long. There are no signs of leaves, but at intervals of a fathom or so a knob, for all the world like the buoy on a drift net, grows around the stem, aiding, as does the buoy, in keeping the plant afloat and creating the impression that some fishing nets have gone astray.—New York World.

WARTH EXCELLED FORMER WORK

His Voice Heard to Better Advantage in Selections Last Night Than in Peacock Campaign.

Perhaps the most enjoyable musical event of recent years in Fulton was the concert last night at the First Methodist church, in which H. C. Warth, chorister and director in charge of the music of the Peacock campaign in this city, was the central figure, assisted by several local soloists. The affair was under the auspices of the women of the church, who exacted a promise from Mr. Warth at the close of the Tabernacle campaign that he would return to this city some time this month and sing in a concert. The attendance set a new high water mark for events of the kind here for the church auditorium and Sunday school room were crowded with people, and many were obliged to stand through the entire program.

The program was a most varied and enjoyable one. Mrs. J. Harry Howe, who accompanied Mr. Warth, with the organ, and Miss Blanche Hall, organist of the church, opened the entertainment with a duet for organ and piano.

When the applause died away, there was a momentary pause before Mr. Warth made his appearance, and when he came upon the platform he was accorded a most hearty reception. The audience refused to be appeased until the chorister had made a short speech in which he expressed his thanks for the greeting and his delight at meeting his friends of the Taberacle campaign once more.

In Which He Excelled

Mr. Warth was in excellent voice and in his first four numbers, he demonstrated to those who have only heard him in gospel numbers, that he is a concert singer of exceptional ability. His rich baritone was particularly pleasing in the rendition of Homer's "Banjo Song," which was one of the best of the evening.

Miss Mildred Dunham of Syracuse, a whistling soloist of great versatility and range, was next on the program and Mr. Warth followed her with three more selections, among which Tosti's "Good-Bye" was received with pronounced applause.

Mrs. L. R. Owens, violinist, played Rubenstein's Romance in E Flat, which concluded the first half of the program.

The church choir sang "Peacefully Slumber" as the opening number of Part 2, and then Mr. Warth sang three songs which are dear to the hearts of those who were actively engaged in the Peacock campaign. He has sung the hymn "Ninety and Nine" in this city before, but never with more feeling and spirit than he put in the number last night.

Miss Dunham gave another pleasing whistling specialty, and Mrs. C. Milton Allen, Jr., played "Le Printemps," by Carreno, as a piano solo. Mrs. Allen responded to an encore with a difficult movement for the left hand, which was also well received.

As a fitting close to the program, Mr. Warth sang two oratorio solos to the accompaniment of the organ, and the singer's vibrant voice and the deep tones of the organ mingled with a most pleasing effect.

An informal reception was held in the church parlors following the affair, and Mr. Warth shook hands with more than 200 people, all of whom expressed their pleasure at seeing him again, their appreciation of the program, and wished him well in his work next year.

Mr. Warth will sing in the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning, and in the First Methodist church Sunday evening. In the afternoon he may attend the Peacock Men's club meeting and give a short address, for in his short speech at the Manufacturers' Dinner Thursday night, he proved himself a very entertaining and forceful speaker.

He will leave for his home in Ohio Monday. While in this city, Mr. Warth is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Howe.

A THOROUGH TEST

One To Convince the Most Skeptical Fulton Reader.

The test of time is the test that counts.

Doan's Kidney Pills have made their reputation by effective action.

The following case is typical.

Fulton residents should be convinced.

The testimony is confirmed—the proof complete.

Testimony like this cannot be ignored.

Mrs. M. Guyer, 413 Cayuga st., Fulton, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in the family frequently and they have always acted as represented. They were taken for kidney trouble and lame back, and brought most satisfactory results. I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills some time ago, and all I then said still holds good."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Guyer recommends. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv

Sandy Bend Justice ÷ Fate of a Mean Man

WHEN the court at Sandy Bend had been duly opened and Judge Hoke was ready to dispense justice to one and all, he said:

"We have the case of Gentle Bill versus the Widder Jenkins before us. Gentle Bill, as you all know, is that long, lank, lean critter over on the box thar.

"The Widder Jenkins keeps an eating house on Death Row. Among the good things which you can find on her tables are pancakes. They are cooked to a golden brown. She always gives six pancakes to a portion, but if you want seven or eight you can get them with no extra charge.

"The other day, while most everybody in Sandy Bend was out at the race track to see the horses run, this yere Gentle Bill, he lingers behind. When the Widder Jenkins was all but defenseless in comes Gentle Bill, and he says he will take some of her pancakes. The widder smiled and set to work.

"Gentle Bill got his six, and down his throat they go. Then he calls for six more, and his appetite seems to increase as he calls. Then it was six more, and another six, and by and by the widder tells him of the skeercity of flour and asks him to hold up a leetle. Does Bill do the proper and polite thing? Does he remember that twenty men will come rushing into that eatin' house two hours later and call for pancakes? Not much. He turns around from the table and pulls a gun and shouts:

" 'Widder, you tend to your business. Keep right on makin' pancakes as long as you have got an ounce of flour. I don't keer for the rest of Sandy Bend. They can all go to thunder fur all of me!'

"Tend to Your Business!"

"And Bill sot right thar till the last pancake in the house had dropped into his stomach, and he was almost too full to walk out. He paid the bill, and I won't deny that, but he skeered the Widder Jenkins half to death with that gun, and he played the hog on all the rest of us.

"The Widder Jenkins was encouraged to apply fur a warrant, and Gentle Bill was made a prisoner. The fact that this court was one of the sufferers will make no difference with his decisions. The prisoner can stand up and make his excuses."

Gentle Bill stood up and, after a minute of embarrassment, explained:

"You honor, I was mighty hungry, and them there pancakes was mighty good."

"But you drawed a gun on the widder," protested Judge Hoke.

"The gun wasn't loaded, your honor, and the widder shouldn't have made her cakes so delicious."

"Prisoner," said the court as he took on a sterner look, "thar are various kinds of crimes. Thar are horse stealin' and murder, and thar are pullin' a gun on a woman and playin' the hog on a hundred men. You are guilty of both the latter charges. I ain't goin' to hang you or send you to prison, but I am goin' to give you three minutes the start of this crowd, and you had better head fur White Wolf City. If any of 'em overtakes you I shan't ask how many times they applied the boot. Constable, throw the door open! Gentle Bill, you glide out. Let no man foller until the three minutes is up. It won't be a hoss race this time, but it will be a hog race, and I'm bettin' 2 to 1 that the hog don't come in ahead!"

"A Herald of Progress"

Two Races

They Occurred on the Corso at Rome.

By F. A. MITCHEL

One of the principal streets, if not the principal street, in Rome is the Corso, so called from the fact that formerly it was used for racing horses. Gradually it was built upon and finally abandoned as a track and paved. But the citizens of medieval Rome were wont to assemble there, occupying stands erected there for the purpose of seeing the thoroughbreds run.

One afternoon a party of ladies and gentlemen occupied seats on one of these stands, among whom was a young lady noted for her kindliness of disposition, as well as beauty. Bianca Cellini had just come to a marriageable age—much younger in Italy than in colder climates, especially in those days. Among her admirers were two young men, Edgardo Brandini and Roberto Carancola.

Brandini was a scholarly person, though manly and fond of athletic sports. Carancola was a descendant of the Medici family, which at an earlier date had been very powerful and some of them steeped in crime. Both these young men were to ride their own horses in the race about to take place on the Corso, and the principal betting was on one or the other of their animals.

It being known that Bianca Cellini was receiving the attentions of these two principal participants in the race, a great deal of curiosity was aroused among her friends as to which one she would prefer to win. Yet so guileless was her face, and withal so devoid of any expression of approbation of either, that it did not seem probable she could have a preference. At races every one bets, and two of her friends made a bet that before she left the Corso she would show her feelings either for Edgardo Brandini or Roberto Carancola.

When the riders dashed by, Brandini in the lead, it was hoped by these two betting men that she would give some sign by which their bet might be decided. But if there was any pleasurable excitement in seeing Brandini in the lead or Carancola behind, there was not sufficient evidence of either to warrant a decision.

When the race was finished Brandini was the winner, Carancola coming in third. Carancola was riding sullenly back past the stand where Bianca Cellini was seated. She called to him to join her party that she might in the kindness of her heart soothe his wounded feelings at his defeat. Dismounting he went to her and the sympathy he saw in her face took away something of his disappointment. But in another moment Brandini rode by, receiving the acclamations of the people as the victor. Bianca, turning from Roberto, waved to Edgardo, showing every evidence that she gloried in his triumph.

Now, this was quite enough irritating to Carancola without what followed. The man who had bet that Bianca would show a preference for Brandini said in a voice loud enough to be heard, "I've won." The other said nothing, but it was evident that he assented. Carancola flashed a quick glance at them and understood what the bet was about without being told.

There was that in this sudden transition from sympathy for him to delight at the success of his rival, to say nothing of the attendant incident, that embittered Carancola against the girl as well as the man she favored. It was the beginning of a smoldering fire that grew more malignant as Roberto saw that his rival was every day getting nearer to the possession of the prize he coveted. Then when the betrothal between Edgardo and Bianca was announced it burst forth with all the bitterness of an angry serpent.

Bianca, who from time to time met with Carancola, was perfectly aware of his feelings toward his rival, though she did not realize that an equal hate toward her was growing up within him. She did all she could to soothe him, always greeting him with a smile and passing his venomous words without notice. But Carancola had in him some of the blood of the De' Medici who in a fit of passion had killed two of his own children. He was not to be placated. While she was endeavoring by her sweetness of disposition to neutralize his madness, he was plotting to vent it upon her as well as her lover.

At one end of the Forum stone steps lead up to the capital. Edgardo Brandini was one night ascending these steps when Roberto followed him and, approaching him noiselessly, plunged a stilleto in his back, killing him instantly.

When Bianca saw the dead body of her lover for a time her family despaired of her reason. When she came out from the influence of the crushing blow it was believed that she would take the veil. However, weeks passed, then months, while she remained within her home and was seen by no one. Then suddenly she appeared again in the world. But how changed! The difference was not physical. If stricken bodily she did not show it. Her face was not pale, her youthful beauty had not been impaired, but the Madonna-like expression in her face was gone, and in its place—so said those who knew her most intimately—had come a strange, faraway look that they could not fathom.

There was no evidence as to who had killed Brandini, though every effort was made to discover his murderer. Only one person knew with certainty who had stabbed him, and that was his betrothed. But she never breathed a suspicion. Had she done so it would have availed nothing, for in those days the science of obtaining evidence against criminals was not what it is today. Besides, at that time law was lax and persons were inclined to take their differences with their neighbors into their own hands.

Carancola supposed that even if Bianca did not denounce him she would treat him as her lover's murderer. What was his surprise then when on their first meeting after the murder she seemed to incline herself to him for sympathy. His heart leaped with a sudden hope. Could it be that in her innocence she did not lay the crime at his door? Would it be possible after all to win her? He spoke kindly to her, and his words and manner appeared to give her comfort. He did not see that strange look in her eye which her friends had noticed, or if he did he did not attempt to interpret it. What he looked for was a reliance on him for comfort that might develop into love. Her own manner was altered. He seemed to regret his former harsh words. Indeed, he told her that they had been caused solely by the fact that he had no hope of possessing her.

Bianca seemed, too, to crave to replace that love of which she had been deprived. At least this was the view Roberto took of her bearing toward him. At first he was chary of his visits to her, but increased their frequency. She, too, showed a warmer welcome every time he came. One thing, however, he noticed that puzzled him. She did not spend long hours with him. Sometimes she excused herself after a short time with him by saying that she was unavoidably called away to some duty. Sometimes she pleaded indisposition and did not receive him at all.

A time came when Bianca appeared again in the gay world. Her gentle bearing was replaced by an apparent recklessness. From a modest maiden she seemed to have passed to a woman of the world. That was a time when the higher classes were profligate. Bianca mingled with the gayeties, but was not herself dissipated. She accepted no marked attention from any man except Carancola. Some who knew of the rivalry that had existed between him and Brandini were surprised that she would be satisfied with the one in place of the other, and a few who suspected Carancola of having put his rival out of his way turned against her, but the general opinion was that she had been undecided between the two and, having lost the one, was ready to accept the other.

A year from the death of Edgardo Brandini came round and brought again the races on the Corso. Bianca had told him, out of respect to opinion, that she would not accept him till the twelve months after her bereavement had passed. He had intended to take no part in the races in deference to her feelings, her former lover having taken a conspicuous part in them the year before, but she urged him to do so. Anything she wished was a command to him, and he was glad to obey this one, for a colt that he had been raising had come of a proper age to run and was sure to win.

Carancola on the eve of the race was in high spirits. He was about to be betrothed to the girl he had so long loved, and since he alone knew of the merits of his horse was enabled to put out numerous bets with odds in his favor. If there was a gnawing of conscience within him he did not show it. He was busy making his preparations and saw but little of his betrothed.

The concourse was assembling on the Corso, and men were discussing the relative merits of the horses and making their bets. The stands were filling up, and among the parties occupying the seats was one including Bianca Cellini. As admirers looked up at her from below they saw a different person from the one who had been in her place a year before. Her beauty had bloomed, but instead of the soft cheek, the childlike brow, there was that look which no one could understand. In her corsage was a single rose, which would have been more in keeping with the girl of a year before than now.

Bianca had told Roberto to come to her immediately before he started in the race. He did so, and with a smile she handed him the rose from her belt and said:

"Before the signal to go, inhale its fragrance, and I promise you it will win you the race."

Promising to do so, he left her and within a few minutes after breathing in the odor of her gift was madly tearing down the Corso with the other runners.

Something occurred near the goal. An accident, some said. Whatever it was, it threw a chill over the concourse. Presently a horseman came back and, riding up to the stand where Bianca sat, told her that Roberto Carancola had fallen from his horse just before making the goal far in advance of all other competitors and had been killed.

There was a relaxation of that strange look on Bianca's face, and in its place came the marks of the great grief which had settled there after the death of Edgardo Brandini. From the Corso she retired to a convent, which she never left.

A friend of Bianca's, who was near Carancola when he fell, took a rose from his body which he had worn in the race and noticed a peculiar odor in the flower. Taking it home with him, he had it analysed by a chemist. It had been sprinkled with a deadly poison.

The O'Shaughnessey Strain

By JOHN BARTON OXFORD

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Under proper conditions "Killarney" as a tune is all right.

But there are circumstances which make even "Killarney" a consummation to be devoutly wished for—not!

Say, for instance, when it is played on a cornet next door between 10:30 and 11 p. m.—played very badly, with many breaks and false notes.

It had lost every iota of its charm for young Mr. Timothy O'Shaughnessey Scanlon. And when that evening the operator of the tortured instrument next door essayed some very uncertain double tonguing human endurance could go no further.

Scanlon, with a nervous shiver, irritably pushed the papers across the littered table in front of him, tore off his green eyeshade and jumped up to pace the room with his fingers stuffed into his ears.

The door of the little bedroom was pushed open, and Mary Scanlon, every gray hair on her head bristling with wrath, came in.

"How'll ye ever be doin' yer lessons, Timmy, if that spalpeen next door kapes his wheezy foghorn goin' like this?" she demanded, looking sympathetically at her distraught son.

"Sure, I can't be doin' 'em, mother," Timmy confessed. "It's worse than ever tonight. I'm near wild wit' the blamed uproar av it."

"What are yer goin' to do about it?" she asked with blazing eyes.

"What is there to do?" asked Timmy wearily. "I don't see nothin' but to move—to find some place where there won't be nothin' of this kind goin' on to disturb me."

Mary Scanlon's eyes narrowed.

A disgusted pucker showed itself on the forehead just above her upturned nose.

"Ye'd be drove out, would yer?" she said between set teeth. "Ye'd let yerself be ousted outer the house we've lived in for five years be them upstart Brennans that moved in next door only last month."

Mrs. Scanlon turned on her heel and went irritably out of the room, slamming the door after her by way of giving emphasis to her momentary feelings.

This did not tend materially to soothe Timmy's overwrought nerves.

Moreover, the wabbly double tonguing blatting forth again at that inauspicious moment, he strode to the window and threw it wide.

"Hey!" he bellowed to make himself heard above the din. "Hey, hey, over there!"

"Killarney" ceased momentarily.

There came the sound of a window in the next cottage slamming open.

"Well, what's the nature av the trouble?" asked Mr. Brennan calmly.

"I'll have a writ out on yer for disturbin' the peace and bein' a public nuisance," quavered Timmy, his courage already ebbing.

"Will yer so?" taunted the other. "Mayhap yer'll be findin' I have a right be law to practice as much as I choose in the house that none av yer money is payin' the rint av."

Whereupon he slammed down the window and immediately "Killarney" blared tunelessly forth as if propelled into the night by a pair of gigantic bellows.

Mrs. Scanlon, hanging out the week's wash in the back yard next morning, was accosted by Mrs. Brennan, who stepped to the dividing fence between the two cottages and glared savagely and forbiddingly at her neighbor.

"Mrs. Scanlon, ma'am," she counseled, "yer Timmy don't want to be startin' nothin' wit' my Eddie. He's likely to get marked up for life if he goes to talkin' to Eddie and to sarsin' him like be done last night, and all because Eddie is practicin' a bit on his cornet, which he's doin' fine on, if I do say it.

"Why, Eddie was all for goin' right over to your place and givin' Timmy what for right off for the nasty talk he give him. I had to hold on to Eddie and fair push him back and do all I could to quiet him down."

Something hot and choking seemed to rise to Mary Scanlon's throat, half strangling her.

"And glad I am yer do be broachin' the subject, Mrs. Brennan," said she. "I've a word or two of me own for you. Yer Eddie had better learn that there's some other folks round here has a few rights; also it might be well for him to remember that Timmy has the blood of the O'Shaughnesseys in him, ma'am.

"While you was hangin' on to yer Eddie I was havin' an awful time wit' Timmy, me fingers grippin' his coattails, ma'am, and me pleadin' wit' him tearful, ma'am, not to go over and be indacent to the Brennans.

"They was new neighbors and perhaps did not know as yet what was expected in a respectable neighborhood, they havin' just come here from hivin knows where."

There were pancakes for supper at the house of Scanlon that evening.

Pancakes for supper always made Timmy rather suspicious. Their infrequent appearance usually meant that his mother had some especial favor to ask of him.

Road to Peace Lies Through Self Respecting Strength Not Weakness

By GIFFORD PINCHOT, President National Conservation Association

UNTIL the nations unite to enforce international law our best hope for peace lies in making it dangerous for any nation to attack us.

You and I belong to a great peace loving people. We hate war and desire peace. We are ready to do everything that is just and honorable to secure it.

G. PINCHOT.

Doubtless we join with every lover of peace in looking forward to the day when reason and understanding will settle or prevent disputes among the nations. But the road to peace does not lie through flabby weakness, as the history of China proves, but through self respecting strength. That is why I believe in national defense.

THE MERE DESIRE FOR PEACE AND THE BEST INTENTIONS ON OUR PART CANNOT ALWAYS SECURE PEACE.

Guessing and wishing are no defense. Guessing and wishing cannot even keep the peace between our citizens. The force behind the law does that. How, then, can we trust them to keep the peace between the nations? I AM FOR PREPAREDNESS BECAUSE I BELIEVE IT OFFERS THE BEST CHANCE TO ESCAPE WAR. IT IS CHEAP INSURANCE AT THE PRICE.

Ideal of Socialists Is a Federation of Free Nations

By MORRIS HILLQUIT, Noted Socialist

WE Socialists have never believed that national existence could be ignored. We have always recognized the differences which speech and laws, traditions and geography must provide. We have not closed our eyes to those things. But we have been able to look beyond them, to believe that they are real, but not ultimate. We know that the workers of every country have common needs and ideals; THAT ALL FEEL THE SAME ECONOMIC BURDENS AND ARE ENGAGED IN THE SAME CLASS STRUGGLE.

Internationalism takes account of these things, but it does not necessarily come into conflict with national interests and life. It is not antipatriotic if patriotism stands for a sincere effort to better the social conditions of one's country.

THERE IS AN IDEAL TO WHICH WE ALL LOOK FORWARD, AN ULTIMATE HOPE FOR A WORLD-WIDE FEDERATION OF FREE NATIONS AND THE COMMON BROTHERHOOD OF MAN.

Japanese Navy No Menace to Peace of the United States

By K. K. KAWAKAMI, Japanese Author

SINCE the Wilson administration announced its stupendous defense program advocates of preparedness have been harping upon the popular notion of the Japanese peril. They have been telling us that the mikado has a navy powerful enough to attack the United States once he makes up his mind to pick a quarrel. Let us see how true such a statement is.

ALL TOLD JAPAN'S WARSHIPS AGGREGATE 560,484 TONS. AS AGAINST THIS STRENGTH AMERICA HAS A FLEET TOTALING 1,271,117 TONS.

It is evident that the existing naval strength of Japan is about one-third that of the United States, and yet this is the fleet which has been constantly held up by certain publicists as a menace to the Pacific coast of America.

AVOID FATIGUE.

Why Keep on Going Till You Actually Drop?

YOUR REST AND RECREATION.

The Human Mechanism Needs Oiling, Just as Do All Machines—Order Your Hours and Have Time Left For Play as Well as Work.

Fatigue of mind and fatigue of body are the two great causes of the housekeeper's unhappiness, and you cannot say that mind or body is sound if the energy has departed.

Now, it does not go all at once, and it is your own fault if you do not lay a detaining hand upon it long before the final exit.

First we must realize that you are a machine which must be well oiled if it is to run smoothly. Of course a machine will go on running if you don't oil it—experiment, if you dare, on your sewing machine—but what happens? Instead of running smoothly and silently, it makes a grating, jarring noise, and then—it stops altogether.

The woman who goes on without oil does exactly the same. And it is her own fault, protest she ever so loudly.

The oil, you will understand, is anything which makes the wheels go easily, and the woman who doesn't avail herself of such is guilty of false economy. Every day a little oil is needed, and two kinds are necessary, for two sorts of machinery are in use—the structure of the body and the mechanism of the mind. The oil for the first is rest; for the second, recreation.

Then order is the first means to this end.

The woman who maps out her day gets everything done in time and has a little over.

Efficiency is the next—efficient workers and efficient tools. Don't keep a little maid about you who "makes more work than she does." And if you are not up to the mark yourself make haste and become so. There are always free cookery lectures to be had, and friends are usually ready to give tips, while the papers—they are just bursting with household wisdom.

Last, but not least, save every penny toward buying labor saving appliances. A carpet sweeper, knife cleaner and sewing machine will cover their cost in a few months, while rugs instead of carpets will save hours of work. Linoleum on the kitchen floor—no need to sing its praises.

And so on, and so on—convenience makes labor light and is a real saving.

Thus, working by order, efficiency and time, there is no worry, for everything goes smoothly; there are no miseries, for everybody has recreation, and there are no breakdowns, for the worker is fit for her work.

For Rainy Days.

Children love to engage in the game of "playing school." They will cut out boys and girls for pupils and a few men and women for teachers. With crayons and paints they will color these nicely and fasten them to empty spools with flat sticks so that they will stand upright. The picture is first pasted to the stick, and the stick is wedged into the hole in the center of the spool. In this way the figures will stand or sit on the spool. Then the teacher figures are supposed to march the children around and to teach them. A single game of this kind will occupy all the children's spare time for a week.

The Grinder.

When baking oatmeal cookies calling for raw rolled oats, either with or without nuts or raisins, if the rolled oats are run through a meat grinder (using the nut plate) the flavor of the cookies is greatly improved and they bake evenly. When using raisins and nuts mix with oats and then grind all together and put with your other ingredients.

A Run on Spinach.

SPINACH is a standby at all times of the year and is especially good just now. It can be prepared in many ways, but the basis of them all is the first careful looking over, washing and boiling.

As a rule, the spinach after washing contains enough water to start the boiling, after which it will boil in its own liquid.

Special care should be exercised in the draining, because nothing is more unappetizing than a wet, soggy mass of spinach. It should always be drained in a colander and after that can either be cut with a knife or rubbed through a coarse sieve.

The simplest way to serve spinach is to drain well, season with pepper, salt and a little butter. Boil two eggs hard and slice over the top and serve hot.

Spinach and Cream.—A quart spinach, a tablespoonful butter, three tablespoonfuls cream, pepper and salt. After the spinach has been boiled and passed through a wire sieve make the butter hot in a saucepan, add the spinach, pepper and salt to taste. Stir it over the fire and add the cream. If cream is not available white sauce may be used instead.

Spinach and Poached Eggs.—Prepare and cream the spinach as in the preceding recipe, put into a flat dish and lay three poached and well drained eggs on the top and garnish with croutons of fried bread.

Spinach and Gravy.—A quart spinach, a tablespoonful butter, a tablespoonful flour, four tablespoonfuls good gravy, pepper, salt. Prepare the spinach as usual. Stir the flour with the butter in a saucepan for two minutes. Add the spinach, pepper and salt to taste and as much gravy as possible without making it soft. Stir over the fire until very hot. Dish and garnish with croutons.

TEACHERS' COTTAGES.

Lack of Suitable Boarding Accommodations In Country Districts.

Teachers' cottages erected by the community in or near the schoolhouse and used not only as the teachers' residences, but also as the community centers, are advocated in a bulletin prepared by B. S. Kellogg and distributed by the department of the interior through its bureau of education to county superintendents and other officers in charge of rural schools. The bulletin describes the movement for teachers' residences in rural districts and gives plans for cottages of various sizes and types.

Lack of suitable boarding accommodations is one of the most serious difficulties in the way of securing suitable teachers for country schools, the bulletin declares. There are more than 200,000 rural school districts in the United States and over 10,000,000 children of school age who live in the country or in towns of less than 2,500 population, yet it is impossible because of the living conditions to get teachers of the highest type to remain in the country.

Mr. Kellogg says: "Many farmhouses have no accommodations whatever for a teacher, and often kitchen, living room and dining room are combined in one, with no heat in any other room in the house. The farmer and his family have to spend most of their time working indoors or out, eating and sleeping. Their occupations and hours of labor in no way correspond to those of the teacher, which increases the difficulty of fitting the teacher's necessary habits to those of the farmer with any satisfaction to either. A good teacher must spend a considerable amount of time almost every evening upon school work, for which a quiet, comfortable room is essential. If she insists upon such a room when she goes to board in the country she is likely to be considered 'stuck up' and exclusive. If she gets a room by herself it is often unheated and too uncomfortable for study in cold weather.

"On the other hand, if the teacher is forced to spend her entire time in the living room with the rest of the family she has no opportunity to prepare properly for her school duties and is also very likely to be drawn unavoidably into neighborhood gossip and factional disputes to the detriment of her teaching influence. Many of the better situated families in the country districts who have the facilities do not care to take a steady boarder, so that if a teacher gets a place to board at all she may be forced to go to farmhouses with only the barest accommodations."

Cynical.

"People who lose their money are always complaining to their friends about it."

"Nonsense! People who lose their money haven't any friends left to complain to."

HERO, BUT SIMPLE

Togo, Japanese Admiral, Modest In Tastes, Say Tradesmen.

PEOPLE REGARD HIM AS A GOD

Butcher, Baker and Barber Unite In Saying That the Japanese Nelson Is Firm Believer In Simplicity—Trims Own Beard and Pays 25 Cents For Hair Cut.

Tokyo.—Don't imagine that a Japanese newspaper man is a back number because he appears at ceremonial functions in an early Victorian Prince Albert and a derby hat or that he is unenterprising because at the same ceremonial functions he is chivvied about by the police like a naughty boy.

Admiral Togo, the victor of Tsu Shima, is the most taciturn man in Japan. He has never been interviewed. He never speaks about himself.

Except that they see him in a ricksha occasionally with his brass hat on when he is going to the palace, the public of Tokyo knows nothing of the Japanese Nelson.

So when the Katei Zasshi, a popular monthly magazine circulating among the middle classes, wished to get an article on the private life of Admiral Togo they sent a bright member of the staff out to interview the count's butcher and baker and candlestick maker, his barber and fishmonger and the man at the corner, and by paying particular attention to the amount of his monthly housekeeping bills they were able to arrive at the conclusion that the hero is a man of Spartan simplicity.

First comes the man who keeps the sake (spirits) shop.

"I hear," he says, "that the admiral never complains of the food that he finds on his table and that he eats the same food as his servants. I get no orders for sake nowadays and only send in some soy (sauce) and miso (a curd made from beans and eaten for breakfast) of the commonest quality, occasionally. My monthly bill is never more than 75 cents and sometimes under 50 cents. I am ashamed to ask for payment, the bill is so small."

The greengrocer, a "young student-like man," is afraid to divulge very much, but finally says:

"The things I sell to the Togo family are of the same quality as those I sell to my humblest customer. When the early fruits come in I always offer them, but they are seldom bought. The simplicity of the admiral's life is astonishing. It would be great rudeness for a man like me to comment on a god-like man like Togo. My monthly bill amounts to 75 cents or so."

The fishmonger: "I have been allowed to enjoy the custom of the Togo family for many years, and there has been no change in the orders I get. Most officers when they return home from sea will soon be known by the special orders they give to the tradesmen around them and the increased activity of their kitchen. There is no special dinner for Admiral Togo when he returns after an absence. The life he leads is absolutely below the standard for so great a man. No wonder that the people regard him as a god. My monthly bill is insignificantly small."

The butcher: "Admiral Togo's meat order is very small. When he entertains guests he orders from some restaurant. Occasionally I get an order for his excellency's table, and for the rest the meat he buys is generally for his favorite dog. I believe the dog gets more meat than the master."

The barber: "I am called to the admiral's house twice a month, except when he goes to the imperial palace. When that happens I am called in even if it is only a week after his last hair-cut. His hair is cropped short, less than an inch long, with scissors. He cuts his own beard in the shape of a heart and sometimes it is done very clumsily, but he will not allow me to touch it. He speaks to me rather kindly, but on the whole he is taciturn. In his parlor there is not a thing which can be called an article of luxury. He gives me 25 cents for each hair cut."

All the tradespeople expressed sincere admiration of the admiral's fru-

THIS COUNTY HAS A CLAIM ON CHARLES E. HUGHES

Washington—Up-state congressmen are planning an active campaign for re-election and one of the issues they will make in their fight to re-elect themselves while working for Charles E. Hughes will be the claim that Hughes is a former resident of Oswego county and therefore is entitled to a lot of support there on the "favorite son" grounds.

It is said that Hughes can lay claim to half a dozen up state cities and counties in which he has lived in the past and he looks for a big complimentary vote from them. In his youth he spent seven years in the city of Oswego while his father was pastor of a Baptist church there. He likewise claims followings in Ithaca, Glens Falls and Albany on the same grounds.

WORKING GIRLS WANT TO BE ARMY NURSES

Syracuse—Six Syracuse girls, four of them employed in a department store have applied to the National Red Cross society at Washington offering their services as war nurses.

Not one of the girls has a sweetheart in any of the Syracuse companies that have been called out; not one of them entertains any romantic ideas of soothing the brow of a wounded trooper and then leading him to the altar later—they are all practical, hard headed young women who want to serve their country. They are Bertha Egan, a telegraph operator; Elanor Donnelley, Catherine Sidley, Doris Farley, Alice Morrissey and Ethel Egan.

CATHERINE CASSIDY WANTED IN SYRACUSE

Syracuse—Brothers and sisters are hunting for Mrs. Catherine Cassidy in Fulton or Phoenix today to notify her that her mother, Elizabeth Wilbur, is dead in Syracuse.

Mrs. Cassidy left home Tuesday morning to go to work at either Fulton or Phoenix. Her mother was ill at the time, but was not considered dangerously sick. Mrs. Cassidy has not written since she went away and her relatives do not know where she is.

Mrs. Cassidy is survived by five daughters and four sons. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon from the home on Cortland avenue.

LEADER REFUSES TO PROMISE

A delegation of suffrage workers from Oswego and Hannibal, headed by Mrs. J. S. Stevenson, of Hannibal, district suffrage leader, called upon Myron W. Stranahan, Republican state committee man for this county, in this city this morning in an effort to learn his stand on the suffrage question, which will be discussed when the state committee meets in August.

Mr. Stranahan could give the delegation no definite answer, explaining that he had not yet ascertained the sentiments of the majority of the Republicans of this city and county on the question. He told the ladies, however, that he had always personally been friendly to them, and would not oppose any measures favoring their cause which came before the committee. Further than that Mr. Stranahan could make no promises until he has sounded the opinions of the county Republicans.

ARMY TAG DAY AN EARLY EVENT

Each year Ensign Fitzgerald of the Salvation Army Corps conducts a picnic for the exclusive benefit of the mothers and children who are unable in a pecuniary way to enjoy outings by the side of lake or in the woods. This year will be no exception to the rule, and right now the officer and his estimable corps are working to accomplish the result. Consequently, on the Fourth of July "tag day" will be observed by the Army workers, and every cent collected then will be devoted to defraying the expense of the annual picnic for the worthy and needy persons of the city.

Ever since the advent of the automobile for pleasure and commercial purposes, the Army has been favored by owners of the city, who contributed the use of their cars to convey the picnickers to and from the grounds and Army auditorium. This practice will be continued this year, the destination to be at North Bay, which is located just over Lake Neahtawanta, a delightful spot indeed for outings.

WEALTHY MEN INSURE LIVES OF GUARDSMEN

Syracuse—Nearly all the members of the National Guard from Syracuse will go to the front carrying life insurance, either that which they have taken out themselves or some one else has taken out for them.

A group of wealthy men who refused to let their names be known have insured all the members of Company C, Third Infantry. Each man will carry a $500 policy without expense to himself. If they cross the border into Mexico an additional premium of three per cent. will be levied.

ADVERTISING MEN MEETING

(By United Press).

Philadelphia—With a clamor that should have disturbed the tactiburn composure of Billy Penn's statute topping City Hall, the vanguard of over 10,000 delegates who will attend the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the world hit Philadelphia today.

As each delegation rolled into the City of Brotherly Love it was met at the railroad station by special committees and brass bands and escorted with loud acclaim to its hotel. Before nightfall it is expected 6,000 of the "liveliest and pepperiest" ad men of the country will be in complete possession of the city.

Delegates from every state in the union and every large and small city of the country will talk advertising today, while awaiting the formal opening of the six-day convention tomorrow, when religious services will be held in over a score of churches to be followed by a great inspiration service at the Metropolitan Opera House.

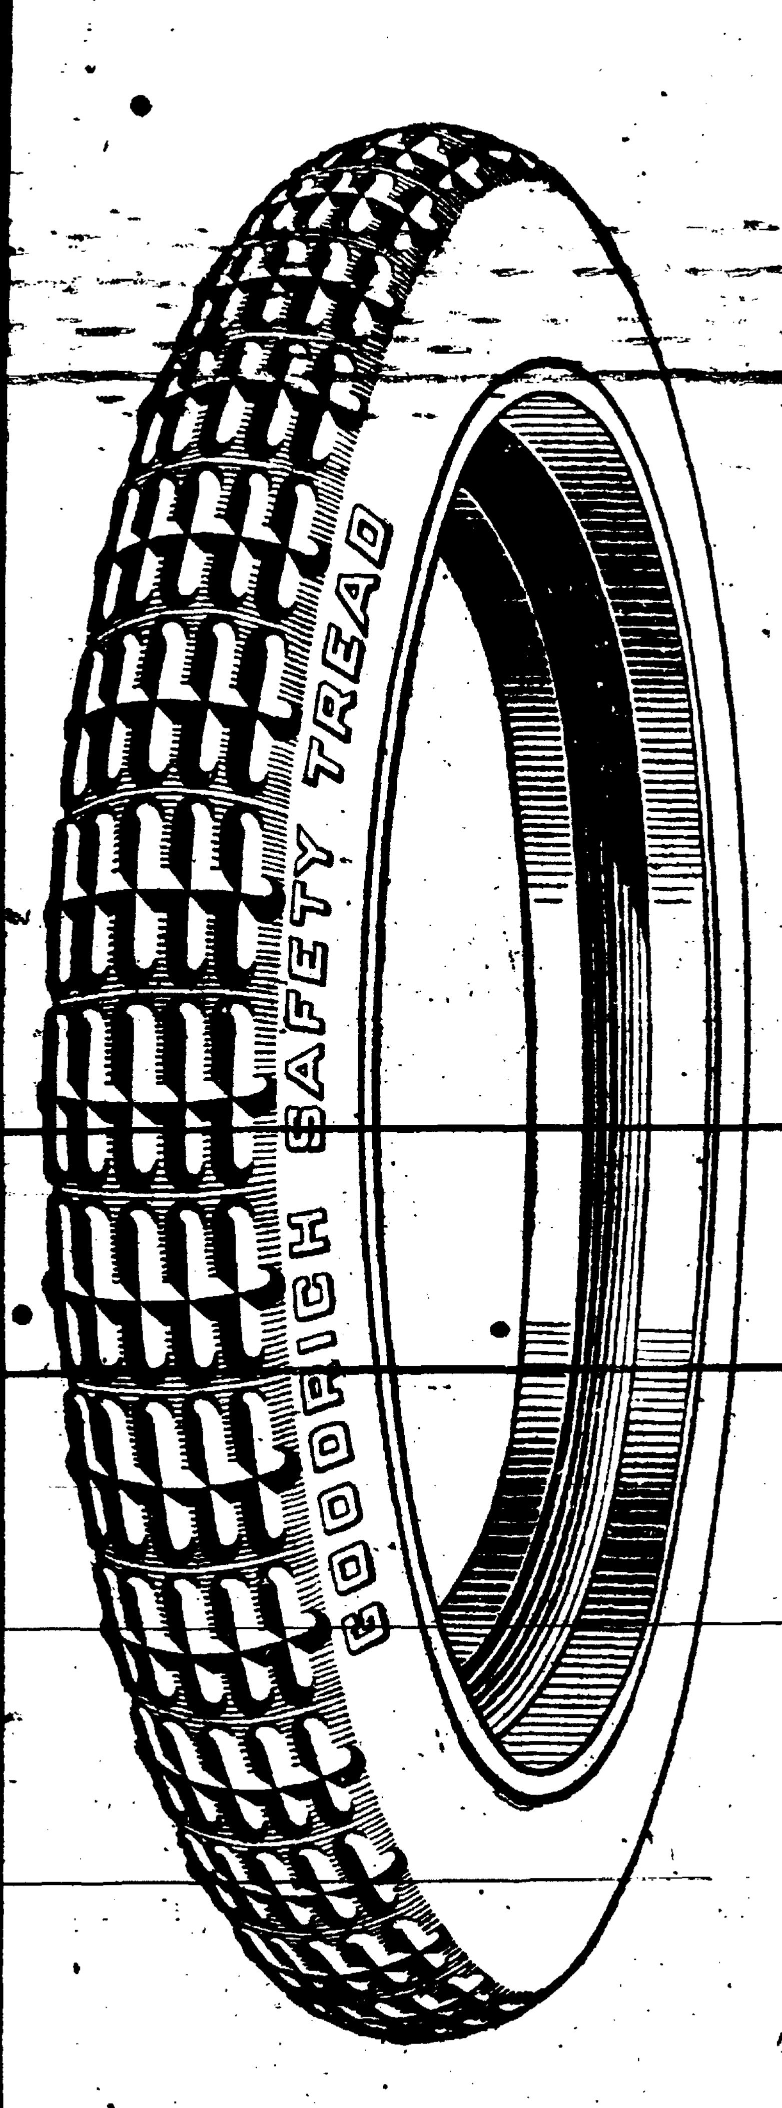
The scene of the world's great "business gabfest" will be two of the country's foremost educationtl instituions. The big general meetings of the convention will be held in the Commercial Museum, itself a storehouse of knowledge, while the twenty-two departmental gatherings and conferences, of which there will be about thirty, will be held in the various buildings of the University of Pennsylvania.

The entertainment program for the delegates is the most elaborate ever arranged here. Nothing in the way of expense was spared.

The women visitors, numbering about 2,000, are provided for as well as the men. The Poor Richard Club, host, will endeavor to send the visitors away from the city with the avowed intention of returning whenever the opportunity presents itself.

Two of the greatest attractions of the week will be a spectacular pageant Monday night and another held on the Schuylkill river Thursday night. In addition there will be military and naval maneuvres at Franklin Field and League Island Navy Yard, sight-seeing tours and excursions to every place of historic interest, of which Philadelphia abounds.

"Reason-Why" Tires



GOODRICH "Barefoot" Tires are light in weight, and close grained.

This proves them relatively free from the usual inert substances or "fillers" that give excess Weight, stiffness, and grind, to Tire treads.

Of that 12,000,000 total Tires, the B. F. Goodrich Co. made and sold one-fourth.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

"For dignity, and business like conduct of its affairs, in its absence of boisterousness and time wasting childishness, The Woman's Party Convention at Chicago set an example to the men," so ran the summary of the political conventions in the New York Post?

* * *

"It is no exaggeration to say," says the editorial column of the New Republic, "that the Woman's Party Convention was the most intelligent gathering in Chicago. All the parties sent prominent campaigners to plead for their support. The men's conventions listened solemnly and hours on end to all the buncombe, but when the exact counterpart of what was said at the Coliseum was offered to the women by a speaker sent by the Republicans, the women laughed out loud at him."

* * *

"In its knowledge of precisely what it wanted and how it intended to try to get it; in the way it analyzed and ridiculed the political cant offered it by the spokesmen of the political parties, the Woman Voter's Convention was a delight to witness, a most refreshing change from the sophistries and hypocrisies of the ordinary convention," writes a reporter evidently glad to welcome something new in the line of political conventions.

* * *

The press report of the St. Louis convention tells of the consternation wrought among the Democratic delegates by the mere sight of the headquarters of the Woman Voter's Party in the lobby of the Hotel Jefferson. The delegates were reported as standing in terror before a group of smiling women and as if fascinated by the sight of officers of an organization of women who can "actually vote."

One of the delegates is said to have expressed the feelings of many when he remarked, "These women have injected a new element into politics. They're not spellbinders. They're highbinders."

* * *

The reverence that has always gone to the thirteen original states will in the future be equalled or excelled by the reverence that will go to the twelve pioneer suffrage states, if we may believe the call which has been issued by the National Council of Women Voters for the fourth annual convention to take place at Cheyenne, Wyoming, the last of July.

The object of the Council is stated as threefold: to educate women voters; to secure laws in the interest of the home; and to help get the vote for all women.

GETTING SENSE.

There comes a clear day when one realizes that clothes are to keep the weather off you; that food is to give health; that home is shelter and inspiration; that, aside from being clean and inoffensive, one's personal appearance does not signify much; that the main thing in life is to be going toward the goal of your ideals. That isn't getting old; it's getting sense. From then on Time is not master, but friend. —Collier's.

He declined the presidential nomination of the Progressives and urged his fellows of the party to labor for the Republican candidate.

In the letter which he addressed to the National Committee of the Progressive party he carried the plain intimation of his belief that a third party this year would merely heighten Woodrow Wilson's chances of re-election, and he bitterly assailed the Democratic leader and his party for their record of the past three years.

Washington Sees Slight Hope for Early Peace

(By United Press)

Washington—A double responsibility for the Carrizal battle was established today, but it did not, however, place such a burden on the American forces as to assure peace. On the contrary developments so shaped themselves that it seems likely President Wilson may find it necessary to appear before Congress before the week ends.

Only a complete right about face by Carranza can save the situation. The report of Captain Morey indicates to the officials that the action of the American forces before Carrizal might have been provocative. The report says that Captain Boyd was under the impression that the Mexicans would run when the Americans fired. "We formed an attack," said the Morey report. On the other hand, the publication of the American demand for the release of seventeen American prisoners from Chihuahua showed that Carranza had issued the order to General Trevene not to permit the Americans to move south, east or west.

SOUTHERN MINISTERS OFFER THEIR SERVICES

Washington—Southern and Central America will tender their good offices to Secretary of State Lansing at 2:35 o'clock this afternoon to avert an armed conflict between the Unied States and Mexico. The offer will be endered informally by Bolivian Minister Valderon. Although it has not been decided whether Southern and Central American diplomats will be at the interview it is nat unlikely that Minister Valdernon said this afternoon that several may be needed at home. The Minister of Paraquay said he had not yet received any instructions from his government, but he was expecting them soon.

BIG HEADINGS DO NOT MAKE A PAPER "YELLOW"

One of the greatest changes that have come over American Journalism in the past few years is the gradually, but steadily disappearing "yellowness" of some of the great metropolitan dailies. Despite the great war abroad and the exciting times, we are otherwise going through, there is a distinct absence of yellowness and muckraking.

Newspaper headlines are, of course, big and even flaring, or, rather, they were in the beginning of the great war. But if ever such headlines were justified it was then. The European war is the greatest human upheaval the world has ever seen or is ever likely to witness again. Therefore headlines that might have occupied half a page would have been justified.

That sensationalism was formerly overdone by various organs must readily be conceded by any impartial observer. However, there is to be considered what the public wants in its newspapers.

The American tendency is to look with favor on a lively newspaper, and if liveliness means big headlines, why, of course, let us have them. The immense circulation of the so-called "yellows," in our big cities indicates how widespread is the fondness of the public for stories of a sensational nature "played up" to the very limit.

We can see no particular harm to the public in journalism of that sort except when the stories are inherently objectionable. In this class we would place divorce cases and many other matrimonial actions, low crimes and articles going into minute details as to the committing of any form of crime. Articles of the latter description often provide instruction for criminals in their preparatory operations and encourage youth to try their luck at acts of violence. For much the same reason, suicides should not be described too minutely. Invariably "yellow" stories of suicides are followed by a multiplicity of attempts by weak-minded or despondent persons who follow the same method employed by the central figures in the affair.

It is the lurid pictures of crime that are really "yellow" and not big headlines, and these pictures are to-day, fortunately, a thing of the past.

A STRANGER IN TOWN

The stranger looking for a place in which to live and do business is a customer of your city, and customers are sometimes influenced by the smallest things. If the stranger lands in Fulton on a pleasant day and likes everything that he sees, he may not come to live, but he will be a booster for your town forever, and of his friends to come and adv. which your town was displaying on that day will pay dividends. Civic cleanliness promotes growth of population as well as prosperity. It is "good business." The out-at-the-elbow, garbage pile in the back yard, dusty-streeted community frankly confesses its inability to compete with a clean, well-ordered city that has sufficient pride to keep itself clean. Fulton is in the "first rank" class.

BUYS ANOTHER NEWSPAPER

Mr. Dwight J. Robbins, who until recently conducted the Byesville Enterprise, has purchased the Fulton, (N. Y.) Evening Times. Fulton is fortunate in securing a man of Mr. Robbins' caliber to take charge of their daily paper as he is an experienced newspaper man with an excellent record. He demonstrated his ability when he took over the Enterprise in a run-down condition and within a year brought it up to its high standing and position it now occupies in Guernsey county, and we feel confident that he will give to the people of Fulton a satisfactory and pleasing newspaper.

In a letter received from Mr. R. he informs us that he has removed his office to a new building and more commodious quarters which is characteristic of him, with his advanced ideas. The many improvements and additions that he made to the Enterprise are well known to our citizens and as his ideas were always to get the mechanical end of the office in good working order before appealing to the public for business we presume he is working along the same lines in Fulton, in order that he may give the best and most satisfactory results. We wish to Mr. Robbins all of the success we feel confident he will attain in his new field of labor.—The Byesville, (O.) Enterprise.

(We reprint the above, which comes to us today from our former home town, in the hope that it may enlighten our "inquiring" neighbor.—Ed.)

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Christian Science Monitor:

There is something more than a mere flash of newspaper satire in the reply of a western contemporary, to the question, "What has become of the old-time dime novel?" "It is here," comes the answer, "but they are charging $1.25 or $1.50 for it." Not with the purpose of taking the edge off this in the least degree, but in the interest of truth, it should be said, we believe, that the $1.25 and $1.50 imitation dime novel of the present day is a very poor substitute for the $1.25 and $1.50 novel of a generation ago that sold for a dime.

Utica Observer:

The Rome and Clinton Railroad Company is in a sad plight. It has an outstanding debt of $39.93. The secretary of the company at the annual meeting said that he had gone over the books for twenty-five years and had been unable to find what the debt is for. A railroad that owes only $39.93 is a curiosity among railroads, and the embarrassment of not knowinng to whom it is owing must be extreme.

* * *

Knoxville (Tenn.) Journal and Tribune:

It is that of a principal of one of the public schools in New York, a native of Italy, who came to this country when he was but five years old. He is not yet thirty-nine years old, but he has been a principal for eight years. His name is Angelo Patri.

Asked by a member of the New York World staff what he would do, had he the power and the resources, Mr. Patri answered among other things:

"If I could tell you in advance all that I would do," Mr. Patri answered, "I wouldn't be a safe man to entrust with the education of children. You can guess how much it would cost to train a racehorse, and you can tell just about how you would proceed. That is because you know just what kind of an animal you want to turn out. You can make similar estimates concerning the education of a child, according to the stupid old formulas of education. If your object is to make him pass so many examinations at such and such a percentage the problem is simple—and utterly foolish. Who knows what kind of a child you want to turn out? Who can tell what it will cost to bring out what is in him?

"Our budget system is very faulty. It is based on the assumption that young lives can and should be moulded according to a certain pattern. It is all a mistake. It is one of our pet ways of strangling nature. When we start to educate a child there is no one wise enough to draw a blue print in advance."

From the above, the idea of this principal of the New York school is that the chief end of education is one to enable the boy or girl to find himself or herself out. Isn't there very much in that? Many men and many women there be who live a large part of their lives, if not the whole, without finding themselves out. The truth is, the man or the woman who has made a success of life, who has lived a life of doing, are those who have found themselves out. They have decided what they could do and that is what they have done.

Education, if possible, should be such that each and every one should see a light, a light pointing the way they should go. An aimless life is not a successful one and cannot be. The man who would start on a journey without some idea as to where he was going, might go a long time without getting to a definite point. It is the one that knows himself that will be able to make the best use of himself.

HOW APPENDICITIS CAN BE PREVENTED

Fulton people should know that a few doses of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka, often relieve or prevent appendicitis. This simple mixture removes such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. Adler-i-ka has easiest and most thorough action of anything we ever sold. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists adv

War Taxation Invented.

War taxation, like everything else, had to be invented. The king who first thought of it in England was Henry II. Instead of asking his barons to accompany him to French battlefields at their own charge, he compounded with them, accepted "scutage" or shield money, and from the burgesses he collected "gifts," "aids" or "tallages." Henry could then hire his own men, and if need be turn them against the bold, bad barons themselves, as the army was under his own control.—London Tit-Bits.

Days You'll Never Forget

THE DAY YOU DROVE THE CONSTABLE'S GREY MARE PAST THE GANG

Nation That Will Not Prepare to Defend Itself Does Not Deserve to Survive

By Rev. WILLIAM T. MANNING, Rector Protestant Episcopal Church, New York City

CHRISTIANITY does not teach that the chief aim of life is to [illegible] pain and suffering and to have a comfortable time. Peace [illegible] deed, a great and blessed thing to be inexpressibly prized a[illegible] served by every right and proper means.

BUT RIGHT AND TRUTH AND JUSTICE ARE FAR GREATER THINGS THAN PEACE, AND THEY ARE THE ONLY FOUNDATIONS UPON WHICH TRUE PEACE CAN REST.

Christianity teaches that when the choice comes between peace and these higher things peace must always be sacrificed, and, coupled with this false and sentimental teaching about peace, there is an unworthy and really shameful disposition to decry and belittle patriotism.

Patriotism is the spirit that is ready and willing and glad if need be to suffer and die in defense of home and fatherland; and the man who has no such spirit, whatever else he may be, is not a typical Christian, and he is certainly not a typical man.

The nation that will not make proper preparation and provision for its own defense and for the protection of its homes, the nation that will not stand with its whole might for right against wrong, for good against evil, FOR FREEDOM AGAINST OPPRESSION, DOES NOT DESERVE TO SURVIVE AND IS NOT LIKELY LONG TO SURVIVE.

A Nation to Be United Must Think In the Same Language

By FREDERICK BOYD STEVENSON, Editor and Writer

MOST of us doubtless will agree that most of us think in the language. But do different languages furnish the mediums for different lines of thought and as a natural consequence, therefore, of different ideas and different ideals?

They do if the various nationalities think in the language. Then if words are the medium for the formation of thought, and thought, which leads to reason, which in turn creates ideas which again create ideals—SO ALL THESE RESULTS ARE DEPENDENT ON THE EXACT MEANING OF THE WORDS WHICH GAVE BIRTH TO THEM.

There can be but one conclusion: Thinking in the language means thoughts entirely based upon the meaning—the exact meaning—of words. And some words in the different tongues are so hopelessly at variance that the wisest of the word interpreters have failed to correlate and conciliate them. Thus men think in the language of a nation, and, with few exceptions, they think alike and together. Their ideas are the same. Their ideals are the same. If the words which give expression to these ideas and these ideals are different the ideas and ideals will be different.

Does it not follow, then, that a nation to be united should speak the same language in order to think the same?

A NATION THAT SPEAKS IN POLYGLOT WILL HAVE POLYGENOUS IDEALS AND WITHOUT UNIVERSAL IDEALS NO NATION CAN LIVE.

DIDN'T SEE HIM LE[illegible] [illegible]

Seaman Rogerson of the Ha[illegible], Last Man to Set Eyes on [illegible] Marshal, Tells How Only Rafts [illegible] Be Launched in Rough Sea—[illegible] Suddenly Went Down Head First.

The last man who saw Lord Kitchener alive was Seaman Rogerson, a survivor of the Hampshire, who arrived at his home near London from the Orkneys, and describes in the Daily Mail how the field marshal died.

"Of those who left the ship and have survived," said Rogerson, "I was the one who saw Kitchener last. He went down with the ship. He did not leave her. I saw Captain Savill help his boat crew to clear away his galley. At the same time the captain was calling to Kitchener to come to his boat. Owing to the noise made by the wind and sea Lord Kitchener could not hear him.

Walked Calmly From Captain's Cabin.

"When the explosion occurred Lord Kitchener walked calmly from the captain's cabin and went up a ladder on the quarterdeck. There I saw him walking about quite collectedly and talking to two officers. All three were wearing khaki and had on no overcoats. Lord Kitchener was calmly watching the preparations for abandoning the ship, which were going on in [illegible] and orderly way.

"[illegible] just went to their sta[illegible] and did their best to [illegible], but that was impossible. [illegible] rough weather no boats could be [illegible]ed. Those that were got out were smashed. No boats left the ship. What the people on shore thought to be boats leaving were rafts.

"The men did get into the boats as they lay in their cradles, thinking as the ship went under them the boats would float. But the ship sank by the head, and when she went under she turned a somersault forward, carrying down with her all boats and persons in them.

Sank With Ship.

"I do not think Earl Kitchener got into a boat. When I sprang to a raft he was still on the starboard side of the quarterdeck talking with his officers. From the little time that elapsed between my leaving the ship and her sinking I feel certain that Earl Kitchener was on deck at the time she sank.

"I got away on one of the rafts, and we had a terrible five hours in the water. It was so rough that the seas beat down on us, and many of the men were killed by the buffeting. Many others died from the piercing cold.

"An overpowering desire for sleep came down upon us. To keep this away we thumped each other on the back. The man who went to sleep never woke again. When men died it was just as though they were falling asleep. One man stood upright for five hours on the raft, with dead lying all around him, and one man died in my arms.

"As we neared the shore the situation grew worse. The fury of the sea dashed our raft against the rocks with tremendous force. A number of men were killed in this way. I don't quite know how I got ashore, for all feeling had gone out of me.

"My belief is that the Hampshire struck a mine, which exploded under her forepart. It could not have been a submarine in such weather, and an internal explosion in one of her magazines would have ripped her apart. It was hard luck coming to such an end after going through the battle of Jutland unscathed. We led the Iron Duke into that action and sank a German light cruiser and two submarines, but did not have a single casualty ourselves, although big shells rained into the water all around us."

WILSON HEARD CHEERING.

At Telephone at White House After Judge Wescott Spoke at St. Louis.

During the demonstration for President Wilson which followed Judge Wescott's nominating speech in St. Louis a telephone wire connecting the convention hall with the White House switchboard was opened.

The president, Mrs. Wilson, Secretary Tumulty and others of the White House party listened in. The applause and cheering could be heard very plainly.

Recruits "62,370 Pounds" Stronger.

After fourteen weeks of military training in the open a company of fifty-six recruits of the United States marine corps learning the ropes at the recruit depot at Port Royal, S. C., increased its pulling power from 202,198 pounds to 264,568 pounds, an increase of 62,370 pounds. Tests were made with a dynamometer, which automatically registers the exact number of pounds pulled by each muscle group of the body.

ABOUT THE TOWN

A SITE FOR THE MIDWAY.

Mayor Lewis will vigorously oppose the closing of Rochester Street during Old Home Week so that thoroughfare may be used as a midway for the tent attractions, it was stated unofficially yesterday. The Mayor's attitude on the question is the result of a large number of complaints that have come to him from property owners and residents in the block affected, and it is fairly certain that the executive's recommendations will be accepted by the aldermen when they meet tomorrow afternoon.

It is stated that two ladies who live in the block are seriously ill, and that the noise and clamor of the shows and barkers may have the effect of further endangering their health. William Lovejoy, of the Fulton Savings Bank, protested on behalf of that institution against the project, as the bank has expended a large sum of money in putting the lawn about the building in good condition, and the trampling crowds would soon ruin the grass.

When Secretary Hollenga, of the Chamber of Commerce, appeared before the council last Tuesday evening and asked that the street be closed during Old Home Week, no immediate action was taken, on the advise of Mayor Lewis, in order that the sentiments of the property owners along the street might be ascertained. At the time, the Mayor made it plain that any opposition from tax-payers would compel the council to refuse the Chamber's request.

* * *

The logical place for the Old Home Week midway, in the opinion of a large majority, is the tract known as City Park, on the west side of South First street, from the Library to Rochester street. Here again, any plan to stage attractions on the park is likely to meet with the opposition of the Park Commission, some of the members of which have given a great deal of time and some money to the improvement of the tract. This land is the property of the state, and the Park Commissioners are in charge of it at the present time. If the midway is pitched along the park, there is no question but that the grass will not recover for a year at least. On the other hand, the city has seldom had a celebration of this sort, and if it requires a personal sacrifice on the part of some who have worked hard to beautify some of the vacant tracts of land throughout the city, it would be a real exhibition of public spirit if these men refrained from opposing the plan. Thus far, no other sites have been suggested and there are few places in the city, centrally located, large enough to accommodate the tent attractions. The Chamber of Commerce Committee will probably offer other sites for the consideration of the council at tomorrow's meeting.

Down with the pessimists! We talked to a man tonight who has made an exhaustive study of all the almanacs printed for the past 100 years, and he claims the week of July 2—8, will be a very moist one. He also cites a statement from an almanac of 1816, which describes that year as "one with no summer."

Ten young women have thus far been entered in the voting contest for queen of the carnival during Old Home Week, under the management of Thomas Farrell and the Chamber of Commerce Committee. A prize diamond ring worth $150, or its equivalent in merchandise at a local jewelry store will be given to the winner of the contest, who will also occupy a throne of honor in the great parade on Friday. The votes for the candidates cost one cent each, and the returns will be used in defraying the heavy expense of the celebration.

Secretary Hollenga received the first consignment of 5,000 Old Home Week badges, Saturday and they were placed on sale at once. There were few business men who did not wear one of the badges Saturday night, and with the advance orders that have been received nearly 2,000 of the emblems were sold the first day.

In spite of the fact that the doors are closed on Sunday, a large electric sign, reading "Cafe" burned brightly last evening, before a Fulton saloon, and many thirsty automobilists who expectantly drew up in front of the place were disappointed.

America Should Prepare to Be a Mediator For Lasting Peace Among Nations

By LAWRENCE Y. SHERMAN, Senator From Illinois

THE age of a single nation's sway of the world has passed away. Science and invention joined with international justice will advance the horizons of nations and gird them with the defensive power of all. As a great neutral this republic will cast the most potent vote in the [illegible]n of nations assembled to determine and adjust the peace of the world. THE HIGHEST DESTINY OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE CAN BE FULFILLED BY PEACE AND NOT BY WAR.

The greatest warrior of the future is the master of an armament who can prevent war. He need not be the captain of martial legions or vast navies that rule the seas.

Economic pressure, the closing of ports and markets, the denial of credit and exchange, may be more powerful than submarine or battleships or the soldier's hardened discipline that steels the human heart and smiles at human suffering.

Let our nation rather prepare to meet this great service, to be an instrument of mediation to an honorable and lasting peace. This republic is no longer an experiment. It has taken its place among the powers of the world.

IF WE ARE TO BE A POWERFUL AGENCY FOR FUTURE GOOD WE MUST BE NEUTRAL. IN THE DAY OF PEACE A NEUTRAL CAN BETTER SERVE THE WORLD IN BRINGING PEACE TO ENEMIES THAN A PARTY TO THE RECENT QUARREL.

In this republic hope rocks the cradle of the humblest babe. Shall not that hope prefigure a justice not founded on the sword and an age where a conqueror's martial form shall not forever rise as a nation's last argument and the world's final civilization?

With This Ring.

He—In my home, I'm proud to say, woman rules.

She—Queensberry rules?—Judge.

The Word Slave.

The word "slave" originally meant "noble," being, in the first place, "Slav," one of the Slavonic race.

CITY'S FAREWELL TO SOLDIERS

Heavy showers prevented the big demonstration arranged by the people of Oswego as a farewell to the soldier boys of Company D, Saturday night, and several hundred Fultonians who went to the Lake City to view the parade were drenched with the rain. The event was postponed until yesterday afternoon, and an estimated crowd of 600 Fulton people made the trip to Oswego. The weather was ideal, although lowering clouds threatened rain for a time, and thousands of Oswegoians and visitors from miles around thronged the streets as the parade passed.

The Fulton delegation, led by Secretary D. S. Hollenga of the Chamber of Commerce, numbered about 150 men. More than 100 of these were members of Fulton Lodge of Elks, who marched in white trousers, dark coats, carrying sticks, and with the colors of the order and American flags prominently displayed. The Elks' band headed the division and the the fine appearance of the men, as well as their perfect alignment called forth audible remarks of praise from the crowds.

Most of the city officials road at the head of the Fulton section in automobiles which were decorated with flags and the national colors. The parade was the greatest public demonstration ever seen in Oswego and was a fitting farewell to the men who are eagerly awaiting a call to the Mexican border. According to the latest reports, the company will leave for Camp Whitman Tuesday morning.

PICTURES OF FACTORIES WANTED BY MR. MOTT

Congressman Luther W. Mott has received and has had hung in his office in Washington, a fine mahogany framed picture of the extensive plant of the Lee Chair Company of Oneida, N. Y. Some time ago Mr. Mott asked the Chamber of Commerce, of Fulton, Oswego, Oneida and Watertown, and the leading villages of the district to send him pictures of their plants to hang in his office which is visited bp a great many people from all parts of the country. It was thought too, that these pictures would prove of more than casual interest to visitors from the district. The Lee Chair Company was one of the first to respond, and it is hoped that others will follow.

HARRY FANCIS, ALLEGED DESERTER, IS WANTED

Private Ira Stephens, of this city a member of Company D, National Guard of Oswego, was despatched from the Armory to this city yesterday on an unpleasant errand of rounding up a "slacker". Harry Francis, also of Fulton, who joined the guard last week, obtained a two days' leave of absence, and did not return to the barracks. Officers of the company learned that Francis had been seen here, and as Stephens is a seasoned veteran of the guard and familiar with the city, he was sent here to locate the missing guardsman. The company officers also sent notices to surroundings towns, asking the police to look for the man.

At a late hour yesterday, Stephens had discovered no trace of Francis, and was about to return to the Armory to report that his search had been fruitless.

New York American:

Briefly, Section 7 gives the Postmaster-General the arbitrary power to say what magazines and newspapers can or cannot be carried on the fast mail trains.

This permission or prohibition means life or death to many publications, and no Cabinet officer should be clothed with such arbitrary power. No Postmaster-General ought to be so tempted to use his authority to ban magazines or newspapers which may be opposed to the Administration of which the Postmaster General is a member.

We trust the Congress will strike out this section.

It confers an arbitrary power upon the Postmaster General which no political appointee should have, and it is in the interest of that very bad kind of economy which saves at the spigot and wastes at the bunghole.

It is a bad measure any way you look at it.

Pittsburgh Gazette-Times:

A word of cheer to local business men who are interested in the success of the Republican party at the polls next November was brought to the Credit Men's Convention here from the supposedly solid Democratic South, by B. F. Ezekiel, a delegate from Birmingham, Ala.

Mr. Ezekiel, a retired business man of Birmingham, who proudly refers to it as the "Pittsburgh of the South," is what he terms, "an out-and-out, staunch old Bourbon Democrat." Rather he was a Democrat until Justice Charles Evans Hughes was nominated the standard bearer of the Republican party at Chicago. Now, Mr. Ezekiel says, he will vote for Mr. Hughes.

"Why?" he was asked.

"Because, we of the South would have been ruined under the policy of the present administration had it not been for the war in Europe."

Mr. Ezekiel voted the Democratic ticket ever since he was entitled to vote, and he is now well past the sixtieth milestone. He said:

"Southern Democrats from our section are beginning to realize the necessity of a Protective Tariff. In two years from now I firmly believe Alabama will be in the doubtful column. There will be two parties instead of one—Republican and Democratic. As it now stands there are only two Republican counties in the state."

"Is there much Republican sentiment in Birmingham?"

"Quite a bit; the night we received the news of Hughes' nomination I was in our club and 20 of the members, leading business men, openly declared they would vote for the Republican nominee. I fully intend to vote for Mr. Hughes in November."

All of these men, Mr. Ezekiel said, were staunch Democrats who have come to realize that the Democratic party has failed, miserably.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat:

Just before the passage of the rivers and harbors bill by Congress an amendment was added to have the secretary of war investigate the depth of Great Lakes' harbors in relation to the use of the Welland Canal, which is to be deepened by Canada, to accommodate ocean-going ships. Is this country to depend on Canada for a ship channel to the sea? What is the Mississippi River for in the opinion of those who are trying to treat it as something without a future in direct ocean commerce? The canals of Canada are frozen up a third of the year while the Mississippi to a large extent is unobstructed by ice at all seasons. Canadians, nevertheless, have spent for canals far more per capita than we have. When we enlarged our canal at the Soo it would have sufficed for Canada also, but the Dominion at once built a parallel canal on its own territory. It was unwilling to depend on the artificial waterways of an adjacent neighbor, though the feeling between the two governments had long been friendly. All important harbors on the lakes have a depth of over 20 feet, and lake ships are almost as large as those on the ocean. Facilities for rapid and economic loading and unloading are nowhere better than along the lakes. The secretary of war would be much better employed in studying the depth of rivers than in confirming what is already known about lake ports.

In the passage of the rivers and harbors bill it was easy at the last moment to add a large appropriation for harbors at the head of Lake Superior, and to stir up the secretary of war as to the depth of lake channels, but even a number of Western members showed a desire to continue the neglect of the great rivers. On this subject a cold wind is blowing in quarters where it would be least looked for. There is something mysterious about the antagonism. The people of Illinois voted a large bond issue for waterway improvement ten years ago, but nothing is doing in actual work. There is underground opposition, evidently, but not the kind that helps on an engineering enterprise. The Welland Canal is a small item compared with the Mississippi. Besides, it is foreign property on foreign soil. Why look to it for our main waterway to the ocean? We are certainly as well able financially as Canada to build ship channels of our own.

If the secretary of war does not discover this fact during his investigations they will be chiefly valuable to the enemies of the rivers, who always appear to be on their job.

Cleveland Plain Dealer:

The Senegalese who have been fighting for France in western Europe and along the Dardanelles are pure blooded negroes. They are to be distinguished from the Turcos and the other fighters from north Africa, who are Caucasians. The black men from Senegal are the only negroes who have participated in the European war, and their services have been valuable. They are brave but well disciplined and their enthusiasm has brought much praise.

It was doubtless with a memory of the usefulness and valor of the Senegalese that Winston Churchill, in his recent criticism of the British conduct of the war urged the wholesale recruiting of African natives for service in Europe. Harold J. Tennant, parliamentary under secretary for war, voicing the official answer to Mr. Churchill's criticisms, declared that it would be utterly impossible to recruit and train negro troops for European service, because no officers could be found who could understand the African languages. Mr. Churchill with apparent irony, retorted that he hoped it might be possible for a few British officers to acquire the languages as a result of diligent study.

The incident is illuminating as offering a contrast between the French and British colonial methods. The contrast is not merely between France and Great Britain. It is between France and all other colonizing powers.

The French reduce almost to the vanishing point the condescension of the superior race. They aim to be considered friends and protectors rather than masters. They diligently and patiently study the needs of the natives, but they never violently upset traditions, nor do they endeavor to measure native populations by a white man's standard. The consequence is that France has very few "little wars" in her colonies. The understanding between white and black is complete. While each lives according to its own standards, there is a constant betterment of the native races through the intelligent cooperation of the colonial officials. In this work knowledge of the native languages is an almost rudimentary requirement.

And so France today is enjoying the valient and valuable services of the black men from Senegal, while England, with a larger African population to draw from, can do nothing because her officers are unable to learn the native dialects. Without any consideration of the ethics of employing black, yellow or brown soldiers in Europe, Great Britain, by contrast, appears in an unfavorable light, and the fact that Kitchener was not deterred by ethical scruples is abundantly indicated by his former use of Indians, men long subject to British rule and organization.

Broke the Deadlock

HOW Mark Twain first met General Grant is told in Albert Bigelow Paine's "Boys' Life" of the humorist in St. Nicholas. Mark Twain was acting as a newspaper correspondent in Washington in the late sixties and had called on Grant by permission, elated at the prospect of an interview. But when he looked into the square, smileless face of the soldier he found himself for the first time in his life without anything particular to say.

Grant nodded slightly and waited.

His caller wished something would happen. It did. His inspiration returned. "General," he said, "I seem to be slightly embarrassed. Are you?"

Grant's severity broke up in laughter. There were no further difficulties.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

BEAUTIFYING AND MAKING A LAKE

How a Mill Pond Was Enlarged Into a Fine Body of Water.

About eighty years ago, when Stratford, Ont., was first settled, a millpond was constructed on a small stream called the Avon for the purpose of running a grist mill and a sawmill, says the American City. In the course of time these primitive industries ceased to be operated, and the millpond was purchased by the municipality and placed under the control of a board of public park management. This board has done much to improve and beautify the city, among other things dredging out the millpond, now called Lake Victoria, and otherwise improving it.

LAKE VICTORIA.

This is a great resort during the warm weather, boating is very popular and the lake is a suitable boating place for about one and a half miles. The board has also acquired drives on either side, that on the south connecting with Victoria park, in the eastern part of the city. Arrangements are being made to complete a drive down the stream to Avondale park, on the southwestern limits of the city, thus forming a complete chain across the city from east to west. The city council has furnished funds for carrying out these improvements by the levy of a rate of one-half mill on the dollar.

Stratford has a very progressive horticultural society, which, in conjunction with the park board, does much to beautify the city parks and streets by planting flower beds, making Stratford one of the most pleasing places in Ontario.

CITY PUBLICITY BOARD.

Suggestion Offered by Philadelphia Committee Good For Smaller Towns.

The permanent committee on comprehensive plans of Philadelphia in a report recently issued advocates the appointment of a municipal publicity commission that shall handle all matters connected with throwing the Quaker City into the national spot light.

In speaking of educating the citizens to a proper appreciation of their city the report charges that most citizens know little regarding Philadelphia and that little attention usually is given toward instructing them. In this respect the committee recommends that the following educational methods be applied, and the suggestions are good for other municipalities, large or small:

Institute a course of free lectures in city planning and municipal development. These should be given in series and be historical in nature, showing primitive planning and present day methods. Establish a lecture bureau for the citizens in order that various officials may be made easily available to address public meetings, thus giving first hand authoritative information, as well as unbiased reports of the projects in hand and contemplated.

To educate the children in city planning by means of textbooks, moving pictures and a graded course of study in the schools, the moving pictures could be shown at motion picture houses, with enough reading to supplement and carry the lesson to the spectators.

In regard to the committee, the report advocates that it be given permanent headquarters, where the public could come and see, by means of maps, pictures and books, the plans of the committee put forth pictorially and by means of circulars.

The report declares that the purpose of the committee and its advice to all citizens is to aid in making Philadelphia "more healthy, convenient, prosperous and beautiful." It is necessary, too, to prepare a program of progress, not alone for the present, but for twenty-five years ahead. It is suggested that the work be divided into three parts—development, exploitation and education.

To Improve Elgin.

Elgin, Ill., is to have a city plan, and one of the foremost municipal engineers in the country has been secured by the Commercial club to draw plans which will provide for the future growth and improvement of Elgin.

WASHINGTON WILL HAVE MODEL HOMES

Demonstrates Relationship Between Good Housing and Good Health.

Plans have just been completed for the erection of a series of model homes in the city of Washington for the purpose of demonstrating to the nation the relationship between good housing and good health. These are to be known as the Ellen Wilson homes and are not an experiment, but intended as a demonstration to the entire United States.

The intimate connection between bad housing and bad health and good housing and good health is clearly recognized in Washington, where the alley dwellings have long been a matter of concern both to the health authorities and to public spirited citizens who wish the Capital City to be an example to the nation. The alleys have been paved, sewers and water mains have been laid in them, they are lighted and cleaned as are the streets. Yet they keep their old lead over the streets when it comes to totaling the figures for disease and death.

In this Washington's experience has been like that of Liverpool and other European cities which tried unsuccessfully to make badly situated dwellings wholesome by cleaning and fumigating. After thirty-three years of unavailable effort to improve that which was fundamentally bad, Liverpool finally decided the only hope lay in wiping out its insanitary areas. It demolished the old houses by the acre and in place of them built new houses. Where dwellings have been crowded so close together that there was scarcely passage room for a stout man to squeeze his way to one of the old rear houses, it built new dwellings opening upon wide spaces which provided light and air. Immediately sickness and death decreased, and with them vice and crime. What had seemed a hopeless struggle for more than a generation was won.

Other cities in Europe have done the same and with the same results, but what makes Liverpool's figures of unusual value is that the new houses are occupied by the same people who occupied the old ones.

Congress has enacted a law which goes into effect on July 1, 1918, according to which all the alley dwellings in the District of Columbia must cease to be used for dwelling purposes. Meanwhile, in order that there may be accommodation for those who will be forced to seek new homes in street houses, there has been organized a limited dividend company which is to build houses that will be not only sanitary; that will provide not only abundance of light and air, but houses attractive architecturally, homelike in their arrangements and containing bathrooms and provisions for hot water in place of the old outdoor closets and hydrants.

Such houses as these cannot, of course, yield the return upon the investment that the old houses did. In fact congress in its act incorporating the Ellen Wilson Homes, limited its dividends to 5 per cent net.

SEEKS MODEL DWELLINGS.

New York City Immigrant Housing Committee to Offer Prizes For Plans.

The immigrant housing competition committee, meeting recently at the home of Mrs. William Bayard Cutting at 24 East Seventy-second street, New York, decided to offer prizes for plans of dwellings suitable for the use of toilers.

This committee is part of the national Americanization committee which was organized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor. The president, J. G. Schmidlapp of Cincinnati, said that the improvement of dwellings was especially needed at this time, when so many persons were living in more or less temporary houses which had sprung up about the great munition making centers. He declared that many of the manufacturers of war supplies permitted these buildings to be erected in the most haphazard way.

Competitors in the first groups are asked to supply plans for a house for a single family to include two bedrooms; second, a house for a family with four lodgers; third, a boarding house for thirty unmarried lodgers, two lodgers to each room, and providing for the separation of family and lodgers.

The object of the car competition is to provide a satisfactory substitute for the freight cars used to house construction gangs along the railroads. All railroad engineers know the great difficulty there is of providing decent community surroundings in a region where no community exists.

The prizes in the car competition include $300 for the first prize, $200 for the second and $100 for the third.

PLANNING TO HAVE SAFE, SANE FOURTH

Fire Prevention Federation Sends Plea to Governors.

WOULD SAFEGUARD LIVES.

President Wilson to Be Asked to Designate Oct. 9 as Fire Prevention Day, to Be Observed by All Cities of the Nation—Casualties of Former Years.

A special meeting of the national fire prevention committee of the Safety First Federation of America was held at the City club in New York for the purpose of discussing the forthcoming celebration of Independence day and a proposal to request President Wilson to designate Oct. 9, the anniversary of the great Chicago fire, as national fire prevention day.

Ex-Deputy Chief William Guerin of the New York fire department presided. Mr. Guerin announced that the nation wide movement to make the coming Fourth the safest in the history of the country was in full swing and that in all states governors and other officials were doing everything possible to assist the committee in its campaign. Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the National federation, he announced, had mailed to the governors of the various states a letter in which he said:

May I place before you and ask you to further a plan under which Independence day may be celebrated this year in a saner and therefore safer manner than has been the custom heretofore? The plan is offered for the purpose of diminishing the usual heavy toll of young lives, to lessen injuries to persons and to decrease the attendant destruction of property by fire. For the furtherance of such a plan the Safety First federation believes it is justified in asking your hearty co-operation.

On behalf of the federation, I urge you to issue a proclamation to the people of your commonwealth calling upon the citizens generally to do their part and to aid public officials in enforcing the local regulations. It is suggested that you particularly address yourself to those in charge of public schools and charge that suitable instructions as to the dangers attending the use of fireworks, firecrackers and other explosives be given to the children.

The following instructions may with propriety be given to public officials who have under their jurisdiction the regulations of the use of fireworks and explosives:

First.—That they issue no permits for the sale at retail of fireworks or explosives except paper caps.

Second.—That they issue no permits for the sale of fireworks at wholesale except for deliveries outside the jurisdiction of the officer issuing the permit.

Third.—That for ten days prior to July 4 they seize all fireworks kept or stored without a permit and destroy the same.

Fourth.—That they start at once a campaign of publicity to be continued until July 5, especially using editorials on the evening of July 3 and morning of July 4.

Fifth.—That they obtain a supply of tetanus antitoxin for instant use as a preventative of lockjaw in cases of injury.

In the course of a talk to the members of the committee Mr. Guerin cited the Fourth of July casualty figures for the past thirteen years, statistics, he pointed out, which prove that the movement in behalf of safe celebrations of Independence day is making great headway. The figures show that in the thirteen years covered by the report 1,862 persons lost their lives and 42,139 were injured in Fourth of July celebrations, in most cases the death or injury being due to the careless handling of fire.

The statistics cited by Mr. Guerin were as follows:

Year.	Killed.	Injured.	Total
1903	466	3,983	4,449
1904	[illegible]	[illegible]	4,16[illegible]
1905	152	4,494	[illegible]
1906	158	5,308	5,46[illegible]
1907	164	4,249	4,41[illegible]
1908	163	5,460	5,62[illegible]
1909	215	5,092	[illegible]
1910	131	2,792	2,923
1911	57	1,543	[illegible]
1912	41	947	988
1913	32	1,131	1,163
1914	40	1,496	1,5[illegible]
1915	30	1,185	1,215

Mr. Kingsley will shortly appoint a committee to confer with President Wilson on the proposal to make Oct. 9 a national fire prevention day.

The National Guard

Pretty soft for all day hikin' through the stingin' alkali,
Pretty new to beans an' bacon and a total lack o' pie;
They will do a lot o' marchin' 'fore they get the army swing,
They will do a heap o' duckin' when they hear the bullets sing.
What's ahead o' them down yonder ain't no fall maneuver game—
It's a mess o' blood an' trouble, but they're goin' just the same!

Sure they're goin'! From a[illegible] of the city, far an' near.
They are crowdin' one another to be first to answer "Here!"
Every man with eyes wide open, not a one that doesn't know
Just exactly what is waitin' on the way they've got to go.
Pretty soft an' shy o' trainin', but they only are affaid
That the word that sends 'em forward may be too blame long delayed.

Time will put the trainin' in 'em; time will learn 'em how to hike.
Time—an' Mexicans—will show 'em what a battlefield is like.
Appetite will sauce their rations, when there ain't no choice o' food,
An' you've marched from dawn to sunset anything you get is good.
But the grit an' nerve an' courage that meet danger with a song
They won't find 'em on the border—they are takin' them along!

OFFICERS PLEASED AS MOBILIZATION IS ACCOMPLISHED WITHOUT ONE HITCH

Militia of Every State Is Now Ready to Embark For Mexico on Moment's Notice—Some Interesting Side Lights.

Men Answered Call With Marked Enthusiasm and All Appeared Anxious to Leave For the Border.

BUGLES are sounding in every state in the Union. Bands are playing, and khaki clad men are drilling. The mobilization of the national guard is complete. The men are ready to entrain for the Mexican border at a moment's notice.

The mobilization call found the national guard of the United States prepared. The concentrations were accomplished with speed and dispatch. A few of the companies were lacking in guns and munitions.

The men answered the call with marked enthusiasm. While there were a few sad farewells between mothers, wives and sweethearts, optimism was general. Little did one realize that the soldiers were going away for a real war. The majority of the men rather looked upon the activity as a vacation and were anxious to see actual service.

War department officials who had charge of the mobilization were plainly pleased. They expressed satisfaction at the perfect manner in which all members of the guard gathered at the various concentration camps. No hitches occurred, and every precaution was taken to rush supplies and equipment to the different units.

Several of the regiments were lacking in certain articles. It was also necessary to examine the physical condition of the men as fast as they reached the different points of concentration.

The militia was organized on the twelve division plan prepared by the department and sent forward in properly organized units of brigades and divisions whenever circumstances demanded re-enforcement of the border patrol.

Approximately 100,000 men are at the disposal of the department under the twelve division plan, with their own field and brigade commanders properly attached. This plan, which has been the scheme on which the national guard has been constructed during the last few years, provides for assembling of the various units from the several states in twelve regular divisions. Under it it is possible to expand the strength of the militia to nearly 250,000 men on a war footing, and this may be done.

Army Reorganization.

The scheme of reorganization for the regular army under the new army bill has also been announced. It provides for the addition of seven regiments of infantry, two of cavalry, three of field and heavy artillery and two of engineers. The act takes effect July 1, and by the plan announced the new regiments composing the first annual increment of increase will be created on that date, giving General Funston twelve new regimental units.

Officers say the reorganization can take place on the border without impairing the efficiency of the force. All the officers necessary for the new regiments will be drawn from the existing organization, and promotions all along the line will follow. The effect will be to leave the army virtually without second lieutenants, and it is here that the additional officers provided for under the bill will be added.

There will be many promotions also among the enlisted men. New noncommissioned officers will have to be selected in both the old and new regiments, as it is planned to distribute the seasoned men equally. They will be found in the ranks of the privates, and the gap to be filled will be only in the grade of private.

An increase in the coast artillery is also provided for in the act, but so far no arrangements have been made for it. The reorganization will be made later, when more attention can be given to the coast guard.

The state troops are fed according to the allowance provided for the regular soldiers of the United States army. The average daily food each soldier will receive follows:

Fourteen ounces of fish.
Eighteen ounces of salt beef.
Sixteen ounces of fresh beef.
One egg.
One ounce of coffee.
One ounce rice.
One ounce potatoes.
Two ounces beans and butter.
Three ounces sugar.
Fourteen ounces cornmeal.
Bread.

The New Oath.

Under the provisions of the Hay-Chamberlain bill a new oath for militiamen is required. Regular army officers expressed deep gratification over the expressed willingness of the men to take the new oath, which is as follows:

I do hereby acknowledge to have voluntarily enlisted this ...... day of .... 191... as a soldier of the national guard of the United States and of the state of .... for the period of three years in service and three years in the reserve, under the conditions prescribed by law, unless sooner discharged by the proper authorities. And I do solemnly swear that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America and to the state of .... and that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies whomsoever, and that I will obey the orders of the president of the United States and of the governor of the state of ...... and the officers appointed over me according to law and the rules and articles of war.

(Signed) ....

Under this oath the troops can be utilized in any way the president desires.

SCENES AT CAMP BEEKMAN, NEW YORK, WHERE SOLDIERS MOBILIZED, AND SWEETHEARTS AND WIVES SAYING GOODBY TO DEPARTING GUARDSMEN.

The Fight at Carrizal, Mexico.

The seventeen American soldiers, negro troopers of the Tenth cavalry, who were captured in the battle at Carrizal were taken to Chihuahua City, with Lem H. Spillsbury, a Mormon scout, employed by General J. J. Pershing, and were imprisoned.

Spillsbury said that Captain Charles T. Boyd commanded the Americans and, with Lieutenant Henry R. Adair, was among the killed.

Captain Moore, who was with the American detachment, was wounded in the shoulder, but escaped.

Spillsbury's story as announced by General Jacinto Trevino, commander of the Carranza forces in the north, was to the effect that seventy-six negroes, comprising Troop H of the Tenth, Captains Boyd and Moore, Lieutenant Adair and himself, composed the American detachment that encountered the Mexicans.

Spillsbury said he saw on the field the bodies of Boyd and Adair and at least eleven of the negroes.

Spillsbury's account follows:

"When we arrived at Carrizal Captain Boyd dispatched a courier to the jefe politico of the little village, advising him that we were on our way to Villa Ahumada.

"After we had waited some time Lieutenant Colonel Rivas came out and warned Captain Boyd that he had better turn back. Captain Boyd then explained that he was in pursuit of some bandits who he had heard had looted Santo Domingo and also was bound to catch a negro deserter who he had heard was in Villa Ahumada.

"In reply to this Lieutenant Rivas notified the American that if he attempted to advance he would have to pass over the dead bodies of the Mexicans. He advised Boyd that he had better not argue the matter.

"Rivas returned to the village to report to his superior officer, General Gomez, who sent out a note inviting the Americans to enter Carrizal for a conference. Captain Boyd declined.

"On this ground Gomez went out in person and insistently urged the Americans to retire, pointing out that his orders from his superiors necessitated his acting on them without further parley. General Gomez repeated these words as he walked away. Boyd merely answered, 'All right.'"

General Trevino's announcement then goes on to quote Spillsbury as saying that after General Gomez had retired to his troops, who were lined up outside the town, Captain Boyd ordered his men to advance, whereupon Spillsbury expostulated with him, arguing that a fight was sure to follow.

Spillsbury is reported as saying that Captain Boyd "obstinately seemed to think that the Mexican general was only bluffing," and the firing quickly began. He is quoted further:

"Captain Boyd and Lieutenant Adair fell mortally wounded. Captain Moore was wounded in the shoulder, and immediately the horses fled with the mounts, leaving behind seventeen negroes and myself. We were forced to surrender.

"I saw the bodies of Boyd and Adair and at least eleven negroes on the field of battle."

Mexican authorities asserted that the prisoners had been well treated en route to Chihuahua.

GRADING COTTON.

To persons not familiar with the technical side of cotton grading—and this means incidentally many men who make their livings producing the staple—such terms as "strict good ordinary," "low middling" and "middling fair," often encountered in print, are a meaningless jumble of words. Less than three years ago—as a matter of fact, until Uncle Sam came to the rescue—the terms meant little enough in the most technical phases of the cotton trade. Nearly every one of the large "spot" cotton markets of the country—where actual bales of cotton are bought and sold—had a different scheme of grading, and a still different system was employed in Liverpool, long the chief cotton market of the world.

The variations gave rise to endless disputes and the loss of much time and money. Attempts had been made from time to time by various associations to reach an agreement as to standards, but had never proved successful. Many experienced cotton dealers believed that variations among cotton grown in various sections of the south was so great that the formulation of a satisfactory system of grades of universal application would be impossible.

Under authority of congress, however, the then newly created office of markets of the department of agriculture took up the problem in 1914 and established standards that have not only met with practically universal acceptance in the United States, but that have been accepted to a certain extent in the chief foreign cotton markets. Demand for the government standards is so brisk, in fact, that a large force of experts is kept busy now in specially equipped workrooms in Washington arranging the carefully selected samples of fiber of different grades in special receptacles and preparing them for shipment.

FAKES FROM ABROAD.

American mails are being flooded with frauds from abroad. Beware, says the postoffice department, of all seductive circulars from foreign agents who offer to read your horoscope and by doing so put you on the road to health, prosperity and happiness. All they ask is the small consideration of two or three dollars, which, indeed, would be little enough to pay for these precious gifts if they were actually forthcoming. But here is the rub—they are not.

Crafty "crooks" are operating from England, France and Holland, increasing their incomes at the expense of the superstitious and credulous. The government has been investigating these fraud cases by the score, but their literature still flows into the country, and despite all efforts of the postoffice authorities money orders continue to be sent by trusting individuals who want to learn what the future holds in store for them.

The literature of these fraudulent astrologers which the department has collected in its pursuit of evidence makes entertaining reading. They are a clever set, well acquainted with human nature. Everything within the scope of mortal desire is anticipated, and their circulars promise the most definite aid for overcoming troubles, conquering foes and achieving all the desires of the soul, mind and body.

HEADLIGHTS MORE POWERFUL.

Railroad locomotives in road service between sunset and sunrise are required by an order of the interstate commerce commission to have a headlight sufficiently powerful to enable persons in the locomotive cab to see an object the size of a man a distance of 1,000 feet or more ahead in normal weather conditions.

Locomotives required to run backward in road service must have a rear headlight of the same type, and those used in yard or terminal stations will be required to carry two lights strong enough to make a man size object visible at a distance of 300 feet or more.

The order is made applicable to all new steam locomotives put in service after Oct. 1 next and to others given a general overhauling before that date. All engines now in service must be equipped with the lights not later than 1920.

MANUFACTURE OF BUTTONS.

In the 1914 census of manufactures for the button industry, with which is incorporated a comparison with the figures for 1909, an increased number of establishments is reported, but the value of the products is not so great as that for 1909. Returns were received by the United States bureau of the census from 517 establishments which manufactured buttons during 1914. The total value of the products of these establishments was $20,791,985. At the census of 1909 there were 444 establishments, with products valued at $22,708,065. In addition fifty establishments engaged primarily in other industries manufactured buttons to the value of $482,061 in 1914.

MARTIN A. HALL ALLEGES EYESIGHT IS INJURED

Martin A. Hall, of this city, who claims he was injured a short time ago in the plant of Foster Brothers' and Chatillon testified before Industrial Commissioner W. C. Richards at Syracuse today regarding the nature and extent of his injuries. In the complaint filed by Mr. Hall he claimed that his eyes had been injured when the dust was blown into his face from a forge upon which he was working. Several other cases are up for a hearing before Mr. Richards at the same time.

S. GRANBY POSTMASTER FAILED TO CALL FOR CASH

Postmaster Donald M. Luke, of South Granby has entered a plea of not guilty in Federal court at Syracuse to a charge of violation of section 281 of the Postal Laws. This involves a charge of issuing money orders without receiving the money to cover them. He appeared in court voluntarily, entered his plea and the court announced that the trial would be held later.

MEN OF ALL SAINTS FORM A NEW CLUB

Last night the men of All Saints' Church entertained members of the Men's Club of Trinity Church, Syracuse, and the Men's Club of Grace Church, Baldwinsville, and their friends, in the Parish House. After dinner was served addresses were made by the following men:

"The History of the Men's Club of Trinity Church," Dr. James E. Cummings.

"Advantages of a Mixed Club," Charles Fessenger.

"Why a business man ought to belong to a churchman's club," by Mr. Kellogg.

"His Club," by Alexander Jones, president of the Men's Club of Grace Church, Baldwinsville.

"Team Work," by J. F. Frontman, president men's club of Trinity Church.

Songs were sung in which all present joined.

J. F. Frontman, of Syracuse, presided and a Men's Club was organized to be known as the Men's Club of All Saints' Church. Forty-three men signed the membership roll as charter members. William H. Hornibrook was chosen president, and Ramon Lewis, secretary and treasurer.

Two teams were organized to canvass for more members, with James W. Brooks and Charles S. Hall as captains.

Dr. C. C. Teall gave an interesting talk on his travels in Japan.

PHYSICAL NEEDS OF GUARDSMEN

Leaving Home for the Front Does Not In All Cases Mean Acceptance by Our Uncle.

Some of the Oswego, Fulton, Syracuse and other national guardsmen who have left or are shortly going to leave for the front are going to be disappointed. They are going to be sent back home because of some slight physical defect, which, although, not serious enough to keep them out of the guard in peace times will bar them from active service in Mexico.

Before taking up the duties of a regular soldier they must all undergo a strenuous physical examination. Here is an outline of what is required of them. They must be at least five feet four inches in heigth; their chest must measure 32 inches with a minimum expansion of 34 inches; they must weigh not less than 128 pounds and not over 195; for mounted troops they must not weigh over 165.

The minimum rating in the test for acuteness of vision will be twenty-one hundredths for the left eye and forty-one-hundredths for the right or the "aim eye." Men who have to wear glasses will not be passed, except those enlisted in the hospital, ordnance and other branches where keen sight for shooting is not required.

The ban against eye glasses applies to enlisted men and the reason for it is that in the majority of cases the privates are unable to carry along extra pairs. In the event that their glasses were broken they would be of no use.

All men with acute or chronic diseases, particularly heart trouble or tubercular tendencies will be barred. Another thing that will cause rejection is hernia in any form.

Men who have distinguishing flesh marks will also be turned back. It is said that nearly everyone in a big camp has a nickname and sometimes the nickname is based on physical characteristics that cause embarrassment and humiliation.

Particular attention will be paid to the guardsmen's feet and all flatfooted men will be dropped as will those who have lost the big toe of either foot. As regards the teeth, all molars must be perfectly sound. An evidence of excessive nervousness will also cause the rejection of soldiers, as the monotony of camp life frequently develops a more serious ailment into a mental trouble, melancholic insanity as a rule.

The most severe examination of all will be given to the aviation corps. These men will be examined for two days. Every organ will be thoroughly tested out and the power of adjustment to sudden changes of altitude with consequent changes of temperature will be tried out by pouring hot and then cold water into the men's ears. They will also be placed on tables and whirled first one way and then another to test their ability in the matter of sense of direction. While the eyesight test for the rest of the service will be given by means of the regulation test card such as is used by all occulists, the aviation men will be given an interior examination of the optic nerve.

THE QUIRK TODAY.

Bertha Kalish is presented by William Fox in "Slander," a six part feature. The synopsis of the play is as follows:

Helene Ryers marries John Blair, a lawyer, whose rival for her hand is Harry Carson, a man about town.

Tremains forges a letter in Helen's name asking Carson to call at the Blair home.

He then arranged that Blair shall return and find his wife and Carson together.

Carson escapes through a window, is arrested, and to save himself from the police produces Helene's letter.

Blair divorces Helene and secures custody of the two small children.

Tremaine becomes Helene's consoling friend.

His wife and son returning from the south, Helene decides to inform the wife of their relations, but meets the son and through him seeks to be revenged on Tremaine.

She makes love to the son and he wants to marry her.

Tremaine cannot object for fear of being exposed by Helen.

Helene confesses that Tremaine's son was killed by accident.

Blair, realizing that his wife was forced into trouble through the plots of Tremaine, forgives her and the family is reunited.

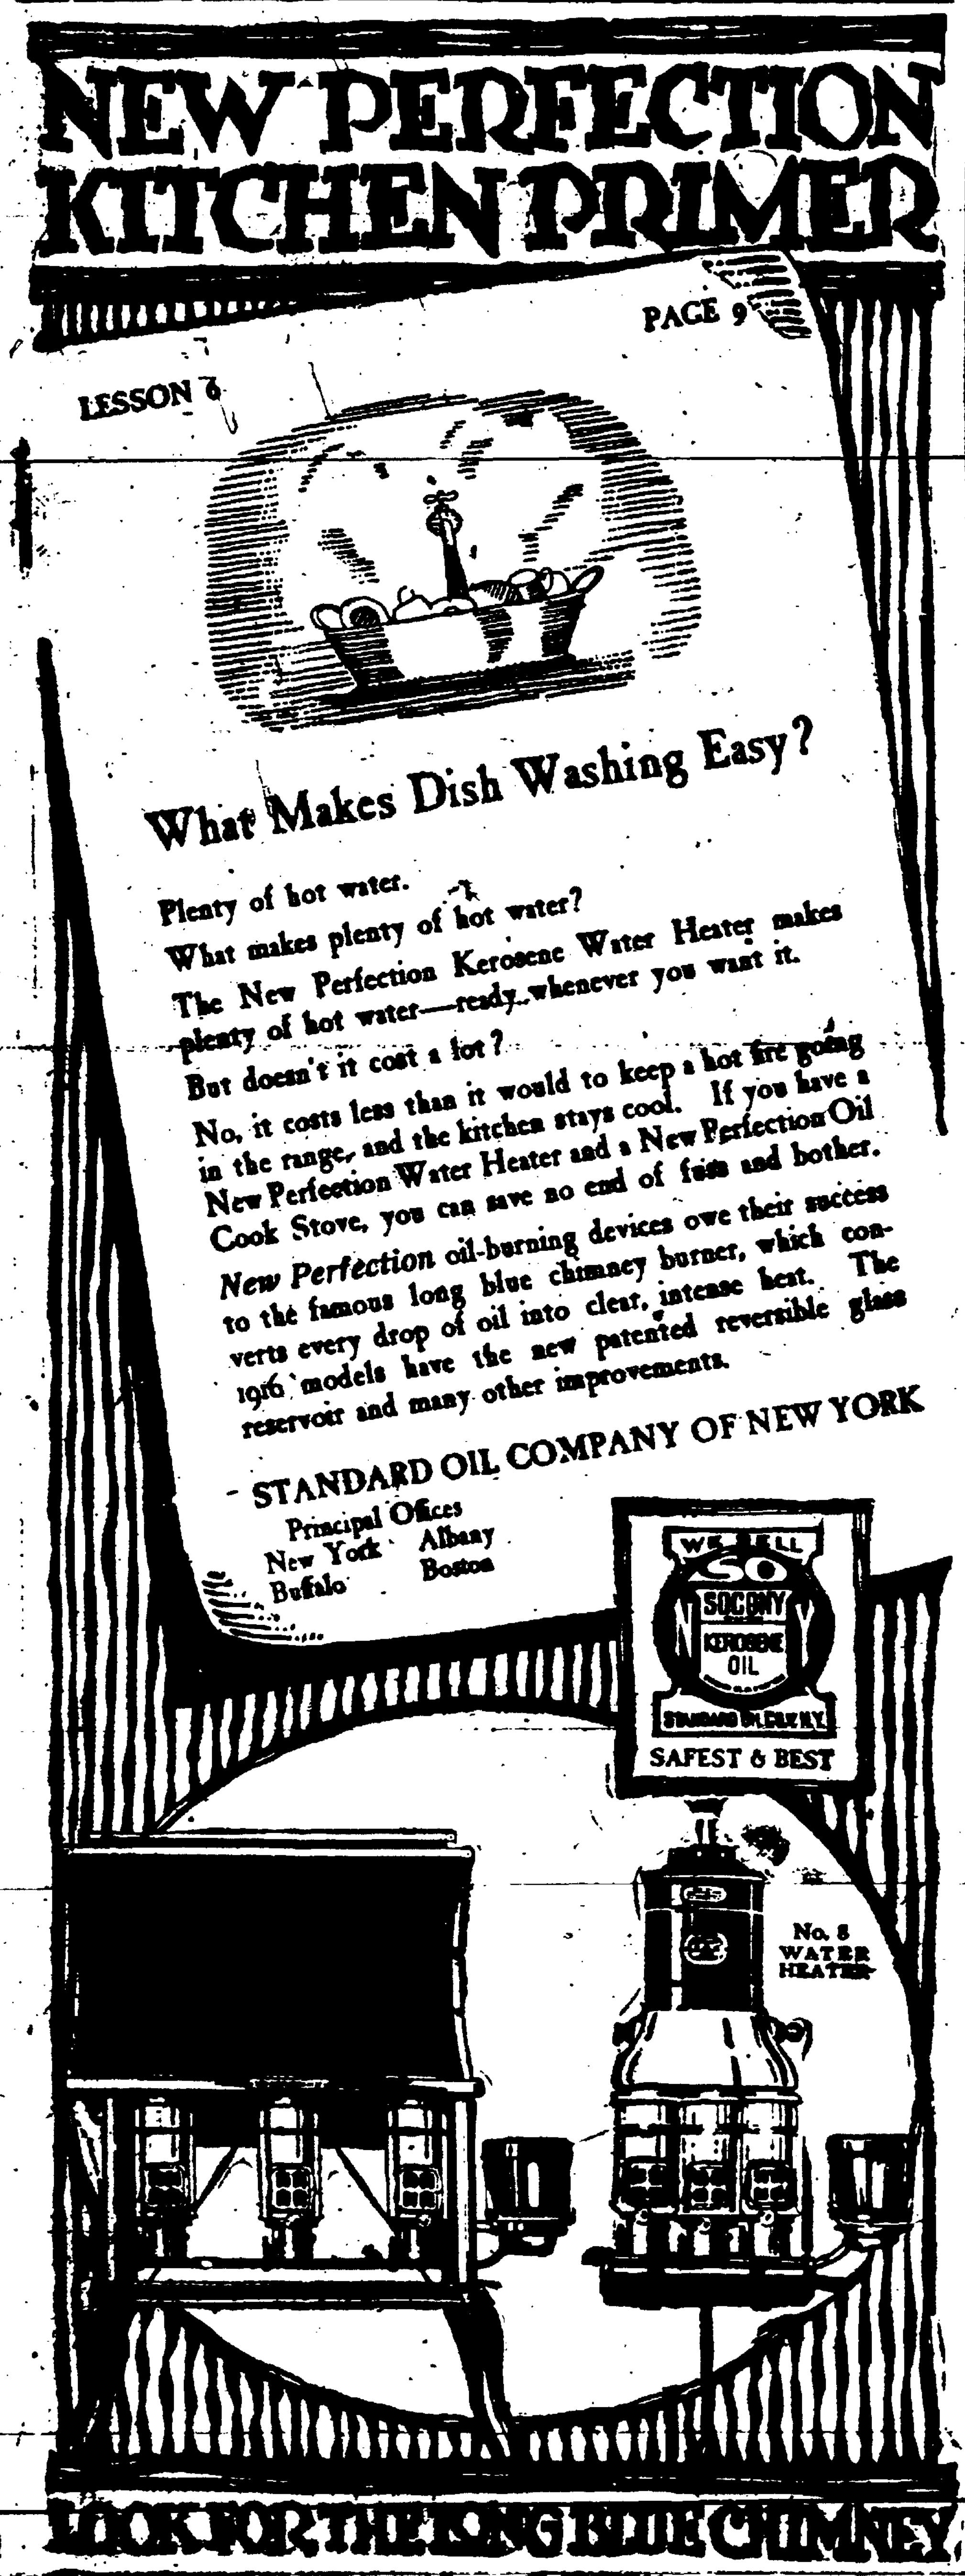
Origin of the Cannon.

It is a curious fact that the first cannon was cast at Venice. It was called a "bombard" and was invented and employed by General Pisani in a war against the Genoese. The original bombard, which bears the date of 1380, is still preserved and stands at the foot of Pisani's statue at the arsenal. The bombard threw a stone a hundred pounds in weight, but another Venetian general, Francisco Barde, improved it until he was able to handle a charge of rock and bowlders weighing 3,000 pounds. It proved disastrous to him, however, for one day during the siege of Zara while he was operating his terrible engine he was hurled by it over the walls and instantly killed.



GUARD IN NEED OF ANIMALS

National Guardsmen throughout Centrau New York are being handicapped in getting their equipment because of the shortage of horses and mules in this section, according to reports. Agents from England and France and other allied nations have been buying large numbers of animals throughout this and every section of the United States and this is the cause ascribed for the shortage.

The United States Quartermaster's department has asked for 40,000 horses and 21,000 mules aside from what the states are buying for the National Guard, and the addition demand has found the market depleted.

Between July 1, 1914 and March 31, 1915, there were exported from this country 590,452 horses, valued at $125,347,488 and 154,077 mules, valued at $80,900,271. The increased demand has had the effect of boosting the prices, until now the average price of a horse is $212 compared with $149 at the outbreak of the European war and $138 the year before that and $137 in 1912.

As a result of the shortage of mules and horses it is believed that the army officials will turn to automobiles and motor transports for guns, supplies, food and ammunition.

ROVING AMONG BURSTING SHELLS

(By United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, (by mail)—A Canadian artillery major played a side splitting joke on the Germans for the benefit of the three American news association correspondents at the British war front in Belgium last week.

From a commanding elevation and a safe distance the correspondents and the foreign official who was escorting them had been watching a brisk "straf" between the Canadian batteries and the German big guns on the plain below them.

The Canadians started the row.

"Our airmen, you see," explained a Canadian captain, "have located a lot of Bosch dugonts and we're going to bust 'em."

The "straf" was in full blast a few minutes later. The Germans responded enthusiastically.

"Don't stand up so's to show against the sky line," warned the colonel in charge of the party. "The Bosches could land a shell here if they wanted to. It isn't this party I'm worried about," he added, "but I don't want to get them in the habit of shelling this position. It would be bad for people who have to be here later."

After a while the "straf" subsided.

The party declared it would be more than delighted. The hill had to be descended and a big field crossed to get to the battery.

"You three chaps go ahead," said the colonel to the Canadian captain and a couple of the correspondents.

"Now you two," he told the foreign official and his own aide, after the first trio had gained a lead of 300 feet or so.

"Now we'll go," he concluded when the official and the aide had made a fair start.

"If we all went in a bunch," he pointed out to the correspondent who accompanied him, "the Bosches might think it worth while to land on us with a whizzbang."

The battery was ensconced in a burrow which anybody could have passed unconsciously at a dozen foot distance and an aviator could hardly find with a microscope. It had been there for months, said the major who commanded it.

"Would you like to see a shot fired?" The correspondents and the foreign official certainly did want to.

Hardly had the shell cleared the gun's muzzle before a funny idea seemed to strike the major and he began to laugh uproarously. The others' eyes turned on him curiously.

"I was just thinking," said the major, "how that one lone shot will puzzle the Bosches. At first they'll think a bombardment's starting. Then, when nothing follows it, they'll get to worrying.

"I'll bet they lose sleep wondering what we fired that single shot for.

"Besides, the bombardment being over, it's just time in the afternoon for 'em to be taking a bite to eat and our shell must have landed just right to muss up the tea things."

Three or four Germans were killed, for all anybody knows, merely to give a good laugh to three correspondents, a foreign office official and a Canadian major.

* * *

Earlier the same day the colonel took the correspondents and their guardian official to see one of Belgium's ruined towns.

It must have been once quite a good sized city, handsomely and substantially built, but the German guns had battered it completely to pieces.

Some tottering walls still stood, but there was not a whole building in the place.

"And they're still shelling it," said the colonel, "so don't linger, and when you cross the grand square keep close to what's left of the walls. If a shot should fall in the square while we're in it, the walls are some shelter."

"Doesn't look as if it would do much good to keep on shelling this place," commented a correspondent.

"It does us good," said the colonel, "for it wastes the Bosche's ammunition.

In this town is an emergency hospital in a cellar under a building which has not been quite so badly smashed up as the others. To get to it, you go down through a kind of out door cellar stairway with a bomb proof cover.

While the party stood talking with the surgeon in charge, a German aeroplane appeared overhead.

"Quick!" cried the Colonel, "Get cover!"

The tourists dove into the cellar like chipmunks and for about 30 minutes the aeroplane kept them cooped up there.

"The other day a group of Irish guards stood gawping at an aeroplane just like that," said the colonel, "and in less than two minutes a shell dropped near them. The aviator had wirelessed their position to a German battery."

This was the nearest the correspondents and the foreign office official came to being under fire.

The officers they met did their best to make the visitors think they were in awful danger. They were continually saying things like: "The road we're going over now is shelled every day." "You can't tell what minute a shell will drop here," and "Keep your head down now or you'll draw the Bosches' fire."

* * *

But somehow nothing happened.

There's no make believe concerning the danger involved in crossing the Channel, but there doesn't seem to be much—for civilians—in roving around battlefields.

THIS WOMAN CORPORAL A BLOODY FIGHTER

(By United Press)

Petrograd—"South of Mahala, one of our reconnoissance patrols severely punished the enemy, causing him great losses. The leader of the patrol was Corporal Glustchenko Tcherniawka, who, though twice wounded, brought the party safely back to our lines"—official communique.

Corporal Glustchenko Tcherniawka is a woman. She bears an inhuman hatred of the enemy. The Cossack patrol which she commands is noted for its fearlessness and daring—always led by her. She is known by the enemy to be a fine soldier, but wild and brutal and relentless and unpardoning. Her patrol is known as the "Eagles," because these Cossacks swoop down, do their bloody work and disappear.

In this way the girl Cossack leader is avenging her father, Major Glustchenko, killed at the front several months ago. She arrived at the front in September and has since been recommended six times for decorations. Her soldiers worship her and the enemy has put a price on her head.

Scarcity of Small Arms Occasions Some Alarm

Washington—If President Wilson should call for a volunteer army of 250,000, as dispatches indicate he will if war is declared, the problem of supplying small arms ammunition would be the biggest one with which the War Department would have to deal, according to information from United States Army sources. In fact, the problem of supplying with ammunition the 100,000 National Guardsmen, if they are sent to actual warfare in Mexico, would be no small one, it was stated.

Of all the millions of rounds of ammunition made in this country in the last two years for the armies of Europe not one cartridge is of any use for the United States rifle. This means not that none of the finished article in this country made for export is of any value to the War Department, but that the tools and other equipment for their manufacture won't make the cartridge Uncle Sam wants just now.

The War Department has stored in its arsenals a reserve of rifles, estimated at from 200,000 to 300,000. The exact figures are a secret guarded by the General Ordnance Bureau in Washington. There is maintained in the arsenals, State and national, a certain ratio of rounds of ammunition to the number of rifles in reserve. This supply would be heavily drawn upon for the use of the Guard if sent into Mexico, for the ammunition for the militia is all furnished by the National Government. If there was a call for ammunition to supply 500,000 soldiers there would be a serious deficit, it is said.

Furthermore, the rifles that have been made in this country for the European armies are not available for the United States Army. This means that the tools for making them are not suited for making rifles for United States soldiers.

Although it is said within the last two years that there was an understanding between the War Department and the makers of arms and ammunition, army officers said they thought this was rather indefinite, and spoke of the failure of Congress to appropriate funds to carry out this plan of having all the big ammunition factories ready to work for the War Department. It was their opinion that it would be many weeks before American ammunition factories could get to making ammunition for the United States Army.

At present the ammunition for the army is made at Government arsenals, the largest of which is the Frankford Arsenal in Philadelphia. But these arsenals, it was said, are not capable of supplying sufficient ammunition either for 500,000 men or as fast as it might be used in actual warfare by the 100,000 National Guardsmen and the 50,000 regular army fighters.

The European army rifles for which ammunition is being made in this country are 6 and 8 millimeters calibre; the United States Army rifle is 3-7 of an inch calibre.

It is pointed out that, while nothing could be gained through the seizure by the Government of ammunition or small arms already manufactured in this country for export, it would be possible for the War Department to see that plenty of ammunition material was kept in this country. It was not generally believed that actual war in Mexico would mean a very great curtailment of the export of arms and ammunition of the Allies because of the fact that the actual output of American ammunition factories could easily furnish the army in a short time when the tools are ready.

The War Department furnishes also clothing for the Guard. Colonel Bostwick said that an emple supply for the National Guard was in reserve. It was said that in the event of the calling out of 500,000 volunteers the problem of clothing would not be a formidable one, as it could be quickly made up in the hundreds of clothing factories in America which can do the work. It was said that foreign war business had not at all affected this source of equipment.

As for food, both regular army officers and officers of the National Guard said there was no difficulty at all.

Delicious Salad.

One quart of finely cut apples, one pint of watercress, one Neufchatel cheese, one-half cupful of French dressing or one cupful of mayonnaise, four stuffed olives. The watercress is picked from the stems and mixed with the apples. Put in salad bowl, which is lined with shredded lettuce. Rub the cheese through strainer or fruit press, spread over top and cover with French dressing or mayonnaise. Garnish with four stuffed olives cut into three rings.

Beautiful Tresses.

Fresh air is as necessary to the health of the hair as it is to the health of the lungs. The woman who is not guided by this truth has hair which, as a rule, is "matted down" and of an unattractive shade. The outdoor girl, whose coiffure is blown about by the wind, usually has a head of hair that is full of life and vigor and its coloring is fine. Fresh air and plenty of brushing, with the shampoo and gentle massaging of the scalp, will often make "sickly" hair healthy.

FAMILIES OF SYRACUSE TO RECEIVE GOOD CARE

Syracuse—Public spirited and patriotic citizens of Syracuse will take care of the families of national guardsmen who have responded to their country's call and gone to Mexico.

Secretary Lachlean MacLeay, formerly secretary of the Oswego Board of Trade and now secretary of the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce is directing the raising of a fund by the Chamber for the relief of wives and children of guardsmen who have been called away. Several thousand dollars has already been subscribed to this fund and pledges of several thousand more have been received for use if needed.

The special committee of the Chamber started out to secure $25,000 for this purpose and this sum will be raised before the end of the week. The money distributed from this fund is not to be considered charity, in any sense of the word, the committee explains, but rightfully earned by the bread winner of the family.

The money will be given confidentially and without any publicity whatsoever. A list of about 100 families has been prepared and they will be taken care of at the rate of $50 monthly.

Cleanest Town In the United States.

Four years ago a scourge of typhoid broke out in Lyndon, Kan. Lyndon is hard enough to find on the map at best, but the typhoid pretty nearly wiped it off altogether.

After the fever abated the residents of the town got together and determined that Lyndon should be made "the cleanest town in the United States." A special election was called and a bond issue of $65,000 voted—quite a bite for a town of less than 900 people. There were some who protested against the tax, but the determined cleaners finally prevailed.

With the $65,000 a complete sewer system has been installed and a new water system. Today every house with one exception—a little unoccupied place at the very edge of the town—is connected with the sewer system.

So far as is known, there is no other town, large or small, in the country of which this can be said. The clubwomen of the town are especially vigilant, and the first words a child is taught in Lyndon are, "Swat the fly and bat the rat!"

City That Jack Built.

In the zinc mining districts the zinc ore as it comes from the mines is known as "jack." There are several varieties of jack, each with its own special name, and miners can identify each of them at sight. Joplin, the business and financial center of the southwest Missouri lead and zinc district, is now going to give jack due credit for the prosperity of the town and the district. A contract has been let for an electric sign, forty feet long and twenty feet high, to be erected at the union station of the city. On the side of the sign facing the station there will appear in gigantic letters the legend, "The City of Joplin That Jack Built." On the other side will be the names of several railroads entering the city. The sign will cost $5,000 and will be in red, green and white lights, the colors of railroad signals.

PUPILS OVER 8 TO BE TRAINED

The Idea Being to Promote Healthier Bodies and Better Citizenship, Says Dr. Finley.

Physical education in the schools of the state as demanded by the new law, is causing everybody connected with education institutions, large and small, public or private, to want to know what the program for carrying out the law is to be. Hundreds of letters received by the Educational Department have caused Commissioner John H. Finley to issue an explanatory statement to the boards of education and city and village superintendents.

In substance Dr. Finley says:

"The law offers to the public schools throughout the state an opportunity to give, and with state co-operation and aid, more serious attention to the physical well being of the pupils and to the development of those qualities which are essential in meeting the obligations of citizenship.

"The persons required to receive such training are all male and female pupils above the age of eight years in all the elementary and secondary schools. Particular attention is called to the fact that both boys and girls are to receive this instruction. This requirement applies to private schools as well as to public schools.

"Time devoted to such instruction must average at least 20 minutes a day during the school year. This provision of the law is intended to give school authorities discretionary power to arrange courses of study so that this instruction may be given on alternate days, or for two or three days during the week instead of every day in the week, if the aggregate requirement is met "Boards of Education and trustees, when the number of pupils in a city or district required to attend is sufficient, 'shall employ a competent teacher or teachers to give such instruction.' It will be incumbent upon every city to employ one or more full time physical instructors, and perhaps part time instructors as well. Every village having a superintendent will find it necessary to employ one full time instructor for carrying out the provisions of the law. In some of the union school districts, outside of villages of five thousand or more, a part time instructor may meet the requirement. Some of such districts may, however, find it practicable to employ an instructor who will give full time, by making arrangements through the district superintendent with outlying rural schools, under the provision of the act which makes possible a prorata apportionment among two or more districts.

"The Regents' rules already prescribe the following qualifications for teachers of physical training: The completion of an approved four year high school course, and subsequent thereto the completion of an approved two year professional course in physical training. For the present any teacher meeting these requirements will be regarded as qualified to give such instruction. It is possible that special provision may be necessary in order to obtain a sufficient number of qualified teachers for the ensuing school year.

The summer schools maintained in some of the universities in this state and in others states give special courses in physical training. Teachers who have had some experience in this subject and some training and who desire to take up this special work, but who do not meet the requirements of the present regulations, are recommended to take these special courses. It is suggested in this connection that teachers of experience and training who desire positions as physical instructors should file their names with this department. Their names will then be given to school officers who make inquiry as to where qualified teachers may be obtained."

Abe, the Mail Carrier | He Finds Cases of True Love

As I was passing Farmer Bennett's with my free delivery mail cart the other morning Mrs. Bennett stopped me to exclaim:

"Abe, I want to talk to you a minute. Something awful has happened here."

"Your husband or your daughter has been killed or anything?" I asked in reply.

"Mr. Bennett is all right, but it's about Arabella," she continued, with tears in her eyes.

"Well, what about Arabella? I hope she has not fallen off a fence and broken her leg."

"It's worse than that, Abe—far worse! I'd rather she'd fell off two fences and broke both legs than to have had this thing happen."

"But state your case, Mrs. Bennett."

"Well, about a month ago a young man came along here and wanted farm work. He was a nice looking young man and said he wanted to learn farm work so that he might buy him a farm and know how to run it. The idea that Arabella might fall in love with him never occurred to us, but she did—she did!"

"And did he fall in love with her?" I asked.

"Head over heels, Abe, but they was both sly about it. They didn't do any courting as we could see. Think of a daughter fooling her mother that way, Abe! I don't know that Arabella had a grain of slyness about her."

Facing a Storm.

"Well, cut it short. Where is that hired man now?" I asked.

"Gone, Abe—gone!"

"And where is the sly Arabella? Is she gone too?"

"Gone, Abe. She's gone too. Last night they said they would step over to Mr. Brown's a minute or two to see their new piano, and after an hour Mr. Bennett went over there. They hadn't been there at all. They were seen going the other way, and the feller was carrying a satchel. Isn't it awful, awful, awful?"

"Where do you think they have gone?" I asked.

"We can't tell, only that they have gone. My husband is so mad about it that he says he won't go a rod after them, and you see I can't go myself. I may never see my Arabella again."

"And just how can I help you, Mrs. Bennett?"

"Abe, you go down this road as far as Black's crossroads. Keep your eyes open. They may have stopped at some farmhouse to be married. If you should get to see them I want you to talk right up to them. Tell the feller that you are a government officer and that the great United States won't stand for any such foolishness. Tell Arabella that unless she comes home within two days I shall be dead of a broken heart."

"But if they come back?" I queried.

"They will be forgiven," she answered. "I may scold a little and Bennett may cuss for a time, but we shan't turn them outdoors."

I promised to keep my eyes open, and about a mile from the crossroads I came across them. They had stopped at a farmer's who was a justice of the peace and been married, and when they saw me Arabella cried out:

"Oh, Abe, did you see mother as you came along?"

"Yep, I did," I replied. "You two have been married, have you?"

"We have," replied the hired man.

"Then take hold of hands and walk right back to the paternal home. Mr. Bennett may give you the boot several times and Arabella's mother may do a lot of sobbing and calling names, but it will end in forgiveness and you will live happy forever more. You could have been married right there and saved all this trouble."

"Yes, but there wouldn't have been any romance about it," replied Arabella.

"Well, there may be romance in a nine mile walk over a rough road and facing a storm, but get along, my children—get along and have it over with, and don't think you have done anything very smart."

They were facing home as I drove on. M. QUAD.

AWNING STRIPES.

What a Woman May Do With This Interesting Summer Fabric.

Awning stripes are one of the vogues of the season. They are used not only in clothes, but for household furnishings as well. They are striking, and with anything striking there is danger that the vogue will not last. But they are worth immediate consideration nevertheless.

Awning striped skirts were worn with much effectiveness last summer. They are worn, naturally, for sport skirts and are really better when worn with a blouse, jacket or sweater of plain color, the color of one of the stripes. Sometimes the jacket is made of stripes and the skirt is of plain material, and this arrangement is equally effective.

There are hats covered with linen or silk in wide stripes that are decidedly striking worn with light frocks. The stripes are sometimes arranged by means of plaits to radiate from the crown; sometimes they run straight across crown and brim.

Then there are lawn parasols and tents, too, in the same gay stripes, and these give a most festive and holiday air to the surroundings of the house decked forth in awnings. Needless to say, all stripes about a house should be of the same color to give the best effect.

Awnings themselves are made for the summer cottage or house in the widest stripes imaginable. They are usually in bright shades, too, of green, red or brown.

Cushions for the porch and lawn are covered with awning stripes. There are some interesting new square cushions —cubical, about eighteen inches high. These are quite hard and firm and are good to sit upon on lawn or porch.

For the girl who wears a skirt or jacket of awning stripes for tennis there are racket holders of the same material that make the sport suit more effective.

Parasols, too, for beach use and country use generally are made of awning stripes, which come in silk as well as in linen. They are especially pretty in the new shades in pongee, used in combination with the plain silk.

The stripes, too, come in some of the fabrics for summer window curtains and are quite as good as awning stripes in other fabrics for other uses.

The Resemblance.

Why is a blade of grass like a note of hand? Because it is matured by falling due.

YOUNG WIDOWS, HERE IS A CHANCE FOR YOU

Cleveland Man Would Wed One and Will Provide Change For Ice Cream Sodas and the Movies.

Paterson, N. J.—"Young widows only need apply; old maids can save their postage stamps," wrote Gustave Jannell of 1427 East Thirty-second street, Cleveland, O., in a letter which John C. Bush, acting mayor of this city, recently received.

"Any young widow who wants a good home, a lively companion and a gay time, with lots of change for ice cream sodas and the movies, will find me the right husband," the letter stated. "Young widows are sweet and jolly, and I understand there are a lot of them in Paterson. Old maids give me a pain. There are too many of them in Cleveland now.

"You will do any pretty young widow a big favor by handing to her my name and address and telling her to write and send photo. I own a good home and want a wife right away."

Colorful Blouses.

One of the advantages of blouse buying is that the average woman can get half a dozen to suit her different needs and moods. This season they are unrolled before her like a brilliant, never ending carpet. The design and the color constantly change. They have reached a degree of variety and gayety that has not been touched in several seasons. One must really go back two decades in sartorial history to find the equal of the blouses of today, as far as color is concerned.

For Convalescents.

Orange Omelet.—One yolk of egg, a teaspoonful powdered sugar, a tablespoonful orange juice, the white of an egg. Beat the yolk and add the sugar and the orange juice, fold in the stiffly beaten white and cook as directed for omeletes, fold, turn on a warm dish and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Serve immediately.

French Chops.—Trim off the fat and skin from a rib chop and scrape the bone clean, leaving only the lean meat at one end. Prepare and broil over a medium flame.

Chicken Custard.—Half cup of chicken broth, one-half cup cream, an egg yolk, salt to taste. Heat the broth to boiling point, add the cream to beaten yolk, add the broth and cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Strain and serve cold.

Edging on Handkerchiefs.

To crochet a narrow edging on a handkerchief or small doily the work will be made easier if the article is stitched on the machine without having any thread in the needle. Small holes are thus made close to the edge into which the crochet hook can be put, and the holes will serve as a guide to keep the stitches an even distance apart.

Orange Fruit Cup.

Three large navel oranges, two bananas (not too ripe), one-half can pineapple or whole of a ten cent can, cup of the juice, juice of a lemon, three-quarters cupful of sugar. Cut oranges in small bits, cut pineapple about the same, put juice of lemon over it. Add sugar. Just before serving slice in the banana. This is a "feast for the gods."

Latest Notes About This Pet Hobby of All Women.

This is the season for blouses. They are needed for a multitude of reasons.

The one piece frock has not vanished into the warm summer air because the separate blouse has come into fashion again. It appears to be necessary to have both even in the average wardrobe. There is always a struggle in the mind of the woman who is not plentifully endowed with clothes money as to how she should choose between a suit and a one piece frock for constant service, and probably the married man put it correctly for all women when he said that his wife brought the subject up to him semiannually every day for a fortnight, invariably decided in the end according to her own desires and was dissatisfied about her choice, no matter what it was, for the rest of the season.

One of the advantages of blouse buying is that the average woman can get half a dozen to suit her different needs and moods. This season they are unrolled before her like a brilliant, never ending carpet. The design and the color constantly change. They have reached a degree of variety and gayety that has not been touched in several seasons.

Fine colored muslins, solid and striped, are in the forefront of fashion, and white and colored organdies, which have been so extensively used for neckwear, have been cordially taken up by the makers of blouses.

The plain white organdie waists are embroidered with one or more colors, sometimes in the simple and ever pleasing design of scallops, again in polka dots and triangles of brilliant red and blue, green, black and yellow.

Because polka dot frocks are in fashion we will be able to wear separate blouses of polka dot fabrics with the pleased feeling that we are quite in the middle of the picture. Taffeta and satin are not looked upon with any degree of warmth, but taffeta is applied to chiffon and then embroidered in gold and silver to build up an ornate blouse.

Every one knows by this time that the smartest of French blouses drops over the skirt instead of going under it after the manner of a miniature Russian blouse. Cheruit sent this out in white organdie, with a sash of colored silk, and it has led the way for a dozen other conceptions by our own dressmakers.

The Dwarf Palm of Algeria.

The dwarf palm, which furnishes considerable quantities of fiber, grows in great profusion in Algeria and is one of the principal obstacles to the clearing of the land, so thickly does it grow and so difficult is it to pull up. Its roots, in shape resembling carrots, penetrate into the ground to the depth of a yard or more, and when its stem only is cut it sprouts out again almost immediately. As its name indicates, this palm is very small and can only attain a certain height when protected, as in the Arab cemeteries, for example.

THE RAGE FOR STENCIL.

Hats, Shoes and Frocks Are Now Treated With Designs in Paint.

Hats, shoes, frocks and all the dainty accessories of milady up to the minute are stenciled or painted. Many a frock that otherwise would be uninteresting is made to become a gown of individuality. Materials that otherwise would be impossible are made most effective when treated to a design in color that draws attention to the design rather than the material. Hats are accompanied with bags of straw and both decorated with a painting or stenciled in contrasting colors.

Now comes the panama hat hand painted with a Japanese design. This hat is faced with velvet. Carried with it is a parasol of linen in the same design. There seems to be no end to the combinations of articles treated with this artistic decoration. A caution should be sounded though, for there are many atrocities on the market, and one is wise in sticking to the same design or allowing an artist of reputation to select a design that would be suitable to material or the fair wearer's own color scheme. One thing greatly in favor of designs of this type is that surely here one can depend on the fastness of these colors and this at a time when no one's word is believed as to the permanence of any color. There is another side to this question too. Many an unusual design is created by women who otherwise would not have designed patterns for materials. This would indicate employment for the young woman who has an inclination in this direction.

Linen Hats.

For wear with the thin summer frock hats covered with linen and trimmed with flowers are especially pretty.

AUCTIONING OFF A WIFE.

Last Case of a Once Rather Common Custom in England.

It was long a popular belief among the ignorant in England that if a man sold his wife at public auction such a sale had all the legality of a regular divorce. The latest case of the kind on record occurred in 1832.

John Thompson, a farmer, had been married for three years, and he and his wife agreed to separate. Thompson brought his wife into the town of Carlisle, and by the bellman announced he was about to sell her.

At midday Thompson placed his wife on a large oak chair with a rope or halter of straw about her neck. He then made this announcement: "Gentlemen, I have to offer to your notice my wife, Mary Anne Thompson, otherwise Williams, whom I mean to sell to the highest and fairest bidder. It is her wish as well as mine to part forever.

"She has been to me only a born serpent. I took her for my comfort, the good of my home. But she became my tormentor, a domestic curse, a night invasion and a daily devil.

"I speak truth from my heart when I say: 'May God deliver us from troublesome wives and frolicsome women! Avoid them as you would a mad dog, a roaring lion, a loaded pistol, cholera morbus, Mount Etna or any other pestilential thing in nature.'

"Now, I have shown you of her dark faults and failings. I will introduce the bright and sunny side of her and explain her qualifications and goodness. She can read novels and milk cows. She can laugh and weep with the same ease that you could take a glass of ale when thirsty. Indeed, gentlemen, she reminds me of what the poet says of women in general:

"Heaven gave to women the peculiar grace
To laugh, to weep, to cheat the human race.

"She can make butter and scold the maid. She can sing Moore's melodies and plait her folds and caps. She can not make rum, gin or whisky, but she is a good judge of the quality of each from long experience in tasting them. I therefore offer her, with all her perfections and imperfections, for the sum of 50 shillings."

The woman was finally sold to one Henry Mears for the sum of 20 shillings and a Newfoundland dog. Man and wife parted in perfect good temper, Mears and the woman going one way, Thompson and the dog another.—Boston Transcript.

America the True and Unselfish Friend of All Nations

By JOHN WANAMAKER, Former Postmaster General

GOD in his great goodness has preserved us from war. We have sent men to Mexico searching for things they cannot find. They wouldn't have to cross the Rio Grande to find bandits, for we have many bandits in the United States.

THERE ARE PLENTY IN THIS COUNTRY WHO HAVE NOT LEARNED TO LOVE IT. IT IS A TRUE AMERICANISM THAT WE WANT IN THIS COUNTRY.

We must have an America united in fact as in name. This is your America, friend and ally of Great Britain and of Germany, just the same; an ally of France, who gave us Lafayette; an ally of poor, torn, barefoot Belgium, the friend of all nations, with malice toward none, no predisposition for territory or glory.

Blessed be the day when we are permitted to offer ourselves after they have had enough over there of war and agonizing and blood and suffering and are ready to have a righteous and just adjudication of their differences and accept peace. Then, oh, then, America, true to her real spirit, will rise in her unselfishness, counting no labor too great to bring about a new emancipation to the world, ONE THAT WILL LAST UNTIL THE SUN CEASES TO SHINE, ONE THAT WILL BRING THE WORLD EVERLASTING PEACE.

FULTON EVENING TIMES

PLENTY OF FOOD AND EQUIPMENT

War Department Prepared to Care for Militiamen In Camp and at the Front.

(Special to Evening Times)

Washington—Central New York wives, friends, sweethearts, mothers and other relatives of National Guardsmen need not worry about the welfare of the boys at the front. They have everything they need, with the possible exception of a few horses which are soon to be supplied. There is no shortage at present of equipment for the organized militia now being mustered into the Federal service, despite the numerous reports to the contrary. There is no shortage of shoes, blankets hats or any other essential article.

The question of feeding the National Guard in its southern quarters will cause no embarrassment to the War Department, it is announced. So long as they remain on American soil the men will have fresh meats and vegetables. If they are forced into a campaign their food will depend to some extent on conditions. The department is certain it will be able to furnish the men ample rations at all times.

To give the forces a varied ration at any reasonable expense is the idea of the department. No economy apt to have a deteriorating effect on the health of the army will be tolerated.

The matter of food selection is entirely in the hands of the Southern Commissary. Requisition is made from the Department depots. In this manner the officers in charge are able to judge what the men need and make selections accordingly.

A knapsack is always strapped to a soldier's back. Should any misfortune befall him he always will have a day's rations at hand. Enough bacon and bread to last a day with coffee and sometimes corned beef are packed in it. The knapsack contains little compartments for canned milk, sugar, salt and pepper.

No Hard Tack.

Question of supplying food and clothing is handled directly by the department commander in this case, General Funston, and his quartermaster corps. The work is under the general direction of the quartermaster general whose duties, especially in campaign time, are supervisory and who must see that food and supplies are properly disposed for requisition.

The guardsmen will not have to eat "hard tack" as Spanish war veterans did. Supplies of flour are abundant and it is believed the army will be able to carry its commissary along with it.

Another item being looked out for by the surgeon general's department is the sanitary preparation of camp sites for the militiamen on the border. General Funston is preparing camps for the men a s he calls for them. The only question now left for the department is supplying of surgical staples as the demand arises for actual use.

Every regiment of the guard has been supplied with a quantity of bandages and first aid kits. The vacines and prophylacties necessary for inoculating the men against typhoid and other diseases have been shipped and the army surgeons assigned to mobilization camps are putting them to use as the guard reports.

"Of course," said one officer, "some of the National Guard troops reached their mobilization camps ahead of their equipment.

That was due to the fact that only a given volume can be handled in a specified time, no matter how many men are put on the job. At all of the Central warehouses employees are working day and night shipping equipment.

"New York is going about the matter wisely. The rule there has been for each unit to recruit in its armory or home station instead of rushing pell mel to the designated mobilization place. Consequently when the New York boys are fully mobilized every particle of their equipment will be on hand.

"It is not fair to the families of the men for newspapers to publish sensational stories about shortages in supplies that do not exist. The equipment is stored in central warehouses to conserve it.

"The people should understand when they read stories about advertisements for large quantities of hats, blankets and other military equipment that these purchases are to replenish the reserves and do not indicate a shortage in eouipment to meet the demands caused by the calling out of the militia.

"Among other things there has been a yell about underwear. The reserve supply of this article is also ample."

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washings the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, billous spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Gas Bombs and Aerial Missiles for U. S. Army

Philadelphia—Gas bombs, incendiary bombs, aerial bombs and hand grenades are being made and experimented on at the Frankford Arsenal for use of the United States army. This announcement was made today by Colonel George Montgomery.

Experiments are now being conducted with a new gas bomb. This bomb will contain a combination of sulphur dioxide, a deadly gas, and several other poisonous gases.

An aerial bomb, which tests show to be satisfactory in a high degree, are on a new principle. Instead of being dependent on atmospheric pressure, the fuse depends solely on a clock-like arrangement.

"This is considered advantageous," Colonel Montgomery said, "because when the bomb has been timed for such a height the rarified atmosphere at high altitude causes a too rapid burning of the fuse. But with the clock work arrangement the bomb will explode exactly where desired."

After many attempts a successful hand grenade is now being made.

It has been arranged so that the mere dropping of the missile will result in no explosion. It is only the rapid hurling through the air and the impact that sets it alive.

IN WRITING TO THE BOYS, OBSERVE THESE RULES

The post office authorties have issued directions to postmasters throughout the nation as to how soldiers can be reached by mail or telegraph while they are on service.

The Central New York postmasters have received orders to the effect that all mail for guardsmen should be sent to "Army's Whitman Branch, of Beacon, N. Y., Post Office, Greenhaven, N. Y."

It would facilitate delivery if the sender were to also give the name of the company and the regiment.

ARMIES OF 3 NATIONS FIGHT FOR REBELS

London—Accounts of the uprising against the Turks in Arabia show that the operations which resulted in the capture of the principal seaports and other cities by the rebels apparently were carefully conceived and systematically carried out.

It appears from news received in Cairo, says Reuter's correspondent in that city, that the Grand Sheriff of Mecca raised three armies, the commands of which he gave to his three eldest sons.

The first of these, under Sherif Forisae, is besieging Medina, the city containing the tomb of Mahomet; the second, under Sherif Abdulla, occupied Taif, sixty-five miles southeast of Mecca, making prisoners of most of the garrison; the third captured Jiddah, the chief seaport of Arabia, imprisoning its defenders.

While besieging Jiddah the Arabian forces warned the garrison not to destroy its arms and ammunition, and consequently a battery of field guns, numerous rifles and quick firers and a great quantity of ammunition were captured.

Apparently, says the dispatch, the Grand Sherif and his followers decided to suppress all traces of the Turks in their country, cutting the telegraph lines, tearing up the roadbed of the Hijaz Railway, and destroying the stations for nearly one hundred miles to the north in order to prevent the Turks from sending reinforcements.

tI is related, adds the correspondent, that when Enver Pacha visited Hijaz five months ago the Grand Sherif told him he was an ignorant youth, who had dragged Turkey to her destruction.

COURT BAN ON "SPOONING."

All Right Only When Public Can't See, Says New Rochelle (N. Y.) Judge.

New Rochelle, N. Y.—"Spooning" in public places in New Rochelle even after dark, if others can see it, must stop. This was the edict of Acting City Judge Bizel as he fined Peter Aryell of River street $15 for lovemaking in Stonelea park. Miss Julia Gleason of Echo manor, the girl who was with Aryell, was sent home and advised to be more circumspect.

"I don't care if you spoon in Hudson park or Lover's lane or anywhere where people cannot see you, but you must not spoon right out in public," said Judge Bizel.

The residents of Stonelea park have complained to the police that the park is a favorite place for "spooning" and that youths and maidens of fifteen years gather there. Robert Lesser, manager of Hudson park, who placed "spooning benches" near the shore in the park, may plant a hedge behind the benches to protect the young lovemakers as a result of Judge Bizel's ruling.

Pompeii.

Pompeii was overwhelmed on the night of Aug. 24, 79 A. D. The principal citizens were then assembled, it appears, in an amphitheater where public spectacles were in progress. After a lapse of fifteen centuries a countryman, as he was turning up the ground on the farm where he was employed, found a bronze figure, which discovery led to further search, in the course of which numerous other objects were brought to light, and thus, at length, was the whole city uncovered.

MOOSE LEADERS ENDORSE HUGHES

Action Came After Long Fight in Committee---Six Votes Against Motion.

Chicago—By a vote of 32 to 6—nine not voting and three absent—the Progressive National Committee indorsed last night the candidacy of Charles Evans Hughes for President, following the advice given in a letter from Theodore Roosevelt, which was read by Secretary K. Davis.

The vacancy at the head of the Moose ticket caused by the declination of Colonel Roosevelt was not filled and will not be filled. To clinch the matter, the committee, after committing its leaders to Hughes without any strings, directed the executive committee to ally itself with Mr. Hughes's campaign and do all in its power to aid in his election.

The committee adjourned sine die and departed, leaving Colonel John M. Parker, of Louisiana, the candidate for vice president, to follow whatever course he thinks best. He is still on the Progressive ticket, but it has no head and will not have one. Whether he will resign or decide to go on and do what damage he can to Charles W. Fairbanks will be determined after a has returned to Louisiana and had time to think it over.

An effort to name Victor Murdock, of Kansas, for President was overwhelmingly voted down.

Hughes Strong in Committee

The Hughes strength in the committee was greater than the vote indicated. Irwin Kirkwood, committeeman for Missouri, refused to vote on the final roll call, stating that he took this action from personal reasons, but that he probably would enlist under the Hughes banner when the campaign opened.

Judge Nortoni, of St. Louis, who held the proxy of North Carolina, voted against the Hughes indorsement on all questions that came up, as he is a candidate for United States Senator on the Moose ticket in his home state. He stated, however, that he might yet be foun din the Hughes ranks.

Raymond Robins, chairman of the recent Progressive convention, announced that if he had to decide right now he probably would join the Wilson forces. He will not make his decision, however, until after Mr. Hughes has made his response to the notification committee.

The Moose party of Illinois went into the Hughes camp with a bang. Harold L. Ickes, Illinois committeeman, declared himself for Hughes without reservation, and declared that 70 per cent. of the Illinois Progressives were for Hughes because they believed he represented the highest aims of the Progressive party pronouncements.

It is the present plan of the Illinois leaders, however, to nominate a full state ticket to be held in reserve for a campaign in the event of the Republican and Democratic nominees proving unsatisfactory. If they measure up to the standard tolerably well the plan is to withdraw the Moose ticket.

The final action of the committee was not taken until after five solid hours of oratory in which a small but determined minority fought every inch of the way. This faction was led by Henry Cochems, of Wisconsin; Bainbridge Colby, of New Jersey; Dr. E. P. Harris, of Rhode Island; Austin E. Griffiths, of Washington; Matthew Hale, of Massachusetts; Colonel Parker, of Louisiana; Judge Vance, of Kentucky and Colonel I. M. Ingersoll, of Idaho.

On the ballot indorsing Hughes all these except Colonel Ingersoll, declined to vote on the ground that the national committee had no right to turn the party over to Hughes. Colonel Ingersoll voted a loud "No."

Some bitter words were spoken, Raymond Robins accused Bainbridge Colby of being there in the interest of Woodrow Wilson.

Mr. Colby, looking Robins straight in the eye, replied: "If you say I am here in that capacity, you lie!"

"I say it was my belief," retorted Robins.

"Then, if that is your belief, you are a liar," Colby shot back.

Half of the committeemen were on their feet calling "Gentlemen!" "Gentlemen!" and demanding order.

Then Comes Retraction.

William Flinn, of Pennsylvania, shook his finger at Chairman Hale, who presided in the absence of Victor Murdock, and declared there would be serious trouble if he didn't preserve better order. Then shaking his fist at Colby, he shouted: "You woudn't call me a liar as you have Robins."

Subsequently Mr. Robins, making a formal statement, said he wasn't in the habit of being called a liar. Mr. Colby got up and withdrew his epithet, and Mr. Robins withdrew his charge that Colby was there to aid Wilson.

10,000 BEES LOOSE IN WOMEN'S BALLROOM

Apiarist Turns Out Swarm Before Club Members, but No Stings Follow.

Cleveland, O.—In the nursery story the queen sat in the parlor eating bread and honey, but even Mother Goose never saw 10,000 bees loose in a ballroom.

But the latter sight was seen recently when Ernest R. Root of Medina, bee and honey expert, shook out a swarm of bees into the white and gold ballroom of the Woman's club, this city, to show members of the club how easily the little honey makers may be handled if one knows how.

There were swift glances toward the door when Mr. Root proposed to open the little case that held the bees. "Don't be in the least afraid. They will not sting you even if they should happen to light on you," promised Mr. Root.

He scooped up a handful of the bees out of the thick, moving brown mass, put them in his hat, clapped his hat on his head and went on with his talk.

TWO BEDS REQUIRED FOR A GIANT BOY OF 15

Prisoner Measuring Six Feet Four Was Cause of Worry to New York Children's Society.

New York.—Children's society officials had all kinds of trouble with fifteen-year-old Theodore Olsen, who stands six feet four inches in his socks. This young giant had not been able to find a bed in the place that would fit him. He had been sleeping in, two beds placed together, with the cover pieces out. Subterfuge had been discovered to make Theodore fit one of the children's bathtubs or to find one to fit him.

Olsen was arrested after he had called the janitor of an apartment house here to help him extinguish a blaze that he admits he started in the dumbwaiter shaft. He says he had started five similar fires in the upper west side, but had always extinguished them himself, because his desire was not to see the engines dash by, but just to see the blaze.

Theodore left school because of the embarrassment caused by his abnormal size. He became a delivery boy for a grocer, and he says that after delivering an order on the dumbwaiter he would start a blaze at the bottom of the shaft among the old papers and other waste that he frequently found there. Theodore lives with his parents in this city.

MAY BOYCOTT A DEADBEAT.

Merchants of Topeka, Kan., Plan to Organize For That Purpose.

Topeka, Kan.—Attorney General S. M. Brewster has announced a ruling that the merchants of a city or the state could form a trust or order a boycott against the deadbeat. The Topeka merchants have worked out a scheme whereby each merchant is to make a report monthly of his customers who do not pay regularly or have not satisfactorily adjusted their accounts.

These reports are then to be forwarded to every other merchant in the local association, and they are to refuse credit to any of those on the blacklist.

There are some lawyers who have held that the merchants could not form an association to boycott the deadbeat without violating the anti-trust laws. The plan of the Topeka organization was submitted to the attorney general, and he has advised the merchants that such an organization would be legal.

CATTLE FEAR DOG.

Herd Ran Over a Horse and Buggy In Their Terror.

Arlington, Ky.—E. W. Benson of Bardwell had a novel experience the other day. While driving along the road out of Barlow, Mr. Benson saw a herd of yearlings ahead of him turn into a lane. In a few seconds he also noticed a dog sneaking in the direction of the cattle.

The dog made a dive for the herd, and they made a run for the road, arriving there just as Mr. Benson drove up, and the cattle ran over the horse and buggy, knocked the horse down and came near turning the buggy over. In their mad haste to get away from the dog one of the calves fell, going under the buggy. Mr. Benson says this is the first time he was ever run over by a herd of cattle.

TEXAS RANGERS AT WAR STRENGTH

Four Companies Composed of Men Who Do Things.

MANY FROM THE RANCHES.

Are Used to Rough Life and Are Familiar With Every Foot of Border Territory—Drinking, Gambling and Profanity Are Barred—All Are Crack Shots and Hardened Troopers.

For the first time in more than forty years the Texas ranger force has been recruited to its full strength of eighty two men and officers. When Governor Ferguson issued an order recently that the organization be raised to "war" strength the office of Adjutant General Hutchings was immediately flooded with applications for enlistment. Many muscular, keen eyed men, each bearing the distinguishing marks of the ranch and open spaces in his attire and general aspect, went to Austin in person and made every possible effort to get into the service. General Hutchings says he could have easily formed a regiment within a few days.

Practically all of the ranger recruits came from the ranches. In most instances they are perfectly familiar with the border region. Besides being proficient in the Spanish language, they know the Mexican character intimately. The rangers do not follow any defined military tactics or rules of campaign. They simply go out and "get" their men. The fact that the victim is usually dead when he is brought back makes the very name "ranger" a terror to evildoers on the border.

Strenuous Requirements.

It has always been a requirement of the ranger force that he shall be an expert shot with pistol and rifle, a good rider, of perfect physical fitness and proved daring and bravery. To these essentials there has been added in comparatively recent years the requirements that the ranger must not be addicted to gambling. And it is easy to find plenty of men who measure up. Because a ranger shoots to kill in performance of his duty is no reason why he may not be a good church member.

Captain John R. Hughes, who served for more than a quarter of a century in the ranger service and retired a year or so ago, was of the mild mannered, churchgoing type, who was at the same time a terror to the lawless element. For several years he was superintendent of the Sunday school at Ysleta. He has been known to dismiss his Sunday school and mount his horse and go in a chase after bandits, perhaps killing an outlaw or two on the expedition. Drinking, gambling and profanity were absolutely barred among the men comprising his company.

The ranger force as now organized consists of four separate companies of mounted men, each company consisting of a captain, one first sergeant and twenty privates.

Their Equipment.

The pay of the captains is $100 each a month; sergeants, $50; privates, $40. The term of enlistment is two years, subject to disbandment of all or any part of the force at any time. Each officer, noncommissioned officer and private is required to furnish himself with a suitable horse, saddle, bridle and clothing. The state must pay for the horse if it is killed in action. The carbine and pistol are furnished by the state, but the cost is deducted from the wages of the ranger on the first pay day. The state furnishes rations, camp equipage, ammunition and forage.

WEST POINTERS MAY GO.

Class of 1917 May Be Graduated at Once to Supply Officers.

Embarrassed by a shortage of regulary army officers at this time, members of the general staff considered graduation next month of the class at West Point who ordinarily would graduate in June, 1917. In the event of war, some officials told Secretary Baker, such a step would be necessary.

Precedent for such action occurred during the Spanish-American war, when first class men at the Military academy were graduated in February instead of June, 1898, and the class that would have graduated in 1899 was graduated in June, 1898.

The suggestion now considered is to give these men their commissions in July and send them out as militia and recruit instructors. Should the number be insufficient it was suggested these 140 cadets be commissioned and assigned to posts, while the class that would graduate ordinarily in 1918 be sent out as militia instructors.

News Read to Convicts.

Holding that the newspapers in themselves have been "the greatest educators yet submitted to civilization," James M. Carter, state superintendent of prisons, is preparing to have brief extracts from the daily papers read to the convicts after supper, acquainting them with the big news events and making them feel like normal men at home.

MOREY'S LETTER SHOWS WHERE LAYS THE BLAME

(By United Press)

Washington—An interview with Captain Morey, survivor of the Carrizal battle, was forwarded to the War Department today. It indicated, as his letter and other interviews had, that perhaps the American forces were in part responsible for the clash with the Mexicans.

Washington—The State Department expects the Carranza reply to President Wilson's demand for the release of the American prisoners at Chihuahua City by early afternoon. It was said this belief is based on a telegram from Consul Rogers which reached the State Department shortly before midnight.

GEN. STOTESBURY DEFENDS GUARD

Ascribes Delays as Result of What May Be Expected Under Present Conditions

Adjutant General Stotesbury has issued a statement answering wide spread criticisms of the mobilization of the National Guard. Guard officers also say that the mobilization is proceeding with "astonishing efficiency" and that any slips or blunders have been relatively unimportant and were the inevitable incidents of the hurried organization of a civilian militia into a fighting force.

Adjutant General Stotesbury denied emphatically that there had been any disappointment in the mobilization in this state. He said that the putting of the guard in the field had been prosecuted efficiently and without undue loss of time.

"From the beginning he says," things have gone unexpectedly well. None of us dreamed that the National Guard could respond to a call so quickly and so well prepared. Of course there have been hitches here and there; there have perhaps been blunders or relative unimportance, but when you stop and consider the policy of this country extending over a long period and the sudden call to put an army into the field drawn from a body of citizens, not military in their instincts and not on the alert for the call you wonder that the hitches have not been greater, that the blunders have not been more important."

For the obvious blunders and hitches General Stotesbury blames no one. "They were just mishaps of mobilization," he said. "I want to make it clear," he said, "that there has been splendid co-operation among the officers of the U. S. supply depots. The officials of the war department, the officers of the department of the east and the officers of the guard. We have all worked together harmoniously from the beginning and men have been mobilized and equipment rushed to them more quickly and efficiently than any of us expected.

"Some of the men are not equipped yet it is true, but they are relatively few in number and they will be equipped very shortly. In a country which has been taking peace for granted as long as this country has, you cannot equip an army over night. The physical factor of transportation has been considerable and accidents due to the hurried transportation of such quantities of equipment as have been needed were inevitable.

"I have heard that a few men have reached Camp Whitman without uniforms, but these men are recruits and you cannot throw men into an army and dress them over night. Their uniforms have been rushed to the camp, and will be ready shortly. In fact all the equipment is on the way. The government has supplied it without serious hitch and it has been transported as expeditiously as possible.

"Concerning the water supply at Camp Whitman, I want to say a word. In the first place there is plenty of water at the camp and according to the state department of health it is of good quality. There is no danger of any water shortage or polluted water. Difficulty is simply one of piping. No one knew two weeks ago that the call for the guard would come so soon and the mobilization of state troops planned for July 9, was expected to require the use of Camp Whitman for the first time. Accordingly contracts for piping the camp with a water spigot at the head of every company's street were let, the terms being that the water system should be in operation by July 9th. Then came the immediate need for the camp and at once we summoned the contractors, told them to work day and night, gave them men for the purpose and the result is that the camp will be completely ready to accommodate all the men we can send to it by tomorrow morning."

TROOPER UNDER CHIEFTAINS REJECTED BY MILITIA

Syracuse—William J. Sweet, 419 Montgomery St., is the most disgusted man in these parts.

William has been turned down as a recruit for Troop D, First Cavalry, despite the fact that he is a former Lieutenant-Colonel in the armies of Madero and Diaz and also served under "Pancho" Villa as a general. His story reads like O. Henry in his wildest moment.

He saw service under Diaz and later went with Madero when these two chieftains were going to it among the Cacti of middle Mexico and it was only the attack of the Americans on Vera Cruz that caused him to take thought for the morrow and cut out revolutionizing.

Sweet served with Villa for two years. In 1911 he was wounded in the right leg and shoulder and was sent to Havana to recover. Word was received here that he was dying. So high had he risen in the regard of General Madero that he acted as diplomatic agent while recuperating.

Later a change in the political situation brought him to the personal staff of Villa. After being made a lieutenant-colonel he quit. Shortly before returning to the United States he commanded the first machine gun battery used in Mexican warfare and that came in the second day's fighting against his former chief Diaz. The machine was an old style Colt and made a great impression on Diaz's followers.

While commanding artillery in the Durango district the American attack upon Vera Cruz startled the country. He thought the United States had declared war on Mexico and feared invasion. He hurried back to this country at once and has been here ever since.

He was rejected by examining officers for Troop D and also by officials of Battery A because of a slight defect to his eyes and teeth.

Now he's waiting for President Wilson to call for volunteers.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Fair tonight and Thursday, with rising temperature.

(By United Press)

El Paso, Texas—Mexico is prepared for war with the United States. Arrivals from Chihuahua City today quoted the Carranza commander of the north as making the threat and declaration, "We are not courting war, but if war comes the guns of Mexico will respond to the call to arms to protect their native land with their lives."

General Trevino is quoted as saying:

"If the American forces move on Chihuahua and make any attempt the rescue the 25 negro cavalrymen held as prisoners by the de facto government they will be aligned before the walls of the penitentiary and executed.

"If the American forces make any attempt to attack the Carranza soldiers in the capital they will be received by a rain of shot and shell from the de facto government troops, of which there are 50,000 in the Republic."

El Paso, Texas—Execution by a firing squad will be the end of twenty-five American prisoners at Chihuahua City, General Trevino is reported to have stated, if the United States Armed forces attempt to rescue them.

Irish Rebellion Not Inspired by Germany

(By United Press)

London—Taking the stand in his own behalf, in his trial on the charge of treason, Sir Roger Casement this afternoon denied that the Irish rebellion was in any way inspired by Germany.

Casement made a formal statement to the jurymen. He denied that he had received any money from Germany.

"The charge that the Irish rebellion was inspired in Germany is untrue," he said. "It was neither made or directed by Germans."

Sir Roger was presented as a witness after the presiding judges had overruled a motion to quash an indictment on technical grounds. He spoke honestly, but with a slight nervousness.

Casement denied that he had asked "Irish prisoners in German prison camps to fight with the Turks. His denial that he had ever received German money was most emphatic.

"I left Germany poorer than I entered it," he said. Money was offered to him in large sums, but he refused. "Those who know me know that I never sold myself to any man or any government," he declared.

GEORGE DAVIS, FIGHTER, SENT TO ATLANTA PRISON

Syracuse—George Davis, formerly lightweight champion under the title of "Shorty Gans" started for Atlanta penitentiary today under a year and a day sentence for selling opium and morphine in this city.

Davis up to eleven years ago was well known to fight followers throughout this section. He became addicted to the "dope" habit and hit the toboggan. His attorney Arthur Benson made a strenuous plea in his behalf, said his client was a victim of circumstances and that if he could be sent away somewhere for a time he would make a good citizen.

"I am going to make an example of him," Judge George W. Ray said in passing sentence. "He went about among these poor creatures who have been conquered by the drug habit and sold them the wherewithal to satisfy their cravings. He is an intelligent fellow. He knows how to read and write, and will have a chance to get the dope out of his system in prison."

MALONE SEES IN WILSON A VICTOR

Syracuse—The Democrats will sweep the state this fall in the opinion of Dudley Field Malone, collector of the port of New York, who stopped here on his way to Alexandria Bay long enough to talk politics for a minute.

"With 90 per cent. of the Progressives of New York for us we will sweep the state for President Wilson," he said. "Brutus betrayed Caesar, but the people did not follow him. Benedict Arnold betrayed the American army, but the people did not follow him" he declared in speaking of the effect that Roosevelt's letter to the Progressive committee will have upon the Progressive vote next fall.

"The bulk of Progressive party were sincere in their ideals," he said, "and they will not follow him back into the Republican party. They wanted to get away from Barnes and Penrose and that bunch and they will not go back to them."

Mr. Malone said that every issue in the Democratic platform of four years ago has been lived up to, and that the Mexican and foreign policies of the administration has been for the good of the American people and will insure President Wilson's re-election.

SEWERS RECEIVE ATTENTION OF 2 CITY BOARDS

The Common Council met yesterday and discussed the proposition of a trunk storm sewer in Seventh street, from Highland to Cayugo streets, and north into Church's Creek and the Oswego river, through the sixth ward.

Mayor Lewis called for some definite action on the petition of Fred Summerville for relief from surface water which he claimed has undermined a wall under his house.

At 4:30 o'clock the Board of Public Works was called into conference with the council, and the Summerville petition was left in the hands of the members of the Board of Works.

The City Park on South First Street was designated for the purpose of exhibitions and concessions during Old Home Week.

Rochester Street between First and Second, will be closed to traffic during such hours as the Mayor may designate, for the purpose of parking automobiles.

A resolution was passed directing the mayor to appoint a committee of citizens to promote and protect the home interests of all members of Company D., of Oswego, residing in Fulton, during their absence in service of the government.

PHOENIX MAN ENLISTS AS A CAVALRYMAN

Constant E. Hutchinson, of Phoenix, has enlisted in Troop D, First Cavalry at Syracuse, and is being given daily drills in that city with the squad of recruits while awaiting orders.

Troop D went to Beekman nineteen men short. These nineteen have been secured since their departure and three additional ones. The officers are now puzzled what to do with the remaining ones.

One of the new recruits is John S. Hancock, of Hart, Mich., a Syracuse university forestry student. He reached Detroit on his way home to spend his vacation when he read that the militia had been called. He hurried back to Syracuse and enlisted.

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Portland (Ore.) Evening Telegram:

In a remarkable editorial, even for that paper, the Kansas City Star suggests "free justice." The Kansas City paper takes up the theme of judicial reform, and it stands on the flat statement that any suggested reform of the rules of procedure which still leaves the judicial game open to be won by the attorney who is paid the highest price, or who ultimately will command it as he becomes an expert player, is only a half-way reform; and that half-way reforms either in the judicial system or elsewhere do not count. The paper is explicit in its definition of "free justice" as follows:

"'Free justice' means that there shall be no privately paid trial advocates. One, then, will not have to pay a fee to a lawyer before he can get the public courts to attend to the public business of administering justice. He can pay a legal counselor if he wants to, to tell him how to obey the law or how to beat the law—exactly as he might consult with a nonlegal partner or agent on a matter of business. But when a case of right and wrong gets into the courts, when justice is free it will be in the hands of publicly paid servants, including 'men learned in the law' to act as proctors or investigators to help the judge and jury get at the facts and apply the correct legal pricinples to those facts."

Just what the Kansas City Star so radically contends for was the original purpose in the creation of courts of justice. It was the primal thought that in all essentials justice, like salvation, should be free; but from the primal thought to the actual practice is a far cry, as we realize when we try to conceive of a court in which trials are conducted with all participating attorneys seeking solely to help the judge and jury to an understanding of the fact and the law pertaining thereto.

The clever lawyer will say of the attainment to such a court that it is a "dream;" and the most of us are ready to concede that the clever lawyer has all the best of the argument. But there have been dreams quite as marvelous as this that have come true, and this may be of that self-same family. There are some small beginnings in that direction as instanced in public defenders, the "poor man's court," arbitration tribunals for the settlement of business disputes and the like.

Girard, in The Philadelphia Ledger:

If Charles Evans Hughes is elected President he will be the first Baptist to hold that office.

There have been eight Episcopalian Presidents, seven Presbyterians, four Methodists, two Dutch Reformed and four Unitarians. Jefferson labelled himself a liberal in religion, but his enemies said he was an atheist.

The Episcopalians made their big Presidential record in the early days of the republic, while the hold of the Church of England was still strong.

Garfield was ordained as a preacher in the Church of the Disciples.

Hughes would make the twentieth lawyer to occupy the White House. Only eight Presidents so far have not been members of the bar.

Eighteen of our Presidents out of the twenty-seven were college men, and as Hughes wen to two colleges he will strengthen the forces of the sheepskin holders.

Hughes is a member of the Delta Upsilon Greek letter fraternity, as was Garfield.

The average age at which men have been elected President was fifty-eight. Hughes is only fifty-four. Roosevelt was forty-three when he succeeded McKinley, and he was our youngest President. "Tippecanoe" Harrison was sixty-seven.

All our Presidents except two—Van Buren and Roosevelt—were of British extraction. Jefferson, however, was the only Welshman, and Hughes's ancestry also goes back to Wales.

The father of Justice Hughes was a clergyman. Three other Presidents—Wilson, Cleveland and Arthur—were sons of preachers.

If you want your son to be President you had better buy a farm. An even dozen Presidents were sons of farmers, and farmer boys beat all others in the race to the White House.

UNCLE SAM TELLS HOW UNCLEAN THE FLY IS

(By United Press)

Washington—The ordinary fly carries about with him, recent government experiments show, an amount of uncleanliness equal to 2 to 3 per cent. of his weight.

If the average man were so unclean as that, he would have on his body about four pounds of filth.

A cow or horse as dirty as a fly would carry 20 to 25 pounds. The fly does not weigh much, but it can harbor millions of disease giving germs. As a matter of fact, the dirt on a fly is about one half bacteria—bacteria of many kinds, large and small, thick and thin, long and short.

If out of its abundance of bacteria the fly deposits a typhoid germ in a can of milk, there is every likelihood that in a short time there will be enough typhoid germs in that milk to make it a dangerous, frequently a fatal, poison.

In the experiments in this subject conducted by the Department of Agriculture, a number of flies were caught and washed in sterile, distilled water. Uncleanliness to the amount of from two to three per cent. of the flies' weight settled at the bottom of the tubes, and of this about half was bacteria.

In addition there remained in solution in the water enough dirt to discolor it.

The fly can and does carry the germs of tuberculosis.

Flies which have been allowed access to animals suffering from this disease were caught and washed in sterile water.

Federal Inquiry or Railroad Strike?

Faced by demands from the conductors, engineers, firemen and brakemen that would impose on the country an additional burden in transportation costs of $100,000,000 a year, the railroads propose that this wage problem be settled by reference to an impartial Federal tribunal.

With these employes, whose efficient service is acknowledged, the railroads have no differences that could not be considered fairly and decided justly by such a public body.

Railroads Urge Public Inquiry and Arbitration

The formal proposal of the railroads to the employes for the settlement of the controversy is as follows:
